THROW AWAY THE DICTIONARY, BOYS!

Blooie goes the dictionary.

Fewer words and more facts is what exhibitors want anyhow.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer salesmen are saving their tonsils.

The pictures do the talking.

We release a new argument every week.

And that's been going on since we gave you Lon Chaney in "The Unholy Three" back in August.

And followed it with the most marvelous line-up of self-selling product ever put on spools.

Norma Shearer in "A Slave of Fashion," "Pretty Ladies," "Sun-Up," "The Mystic" speak for themselves.

From coast to coast you hear "Never The Twain Shall Meet."

"Exchange of Wives," "The Tower of Lies," Ramon Novarro in "The Midshipman," Buster Keaton in "Go West."

They talk in figures.

And now get ready for "The Merry Widow."

It has been talking for itself for three months on Broadway at $2 a talk.

No wonder there are a lot more Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exhibitors today than ever before in history.

And more signing for The Quality Fifty-Two every day.

If you're wondering how long this record-breaking pace can keep up.

Listen.

In the coming weeks we're going to release a line-up of babies that have even our past performance stopped.

The pictures talk for us.

That's why Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is

GOOD, honest Melodrama is the BEST BOX OFFICE BET! An exciting story — thrills — heart-throbs — and a happy ending—never fail to "get over" with an audience. "WITHOUT MERCY" has all these sure-fire ingredients—and then some! There are plots and intrigues, gripping, dramatic moments, a real romance—all culminating in a startling climax that will pull an audience right out of their seats.

"BOUND TO APPEAL" SAY REVIEWERS

Variety says: "Its well ordered production, competent direction and acting make it an okeh feature bet."

Film Daily says: "Dramatic offering that builds to good climax and includes varied forms of suspense. Very well acted and nicely directed."

Motion Pictures Today says: "It is bound to appeal to the critical audiences who weary of constant facsimiles and desire newness and freshness in a plot. * * * And it will also hold its appeal for the masses, in that it abounds with action and intrigue."

THE KING OF THRILL-BLA

The Idol of American Youth From

Presented By

Hunt Stromberg

THE real "American spirit" is the "spirit of the West." It is the spirit of "Young America"—virile, vibrant, adventurous and devil-may-care.

That's the spirit Harry Carey typifies on the screen—and that's why he's the idol of American youth—from eight to eighty.

Harry Carey, the screen's best loved cowboy, is famous for his broncho-bustin', square-shootin', reckless he-man type of characterizations that appeal to every healthy-minded movie fan. He is essentially the family favorite. Everybody, from seven-year-old Buddy to seventy-year-old Grandma, likes Carey. His pictures are clean, human and meaty with good old-fashioned thrills. The villain gets his just desserts and the hero wins the gal in Carey pictures.

An hour looking at a Carey picture is better than all the medicine in the world for that "tired feeling." Carey is the paprika in the movie bill-of-fare—he's the real "kick" in the screen cocktail.

MOVING PICTURE
WORLD

Gentlemen of the Sales Jury—

TWO significant messages from two ends of the earth had a common termination on our desk last week within the space of two minutes. One was a news despatch from a geological expedition, sandbound at Insalah, a French garrison remote in the Sahara desert. The other was a letter from A. H. Higley, an exhibitor in Rushmore, a Minnesota town of four hundred.

Now, what has Insalah, Africa, to do with Rushmore, Minn.? And what have they teamed up, to offer to the picture business?

The cable despatch from Insalah described the unearthing by a Franco-American expedition of stone love letters in a desolate part of the Sahara where the prehistoric Sheiks did their stuff. In this particular region around the year 1, the slogan evidently was "Say It in Stone." The rock rhymes, dashed off by ardent swains ages ago, and immensely valuable in their contribution to the history of man, had a peculiar significance to us in the light of the Minnesota letter which we opened directly after reading them.

Another read: "I surely have said all I can to you."

So much for Insalah. Enters now Rushmore, Minn., contributing another human document, not hoary with age, and not dripping honeyed words. AND not carved in stone, but scrawled with a pencil.

This is what A. H. Higley, owner of the 260-seat Rushmore Theatre, wrote: "I have closed my theatre for the present, due to lack of patronage, and hardly think I will open again. If the small town theatres want to live, there will have to be something done on the part of the exchanges to give us a better rate, because the large towns are getting even a cheaper rate in many instances than we small fry. I CAN PROVE THIS."

The Minnesota Melody is not the Song of Love broadcast from Insalah. It is not "I, Higley, Proclaim love for Exchange."

The complaint against high rentals, is, according to many, the exhibitor's Song of Songs. We are told on the one hand that the exhibitor can play that song in any key. And on the other hand we are told that sales forces protesting against this exhibitor resistance to increased rentals will go to a theatre owner who has been "educated" to "reasonable" prices and get his business by cutting those prices in half.

This has been a good picture year. The lyric of Mr. Higley's song should have been: "Business is fine. Never better. October, 1925, will see the Rushmore Theatre doing the biggest month's business of its entire career."

Who is to blame that Mr. Higley's song is written in the off-prosperity key? Is Mr. Higley himself? Or the Minneapolis exchanges which service his theatre? Did Mr. Higley fail to buy properly or exploit properly? Or did the exchanges figure that the entire 400 souls of Rushmore were the 400 of New York?

Yes, Mr. Higley had the outlying country to draw from. Yes, the general store in Rushmore is probably still doing business. But the general store has many commodities to sell. When the demand for gum boots drops off, kerosene, plug tobacco, tar rope, molasses, and ginger snaps remain to be traded in.

The exhibitor has only one commodity to sell. And that is MOTION PICTURE ENTERTAINMENT. When he cannot do business profitably in that line the only thing he can do is turn his theatre over to the weekly meetings of the Daughters of the Busy Bee.

In the Tate Gallery in London hangs the famous painting "Hope" by G. F. Watts. Hope is the last string left unbroken on the lyre of the world.

The exhibitor has only one string to his lyre—SCREEN ENTERTAINMENT. Finding his music financially out of tune, he can buy and sell real estate or run the post office. But the film salesman cannot sell him as a real estate operator or as a postmaster. Only so long as he actively remains an EXHIBITOR is he a BUYER of pictures.

There is an empty screen in Rushmore, Minn., gentlemen of the sales jury. What is the verdict? The Rushmore Theatre may not be a first-run house to YOU. But it is THE first-run house in Rushmore. Will Rushmore remain picture-less? And will you have one less BUYER of your product? Or will you sit down with Mr. Higley, analyze his problems, give him new tools, RE-OPEN his theatre—wide open—with a bang Rushmore will never forget? Will you help him improve HIS property, YOUR property?

In every business, every year, there is a percentage of mortality in distribution outlets. There is NO trade mortality more harmful to the public welfare than a picture theatre mortality. It wipes the smile from the face of a community.

And we are telling sales managers nothing new when we say that they can sell more pictures to theatres with the "S. R. O." sign out than to theatres with "CLOSED" nailed across the doors.

There is a picture theatre birth rate, and a picture theatre death rate. Let's keep the death rate DOWN. In the hard hitting business of selling, where VOLUME and QUOTA are the pass words, let's remember that there is going to be a volume and a quota NEXT year as well as this. And next year, you cannot sell a house when it is in the picture theatre morgue.

Let's keep sales instructions in this business out of the sheriff's poster "Dead or Alive!" class. It should never be "Bring in the Blank Blank Theatre! If you can't

Something That Is

Frances Marion—Sales TNT

THE women of this country form a considerable percentage of all picture theatre goers. Sixty per cent would not be far from wrong. To enlist their support—ACTIVE support—is one of the fundamental principles of selling the picture to the public.

In a two-page announcement to our readers last week, Producers Distributing Corporation justly recognized the work of one of the great feminine brains in the country—the brains of Frances Marion. They told HER story in THEIR story on "Simon the Jester," which Frances Marion adapted for them from the novel by William J. Locke—her first for P.D.C.

The term, "scenarist," or "scenario writer," is a little cold. It is not a word that plunges into the imagination and comes up saturated in color.

Producers Distributing Corporation have brought the word up where the sunlight of sales can play it up—sales to the exhibitor of this Metropolitan Pictures production—sales by the exhibitor to his public.

"Adapted by Frances Marion." That line is sales TNT for P.D.C. and for the exhibitor.

Help Them Sell Her

THE exhibitor who has played such Frances Marion adaptations as "Humoresque," "Pollyanna," "Secrets," "Potash and Perlmutter," "The Eternal Flame," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "The Dark Angel," knows that he can put his money on the same horse—to win. It's a "future" bet, but a pretty safe one.

Here's a bet for you, Messrs. Flinn, Harvey, and Giegerich over at P.D.C.:

HELP THE EXHIBITOR TO SELL FRANCES MARION TO HIS PUBLIC.

Give him some of your portable, readable copy so that he can, in turn, tell HIS public that they are seeing a product of the brain that created the adaptations of "Humoresque" and the rest.

The Woman Angle

WOMEN are vitally interested in what other women are doing. They go to pictures to see not only the Novarros, the Valentinos, the Dixes, but the Talmadges, the Pringles, the Philbins. For many reasons. Besides, they cannot find enough "Exhibit A's" of women who do big things in ANY form of creative endeavor.

If Frances Marion could tour this country she would do a big job for you and for Frances Marion.

Failing this, provide the exhibitor who books "Simon the Jester" with copy for his advertising, for press notices, for his advance program, for circular letters to the women of his community, telling them what "adaptation" is all about, who Frances Marion is, what she has done, and what they may expect to see.

Frances Marion is a sales instrument for the exhibitor. Help him to USE it.

P. D. C. Service

YOU may be 'way ahead of us on this idea, gentlemen. We know that you are getting out letters to exhibitors, pointing out to them PARTICULAR ways of pointing public feet toward their box-offices on PARTICULAR P.D.C. pictures. You don't give a college yell on your products in these letters. You plainly and calmly ANALYZE its ticket selling possibilities. This aside from the regular channels of service to the exhibitor. That's something CONSTRUCTIVE.

It is right to recognize Frances Marion as you did. She deserves it. NOW help the exhibitor to use Frances Marion as his BOX OFFICE deserves.

Yes Sir—CONSTRUCTIVE

WE ARE offering these pages as SOMETHING THAT IS CONSTRUCTIVE. We hope that varied elements in this business will find in them something that IS constructive.

The above, on Frances Marion, may be of use to individuals other than Frances Marion and to organizations other than P.D.C.

The whole idea brings up the subject: What is a contract with an exhibitor? When does the contract begin, and when does it end?

A contract does not end when the salesman walks out of a theatre with the dotted line tucked in his pocket, either for the exhibitor or for the salesman, or the organization he represents.

Making Money Makes a Contract

THE contract does not end until both sides have lived up to obligations other than those of credit and finance, and the picture or series of pictures has made MONEY.

When the exhibitor WORKS, and when the picture WORKS—that's when a contract is terminated. When a contract is terminated in that manner a NEW contract is already being written.

VOLUME 77 NUMBER 1

Constructive—By Bill Reilly

Time spent, by both sides, in arguing over price could better be spent in COLD TURKEY talk on HOW TO PUT THE PICTURE OVER.

Doing Things at F. B. O.

THE press sheet has a close relation to the balance sheet. Up at F.B.O. they have produced a master press sheet on "The Keeper of the Bees." Nat Rothstein and Colvin Brown realize that a press sheet which sells the picture to the exhibitor and which does not help HIM sell the picture to his clientele defeats its own purpose.

They, and their advertising and publicity staffs, are to be congratulated on doing SOMETHING THAT IS CONSTRUCTIVE—giving the buyers of "The Keeper of the Bees" a guide that points the public from sidewalk and home to the box-office.

A Trim Job on "Bobbed Hair"

WARNER BROS., as shown by their exploitation of "Bobbed Hair," show that they know how the end of an old contract and the beginning of a new one overlap.

A Pittsburgh newspaper took a full page to advertise its inauguration of the serialization of "Bobbed Hair." The story, chapters of which were written in "round robin" style, by different well-known authors, lent itself well to serial form in newspapers. Watty Parker, Randy White, and Bill Murphy went right to it. To date they have placed the serialization of "Bobbed Hair" in 450 newspapers throughout the country. A trim job! That is ticket selling exploitation. THAT is something CONSTRUCTIVE.

Chaplin "Saves" the Show

EVER hear of Charlie Chaplin "saving" the show? We think of Chaplin as a show maker rather than a show saver. Nevertheless, a direct report has come to us from a walloping-sized town where he DID "save" the show. AND with "The Gold Rush."

We all know that short features have often given the satisfaction part of the exhibitor's "satisfaction or money back" guarantee.

In this instance the feature picture was the only entertainment boy who stood on the burning deck whence all but he had fled.

It was Saturday night. Plenty of patrons to see two shows, but here is what the exhibitor loaded into ONE show:

A news reel so old that the pulmotor had to be applied before the projection machine could function.

A two-reel comedy that was made when custard was selling for a dollar a barrel and slapstick bakers put enough into one pie to make the kind mother made look like a polite tea cookie.

An episode of an animal serial which was already five years out of the museum as a relic of the Movie Stone Age.

AND THEN—

"The Gold Rush!"

Our reporter was not a picture "expert"—just a CUSTOMER. The whole house had the fidgets, and from the comments going around the theatre, if it had not been that Chaplin was coming in "The Gold Rush" the house would have walked out almost to the man.

Charlie saved the day. "The Gold Rush" to that bunch of irritated, tortured customers was nectar—pure nectar.

Now the report from that exhibitor on "The Gold Rush" would probably have read something like this: "Patrons liked it, but gross business was not what I expected."

We ask you, boys, doesn't a guy like that need to go across the street where the sign says "Eyes examined free" and perform a long neglected duty?

An exhibitor who piles on the junk line like that is not only unfair to the big picture on his program but to the little pictures in general. AND how HE suffers!

This week organization started for a permanent association of the short feature specialists, to promote the interests of their field in production, distribution and exhibition.

THAT is something CONSTRUCTIVE.

An organization of this kind, with the help of the exhibitor, will save Charlie from putting on a life preserver and "saving" the show.

What's RIGHT With the Movies

PERMANENCY in production! To make a picture that you can show the folks just as proudly tomorrow as you can today! To make a picture the folks will like just as much tomorrow as they do today!

Paramount is making new prints of "Peter Pan" and shipping them to their exchanges for encore play dates during the Christmas holidays. Houses that played "Peter Pan" almost a year ago will play it again. Houses that did not play it will show it to audiences who may have seen "Peter Pan" elsewhere.

Who knows but in time the children may see "Peter Pan" every Christmas, just as at every Yuletide they have the Christmas Carol read to them.

"Peter Pan" may well become just as much a part of holiday tradition as Dickens, the pack of toys, and the stockings on the mantel.

What's RIGHT with the movies?

"Peter Pan!"

bring it in alive, bring it in dead!"

It should be "Hit 'em hard when you have to. PICK 'EM UP when you have to!"

Let's PICK 'EM UP, especially in that circle where the line on the exhibitor prosperity chart is a wavering one.

Let's put Rushmore back on the picture map. AND—NO MORE RUSHMORES!

There is an empty screen in Rushmore, gentlemen of the sales jury; one less sales OUTLET; one less giver of ENTERTAINMENT; one less EXHIBITOR. What is the verdict?

William J. Reilly

Conn. Tax Commissioner Raps Film Levy; Repeal Expected

THE controversy over the Connecticut film tax law which was waged in the Legislature and then in the courts has broken out afresh. This time the spark was set by William H. Blodgett, state tax commissioner, who in an address at the Thirteenth conference on taxation held by the New England State Tax Officials Association, in Springfield, Mass., critized the Connecticut law.

He expressed the belief that it would result in putting 25 per cent. of the small motion picture houses out of business. Not only was the tax obnoxious, he declared, but it was unprofitable and he hoped for the repeal of the act.

The Hartford Times commented on the commissioner's address saying: "State Tax Commissioner Blodgett is now making speeches condemning the state film tax law. Had he taken that attitude when the measure was pending there wouldn't have been any such law.

To which the Republican Hartford Courant retorted:

"State Tax Commissioner Blodgett is now making speeches condemning the state film law,' says the Hartford Times, concluding: 'Had he taken that attitude when the measure was pending, there wouldn't have been any such law.'

"Our contemporary has a short memory—or perhaps it doesn't like Mr. Blodgett. The tax commissioner has been outspoken against the film tax law from the start and, if the Times will consult its files, it probably will find that it quoted him to that effect in reporting the governor's hearing on the bill before signing it. Irrespective of the merits of the law or the politics of those concerned with it. Mr. Blodgett is entitled to have his position correctly represented. He deserves credit for his manner of administering a law with which he is out of sympathy."

All of which indicates that sentiment is growing for the repeal of the law. The theatre men confirm this impression.

Botsford and Holman "Surprise" Dinner at Roosevelt

A. M. Botsford, who assumes charge of the advertising and publicity department of the Famous Players theatre organization on November 1, and Russell Holman, who succeeds Botsford as advertising manager of Paramount, were tendered a surprise dinner at the Hotel Roosevelt, on Thursday evening by more than seventy members of the Paramount Home Office.

Botsford and Holman had been requested to attend a meeting of the Paramount cabinet, but instead of cabinet members awaiting them they found their associates, entertainment and a squab dinner—and speeches.

Botsford, as one of the guests, could not assume his usual role as toastmaster, so the honor fell to John Hammell, New York district manager. The speakers included Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Sam Katz, Harold B. Franklin, Charles E. McCarthy, Phil Reisman, the two honored guests and Vincent Trotta. Special menus had been prepared by the art department.

A vaudeville program was arranged by Ed. Olmstead of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres.

BOSTICK WITH LOEW

E. C. Bostick, former personal representative of Alexander Pantages in Seattle and manager of the local house, resigned this position to accept an executive position with Loew's, Inc., New York, where he will be in charge of a chain of twenty-five theatres throughout the East. This is said to be one of the biggest executive posts ever offered a Pacific Coast theatrical man.

CRANFIELD & CLARKE MOVES

Cranfield & Clarke, Inc., has moved into large executive offices in 1476 Broadway at Forty-second Street.

The scenario department, under Miss V. Cranfield, will be in Suite 823, in the same building.

No Production Curtailment, Warner Managers Are Told

SAM E. MORRIS, general manager of distribution for Warner Bros., called a meeting of the firm's district sales managers last week that lasted four days. The men were summoned for the purpose of getting a line on what might be expected from the various exchanges and also to see that the field organization was perfected so that the home office would be relieved of considerable detail with which it has been encumbered since the exchanges were taken over last spring.

Considerable discussion concerning the extension of the organization took place, and word on how the Warner Forty are going in the field and a review of conditions in the various territories was made.

H. M. Warner addressed the men on two days. While no definite plans for next season were given out, it is known that he took the district managers into his confidence and assured them that while this had been a growing year for the firm, next season would find everything on an even keel and the organization functioning at top speed with new big plans in view.

Mr. Warner stated that this year was just the beginning of the Warner expansion program. While several companies were letting it be known that they intended to curtail production next season, he stated that Warner Bros. would continue to put out an elaborate schedule of pictures. The company, he said, was in such shape that it could give plenty of time to its next year's production and it intended to do so. With the present program nearly completed, the entire studio force is busy on preparations for the 1926-27 schedule, which, he promised, would be as big and entertaining as the program of any company, and an effort is being made to make it better than any other company.

Sam Morris called attention to the big bookings being made for the Warner pictures and Myer Lesser gave the men a visual demonstration of the big publicity resulting from the Bonded Advertising campaign, as well as relating several incidents which proved conclusively that Bonded Advertising is getting across both with the showmen and the public:

Attending the convention were: Harry Lustig in charge of Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Vancouver, Denver and Salt Lake City; Lloyd Willis, representing Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Indianapolis; Edwin Silverman, whose territory includes Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Louis; Herbert Elder, representing Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas and Oklahoma City; E. J. Smith, in charge of the district comprising Albany, Buffalo, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia and New Haven.

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has accepted the chairmanship for the Motion Picture Group in New York's ninth annual Red Cross Roll Call and is now organizing his group. In a letter urging the co-operation of the film industry, Mr. Lasky points out that the Red Cross "is really a branch of the Federal Government created for the purpose of meeting all emergencies such as fire, flood and disaster.

ATLANTA WANTS CENSORS

An ordinance is before the city council at Atlanta, Ga., presented by Councilmen Russell, Moon and White, which would impose censorship on all prologues, acts and special numbers in Atlanta theatres. The proposed law would carry a fine of $200 or a thirty-day jail sentence.

Personalities—Pictures—Positions

An Interview with Richard A. Rowland

By William J. Reilly

RICHARD A. ROWLAND Just Returned from "Over There" and Who Talks of Putting It Over—Over Here.

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, general manager of First National Pictures, returned last Saturday from a five weeks' tour of the continent, and almost immediately discovered that what he thought was the Statue of Liberty was Dame Rumor in a bronze kimono. He saw the statue from the deck of the Berengaria, with Mrs. Rowland, his niece, Miss Gladys McCracken, and M. L. Finkelstein of Minneapolis.

Broadcasting, later, the statuesque Dame said that Mr. Rowland had left First National.

We saw Mr. Rowland on the day the report was being circulated.

"I 'leave' the First National office every Saturday night," he said.

The fact, more to the point, that Mr. Rowland has gotten back to the job every Monday morning was borne out even while he was abroad.

All over the continent he witnessed the box-office success of First National pictures he had put into production. One of the first sights that greeted him in Paris was the crowd waiting to see "The Lost World" at Reginald Ford's Cameo Theatre.

It is a thrill to know that you have rung the bell of appeal on the Boulevard, Paris, as well as on Broadway and Main street.

"Some of the world," said Mr. Rowland, "recognizes the play, the novel, or the story if it has been written by an author of international reputation. But all of the world recognizes personality. First National has on its roster of artists personalities known the world over.

"Personality is the known quantity in picture production. Over here at First National we try to give each producing unit an individuality, feeding well balanced direction and showmanship into every script. We try to give the showman pictures that will give him, not the minimum, but the maximum profit."

Rumors have been flying fast over the heads of several prominent film executives in the past week. Mr. Rowland took time out to talk over the telephone to newspaper men who wanted a statement from him regrading his reported leaving of First National. All he said was that as far as he knew he would "leave" First National on Saturday night and come back Monday morning.

We did not talk long either over his opinion of the Manhattan sky line or of foreign competition.

"You know as well as I do," said Mr. Rowland, "that the companies abroad cannot overnight come into a field which we have developed for fifteen or twenty years and expect to compete with us. Some American companies, even with all their experience, find it hard times to make winners. We welcome foreign product—certainly any good product—that will lend variety to our screens."

We venture the opinion that Richard A. Rowlnad, for some time to come, will be giving continental producers something to shoot at.

IT'S A THRILL to See Your Pictures Standing Them up on the Boulevard, Paris, as Well as Where Broadway Crosses Main Street. This is the Sight That Greeted Richard A. Rowland in Paris—Reginald Ford's Cameo Theatre, Whose 385 Performances of "The Lost World" Broke All Records on the Paris Boulevards.

New Chicago Houses Include $3,000,000 Karzas Theatre

NEW picture theatres announced during the past week for Chicago include a $3,000,000 house to be built by Andrew Karzas, president of the Woodlawn Theatre Company, at the southeast corner of 79th and Cottage avenues. It is planned to seat 3,000. John Eberson is architect.

The plans call for a large stage that will be capable of showing the largest presentations and acts, an eight-row smoking gallery which will be something new in movie theatres in this district, and four boxes with dressing rooms adjoining, where milady may tidy up a bit during the show.

It is planned to start work on the new project at an early date, as the opening has been set for November of next year. Mr. Karzas paid $375,000 for 125 by 125 right on the corner, buying from Charles Bobinsky, and $276,000 for the balance of site, which was purchased from Martin J. McNally. The Karzas circuit will include—when this new house is opened—six houses, the others being the Woodlawn, Trianon, North Center which is going up now at Lincoln and Belle Plaine avenue and will be ready for opening before the holidays this year, the new house at Lawrence and Winthrop avenue, in which a huge ballroom will be the main feature, and a new theatre at Hammond, Ind.

The other theatre project announced was that of the Montclair Building Corporation for the corner of Neva and Grand avenue. This project calls for a 2,200-seat house. The building will be of buff brick with cream-colored terra cotta trim and have an elaborate lighting system. It is expected to cost $750,000 and A. M. Kerensky and brother will finance the building of the new house on the far West Side of the city.

Many New Theatres Open in Denver Territory

Numerous small theatres are being opened throughout the Denver territory. The theatre supply houses have enjoyed thirty days of the best business they have experienced for a long time. Exhibitors who have recently been in Denver purchasing equipment for new theatres are as follows:

J. M. Cook, operator of the Crowley Theatre, Crowley, Col., who will open a theatre in Haswell, Col.; Arthur Van, former owner of the Pixie Theatre, Golden, Col., who will open a theatre in Olney Springs, Col.; W. A. Clemens of the Yoder Amusement Company, who will open a theatre in Yoder, Wyo.; D. Bratton, who announces the opening of a new theatre in Ovid, Col.; Orson Clark, who will open a new 700-seat house in Salt Creek, Wyo.

The Crystal Theatre, Byers, Col., will soon be opened; equipment has just been secured for the showing of pictures in the Stratton Home, Colorado Springs; the Thatcher School of Pueblo has also arranged for the showing of educational productions.

James Pace of the Pace Theatre, Chadron, Neb. has just installed new equipment to take the place of that which was destroyed by fire in the projection room a few weeks ago.

Two robbers entered the lobby of the Keystone Theatre at 3912 Sheridan road, Chicago, and held up Nathan Rittenberg, manager, forcing him to open his safe, from which they took $1,350, the receipts of Saturday night and Sunday.

Rittenberg mistook the men for messengers. They drew revolvers, looted the safe and forced him, the porter and the janitor into the projection room on the second floor.

Conn. Film Tax Law Forces Shutdown of 3 Houses

The Connecticut Film Tax Law, which provides for a levy of $10 on each reel, has forced four small town theatres to close their doors to date, Joseph W. Walsh of Hartford, president of the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut, said this week. The latest theatre to announce its inability to get pictures is the Palace Theatre of Rockville.

Distributors announced soon after the Governor signed the bill that Connecticut would be boycotted and they are carrying out their threat. Mr. Walsh declared that as the New Year approaches more and more small town theatres will be obliged to close because their contracts with the distributors will expire about that time, with little likelihood of their being renewed.

Mr. Walsh said the theatre men have given up hope of having the law repealed at a special session of the legislature and are now bending all their energies toward the enlistment of the public in their fight to effect the repeal of the law in 1926. According to Mr. Walsh, more than 500,000 people of the state have already signed a petition calling for the law's repeal.

The Rockville Theatre, the Palace, is operated by the S.-A. Amusement Company. Jacob Alpert, one of the proprietors, explained the situation to the patrons a few weeks ago, telling them what they might expect. The other theatres which have closed are at Darien, Voluntown and Georgetown.

B. & K. ON BROADWAY

The new Paramount-Balaban & Katz alignment will guide the destinies of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres on Broadway, New York. It also will supervise the Criterion Theatre, which will continue its policy of long runs. "The Vanishing American" will continue indefinitely. Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld's resignation, announced elsewhere in this issue, will not become effective until January 1.

Charles McCarthy, director of publicity for Paramount, stated that no surprise should be caused by this news, as Paramount's new theatre organization naturally will control all Paramount theatres.

EXTENDING CIRCUIT

The expansion of Fitzpatrick & McElroy continues. Last week's announcement was made of a new house to be opened at Richmond, Ind., to cost $350,000 and seat 1,500. The week before a new theatre was projected for Morgan Park, Ill., a South Side suburb, to cost $125,000. Blair McElroy of the circuit says they are not ready to make any statement regarding the negotiations between Fitzpatrick & McElroy and other circuits who are interested in combining with their theatres.

Appeals Decision of Arbitration Board

Minneapolis exhibitor circles were astounded this week when the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, through its local exchange manager, it is said, refused to submit to a verdict of the Arbitration Board which awarded George Legeros the sum of $2,292.60 for alleged failure to supply him with pictures.

A complaint has been filed in the district court to set aside the decision of the Arbitration Board. This body has allowed Paramount thirty days in which to pay the judgment. If the company fails to do so, it forfeits all rights to arbitration.

Mark Company Gets Robbins Chain; Paramount Closes Deal in Buffalo

26 Hours a Day

The Rialto Theatre at Omaha ran twenty-four hours a day during the national American Legion convention, October 5 to 10. It carried a big sign outside, "Open 26 Hours a Day." This was stretching the point two hours, but it stretched it just enough to be attractive, and it brought hundreds who would not otherwise have come, in the opinion of Harry Watts, resident manager. He said hundreds came in the lobby to kid with the box office about the extra two hours and remained to see the show.

It was advertised that Legionnaires could come in and see the show late at night and stay all night, even sleep in the seats. The result was that the show was continuous, and only once or twice did the house find itself completely empty, once at 4:30 a. m., when the showing of pictures was shut down for a few hours. But by 9 a. m. there was crowd enough to warrant projection. The house did a wonderful business during that week.

Infantile Paralysis Closes Theatres In Nebraska

Infantile paralysis has caused the closing of the theatre in Oshkosh, Neb., on two different occasions within the past month. The quarantine, however, has again been lifted and the theatres in Oshkosh and vicinity are in operation.

Word has been received from Mrs. W. B. Wynes, owner and operator of the Garden Theatre of Oshkosh, that for a time the dreaded disease threatened to be of serious consequences and that a very strict quarantine was enforced. All public meeting places were closed and attention of practically the entire population was turned to curbing the spreading disease.

The Hippodrome Theatre of Lewellen, Neb., also was closed for a short time as a few cases appeared in that city. At the present time, however, it appears that all cases have practically disappeared and the ban has been lifted.

CANADIAN MANAGERS COMPETE

N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has announced a manager's Christmas bonus competition for the managers of the many Famous houses across Canada. The theatres have been divided into four divisions and there will be twelve cash prizes, the total purse being $2,000. The competition is already under way.

First Transaction Gives Realty Company Twenty Theatres in New York State, Second Makes Shea Partner of F-P

ANNOUNCEMENT was officially made in Albany, N. Y., to the effect that the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation, operating motion picture theatres in Albany, Troy, New York, Brooklyn, Syracuse and Buffalo, has acquired the chain of theatres owned and operated by Nathan Robbins of Utica, including three in Watertown, five in Utica and one in Syracuse. Mr. Robbins will become one of the vice-presidents of the company in accordance with the deal.

The transaction gives the Mitchell H.Mark Realty Company twenty theatres in New York State, including some of the modern and largest houses devoted to the presentation of the silent drama.

In Albany the company has shown rapid expansion of late, buying two downtown theatres within the past month or so and engaging in the erection of a $250,000 theatre which will be ready for opening sometime next spring.

All houses are located in the business center of the city, giving the company virtually command of the situation.

The same company has been operating the Mark Strand Theatre in Albany for several years.

In the neighboring city of Troy the company is now operating the Troy Theatre, the American and the Lincoln, all located in the business center. When the company first entered Troy it had only the Troy Theatre, but later took over the Lincoln and more recently acquired the American.

The theatres in both Watertown and Utica have excellent locations and are all modern and of large size.

The company also acquires the Eckel Theatre in Syracuse, which is located in a seven-story office building included in the deal.

Nathan Robbins' activities, it is understood, will be confined largely to acquiring more theatres for the Mark company.

The Mark-Strand corporation, which was started in Buffalo by the late Mitchel H. Mark and his brother Moe, the latter of whom is now the president, controls the Strand in New York, the Strand in Brooklyn, several houses in Albany and Troy, the Strand in Syracuse and the Victoria in Buffalo.

It was reported several months ago that Famous Players were negotiating for this chain.

Famous Players-Lasky and Balaban & Katz have closed a deal with the McNaughton Realty Company of Buffalo, N. Y., through which the former corporation takes the place of all outside interests in the Buffalo company except Michael Shea, who remains as heretofore. The deal also provides for the erection of a new theatre on the Root site at 622 Main street.

Mr. Shea will continue to operate the houses involved, which include Shea's new Buffalo theatre, Shea's Hippodrome, Shea's North Park and Shea's Court street, the latter being the vaudeville house playing Keith attractions.

Negotiations have been under way for several weeks with meetings between the parties involved taking place in Buffalo, New York and Chicago. Harold B. Franklin, who graduated from the managing directorship of Shea's Hippodrome to the Paramount Theatre Department, took a leading part in consummating the deal.

The new Shea Buffalo theatre is one of the finest houses in the country. It is expected to be ready for the public the middle of January. It will have a seating capacity of 4,000 and will be gorgeous in interior decoration and unusually complete in modern equipment.

The name of Shea has been synonomous with the best in entertainment in Buffalo for over a quarter century. Buffalonians have always responded to Mr. Shea's efforts to give them the best obtainable in motion pictures and vaudeville. Every house in the chain today is enjoying great prosperity.

"Malicious Falsehood," Comments Zukor on Lasky Rumor

A published report that Jesse L. Lasky is to resign from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is a "malicious falsehood, circulated for selfish reasons," it is declared by Adolph Zukor.

"I see no reason why anybody should circulate this report or why any reputable newspaper should publish it," said Mr. Zukor. "No doubt somebody who would profit by Mr. Lasky's departure from this company is busy spreading this story, which is a lie made of whole cloth. Mr. Lasky has no intention of leaving this company.

"I would call the story of my resignation a joke," said Mr. Lasky, "if it had not been given such widespread publication in the last few days. Let me say this, once and for all: I have no intention of leaving Famous Players. I have been here for years and I intend to remain. The report that I am about to resign is false, utterly and absolutely."

Motion Picture Men Argue with Congress for Reduction of Tax

MOTION picture interests argued for the repeal of the admission tax before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C., on October 24. Those participating were A. Julian Brylawski, Charles C. Pettijohn, M. J. O'Toole, and ex-State Senator J. Henry Walters, the last named for B. F. Keith. The entire testimony did not require more than a hour for presentation. The tax bill probably will be reported on the floor on December 7. Exhibitors are urged to write Senator Reed Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. He has pledged himself to abolish all nuisance taxes.

Brylawski's Arguments

A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the administrative committee of the M. P. T. O. A., presented a strong argument at the hearing on nuisance taxes held before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., October 24. His arguments, logical and well known to the industry, may be summarized as follows:

The resentment of the public to a "war tax" at the box office.

Though production and rental costs are on the upward trend, theatre prices are normally constant because the exhibitor can't raise them without hearing vigorous protest the way a merchant can. Admissions have advanced only 3 1/3 per cent. since 1922. The only answer to increased costs of shows today is increased capacity, not increased admissions, but most small theatres can't meet the problem this way and they feel the tax keenly. Its removal to the public means lower theatre prices, to the exhibitor larger audiences.

Pettijohn Speaks

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays body, made the following points among others:

More than 85 per cent. of exhibitors reduced prices when the last tax cut was made, thus giving their patrons the benefit of the cut.

This tax is not a luxury tax, for entertainment is recreation and thus a necessity.

The motion picture's power for good should not be hampered.

In concluding, Mr. Pettijohn said: "I firmly believe that this tax, which hits the great mass of the American public from one to four times a week, should be repealed in its entirety. However, if this cannot be done, this great burden should be lifted as much as possible in view of existing conditions in the treasury."

Famous Players Canadian Co. Report Shows Bigger Profits

FAMOUS Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., Toronto, operating more than eighty theatres across Canada, has issued its annual financial statement for the fiscal year ending, August 29 last, and the report shows that slightly larger net profits were secured for the twelve months. Net profits, before providing for income taxes for 1925, amounted to $413,168, as against $304,362 for the preceding twelve months. Dividends paid on the first preference stock amounted to $332,000. The surplus brought forward from August 29, 1925, was $243,325, before providing for 1925 income taxes. The net surplus one year before was $187,146 and, it is pointed out, the 1924 income taxes amounted to $33,162.

Total Deductions

Mortgages on theatre properties were increased during the year by approximately $120,000, this being accounted for through the assumption of a mortgage in connection with the purchase of further theatre site property in Ottawa, Ontario. Apart from this transaction, mortgages outstanding on theatre properties during the year were reduced $73,000.

Theatre properties are carried on the books at a net valuation of $5,237,205. Investments in affiliated companies are shown at $499,685. Advances to affiliated companies secured by mortgages stand at $216,612. Accounts receivable amount to $156,401 and the company carries cash in banks and on hand of $264,672. To Finance Houses?

Back of the opening of the investment securities offices of Lawrence Stern & Company of Chicago, observers profess to see a strong financial group which will do motion picture financing. Real estate bonds on theatres being acquired by Paramount and Balaban & Katz will be placed through this company, it is said.

A significant name on the board of directors is that of Herbert L. Stern, president of Balaban & Katz Corporation. Others are William Wrigley, Jr., the gum magnate; John Hertz, who manufactures city busses and other cars; John R. Thompson, A. D. Lasker, formerly with the U. S. Important Announcements Wait on Spyros Skouras' Return to St. Louis

Daring Bandits

A daring hold-up was pulled off at the Ritz Theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, recently, when two negroes approached the box office about 8.30 p. m., and thrusting a gun in the cashier's face demanded that she come across with the money. The bandits succeeded in getting $18 on the counter, but when one of the men attempted to grab a roll of bills in the money drawer the cashier closed the drawer on his hand and both stick-up artists beat a hasty retreat. The money drawer contained nearly $200, which was saved by the clever work of the cashier.

Three Big Theatres Due To Rise Soon Near Albany, N. Y.

In Albany, N. Y., and within a radius of twenty miles, three picture theatres representing an investment of about $350,000 are in course of construction. The largest house is being erected in Albany by the Mark Strand interests and will cost about $250,000. This will not be ready for opening before next spring. In Mechanicville, William Benton of Saratoga Springs has a new theatre that is practically completed and which will open this month. This cost around $125,000.

In Coxsackie a theatre is being erected that will be ready for opening within two or three months. There is a new house going up in Lake Placid also, while in Utica W. H. Linton is busily engaged in erecting another theatre to replace the one that was burned last spring. The Proctor interests are erecting a half million dollar theatre in Schenectady to be devoted to vaudeville and pictures.

In Ilion, Whitney and Young are erecting a large block that will house a picture theatre as well as several business stores. This will be completed within two or three months. Harry Lazarus of Kingston plans the erection of a large new theatre in that city.

CANTON, OHIO, AWAITS BIG THEATRE

A deal of gigantic proportions has just come to light at Canton, Ohio, in which city the Loew interests have purchased a site in the heart of the downtown district at Market avenue and Fifth street, where they will erect what is claimed will be one of the handsomest picture theatres in the state. The site involves a consideration of $2,250,000, while the theatre and office building will cost $750,000, according to the figures recently given out. The house will seat 3,000. The lease has been taken out under the name of the Canton Market Theatre Co., newly organized. Marcus Loew, president of the parent corporation, is also president of the local company.

Fifteen Neighborhood and Suburban Houses May Go to St. Louis Amusement Company— Another Deal Affects Goldman

SPYROS SKOURAS, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and also of the St. Louis Amusement Company, is due back in St. Louis from New York City. It is anticipated that important official announcements affecting both of the companies will be made shortly upon his return to the city.

The deal involving the Missouri and new Ambassador Theatre with Paramount was scheduled to go through the past week, and it is believed that Mr. Skouras will announce that the necessary papers have been signed.

It also is expected that another big deal will be consummated whereby some fifteen leading neighborhood and suburban theatres will pass under control of the St. Louis Amusement Company. Preliminary steps toward this move have already been taken and only a few minor details must be straightened out.

A third deal involving the Skouras interests was the recording of the agreement with William Goldman affecting the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and the Kings Theatre and Garden. As is known, that merger will not become effective until thirty days after the new Ambassador has been completed and in operation. However, several weeks ago Skouras Brothers and Goldman perfected a booking arrangement whereby the Kings has played day and day with Skouras' houses on several big pictures. That arrangement also included the Rivoli, Sixth street near Olive, operated by Goldman.

Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar, who jointly control the St. Louis Amusement Company, also have had a complete understanding on some points of controversy and that company is prepared to go through with a program of major construction of houses and acquisition of existing houses.

The first step in this direction was the purchase of the Hamilton Airdome as the site for a $1,000,000 picture theatre and apartment and store building. This house will seat 3,000 and play day and date with the Grand Central and other Skouras' first-run houses on big pictures.

It also is known that plans are under consideration for a $1,000,000 house in the Gravois District and another big house for the southwestern section of the city. The Skouras boys also are interested in the new Cascade Theatre at Southwest avenue and Edwards street.

The public response to the announcement of the agreement between Goldman and Skouras Brothers and also of the deal involving the Missouri and Ambassador has been spectacular. The stocks of the St. Louis Amusement Company and Skouras Brothers' A stock were two of the lively spots on the St. Louis stock exchange during the past week and sold at high prices throughout the entire week.

During the week the Board of Directors of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., declared a dividend of 75 cents a share on Class A stock and 30 cents a share on Class B stock, payable on November 2 to stockholders of record October 24. The stock books were closed on October 24 and will not be re-opened until November 2.

The Goldman-Skouras agreement provides that a new corporation shall be formed to operate the Grand Central, West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and Kings. Goldman and Spyros and Charles Skouras will manage the four houses. Goldman will be paid an annual salary of $12,500 and the Skouras Brothers $8,750 each. Skouras Brothers will hold 55 per cent. of the stock of the new company and Goldman the balance. There will be 1,000 shares of no par value stock.

An annual rental of $60,000 will be paid for the Grand Central. This fee will be paid out of receipts before any rental is paid on the account of the other theatres.

Skouras Brothers will receive $15,000 annual rent for the West End Lyric and $10,000 for the Lyric Skydome, plus 18 per cent. of the gross receipts above $55,500. Goldman will be paid $20,000 annually for the Kings.

The agreement, dated March 18, 1925, also provides that should the Grand Central be leased to Universal Pictures Corporation under arrangements heretofore made, Goldman shall receive 50 per cent. of the profits arising out of the operation of the theatre under such lease and shall be the owner of half interest in the lease during a period of twenty years.

It has been known for some time that Universal planned to take over the Grand Central following the completion of the Ambassador as a first-run for its pictures. It formerly operated the Rivoli, now under lease to Goldman.

The agreement does not affect the stores or offices in the Grand Central building nor the stores and shops on the Lyric Skydome property.

EXCHANGE CASHIER ROBBED

A. H. Chaffee, cashier at the Kansas City Exchange for First National, was held up by a lone bandit last week. The company's pay roll, which he was carrying, amounted to $515. The bandit took it. Since the latter had a pistol as an inducement, Mr. Chaffee had to consent to the departure of the pay roll.

Legislation Against American Films Now in Force in Italy and Hungary

Italian Exhibitors Must Devote One Week in Every Two Months to Exclusive Showing of Italian Productions

By W. STEPHEN BUSH

(Special to Moving Picture World from Rome)

PERSISTENT agitation on the part of native producers has led to further legislation against American films. The two countries which have followed in the footsteps of Germany with its restrictive measures against foreign competition are Italy and Hungary. The Italian producers have been knocking at the door of the government for years asking for help and protection against "ruinious foreign competition. Foreign competition means, of course, American competition, because outside of some German and a very few French firms there have been no foreign productions in Italy other than those from across the water.

The question of protecting the native industry was at last taken up by the Fascisti party on patriotic grounds. When the matter was brought to the attention of Mussolini he expressed himself as very much in favor of reviving the film industry of the kingdom, but he had his doubts as to the efficacy of governmental interference. His idea was that the industry should have a new birth without the help of royal decrees or legislative enactments. The so-called "contingent" or reciprocity plan of the German statesmen failed to impress him favorably as the best means to the end.

However, the pressure of the native interests has at last succeeded in making the government take action. No scheme of forced reciprocity will be tried, though the native producers keep demanding that Italy follow the German regulations in this respect. For the present the government has contented itself with issuing a decree which makes it mandatory upon every theatre owner in Italy to devote at least one week in every two months to the exclusive showing of films made in Italy, directed by Italians and acted by an Italian cast. In this way it is hoped that capital will be encouraged in its ambition to invest in new films.

A Curious Decree

If only the ultimate consumer, popularly known as the "movie fan," can be induced to fall in with the scheme its success ought to be assured. Experiments made with Italian films in the biggest theatre in Rome do not encourage any such hopes. The most depressing box office record ever made in that theatre was achieved with a film made in Italy, directed by an Italian director and acted by an Italian cast. The whole world, including the United States, will be glad to see Italy revive her ancient glories in the motion picture field but the success must come from its own inherent strength.

The government of Hungary has issued the following curious decree: "To encourage the manufacture of Hungarian films the government will hereafter exact a duty of 3,000 crowns for every meter of positive film imported into Hungary. Every film exchange which uses twenty foreign films a year, averaging in length 1,500 meters (about five reels) is obliged to produce in Hungary at least one film of equal length for every twenty foreign productions."

This provision closely follows the regulations prevailing in Austria. These attempts to handicap the importation and distribution of American films may prove a source of annoyance to American producers and exporters but in the last analysis they will do more damage to the countries that resort to such measures. They strike at the entertainment value of the motion picture show and that is the only sound foundation of all moving picture prosperity.

Congress Again Postponed

The International Film Congress which was to have taken place in the middle of the month at Paris has again been postponed, this time to June 26, 1926. This new adjournment has brought to light some very interesting inside history of the original plans for the Congress. It seems that the sub-committee of the League of Nations which had charge of the project had been under the impression that it could guide the preparations for the conference and arrange the program for its proceedings without any help from the motion picture industry. They had mapped out their campaign on the high-class stationery of the League of Nations and the film people were expected to accept the program as it was handed to them.

Now when the sub-committee found how great had been its mistake it was too late to rectify it in the short time left. Enriched by its experience the sub-committee will now leave the details very much to the film people themselves and its own representatives will be primarily ornamental. In other words, the League of Nations will give its blessing and a prestige to the labors of the Congress but the practical work will be done by film experts from every section of the world.

Only in one respect will there be no alteration of the original program; the U. S. A. will be shown to a front seat early in the proceedings. The preparations will be started by the French Chamber of Commerce for Films. Invitations will be sent out immediately. Each country will be allowed a representation in accordance with the size of its film interests and in election of delegates will of course be left to the industry in the respective states.

In view of the fact that the Congress will be due to French initiative, the joint commission from the French Chamber of Commerce of Films and the sub-committee of the League of Nations has decided that the expenses ought to be borne by the French film interests. The French Ministry of Public Instruction has appropriated the sum of 50,000 franks, the City of Paris has given 20,000 franks and the Chamber of Commerce has subscribed the same amount. Every section of the French film industry will be solicited for contributions toward the expenses of the Congress.

Roxy Talks Turkey

Sam Rothafel has been interviewed by at least a score of reporters during his stay in Berlin and has been talking like a missionary to fellow exhibitors. The art of showing motion pictures is very much in its puling infancy htroughout Germany, though Berlin has one or two houses whose managers will understand Roxy's views.

Hungarian papers report that Famous Players will make three features in Hungary during the year 1926. It is said that Adolph Zukor on his last visit to the country of his birth personally selected a number of suitable locations.

A survey of the programs in the motion picture theatres of Paris, Berlin, Rome, Vienna and Prague for the past two weeks shows an overwhelming predominance of American films. One detail: Out of the eight biggest houses in Paris, seven have been using American films almost exclusively.

AGREEMENT EXPECTED SOON

An agreement is expected to be reached between the Rochester Musicians' Protective Association and the Rochester Theatre Managers' Association following a meeting to be called in a few days by William A. Calihan, president of the latter organization. Under an offer of the theatre managers, which is in the nature of a compromise, the musicians would get a boost of $2 a week this year and another iron man raise next year. The music makers asked for an increase of $10 for a seven-day week and a $6 raise for a six-day week, to effect all theatre musicians in the city, outside the Eastman.

FIRE SWEEPS VILLAGE

Fire Starting in Grange Hall, Brookfield, N. Y., while motion pictures were being shown, swept through the main street of the village one night last week, destroying four buildings at a loss of $20,000. The crowd filed out without disorder.

Producers Distributing Corp. Plans Co-operative Deal with Showmen

R. R. BIECHELE

M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri to Share in Receipts Collected by Distributor During "Exhibitor Month"

THE "Exhibitors Month" agreement entered into last week between the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri, and the Producers Distributing Corporation, whereby the exhibitors association will receive a share of the receipts collected by Producers Distributing Corporation for December playing dates, reflects a fine spirit of co-operation between the distributing and exhibiting factions of the motion picture industry.

W. J. Morgan, sales manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, when asked for details on the agreement and the co-operative phases that have brought the exhibitor body into a close working arrangement with the Producers Distributing Corporation, explained that R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. O. of Kansas and Missouri conceived the idea of securing the assistance of Producers Distributing Corporation in the M. P. T. O.'s drive for membership, and that Producers Distributing Corporation agreed to the suggestion of Mr. Biechele as a worthy endeavor and entered into agreement in a sincere desire to assist the exhibitors of Kansas and Missouri in strengthening their organization.

The plan as proposed and adopted makes December, "Exhibitors Month" and gives the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri a percentage of the rentals on all the Producers Distributing releases played during the month of December on dates set and secured by representatives of the M. P. T. O.

While this agreement ties up the M. P. T. O. and Producers Distributing Corporation under a definite and co-operative working plan for mutual advantages, it does not, in any way, involve the M. P. T. O. in the actual selling plans of Producers Distributing Corporation.

In detailing the agreement and explaining its workings Mr. Morgan says: "We are working with and for the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri in a desire to see their membership increased and their organizations strengthened to maximum possibilities for the general good of the industry. And when Mr. Biechele explained that his organization's greatest need was funds and asked for our co-operation in securing such funds through a percentage arrangement on booking dates, we listened with interest and finally accepted his plan which has just been put into operation.

"'This plan calls for a percentage on the receipt from each playing date in the Kansas and Missouri territory, set by representatives of the M. P. T. O. for the month of December. The M. P. T. O. representatives are not out to secure contracts nor induce the booking of our releases, but in all instances where we have closed contracts for our pictures without playing dates, the M. P. T. O. representatives are at liberty to secure definite playing dates for the month of December and a percentage of the receipts from these dates will be turned over to the M. P. T. O.

"The funds which will be turned over to the M. P. T. O. under this agreement will be used to secure new members and to carry out the progressive plans of the organization which are now held in abeyance for lack of working capital.

"We consider this plan as fair and honorable as it is novel. It obviates the necessity of assessing the members of the organization, or resorting to the unpleasant task of seeking contributions. It shows a clear-sighted and business-like desire to put the organization upon a sound financial footing by honest effort; and we are happy to co-operate with Mr. Biechele in working out his plan to a successful conclusion.

"In effect the efforts of the M. P. T. O. representatives will not increase our bookings but they will render valuable assistance to us in the setting of play dates and therefore the percentages to be turned over to the M. P. T. O. may be properly looked upon as fair compensation."

Asked if Producers Distributing Corporation intended to make similar arrangements with the exhibitor bodies in other states, Mr. Morgan said: "We have no other proposition of this nature under consideration at the present time and personally I am acquainted with the financial standings of the various exhibitor units. But first and foremost Producers Distrnbuting Corporation is interested in the general welfare of the industry and we are at all times ready and willing to listen to any fair and honest plan for the advancement of the exhibitor body."

Children's Book Week Set for November 8-14

Children's Book Week will be observed November 8-14 in cities and towns throughout the country. Coincident with this and related to it will be the observance of Motion Picture Book Week, which emphasizes the close connection between books and motion pictures. In view of its educational aspect though withal popular appeal, it is a fitting predecessor to American Education Week, which immediately follows.

Co-operating with the National Association of Book Publishers, which promotes Children's Book Week, are the American Library Association, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Boy Scouts of America and the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures with headquarters in New York.

Another for F-P?

The new Paramount-Balaban & Katz Theatre Department is said to have purchased the Hi-Art Theatre in Lockport, N. Y.

Mr. Lanigan, who has been running this theatre for several years, journeyed to New York last week to confer with Harold B. Franklin on the proposition.

Paramount is now operating the Palace Theatre in the Lock City and giving the natives the biggest attractions possible. For instance, the current attraction is "The Wanderer."

B. P. Schulberg Joins Paramount; Will Produce in the Lasky Studio

Famous Also Takes Over Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Alyce Mills, Gilbert Rowland, Wm. Wellman—No Personnel Change

OFFICIAL announcement was made this week by Jesse L. Lasky that B. P. Schulberg, one of the best known producers, had joined the production department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation under a long-term contract. Mr. Lasky also declared that under the arrangements made Famous takes over four players and one director whom Mr. Schulberg had under contract. The four players who will be added to the Paramount Stock Company are Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Alyce Mills and Gilbert Rowland. The director is William Wellman.

"In embarking on the greatest production program in our history," said Mr. Lasky, "it gives me great pleasure to announce the addition of Mr. Schulberg to our producing forces. Mr. Schulberg will produce pictures in the Lasky studio and we expect that his coming will be of immense help in the ambitious program we have prepared for ourselves.

"I wish to emphasize that Mr. Schulberg's coming to the Lasky studio is an addition to our forces and does not mean in any sense that there will be any change in the producing personnel of the production department.

"By adding Mr. Schulberg to our forces we will be able to devote even greater care and attention to each individual picture. We have just finished our schedule of fall releases—the Greater Forty. Great as these pictures have been, it is our purpose to make our spring product even bigger in individual production values. Today there is no such thing as seasons in the picture business; the spring and summer pictures must be just as big, just as attractive, as the pictures that open the fall season. The public demands it, and we are prepared to give both the trade and the public a group of pictures next spring which will be the best we have ever made.

"Our policy of making our pictures in six-month blocks, rather than attempting to line up a full year's program, makes it possible for us to get behind our spring group with greater effect than if we had to scatter our energies over a full year's schedule. Thus we are able to meet the constantly shifting demands of the business; we are not set and frozen for a full year and unable to take advantage of changes in public taste, changes in exhibitor demands.

"The acquisition of Mr. Schulberg, as I said, will help us to carry out that policy."

"The only successful producer is the producer whose resources make it possible for him to produce the kind of pictures he wants to produce."

This was the statement of Mr. Schulberg, in commenting upon his return to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as one of the producers at the Lasky studio in Hollywood. In the early days of the Famous Players Film Company, Mr. Schulberg was one of Adolph Zukor's right hand men and was in charge of publicity and advertising. Since then he has been producing pictures for himself, and in the last few years, despite lack of resources and a heavy burden of worry and expense, has made some of the biggest box-office attractions in the history of the business.

"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get back to Paramount," said Mr. Schulberg. "I know the men in Paramount. I know Mr. Zukor, Mr. Lasky, Mr. Kent. I know what they have done. And I appreciate to the fullest the immense opportunity which they are giving me

"One of the fundamental necessities of the motion picture business is ideas. Without ideas you cannot produce pictures. But another essential is ample resources, and that means organization, man power, money. Without resources your most brilliant ideas will never come to fruition. With resources at your back there is nothing that can stop you except your own limitations.

"The Paramount organization has these resources. For years I have been making pictures out in Hollywood and I have looked with envy on the facilities which are available at the Lasky studio. When a director wants a certain novel or play, there are men and money to get it for him.

"I will continue to have as my personal assistant Sam Jaffe, who has been closely associated with my producing activities for the past five years."

MOBERLY MANAGER FINED

J. W. Cotter, owner-manager of the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., was fined $52 and costs in the Randolph County Circuit Court when convicted of a charge of operating his theatre on Sunday. The action of the court sustained the Moberly City Court which previously had fined Cotter. He appealed the case to the Circuit Court to test the city ordinance under which he was arrested. He plans to carry the case to the Missouri Supreme Court. Circuit Judge Walker ruled that the City Council had full authority to regulate or suppress many lines of business including shows.

H. D. GOLDBERG LEAVES FAMOUS

Harry D. Goldberg, assistant to Harold B. Franklin in the operation of Paramount's theatre booking department, has resigned because of poor health. For three years he has been buying and booking pictures for the whole circuit, and he also superintended the routing of road shows, vaudeville acts and stage shows.

Million is Pledged by Adolph Zukor for Jewish Drive

One million dollars is the amount that Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has pledged the Theatrical and Motion Picture division to raise as its share of the $4,000,000 fund for the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. Mr. Zukor is chairman of this committee, which is extremely active in the drive to raise this fund for the use of the ninety-one Jewish charities in the Federation.

Mr. Zukor and the chairmen of the sub-committees met at the Hotel Astor on October 28 to formulate detailed plans for the drive. A one-reel picture called "Human Dividends" and showing the work of the different charities has been made and will be shown in every picture theatre in Greater New York and in places where Jewish workers congregate. The drive will end November 19.

Among the chairmen of the various committees are the following:

H. M. Warner, Sydney Cohen, B. S. Moss, M. J. Mintz, P. J. Morgan, A. L. Libmann, Samuel Zierler, Joseph Hornstein, Joseph Seider, David Picker, Sol Brill, I. Chadwick, Samuel Eckman, Joseph Weinberg, Joseph Dannenberg, J. B. Basson.

SEEK N. Y. STATE POSTS

One exhibitor, Irving I. Goldsmith of Saratoga Springs, and one projectionist, Harry M. Brooks of Troy, are candidates for seats in the New York State Assembly and each is working tooth and nail in the hopes of being elected.

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

Congratulations to Wm. E. Benton

There have been big moments and pleasant ones, too, in the life of William E. Benton of Saratoga Springs, but never was there a happier combination than Monday night, October 26, when Mr. Benton received the congratulations of what seemed to be 99 per cent. of the residents of Mechanicville, N. Y., on the occasion of the opening of the State Theatre in that city. About everybody was up from Film Row in Albany, for Mr. Benton is a prime favorite with the boys. The theatre represents an investment of about $150,000, the house being located on the main street and with an interior that resembles Mr. Benton's house in Saratoga Springs. At 5:30 p. m. the house was opened for inspection. There were many beautiful floral tributes in evidence. Mr. Benton was right on hand to welcome everyone, a procedure that kept him busy for many an hour to come, and when he crawled into bed at 2 A. M. he remarked that he might well call it a day. With "Little Annie Rooney" as the feature picture, two shows were given during the evening. Mr. Benton is a man who believes in good music and the orchestra was all that could be desired.

The Star in Mineville, N. Y., run by Mrs. Jennie Anderson, was destroyed by fire early one morning last week when flames swept the little mountain village. A hotel and residence were also burned to the ground. The blaze was first discovered in an ice house near the theatre. Help was summoned from Ticonderoga and Port Henry, but lack of water handicapped firemen in their work. Many wells in the village were pumped dry in the frantic effort to extinguish the flames.

Somewhere in Albany there is an individual who no doubt is mourning the loss of a single tooth as well as a bridge. If this individual will kindly call at the Leland in Albany, inquiring for Manager Alex Sayles, the said bridge and tooth will be gladly returned as Mr. Sayles has absolutely no use for either.

Herman Vineberg, manager of the Albany and Regent in Albany, "stepped out," as the saying goes, last week in connection with "The Midshipman." Mr. Vineberg decorated the front of the house in national colors, and then got the naval recruiting station behind him. The week went over with a wallop.

John Maxwell, manager of the Liberty in Herkimer, certainly did his share in making the New York State magistrates thoroughly at home last week at a convention held in that village. Not only was the theatre open to the delegates, but Manager Maxwell was on hand with tickets the moment a delegate registered.

In the cruel limelight of publicity, Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose in Troy, bereft of a lifelong and intimate secret, stands forth today as the exponent of the night gown. In other words, Mr. Rosenthal has yet to don his first suit of pajamas, and what is more he doesn't care a rap who knows it now that the secret has leaked through devious channels. Jake is making money with his theatre and on each Wednesday night, he pays a couple of Troy bluecoats a couple of simoleons to preserve order while the amateur acts are on. Whenever anyone asks Mr. Rosenthal how business is, he generally replies that he can't complain. Mr. Rosenthal plans to bring over his radio from home on election night, and then tune in for the benefit of his patrons.

Edna Wallace Hopper is slated to appear in person at Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, a second-run house, on November 5, 6 and 7. Joe Saperstein, manager, is making big plans for the occasion, as it will be the first personal appearance at the theatre since it was devoted to the movies.

Junior Movies held forth at the Troy Theatre in Troy, on Saturday morning last, with an attendance of over 1,200 boys and girls from the Collar City. Mrs. Fay, one of the heads of the Parent-Teachers' Association, was ably assisted by Boy Scouts in handling the crowd. Every boy and girl planked down their dimes and the theatre was filled.

Bring your own crowbar or jimmy, was the advice handed out by Jake Golden of the Griswold Theatre in Troy last week when the theatre observed its anniversary in a way that set the whole city talking. There were the regular double features, with the Domino orchestra playing the entire week, while Thursday night was characterized by a revue of the ten best amateur acts of the season. Mr. Golden dolled the house up in national colors, with flowers decorating the lobby.

Regionals, Please Do Not Copy

Several regional trade papers have paid this exhibitor department of Moving Picture World a back-handed compliment—they have got into the habit of copying some of our exhibitor news verbatim. Of course they print it a week late, but, then, it's good news, anyway.

Appreciation, as genuine as this, though indirectly conveyed, always makes us feel good. But let us remind these regionals that they really ought to ask our permission before using our thunder. Our correspondents are kicking at the practice and are sending clippings to prove that this "borrowing" of news isn't uncommon.

So, regionals, won't you either get your news direct from exhibitors, or credit material "borrowed" from Moving Picture World, or at least rewrite the news?

SUMNER SMITH

Lew Fischer of the Bradley of Fort Edward ran "The Iron Horse" for two days last week for the benefit of St. Joseph's Church. The only comment he had to make was that he wished his theatre had been about six times as large.

It takes a man with iron nerve to venture into the Adirondacks these days, with all the hunting accidents that are being splashed over front pages in the newspapers. But Rae Candee of Utica made the trip and remained for a couple of weeks, doing a lot of deer hunting and then, returning home, asserted that he had been on a vacation. "Some restful vacation," one of his friends snorted.

Failing to remove a wooden projection booth on orders from the New York State Labor Department, William Tweedy of Mechanicville was last week summarily notified to close his Star Theatre at once. It appears that Mr. Tweedy was notified a month or so ago to install a fireproof booth but postponed doing so. A second inspection resulted in an order being issued on October 19 to close the house at once. The Star is a 600-seat house. Mr. Tweedy now plans to turn it into a garage.

C. R. Halligan of the Universal exchange isn't going to buy any Thanksgiving turkey this year. John Mattice of the Novelty Theatre in Middleburgh was along Film Row last week and cautioned Mr. Halligan against buying a gobbler, giving the impression that he would see that the Halligan Thanksgiving dinner lacked nothing in the way of a bird.

Looks as though Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Schine of Gloversville were still continuing their honeymoon. Mr. Schine took a trip to New York City last week, and with all the shows and fall fashions, on display, it was only natural that Mrs. Schine went along, too.

Some weeks ago, William Smalley of Cooperstown intimated that he intended to add another theatre or two to his chain of a dozen or so. When Bill Smalley intimates a thing it comes pretty near being a foregone conclusion. While in town this past week he announced that he had taken over the Sherburne Opera House and would assume possession on November 1.

Ed Trembley of the American in Troy announces a return engagement of "The Ten Commandments" for four days, beginning October 31. This picture ran a straight week at the Troy to heavy business.

These football days are hard on the purse strings of Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy. Mr. Hill has a young son by the name of Norman. The other day he notified his father that he wanted a pair of football pants. His father assented. The boy hesistated, and then added that he ought to have a headgear. Again the father gave his consent. Following another hesitant minute or two came a further announcement to the effect that the boy would have spiked shoes.

He got his heart's desire, and as he trudged in that night boldly announced that "we" had won the game.

The Antique Theatre in Watertown was sold last week for $37,000 to Carl A. Phillips of that city. The theatre has been under lease to the Robbins Amusement Company at Utica for two years and the lease will not expire until this coming February. The theatre was at one time run by the Papayanakos brothers. Mr. Phillips will spend $14,000 in modernizing the house. Charles S. Sesonske of Johnstown, former manager of the Avon in Watertown, was in that city last week and is said to seek a lease of the theatre as soon as the present one expires.

A. T. Mallory, who runs the Starr in Corinth, stopped over in Albany, on his way back from New York and was very careful to park a brand new car on Pearl street, possibly thinking that evidence of prosperity on his part might skyrocket film quotations later on.

The Mark Strand in Albany will observe its fifth anniversay soon and will use "Little Annie Rooney" as the week's feature. Sam Burns, former manager of the Vitagraph exchange here, and who resigned two or three months ago, is back from a trip to Miami. Visitors along Film Row during the week included Claude Fredericks of the Capitol in Pittsfield, Mass., and E. D. Leischman, an auditor for Universal.

Alike as two peas in some respects, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Roberts of the Troy Theatre showed up last week each wearing a pair of horn rimmed glasses. Mrs. Roberts claims that her eyes have become strained in her duties as cashier, and Mr. Roberts just naturally took the glasses to keep her company.

Another Cardina Theatre for Buffalo

James Cardina, who operates the new Varsity on Bailey avenue and the Kensington on Grider street, Buffalo, has just acquired another site on Bailey avenue, between Kensington and Delavan avenues, on which in the spring he will begin the construction of a 2,500-seat house which will have a frontage of 140 feet. Jim plans to put on big pictures in this house. Mr. Cardina, in association with his brother, Thomas, is also building a new theatre in Williamsville, N. Y., near Buffalo, which will be ready in a few weeks. This house is really an enlargement of the old Glen Theatre which Mr. Cardina has operated for years, but a new front is being built and the house seating capacity augmented to 750. Some day property next door to the theatre may be obtained, at which time the house will be boosted to a 1,200-seat palace. The new Glen is the only theatre in the town.

It is reported that Peterson & Woods of Jamestown, the Schine Corporation and some private individual are dickering for the Regent and Capitol Theatres, owned by the Lally brothers in Dunkirk, N. Y. It is understood that Messrs Lally want to devote their entire time to large land holdings in Florida.

Allan S. Moritz, who is now devoting all his time to the operation of the Ritz Theatre in Niagara Falls, had a terrible time handling the crowds the past week when he presented "The Gold Rush." All attendance records went by the board. In fact, they were so busy that Assistant Manager Lionel Edel was unable to keep the marcelle wave in his upper lip hirsute adornment.

A few changes have been made in the Arcade Theatre, Newfane, N. Y., as recommended by a state building inspector who made a general survey of the house a few weeks ago. The changes are in seating arrangement and aisle space.

Buffalo exchanges are closing contracts with the new Thurston Theatre in Rochester which soon is to open in Kodak Town under the management of Al Root, former Olean exhibitor.

As we predicted several weeks ago, Al Becker, head of the Becker Theatre Supply Company of Buffalo, has gone and done it. He has taken on a new Marmon sedan. The order for equipment for the new Shea house must have been the deciding factor.

Buffalo is to have a new community picture theatre. The council has referred the petition for a house sent in by the Askey-Hager Company, realtors, to the city planning committee. The theatre would be in back of a new store and partment building at 3174 Main street, corner West Northrup place. To date it has not been divulged who will operate the house. The entrance would be on Main street.

A Crime Wave

Judging by the news each week, more and more picture theatres are becoming the targets of yeggmen and bandits. For a long time no week has passed without a story of some picture theatre safe blown or some theatre manager held up at the point of a revolver. Most of the crime is confined to the larger cities, but occasionally come stories from the smaller places. It seems to us that it is up to exhibitors to take extraordinary precautions, protecting not only the box office cash but the girl who officiates behind the window.

Early this week there are only two crime stories at hand. Quite often there are five or six. The effect of these seems cumulative, as they receive mention in the local newspapers, for amateur bandits are led to take a chance at robbing a box office. That is especially true in New York, which at present is suffering a crime wave of considerable proportions, with the bandits concentrating on jewelry shops and silk concerns.

Chicago and St. Louis also have contributed news of not a few theatre hold-ups. The former supplies one this week. Two robbers forced Manager Nathan Rittenberg of the Keystone Theatre to open his safe at the point of revolvers, and escaped with $1,350. And Mansfield, Ohio, reports a hold-up in which two stick-up men shoved a gun in the cashier's face, grabbed $18 on the counter and just missed getting $200 in the drawer. In both instances the bandits escaped.

Real estate prices are boosted by the building of mammoth movie theatres in this city. The latest project to boost realty values is the projected house of Lubliner & Trinz-B. & K. combination for Lipps and Lawrence avenue corner. Property which sold at $250 a front foot before the new house was announced, sold up to $750 a front foot last week. No wonder the property owners are anxious for big movie houses.

Another huge building project for Michigan avenue at the corner of East Ohio street is being projected by a syndicate headed by Murray Wolbach. Neilan Tells Why "The Sky Rocket" Should Be One of Year's Biggest Plays "THAT Peggy Hopkins Joyce is a real film star is the biggest surprise of my career as a director," comments Marshall Neilan in an interview this week following the completion of his work with Miss Joyce on "The Sky Rocket," Associated Exhibitors' big special production.

The interview with Mr. Neilan was prompted by whisperings in the trade, especially during the past few weeks, concerning Miss Joyce and the Associated production. Only a few persons have so far pre-viewed the first print of a picture which Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, emphatically declares will be the "biggest special production of the year."

The reports spread with the usual rapidity attendant upon rumors of something sensational and something big. In order to get down to material facts Mr. Neilan was sought out and his opinion obtained. Here is the "inside" story from the man who put Miss Joyce through every one of her paces in "The Sky Rocket":

"When I commenced work on 'The Sky Rocket' several months ago it was with no idea that I was to have the surprise of my life and that Peggy Hopkins Joyce was to afford me that surprise.

"I found Miss Joyce to be a good actress —but, to be perfectly honest, she did not impress me as anything more than 'good' until we had gotten well underway.

"Perhaps it was due to the fact that I was so intensified in following the script based upon the Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Adele Rogers St. Johns that my first impression of Miss Joyce did not change until later. But when it commenced to change, it literally soared until I realized I had on my lot a 'true find'—a screen diamond of the purest water.

"All along I knew that Miss Joyce in the starring role of such a picture as 'The Sky Rocket' would create the biggest demand at any box office; that women would want to see Miss Joyce because of herself and her reputation for lavish gowns—that men would want to see Miss Joyce solely because of Miss Joyce.

"But as our work on the 'Sky Rocket' advanced and I became so familiar with the scenario that I could see the lines with my eyes closed, I began to watch very closely every movement made by Miss Joyce before the camera.

"It was then that I realized Associated Exhibitors had a 'find.' Not only her beauty and her luxurious wardrobe but her style! She has that definite something which lures, holds and magnifies.

"I found Peggy Hopkins Joyce to be one of the most intelligent and cultured women with whom I have ever encountered. This intelligence, kindly understanding, wit, charm and versatility together with physical beauty make up that 'lure' of Peggy Hopkins Joyce. With every advantage in the world and every thing conceivable to induce egotism, Miss Joyce is most beautiful and superbly magnetic because she has made it a practice always to be herself.

"Speaking about her charm reminds me. Have you seen the current edition of Photoplay?" Mr. Neilan looked through his files. Turning over the cover of Photoplay, he pointed to three pages of solid type and cuts of the Associated star—a story entitled: "What is the Lure of Peggy Joyce?"

MARSHALL NEILAN

Peggy Hopkins Joyce makes her debut as a motion picture star in the Associated Exhibitor's special feature production, "The Sky Rocket," directed by Marshall Neilan, with Owen Moore, Earle Williams, Gladys Hulette and a strong supporting cast.

"First National's production schedule on the Coast," said Mr. McCormick, "is filled, but there is always room for more. The production outlook insofar as First National Pictures is concerned was never quite so healthy.

"Executives, too, are enthusiastic over our forthcoming production schedule," continued the official. "Some of the large theatre chains in the country are booked solid with First National films until next September. Many of these pictures are not as yet started.

"I feel safe in saying that the season 1925-26 will be the biggest in the history of First National Pictures."

Jackie Coogan's New M-G-M Film, "Old Clothes" Completed

THE initial production on Jackie Coogan's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract, "Old Clothes," was delivered to Marcus Loew this week. Immediately after its arrival the big M.-G.-M. chief gave a private showing of Jackie's latest opus to a group of noted theatrical people at his Long Island home. In this noted assemblage were stage and screen stars and prominent exhibitors.

It was the consensus of opinion among this highly critical audience that Jackie has made in "Old Clothes" his most entertaining comedy. The little star, according to Mr. Loew is destined to become a great comedian.

"Old Clothes," which is scheduled for release on November 22 was directed by Eddie Cline, who likewise made "The Rag Man" and "Little Robinson Crusoe." The picture is an adaptation of Willard Mack's original story, and has in its cast, Max Davidson, who scored a hit in "The Rag Man" opposite Jackie, Lillian Elliott, James Mason, Stanton Heck and Joan Crawford. Miss Crawford is a recent M.-G.-M. "find" and plays her first leading role opposite Jackie. Her performance in "Old Clothes" won her the coveted role of Irene in M.-G.-M.'s production of "Sally, Irene and Mary." Jackie retains the raggamuffin garb that made him world famous.

Young Coogan's second picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be placed in production early in December and will be filmed from an original story by Jack Coogan, Sr.

For the first time since Jackie was launched on his career, a definite romantic treatment is given his new picture, "Old Clothes." Heretofore Jackie's films were confined strictly to juvenile appeal, but since the success of "The Rag Man," last season, the executives of the Coogan production company are making a strong adult appeal in Jackie's films. Alan Forrest and Joan Crawford provide the romantic interest.

Entire Columbia 1925-1926 Schedule Is Now Complete

TO put an end to the published rumor that Columbia Pictures Corporation is among those independent producers curtailing production, executives of this organization stated in an interview that their entire program for this year has already been completed. Negatives of the eighteen pictures originally scheduled for this year's program are now in the laboratory undergoing the finishing process and will be ready for release before the date on which they are due.

The consistent high calibre productions released by Columbia in the past created an insistent demand by exhibitors for features containing the Columbia brand which made it necessary to complete the production schedule at the earliest possible date.

The best directorial and acting talent only were engaged in the making of these pictures, and those productions on the Columbia schedule which have already been released have won wide public approbation. Dorothy Revier, who is under a long term starring contract with Columbia Pictures Corporation, has been provided with some of the best vehicles of her career and she has won a world-wide popularity as one of the foremost screen favorites. In all her productions she has been supported by excellent casts and in all her forthcoming pictures this high standard in production and talent has been maintained.

Mary Pickford is obliged to climb a ladder to photograph her tall—Tall director, William Beaudine, who has just completed "Little Annie Rooney," Mary's newest United Artists' release.

Directors of Mix and Jones Finish Pictures on Same Day

J. G. BLYSTONE and R. William Neill, Fox Film directors, made a simultaneous appearance in the executive offices of the Fox West Coast Studios to report the finishing of actual filming of the newest starring vehicles of the Fox Western star duet, Tom Mix, the Modern Buffalo Bill, and Buck Jones, Ace of Westerns.

Blystone announced the completion of the filming of "The Best Bad Man," with Tom Mix starred, and Neill reported "Her Cowboy Prince," Buck Jones' vehicle, was finished. Both directors and their companies returned to Hollywood from location on the same day, and after an hour or two on some closeups, had their pictures ready for first pre-views.

Neill was enthusiastic over the work of Jones and his support in "Her Cowboy Prince" and wasn't a bit backward in predicting it was the best bit of work the big star turned in this season, if not the best he has ever done. Blystone also was exuberant. Although he has directed the popular Mix innumerable times, he said he never had a better scenario to work from than the one Lillie Hayward adapted from Max Brand's popular story of the bad man who wasn't as bad as he was painted.

Blystone recalled the fact that it was Max Brand who supplied the story for Tom's greatest triumph, "The Untamed" and said he thought "The Best Bad Man" was a greater story, with the character fitting Tom's personality even better than the hot-headed hero of "The Untamed."

Both stars had exceptional casts supporting them in their newest pictures. Clara Bow had been secured to play the leading feminine role for Mix, while opposite Jones the Fox casting director had the vivacious Helena D'Algy.

For the character parts in the Mix vehicle there was a lineup of talent worthy of any production ever filmed. For his heavy Mix had the accomplished Cyril Chadwick, of successes too numerous to mention. Then there was Judy King, petite featured player of the Fox stock company, Buster Gardner, Tom Kennedy, Frank Beal, Paul Panzer and Tom Wilson. Of course, supporting Tom as no human could, was the wonder horse, Tony. And there was Tom's own company of cowboys, whose challenge to the riders of the world still remains uncalled.

Diana Miller, another of the featured players of the Fox stock company, headed the lineup of character players in the Jones picture. The others were Chappell Dossett, Fletcher Norton, Monte Collins, Jr., Harvey Clark and Jere Austin.

"Her Cowboy Prince" is from a story by Maxine Alton and Adele Duffington. Charles Darnton wrote the scenario.

"Little Annie Rooney" Breaks Records At Liberty Theatre

"'Little Annie Rooney' has broken all records for Saturday and Sunday receipts at the Liberty Theatre," telegraphed Sam Carver, manager, at the recent showing of Mary Pickford's new United Artists Corporation release. "Due to our limited seating capacity we were unable to handle the crowds and hundreds were turned away. The patrons were well pleased with Mary Pickford's latest triumph. Expect this feature to make the greatest success in history of house before end of run."

Ray Signs With M-G-M

Popular Star Has Completed Excellent Role in "Bright Lights"

Following the completion of what is believed to be Charles Ray's most remarkable characterization on the screen in Robert Z. Leonard's "Bright Lights," in which he is featured opposite Pauline Starke, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has secured the signature of this popular artist on a long term contract.

The agreement just signed by Louis B. Mayer and Ray foreshadows ambitious plans for Ray's screen future. Preparations on the story of the initial picture in which he is to appear under his new contract will be started shortly.

Those "in the know" declare that Ray has achieved a characterization in "Bright Lights" which bids fair to rank as one of the outstanding performances of the year.

"Bright Lights" is based on a story by Richard Connell adapted to the screen by Jessie Burns.

Claire McDowell Cast

Has Important Role in "Free Lips" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Claire McDowell has been cast in the role of Mrs. Lawrence in "Free Lips," Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Hobart Henley is directing this film from the Carey Wilson story adapted to the screen by Louis Leighton and Hope Loring.

This makes Miss McDowell's third appearance in a big M-G-M feature this season, the first two being "Ben Hur," the mammoth picturization of the Lew Wallace novel and play which Fred Niblo is producing for the Culver City studios by arrangement with A. L. Erlanger from the adaptation made by June Mathis, and Victor Seastrom's "The Tower of Lies," starring Lon Chaney and Miss Shearer. This latter film is a screen version of the Selma Lagerlof novel, "The Emperor of Portugallia," adapted to the screen by Agnes Christine Johnston.

Sign Finis Fox

Finis Fox, author, scenarist, director and former producer, has been signed by Metropolitan Pictures and will augment the scenario staff of which Jack Cunningham is the editorial chief.

Big Circuits Booking "The Man on the Box"

FOLLOWING the extraordinary success of "The Man on the Box," a Warner Bros. production starring Syd Chaplin, at several first run theatres, Sam E. Harris, general manager of distribution for Warner Bros., announces big bookings all over the country for the Chaplin comedy which recently had a two weeks' run at the Warner Theatre in New York to packed houses.

Reports from the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, show that it broke all records since that theatre opened and the management was compelled to change its policy and hold it over a second week.

It is now playing at the California in San Francisco, the Blue Mouse in Seattle, and has been booked over the Crandall circuit. Mr. Crandall booked the picture for his Metropolitan in Washington without even seeing it, being satisfied with the box office reports from other cities.

The Stanley Circuit has also bokoed "The Man on the Box" for its circuit and some hundred or more big houses in other territories will play it during the next few weeks. Every indication points to the Chaplin comedy being one of the biggest box office successes of the year.

Frank Borzage Starts Filming "First Year," His Third for Fox

WITH his two completed productions for Fox Films, "Lazybones" and "Wages For Wives" worth sitting up nights to talk about in the opinion of all who have viewed them, Frank Borzage, the Millarde of West Coast directors, has started filming Frank Craven's greatest comedy triumph "The First Year."

Frances Marion made the adaptation of this comic tragedy of married life which is the sixth of the John Golden Unit of Clean American Productions which Fox is bringing to the screen during the current season.

A genuine all-star cast of real box office power has been secured for the leading roles in the picturization. Heading it are Matt Moore, secured from Warner Bros. because of his peculiar fitness for the hole of Tom Tucker, and Kathryn Perry, who because of her delightful interpretation of the young wife in the Fox "Married Life of Helen and Warren," two-reelers, has made casting directors come to regard her as the typical young American wife. Kathryn is the apple of Tom's eye as the dear Grace Livingston.

Next comes J. Farrell MacDonald, or "Cosey" as he is now known as the result of his celebrated interpretation of the Irish foreman in "The Iron Horse." J. Farrell is the high-sounding Dr. Myron Anderson, Grace's bachelor uncle, who is the guide, philosopher and friend of the young couple. J. Farrell, under Borzage's direction, is something for the most hardboiled movie fan to look forward to.

For the role of the flippant, cocksure Dick Loring, Fox has secured John Patrick, Hollywood's leading young character actor. "Pa" and "Ma" Livingston will be enacted by Frank Cooley and Emily Fitzroy.

For the part of that disturber of male hearts and domestic transquillity, Mrs. Barstow, the Fox casting director selected Margaret Livingston, Fox stock company featured player, who as a screen "vamp" is trailer to none. Carolynne Snowden is cast as the faithful but dumb Hattie, whose boners cause the young couple no end of embarrassment.

The remainder of the cast will be announced later.

"Brown of Harvard"

Irving G. Thalberg, associate executive for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, announces that Jack Conway is to direct "Brown of Harvard," by Rida Johnson Young, for the Culver City studios. The film will be made at Harvard University. Conway recently completed Elinor Glyn's "The Only Thing," for M-G-M.

Rolland Flander Signed

Rolland Flander has been signed for an important role in the serial, "Enemies of Uncle Sam," now being produced by Schuyler Grey for release through Pathe. This ten-episode serial is being directed by William Nigh, assisted by William Presley Burke. Featured in the serial are Helen Ferguson and George O'Hara. Mr. Flander has the role of "Jack Denton," a "buddy" of Lieut. Stratford (Mr. O'Hara). The company has returned from New London, Conn., where exteriors were "shot," and the unit is now working on the picture at O. O. Lee Studios, No. 91 Mill Street, Astoria, Long Island.

As a result of the recent trip South of Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas Film Corp., announcement is made from the New York home office of Lumas Film Corp., that the current program of twelve Gotham productions will be distributed in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida by the Eltrabran Film Co., of Atlanta, Ga.

The contract was closed between Rogers for the Lumas Film Corporation and Thomas H. Branon of the Eltabran Film Company, and covers the following productions:

"The Overland Limited," "The Police Patrol," "A Little Girl in the Big City," "His Master's Voice," "The Part Time Wife," "One of the Bravest," "The Shadow on the Wall," "The Phantom of the Forest," "Hearts and Spangles," "Racing Blood," "The Speed Limit" and "The Sign of the Claw."

Out of the series of twelve productions eight are already completed and will be available for exhibitors in the Southern States except in the States of Louisiana and Mississippi which were not included in the deal.

Columbia Press Books Carry Complete Drive

The exploitation department of Columbia Pictures Corporation has received many complimentary letters from exhibitors handling the Columbia features complimenting it upon the splendid press books it has consistently turned out. "For originality and novelty in exploitation ideas, the Columbia press books are the best I receive," said one exhibitor in Colorado.

A complete line of lobby displays and accessories to fill every need of the exhibitor are illustrated in these books and no effort or expense is spared in making it the most complete campaign book sent out from a motion picture organization.

Pro-Dis-Co Releases Closed for West Indies

Frederick H. Knocks, president of the Medal Film Company, has closed an extensive deal for the 1924-1925-1926 Producers Distributing Corporation productions for the West Indies territory and Venezuela.

The Medal Film Company has long operated its own exchanges in Cuba, Porto Rico and San Domingo and now intends to expand this exchange system still further.

Mary and Doug May Co-star Soon in Film

MARY PICKFORD and Douglas Fairbanks soon may co-star in a series of pictures to follow their 1926 feature releases.

This statement was made recently by Miss Pickford in discussing her plans for the future. She expects to follow her "Scraps," now in course of production, with a third, the first of the year having been "Little Annie Rooney," now having successful runs in many of the larger cities.

So the oft-repeated rumor that the two stars will combine their efforts may come true at last.

Miss Pickford, it is said, has not as yet decided on a story for her third production of this year, but is said to be considering several. In the meantime she is working in mud and ooze on the swamp at her Hollywood studio completing the "chase" scenes in "Scraps," in which she pilots a band of youngsters to safety through the bogs.

Plays 4 At Same Time

United Artists Corporation Release Booked Simultaneously in West End London

London newspapers and British film trade journals recently have commented rather widely on the fact that four United Artists Corporation releases are playing simultaneously in the West End of London. The pictures are: Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney," the Marble Arch; Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush, the Tivoli; Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q, Son of Zorro," the Hippodrome; D. W. Griffith's "Sally of the Sawdust," the Empire.

The comment was made that this is the first time in the history of the film business in England that any releasing or producing organization has had four big feature pictures showing at one time. The comment also was made that exhibitors were considerably impressed by this fact.

Hart's "Tumbleweeds" Now Being Edited

"Tumbleweeds" is completed. William S. Hart's first production for United Artists Corporation release is now in the cutting room and is being assembled and titled. The picture, say those who have seen parts of it, bids fair to be the superlative among Westerns, the most ambitious of "Bill" Hart's offerings to the screen.

"If the utmost care in production, a perfectly selected cast, and an exceptionally fine story are the essentials for a successful photoplay feature, then 'Tumbleweeds' will be the western drama par excellence, Hart is quoted as having said when the last shots were made. King Baggot directed the picture and Barbara Bedford has the leading feminine role.

Begins on "The Reason Why"

Jack Conway has begun work on an elaborate production of Elinor Glyn's successful novel "The Reason Why" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Aileen Pringle has the role of Zara, and Edmund Lowe has been borrowed from William Fox for the role of Tancred opposite her. Douglas Gilmore has a prominent part and Phillips Smalley appears in this film as Markrute. Edythe Chapman plays Tancred's mother and Mary Hawes appears as Zara's maid.

Constance Bennett Signs Contract

Constance Bennett, daughter of Richard Bennett, has signed a long term contract to appear exclusively in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Miss Bennett is now playing the rôle of Irene in Edmund Goulding's "Sally, Irene and Mary," an elaborate picturization of the Edward Dowling musical stage success, adapted to the screen by Hope Loring and Louis Leighton.

"The Kitten and the King."

A Gerald Beaumont comedy drama based on the life of a policeman has been acquired by Harry Garson as the next starring vehicle for Maurice (Lefty) Flynn. It is called "The Kitten and The King." It will be the third policeman's role Mr. Flynn has portrayed in his current series, his other police parts having been in "High and Handsome" and "Speed Wild." He is now engaged in filming "Between Men," in which he plays a civil engineer.

Florence Vidor and Tom Moore in a scene in "The Trouble with Wives," a Paramount Picture directed by Mal St. Clair.

Fox Buys Rights to Stage Hits, Six Belasco Plays and Big Novel

WHAT constitutes one of the season's important deals of stage and screen was announced this week by William Fox when he made public the fact that Fox Films has purchased the screen rights to "Cradle Snatchers" and "What Price Glory," Broadway hits; "One Increasing Purpose," A. S. M. Hutchinson's latest novel, and six David Belasco plays.

In addition to the four plays which made David Warfield's reputation—"The Music Master," "The Auctioneer," "The Grand Army Man" and "The Return of Peter Grimm"—the Fox-Belasco transaction includes film rights to "The Lily," in which Nance O'Neill starred, and "The Comedian," in which Lionel Atwill played the title role.

"The Music Master" ran for a record-breaking year in the old Belasco Theatre on 42nd Street and then went on tour for two more years. It was revived successfully three times, and it made David Warfield's name a household word.

In 1904 came the production of "The Auctioneer," in 1907 came "The Grand Army Man," and in 1910 "The Return of Peter Grimm," each of which brought Warfield new laurels. Each of the four plays ran for three years, one year on Broadway and two years on the road.

"The Lily" established Nance O'Neill's reputation as a character actress. In the play she enacts the role of an older sister who has sacrificed the pleasures in life to obey the whims of her selfish father.

"The Comedian" is the story of a beautiful young girl who falls in love with a matinee idol. This role considerably enhanced the reputation of Lionel Atwill.

"What Price Glory," produced by Arthur Hopkins, ran for more than a year as the dramatic hit of Broadway. It closed recently, when four companies took the play out on tour.

"Cradle Snatchers," produced this season by Sam H. Harris with the assistance of Hazzard Short, is the reigning dramatic triumph on Broadway. It has been producing gales of laughter at the Music Box.

"One Increasing Purpose" is the third Hutchinson novel to be brought to the screen by Fox Films. "If Winter Comes" and "This Freedom" were presented with considerable success two seasons ago.

RUGGLES TO DIRECT

Wesley Ruggles has been engaged to direct Evelyn Brent in her next F. B. O. production "A Broadway Lady," it is announced by B. P. Fineman, F. B. O. production head.

A Picture Record of Something No Man Ever Did Before! Imperishable in History; Boldness never surpassed; A thrill that aroused the world. A 24 Day Adventure with Amundsen

Paramount Ahead of Winter Schedule; Start New Plays

PARAMOUNT today has finished, or in the final stage, all of the 23 attractions which it will release during October, November, December and January. So far in advance of its schedule is the production staff that work is well under way on several pictures for the new season.

"The complete co-ordination of our production forces," says Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production, "has made possible this wonderful progress on our winter program. With practically every picture on this schedule completed, the production department is devoting its energies to the spring attractions, several of which are now in the early stages of work."

Productions already finished and the months of release follow:

October: "A Regular Fellow," Raymond Griffith's hilarious comedy which has just had its premiere at the Rivoli Theatre on Broadway; "The Golden Princess," with Betty Bronson; "New Brooms," the William de Mille picture featuring Neil Hamilton, Bessie Love and Phyllis Haver; "Lovers in Quarantine," with Bebe Daniels, Harrison Ford and Alfred Lunt, and directed by Frank Tuttle; "The Pony Express," the new James Cruze masterpiece which has had record runs in San Francisco and New York, with Betty Compson, Ernest Torrence, Ricardo Cortez and Wallace Beery in the cast, and "Seven Keys to Baldpate," an adaptation of the George M. Cohan stage success starring Douglas MacLean.

November: "Flower of Night," Joseph Hergesheimer's original story starring Pola Negri; "The Best People," directed by Sidney Olcott, with Margaret Morris, Warner Baxter, Esther Ralston and Kathlyn Williams; "The King on Main Street," directed by Monta Bell, with Adolph Menjou and William Collier, Jr., in the featured roles; "The Ancient Highway," directed by Irvin Willat and featuring Jack Holt, Billie Dove and Montagu Love; "Stage Struck," starring Gloria Swanson and directed by Allan Dwan, and "Cobra," with Rudolph Valentino and Nita Naldi and directed by Joseph Henabery.

December: "That Royle Girl," a D. W. Griffith attraction with Carol Dempster, W. C. Fields, James Kirkwood, Bobby Watson, and George Rigas in the cast; and "A Kiss for Cinderella," Paramount's production for Christmas featuring Betty Bronson and Tom Moore. Herbert Brenon directed.

Completing the winter schedule are these productions on which production is well advanced:

December: "Irish Luck," starring Thomas Meighan and directed by Victor Heerman; "Lord Jim," directed by Victor Fleming and featuring Percy Marmont, Noah Beery, Shirley Mason and Raymond Hatton; "Woman-handled," a Richard Dix vehicle directed by Gregory La Cava, and a new Pola Negri production as yet untitled.

January: A new William de Mille attraction tentatively titled "Magpie"; "Mannequin," the Fannie Hurst prize story with ZaSu Pitts, Alice Joyce and Warner Baxter, and James Cruze handling the megaphone; "Hands Up," another Raymond Griffith comedy, with Marion Nixon; "The Enchanted Hill," directed by Irvin Willat, with Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, Noah Beery and Mary Brian, and "The American Venus," which Frank Tuttle is directing with Esther Ralston, Ford Sterling and Lawrence Gray in the cast.

On the advance program the cameras are clicking on "Behind the Front," with Mildred Davis, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton; "The Song and Dance Man," with Bessie Love in the cast and Herbert Brenon directing, "Aloma of the South Seas," which will star Gilda Gray and will be directed by Maurice Tourneur, "The Lucky Lady," with Greta Nissen, Lionel Barrymore, William Collier, Jr., and Marc MacDermitt.

Made Production Manager

Maurice E. Sebastian, son of the producer has been installed as production manager of the A. H. Sebastian producing organization, which is now engaged in the making of "Fifth Avenue," at the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood.

Mr. Sebastian has just completed an engagement as production manager of the Howard Estabrook Company. Prior to this, he was associated with the Orpheum Circuit.

Close-ups of Greater Importance Than Big Ensembles, Says De Mille

CECIL B. De MILLE comes forward with the statement that "big, lavish scenes are easy" and that "the difficult scenes to make and the most important sequences in motion pictures, confine the protagonists within a maximum of sixteen square feet."

In an interview given to the press, De Mille illustrates his argument with specific instances.

"Great as was the ride of the Klansmen in "The Birth of a Nation," says Mr. De Mille, "it has been outlasted in the public memory by that small, condensed but unutterably poignant and beautiful death farewell of the 'Little Colonel' and his sister.

"'The Little American' which Mary Pickford did for me had scores of striking, vivid war scenes using hundreds of people. Yet the scene which brought most comment occurred with the characters locked together—Jack Holt, a German officer, discovering the woman he had seized in the dark of a French chateau to be his American sweetheart.

"In 'Scaramouche' are used some of the largest crowds we have known. It would be difficult, however, for anyone to accurately state just what these people did—and why—whereas I will gamble that nine people out of ten could describe in minutest detail every motion of Ramon Novarro and Lewis Stone as these bitter enemies are discovered to be father and son.

"People have been kind in their comments as to 'The Ten Commandments' scene wherein Richard Dix plays a reversed John Alden-Miles Standish scene with Leatrice Joy and Rod La Rocque. And yet a yardstick would have encompassed the three leads. If we directors can make one such scene in each picture we are satisfied. It takes hard digging to uncover the human heart but, once done, the action yields rich entertainment dividends.

"In 'The Road to Yesterday' the production I have just completed is an illustration of condensed moments. I have reflected in Joseph Schildkraut's face in a semi-close-up, the reaction of emotion at the death of his secret wife in a burning at the stake. Then terror and agony are registered in the same manner as he is stabbed from the rear by the man whose sweetheart he had stolen. I am confident that this sequence will be accepted as one of the really great scenes of the production."

HOW CLARA REACHED "THE PLASTIC AGE"

The lead in Percy Marks' Famous Novel was Clara Bow's Reward for Two Years of Remarkable Screen Achievement—

"DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS" "MAYTIME" "BLACK OXEN" CAPITAL PUNISHMENT "KISS ME AGAIN" "THE SCARLET WEST" "MY LADY'S LIPS" "PARISIAN LOVE" "THE LAWFUL CHEATER" "FREE TO LOVE" "THE PLASTIC AGE"

A "Sideways" Movie of Clara traveling upward to the top in the B. P. Schulberg production mentioned at top.

Pathe Salesmen Move

Ballantyne Southern District Manager—Other Promotions

A number of important changes in the personnel of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., field executives has brought about several promotions. R. S. Ballantyne, Des Moines branch manager, has been appointed southern district manager, succeeding Oscar Morgan, who at his own request has been made branch manager of the Dallas office. The vacancy in Dallas was occasioned by the serious illness of D. J. Coughlin, compelling his immediate surrender of his managerial duties in the Texas city.

A. W. Kahn, one of the best known film men in the Middle West, has been named as Mr. Ballantyne's successor at Des Moines.

L. E. Kennedy, formerly special feature representative, has been appointed branch manager at San Francisco, succeeding W. W. Kofeldt, who resigned to take a position abroad. Mr. Kennedy relieved George Knowles, acting branch manager. Mr. Knowles, at his request, has been transferred to Los Angeles as special comedy salesman.

Effective on October 31, the Washington Pathe branch, now a part of the Southern Division, will come under the jurisdiction of the Eastern Division, of which Charles Henschel is district manager.

Record for "Joe" Farnham

A record has been established by Joseph W. Farnham, noted title writer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. About ten months ago Farnham was placed under long term contract by the Culver City studios and since that time has titled no less than twenty of M-G-M's biggest pictures, including King Vidor's "Proud Flesh," featuring Eleanor Boardman; "The Midshipman," starring Ramon Novarro; Hobart Henley's "A Slave of Fashion," a Carey Wilson story starring Norma Shearer and featuring Lew Cody, and Director Vidor's production, "The Big Parade," starring John Gilbert. The titling of the latter film is considered something of a triumph for Farnham, as every title in the picture was written by him, including even the verses of the songs that appear on the screen.

Schlesinger to Go Abroad

Gus Schlesinger, general manager of the foreign department of Warner Bros., is in Los Angeles for a hurried visit to the studio and to confer with Jack L. Warner and his associate Bennie Ziedman concerning the year's product, before sailing for Paris, where he makes his headquarters.

The next trip that Mr. Schlesinger takes will be his first visit to the Warner exchanges in Europe. There are twenty of them throughout continental Europe and Great Britain.

Warners Sign John Patrick

John Patrick has been signed to a long term contract by Warner Bros., according to an announcement by Jack Warner and Bennie Zeidman, studio executives.

Mr. Patrick has been in pictures only a short time, havnig started in the extra ranks. He first gained notice through his famous lamp shade dance in Colleen Moore's picture "Flaming Youth." That dance was the turning point in John's life. From that incident on he has come to the front, until today he is recognized as one of the best comedians on the screen.

Antonio Moreno, Rex Ingram, Blasco Ibanez and Alice Terry, snapped at the famous novelist's villa in Mentone, France, where he recently entertained Director Ingram and the featured players in Ingram's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of "Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea).

Vital Opening Exchange Chain Throughout Country and Canada

CONCURRENTLY with the announcement by David R. Hochreich, president of Vital Exchanges, Inc., a recently-formed national releasing organization, that the men responsible for the organization of Vital have aligned themselves with a group of financiers is divulged the association of Leo A. Price, president of the Associated Banking Corporation, with Hochriech's company.

Mr. Price comes into Vital Exchanges, Inc., as chairman of the Board of Directors, and will, it is believed, take an active part in the operation of the new company. Price, as Hochreich admits, is personally interested in the affairs of the company, and, while he will have little to do with the actual sales policy of Vital, he has agreed, at the request of the company's officials, to act as chairman of the directorial board and concern himself particularly with the financial operation of the corporation.

Vital Exchanges, Inc., announced the consummation of a deal with Davis Distributing Division for the distribution of the Davis company product and the opening of thirty-one exchanges throughout the United States and Canada.

David R. Hochreich and his assistant, Milton Kempner, have left for the west coast to complete the national exchange chain. They will be absent from the home office of Vital for a period of from three to four weeks. Mr. Hochreich said the entire home office personnel would be announced when he returns from Hollywood.

At that time an extensive advertising campaign, relative to the national distribution of Vital product, will be conducted in the various motion picture trade publications. Vital Exchanges, Inc., is an entirely separate corporation from the Davis Distributing Division and will maintain individual offices and be controlled by a separate group of experienced motion picture men.

Dorthy Revier Plays Lead

Harry Cohn has assigned Dorothy Revier the leading feminine role in the new Waldorf production to be made by Columbia Pictures, "The Fate of a Flirt." This production will be put into work immediately under the direction of Frank Strayer. "The Fate of a Flirt" is a comedy drama and is the next picture announced for release on the Columbia Pictures schedule.

Hearst Evening Paper Editorially Praises Brooklyn Mark Strand on Sixth Anniversary

THE sixth anniversary of the opening of the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre, celebrated last week with "Don Q. Son of Zorro," the feature picture, brought many letters and congratulatory telegrams to Moe Mark, head of the Mark Strand circuit, and to Edward L. Hyman, managing director of this house since 1919. One incident, however, seemed to overshadow all other incidents, and this was the display editorial notice that appeared in the Brooklyn section of The (N. Y.) Evening Journal.

The editorial headlines tell the story:

"BROOKLYN ATTENDS THE MARK STRAND BIRTHDAY."

"Director Hyman Has Made Not Only His Theatre Well Known But Given Quite a Bit of Fame to This Borough."

Editorial mention of a theatre, anywhere, at any time, is rare. Stories are printed, and photographs used, very often, but rarely does it happen that a theatre or theatre manager is given such recognition as the Hearst evening paper in New York City gave the Brooklyn Mark Strand in its issue of Monday, Oct. 5, 1925.

In part, the editorial reads:

"Brooklynites are intensely loyal. They take a particular interest in and show special pride in anything that is distinctly Brooklyn. They back, with all the force of clannish zeal, anyone or anything that serves to give the borough added fame in any particular line of endeavor.

"Hence it is not to be wondered at that during the week, just ended the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre, which has made a special niche for itself in the affection of this borough, has been able to point to an unusual record in the six years it has been catering to the public on this side of the Bridge.

"Last week was anniversary week at the Brooklyn Strand. Moe Mark, the owner, and Edward L. Hyman, the managing director, received congratulations from all sections of the borough.

"And these expressions of felicitation have been well deserved. These two men have done a big thing for Brooklyn by crossing the Bridge and investing their money and their confidence in the people on this side.

"Brooklyn is becoming as big a theatrical center as Manhattan formerly was. Majestic temples of the dramatic art are rising on every hand not only here in Brooklyn but farther out in Queens.

"Concerning Director Hyman, we might say that he has given additional fame not only to his house here in Brooklyn but to the borough itself, by the Sunday night series of concerts over the radio through the city's broadcasting station WNYC.

"We congratulate Hyman and his people and wish them many more years of success here in Brooklyn."

Larry Semon, who will appear in "Stop, Look and Listen," his first Pathe feature, with Dorothy Dwan (Mrs. Semon) as his leading lady.

Younger who adapted the story for the screen. Other members of the cast include Alyce Mills, Otto Matieson, Robert Ober, John Miljan, Mary Beth Milford, Eve Southern and Margery O'Neill.

Preferred Film Goes Big

"The Girl Who Wouldn't Work" Proves Hit At Chicago Opening

"The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," a Preferred Picture widely discussed for its unique handling by the newly discovered Marcel De Sano, opened to big business and enthusiastic newspaper comment on the occasion of its Chicago premiere last week at the Capitol Theatre. Mae Tinee, nationally known critic of the Chicago Tribune, called this Schulberg release "an engrossing program with a different plot. Much better than the general run."

Marguerite De La Motte, who plays feminine lead opposite Lionel Barrymore, stopped off at Chicago en route from New York to Hollywood, to attend the first performance in the windy city.

Strong Cast

Norman Taurog has chosen a supporting cast for his first Educational-Lloyd Hamilton Comedy that includes Dick Sutherland, famous "bad-man"' of the screen, and Marcella Daly.

This will be Miss Daly's first appearance in short comedy. She has appeared in several feature productions, notably DeMille's "Adam's Rib" and "The Ten Commandments." Sutherland made his screen debut in Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy" and has appeared in scores of pictures since.

Film Booking Offices Plan Steady Production Outflow

THERE will be no cessation of activity on the F. B. O. lot this autumn, it was announced yesterday by B. P. Fineman, general manager.

F. B. O. is functioning on a well ordered program, the operation of which precludes the company getting too far ahead on its product. As a result, the F. B. O. production forces are enabled to concentrate a maximum of attention on each production as it comes along. Therefore, F. B. O. is working at full blast.

Yesterday saw the completion of "The Midnight Flyer," a railroad melodrama directed by Tom Forman and co-featuring Cullen Landis and Dorothy Devore. It will be released late in November.

Today marked the launching of "Flaming Waters," an oil industry melodrama to be directed by Hermon Weight, who filmed "Drusilla With A Million" for F. B. O. Mary Carr, Malcolm McGregor and Pauline Garon are featured in the new production, the big scenes of which will deal with a flood of blazing oil. It will be, by all odds, the most elaborate production of its kind made at F. B. O. in many weeks.

Within the next two weeks work will be started on "When His Love Grew Cold," from the novel by Laura Jean Libbey. "A Poor Girl's Romance," by the same author, also will be filmed in the early future, as will a turf drama, "The Futurity Winner," to be made along the lines of a Drury Lane melodramatic spectacle.

Fred Thomson has completed "All Around Frying Pan" and is ready to start "The Tough Guy" (tentative). Evelyn Brent is heading toward Hollywood after a month of theatregoing and shopping in New York. She will start "Broadway Lady." Maurice Flynn has finished "Between Men" and "Heads Up" and will begin another comedy melodrama.

At the same time F. B. O. is hitting a lively pace in two reel production. Ralph Cedar is filming episode No. 6 of "The Mazie" series, starring Alberta Vaughn, while continuities are being prepared for the new "Fighting Hearts" series by Sam Hellman and "Bill Grimm's Progress" series by H. C. Witwer.

"Pals" Completed

"Pals" the third of the Truart Novelty Productions featuring Louise Lorraine, Rex, the Wonder Dog and Black Beauty the Horse has been completed.

New Directors Pushed

Harry Cohn Gives New Megaphonists Opportunities

Much has been written and said about new faces on the screen, but it is the firm belief of Harry Cohn, president of the Waldorf Studios, that the screen needs new directors and he backs up his belief with action, having signed a former cameraman and an assistant director and given them opportunities to become directors.

Tony Gaudio, for the past four years chief cameraman for Norma Talmadge has just completed his first directorial effort "The Price of Success" and Mr. Cohn was so pleased with his work that he immediately signed him to direct his next Waldorf Production "Sealed Lips" which is now being "shot" with an all-star cast including Dorothy Revier and Cullen Landis.

The other director "find" of Mr. Cohn's is Frank Strayer, who for the past five years has been assistant to Harry Beaumont. Mr. Strayer's first picture was "Enemy of Men," This picture proved such a success that Mr. Cohn immediately re-engaged him to direct "The Penalty of Jazz" which at a pre-view the other evening at the DeLuxe Theatre, Los Angeles, was voted one of the best of the new seasons pictures to be previewed this year. As a reward for his good work Mr. Cohn has placed him under a five-year contract. For his next picture Mr. Strayer has been assigned to direct "The Lure of the North," a dog story for which an all-star cast is now being engaged.

Press Books Ready

Columbia Has Fine Exploitation in Helpful Form for Exhibitors

Columbia's press books on this season's releases are a splendid example of what an honest complete production sheet should be.

There is nothing lacking in a Columbia book to give the exhibitor information on every conceivable method of putting his Columbia release across. Besides a varied collection of newspaper material from advertising cuts to news reviews, there is a complete exploitation section of novel and original exploitation possibilities, not only what to do but how to do it and exactly what steps should be followed to gain the best results.

The books on "Steppin' Out," and "S-O-S Perils of the Sea," on "The New Champion" and "The Great Sensation" in the Perfection series, and "Sealed Lips," and "When Husbands Flirt" in the Waldorf series are recent results of a policy that aims to present a press sheet of maximum service to exhibitors.

New Canadian Theatre Honors "Charley's Aunt"

A unusual distinction was conferred on the Al. Christie feature, "Charley's Aunt," last week, when Toronto, Canada's new theatre, the Oxford, selected "Charley's Aunt" as the opening attraction in spite of the fact that it had previously been shown at both the Palace and the Danforth Theatres.

That the new Oxford, opening in competition with the Palace and the Danforth, selected the third run of the Christie farce as its initial offering, is an unprecedented honor and a distinction that is heightened by the fact that, at the present time, the Canadian market has many unplayed pictures.

"Fifty-Fifty" Completes First 8 of Associated's "Triumphant 30"

ASSOCIATED Exhibitors, Inc., makes known this week that it will release "Fifty-Fifty" on November 15th.

"Fifty-Fifty" features Hope Hampton, Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glaum. It is a Henry Diamant Berger production. This release completes Associated's first group which includes eight feature productions.

Based upon a novel marital angle from the story by Alan Dwan, "Fifty-Fifty" ranks high as a box office attraction in Associated's 1925 Autumnal releases. The preceding seven features, all possessing star casts of note, are: "Headlines," starring Alice Joyce and Malcolm MacGregor; "Never Weaken" with Harold Lloyd and Mildred Harris; "Keep Smiling," Monty Banks and Ann Cornwall; "Manhattan Madness," Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor; "His Buddy's Wife," Glenn Hunter and Edna Murphy; "Under the Rouge," Tom Moore and Eileen Percy; "Camille of the Barbary Coast," Mae Busch and Owen Moore.

On top of these box office winners announcement of the release date of Associated Exhibitors' big super-special, "The Sky Rocket," starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce, will shortly be made.

It is for the purpose of getting these early releases off to a flying start that General Manager John S. Woody is now visiting principal exchanges throughout the country. That not a single movement to insure the success of these big productions may be overlooked, Mr. Woody is grooming exchanges on the merits of each picture and is at the same time practically doubling the big staff of Associated salesmen.

Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., is confident that the first eight features of Associated's program of thirty for the year, entitled "The Triumphant Thirty" will put the Associated trade mark in the first rank of the film industry's best productions.

Directs "Dancing Days"

William Wellman Starts Work On a B. P. Schulberg Production

"Dancing Days" is William Wellman's first directorial assignment for Preferred Pictures, B. P. Schulberg has announced. It was previously planned to give Wellman "Lew Tyler's Wives," by Wallace Irwin, as his initial production under his new contract, but difficulties in securing a proper masculine lead for the title role at the present time have necessitated a temporary postponement in filming this famous novel of marriage.

Meanwhile, he has already begun the direction of "Dancing Days," from the story by Dorothy Carns. Dorothy Arzner has just completed the adaptation and the cast is now being chosen. It is a society drama describing the exploits of a never-stay-home family.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce to Make Three More for Associated

WHILE Miss Peggy Hopkins Joyce is touring Europe, Associated Exhibitors are forging ahead in their plans to make her the biggest star in filmdom. If reports are credited, her first picture, "The Sky Rocket," a Marshal Neilan production, is a screen triumph. So pleased are the executives of Associated Exhibitors with the work of Peggy Hopkins Joyce in "The Sky Rocket," that Miss Joyce will make three additional pictures for the company. Her second production, as yet unnamed, will be started on her return from Europe where she went last week for a rest of two months.

"The Sky Rocket," in which Miss Joyce made such a favorable impression on Associated officials, was written by Adela Rogers St. John and is based on the rise and fall of a movie star in Hollywood.

P. A. Powers, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Associated Exhibitors, was the first to see Miss Joyce's qualities as a film star.

At this time Miss Joyce was appearing in a Broadway musical comedy at a high weekly salary and a percentage of the gross of the show. It took considerable financial coaxing on the part of Mr. Powers to lure Miss Joyce from the footlights, but finally this was accomplished and after getting the star's name to a contract Powers set about to find suitable story material.

In the course of seeking the right vehicle, over seven hundred plays, short stories, and novels were considered with the final selection of "The Sky Rocket," a book length novel which met with an overwhelming success in the Cosmopolitan magazine.

Marshall Neilan was next engaged to direct the film and he surrounded himself with a strong supporting cast and quietly set about to make the picture.

The first two selected were Owen Moore and Earle Williams. These two stars have the outstanding parts second in importance to the role portrayed by Miss Joyce. Supporting these players are Gladys Hulette, Sammy Cohen, Bull Montana, Ed Dillon, and many others.

"The Sky Rocket" as a screen vehicle was actually in production almost three months. The actual shooting time covered a period of two months.

Following the completion of the picture Miss Joyce returned to New York. The print of "The Sky Rocket" arrived in town three weeks ago for its final titling and editing.

To Spend Over $150,000

In keeping with the plans outlined by P. A. Powers, over $150,000 will be spent on the production which will be released as a special and will not be included in the booking of the regular Associated Exhibitors' product. Under the supervision of John S. Woody, general manager, a special sales force is being organized to handle the sale of the picture, while Robert E. Welsh, director of advertising and publicity for Associated Exhibitors, is planning a special field force of exploitation men for the key cities and surrounding territory.

The first advertised official announcement for "The Sky Rocket" was made last week with the release of the beautiful three-color insert in eight pages. This insert is only the beginning shot in the campaign and after having run in all the national motion picture trade newspapers and regional journals, it will be closely followed by a direct-to-the-exhibitor series of broadsides.

The first of these is now in work and is founded on the beautiful gowns and wardrobe in the picture worn by Miss Joyce.

The second of the series of broadsides of which one each week will be released, is based on the endorsements of some of the world's greatest legitimate showmen and producers on Miss Joyce's ability as an actress.

The art department in the office of the Associated Exhibitors are busy at work on ideas for a gigantic campaign book. This compendium is planned to be three times as big as the ordinary press book containing among many ideas a full page of publicity written from the woman's standpoint, such as clothes and beauty hints.

First National Breaks Sales Record

Forty-five days after delivery of the first of First National's Winner Group, sales on that product totalled in excess of $7,000,000 exclusive of specials, a record of which the district machinery of that company may well be proud.

This volume of business is far in excess of that written during a similar period on any group of pictures in any previous year, including the Leader and Pacemaker Groups. It is interesting to note that all contracts bear dates for delivery of prints, thus insuring early playing time.

Forrest Stanley in Columbia Picture Cast

Forrest Stanley who has played opposite Dorothy Revier in several of her recent Columbia vehicles is again to be seen opposite this popular star in the latest Columbia production to be released, "When Husbands Flirt." This feature is one of the best comedies to be produced by this organization and will without doubt receive the same enthusiastic approbation from the public as was accorded the successful Columbia comedy "Steppin' Out." In addition to Miss Revier and Forrest Stanley, an all star cast was assembled for this production including Ethel Wales, Tom Rickets, Maude Wayne, Irwin Connelly and Frank Weed.

New Racing Picture

"The King of the Turf," formerly called "The Futurity Winner," from the joint pens of Louis Joseph Vance and John Brownell, home office scenario editor of F. B. O., will shortly go into production at the F. B. O. coast studios. It is a melodrama of the racing industry and will be developed along new lines. Several prominent turf men will doubtless appear in the photoplay, as well as a number of famous jockeys and horses.

Booked in New Orleans

The Palace Theatre, New Orleans, La., one of the houses on the Orpheum Circuit, has booked for early showing the Joe Rock series of Blue Ribbon comedies starring Alice Ardell and the series of Standard Fat Men comedies featuring "Fat" Karr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander, which F. B. O. are distributing.

"New Commandment" Booked for Rivoli

Robert T. Kane's initial production for First National release, "The New Commandment," has been booked by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the Rivoli Theatre, New York, opening on November 8th.

"The New Commandment" was directed by Howard Higgin, who also made the screen adaptation from Col. Frederick Palmer's novel, "Invisible Wounds," with Sada Cowan. In the cast are Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, Effie Shannon, Pedro De Cordova, George Cooper, Diana Kane and Claire Ames.

"Bright Lights"

Final Choice of a Title for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture

"Bright Lights" is the final choice of title under which the Robert Z. Leonard production featuring Pauline Starke and Charles Ray, known under the working title of "A Little Bit of Broadway," will reach the screen. This elaborate Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, based on a story by Richard Connell and adapted to the screen by Jessie Burns and Lew Lipton, has Lilyan Tashman in a prominent role.

The film includes a number of spectacular scenes in which a chorus of beauties gyrate to the strains of syncopation before the footlights in costumes of unprecedented loveliness. Against a kaleidoscopic background of theatrical life Director Leonard has unfolded a tale of romantic love between a rustic lad, played in inimitable fashion by Ray, and a chorus girl delightfully portrayed by Miss Starke. "Bright Lights" is scheduled for release in December.

"Sailors' Wives" to Be Made by First National

"Sailors' Wives," the novel written by Warne Fabian, author of "Flaming Youth," will be filmed this winter by First National's Eastern production units in New York, according to an announcement by Earl Hudson, supervisor of production for this unit.

This week Joseph Poland of the Hudson scenario staff started work on the adaptation. This will be the second Warner Fabian novel to be picturized by Mr. Hudson for the First National. He made "Flaming Youth," while the present Eastern production units were located in Hollywood.

Don Hetrick Promoted to Assistant Director

Don Hetrick, who has served an apprenticeship of several years as a script clerk for First National, has been promoted to assistant director.

He started this week as assistant to John Francis Dillon, who is making "Too Much Money" at First National's New York studios under the supervision of Earl Hudson. Hetrick has worked for Dillon on several pictures as script clerk, among these were "Chickie" and "The Half Way Girl," which were made in New York last Winter and Spring.

There is something immense in the acting of Buck Jones in "Lazybones," the Owen Davis stage success, produced by Frank Borzage for William Fox. The picture is crammed full of human interest, the fine cast including ZaSu Pitts.

"Thank You" Heads Fox Big Feature List for November

THREE recent Broadway stage successes, an old melodramatic triumph and two thrilling western stories are included in the exceptional program of releases announced for November by Fox Films. In addition the Fox organization will release two reelers in the new Van Bibber, the O. Henry and the Helen and Warren comedy series, and will launch a new Irish-Jewish comedy series under the Imperial brand. Three one reel Fox Varieties will be issued.

The four supreme attractions based on stage successes—"Thank You," "Lazybones," "The Fool" and "East Lynne"—have already been widely exploited in advance showings. Tom Mix will appear in "The Best Bad Man," based on the story by Max Brand. Buck Jones' contribution will be a dramatization of Maibelle Heikes Justice's novel, "Durand of the Bad Lands." Fox Films will also present a seventh feature picture to be announced later.

"Thank You," third of the John Golden plays on the Fox schedule, will be released November 1. Conservative Cleveland gave "Thank You" a royal welcome and warm praise when it was given its first showing in B. F. Keith's $5,000,000 Palace Theatre. Broadway gave a similar welcome when it was shown in the Rialto Theatre recently.

The charming Jacqueline Logan, playing the girl from Paris, is wooed and won by George O'Brien as the reckless young waster in this story of the taming of a townful of hypocrites. Alec B. Francis has enhanced his reputation considerably by his portrayal of the kindly rector.

There is a wealth of humor and pathos in "Lazybones," Fox screen version of Owen Davis' stage success, which will be released on November 8. Buck Jones billed as Charles (Buck) Jones this time, plays the title role, with an unusual cast including Madge Bellamy, Jane Novak, ZaSu Pitts and Leslie Fenton. The role of the lovable loafer gives Buck an opportunity to demonstrate his skill as an actor.

Following Borzage's triumph will be "The Fool," based on Channing Pollock's sensational stage success, to be released on November 15. This has already been widely exploited in its two months' run in New York and other large cities. At B. F. Keith's Palace in Cleveland, "The Fool" was very effectively presented with a prologue in which a chorus of 50 voices sang.

"East Lynne," based on the stage melodrama that entertained three generations of Americans, has been produced under the direction of Emmett Flynn in sumptuous old English settings with a strong cast including Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe, Lou Tellegen, Paul Panzer, Frank Keenan, Leslie Fenton and Harry Seymour. It will be released on November 22.

In "The Best Bad Man," scheduled for release on November 29, Tom Mix is right at home in the role of a dashing, devil-may-care westerner in his native Southwest. The story is by Max Brand, who wrote "Just Tony" and "The Untamed," on which two of Mix's greatest pictures are based, and J. G. Blystone is the director.

Five two reel comedies supervised by George Marshall and three Fox Varieties are included in the releases for November from the house of Fox.

Tom Tyler Begins Second

The new F. B. O. unit featuring Tom Tyler, the "Surprise Star" recently launched in western comedy dramas, has begun work on the second picture of the series, entitled "The Wyoming Wildcat." Robert De Lacy, who collaborated in the direction of "Let's Go Gallagher," the first release, is handling the directorial megaphone.

ALLENE RAY, Pathe serial star of "THE GREEN ARCHER," became an expert at archery during the recent filming of this thriller.

Patrons Pick Warner Pictures and Manager Books Entire 40

UNSOLICITED, H. L. Goldberg, of the World Realty Company, which operates the World, Sun, Empress, Muse and Moon theatres, in Omaha, Neb., has written to Earl A. Bell, Omaha branch manager for Warner Bros., telling why the full Warner product was selected for exhibition in those houses during the coming year. He explains that these selections were made not only because of the excellence of the attractions, but also because of the fight of the Warners in behalf of the independent exhibitor and the extraordinarily effective advertising campaign which they are carrying on.

In his letter, Mr. Goldberg says:

"Just a few lines to state why we purchased the entire output of Warner Bros. for this season. I have screened a number of their first releases, have found them to be above the average in quality, and, from information that I have received from the west coast, I don't think there is the slightest question but what there will be few in the entire Forty that will not be good box office attractions and good audience entertainment.

"I sincerely believe that Warner Bros. should have the support and cooperation of all independent exhibitors in their fight. They are to be especially complimented upon their wonderful newspaper campaign, which is bound to benefit all exhibitors who run their product, and produce actual box office returns."

George Chrest, managing director of the Ohio Theatre, in Dover, Ohio, has just announced the closing of a contract booking the entire Warner Forty after putting in force the policy of asking his audiences what attractions they desired. The selection was made in response to their expression of preference, and in his announcement Mr. Chrest says:

"Such wonderful productions as will be offered to you in the near future will more than convince you that I have endeavored to secure for you the very best in the way of entertainment."

An important northwestern exhibiting company which has lately contracted for the entire Warner Forty is the Multnomah Theatres Corporation, which operates ten suburban theatres in Portland, Ore. Its contract was made with W. K. Beckwith, Warner branch manager in Portland.

Douglas MacLean Dined

Executives of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation tendered a luncheon recently to Douglas MacLean, who is in New York for a rest and to attend the premiere of his first Paramount production "Seven Keys to Baldpate" at the Rivoli Theatre on November 1.

Attending the luncheon were Sydney R. Kent, Eugene Zukor, George W. Weeks, Phil Reisman, A. M. Botsford, Russell Holman, Charles E. McCarthy, Claud Saunders, Jeanne Cohen, John Butler, Henry Salisbury, John Clark, Mel Shauer, G. B. J. Frawley, George M. Spidell, Mike Lewis, George W. Weeks, Sam Dembow and Mr. Ross.

To Do Broadhurst Play

"Wild Oats Lane" Will Be Neilan's First Production for Producers Dist. Corp.

George Broadhurst's play "Wild Oats Lane" will be Marshall Neilan's first production through Producers Distributing Corporation.

After quietly working in New York City on the Metropolitan sequences of this picture, with Viola Dana and Robert Agnew in the featured roles, Neilan has left for California where the production will be completed at his Glendale Studios.

"Wild Oats Lane" was dramatized by George Broadhurst from the clever novel by Gerald Beaumont, and produced at the Broadhurst Theatre on Broadway in 1923. The play is now in stock where it is proving popular with both regular stock companies and amateur producers.

Pickford Film Popular

New England Small Town Likes "Little Annie Rooney"

"In my honest opinion the exhibitor who does not play 'Little Annie Rooney' is overlooking the best bet of the year," said Walter Haynes, manager of the Santuit Playhouse, Santuit, Mass., in a letter to United Artists Corporation Home Office in praise of Mary Pickford's new release. "Miss Pickford is to be congratulated on adding another great success to her list. 'Little Annie Rooney' not only combines the cleanest of comedy, pathos and fine entertainment—that was most pleasing to all my patrons—but the film was also most gratifying at the box-office. It established a new box-office record, playing to a hundred more people in a two days run than did another widely advertised feature in three days."

"'Little Annie Rooney' did capacity business and pleased my patrons 100 per cent.," said J. B. Eames of Littleton, N. H. "You are making no mistake in urging exhibitors to go after this picture as the biggest box office attraction Mary Pickford has made.

DOLORES COSTELLO

Daughter of the first of the famous screen stars, Maurice Costello, Dolores will be seen in J. Stuart Blackton's production, "Maryland, My Maryland," for Warner Brothers. It is reported that Mr. Costello will direct this picture.

"For Heaven's Sake"

Harold Lloyd's First Picture for Paramount Has Working Title

"For Heaven's Sake" has been selected as the working title of Harold Lloyd's first production for Paramount, according to an announcement by John L. Murphy, production manager for Lloyd. The story deals in part with missionary endeavors in the slums.

Lloyd has been working on the picture for some time, and is now engaged in one of his most important sequences, scenes for which are being shot in the most congested districts of Los Angeles. The Ambassador and Biltmore hotels have furnished locations.

Lloyd's supporting cast in what is aimed to be one of his fastest moving comedies, is headed again by Jobyna Ralston.

"For Heavan's Sake" is an original story conceived by Lloyd and developed by Ted Wilde, John Grey, Clyde Bruckman and Tim Whelan, with Sam Taylor directing it.

Exhibitor Praises "Don Q"

"I believe it is the common opinion that Douglas Fairbanks' 'The Mark of Zorro' was one of the best—if not the best—box-office attraction he ever made," said J. M. Heffner, manager of the A. H. Blank Palace Theatre, Mason City, Iowa, during the run of this United Artists Corporation release. "In my opinion 'Don Q' has everything that 'The Mark of Zorro' had and more besides, and should be considered the better. The picture gave absolute satisfaction to my patrons in a five day showing, and I wish to state that I believe in this picture exhibitors have a real box-office attraction."

Evelyn Brent's Next

"A Broadway Lady," a drama of the New York show world, will be Evelyn Brent's next starring vehicle for F. B. O. it is announced by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the studios. It is an original story by Fred Kennedy Myton, who also prepared the scenario. The production will be Miss Brent's ninth for F. B. O.

Maurice Costello, first of screen idols, who has been engaged by J. Stuart Blackton, his "discoverer," to direct his own daughter, Dolores, in "Maryland, My Maryland," a Warner Brothers picture.

It has come to a point where we laugh, almost unconsciously, at almost anything Raymond Griffith does. Here we see him, the prince in a Baltic kingdom, perched on the arm of the sumptuous chair in which his father, the king (Tyrone Power) is seated. In Paramount's "A Regular Fellow," Griffith cinches his claim to stardom.

New Production Plan to Rival Program Completed This Summer

A PRODUCTION boom that threatens to rival the big picture making schedule completed early this summer is well under way at the Paramount Hollywood studio.

Seven producing units, each busily engaged in making a feature length picture, are now working at the studio or on location. In addition to these, three other companies are busy in preparation and will be "shooting" within the next few weeks.

"The Woman of Mystery" is the tentative title of Pola Negri's next starring vehicle on which she is working under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair. Supporting Miss Negri are Charles Emmett Mack, Holmes Herbert, Blanche Mehaffey and Chester Conklin.

The Mojave Desert, California, has claimed Raymond Griffith and his large company under the direction of Clarence Badger for the early scenes of "Hands Up," his current picture.

William de Mille is well under way with the production of his original story, "The Splendid Crime" which features Bebe Daniels, Neil Hamilton, Anne Cornwall and Anthony Jowitt.

Preparations for the war sequences of "Behind the Front" are going rapidly forward while Victor Fleming films interior scenes with a cast featuring Mildred Davis, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

Scenes for "Mannequin," Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize magazine story, are being rapidly put into film by James Cruze with a featured cast headed by Alice Joyce, Warner Baxter, ZaSu Pitts, Dolores Costello and Walter Pidgeon.

Bagdad has been reconstructed for "The Golden Journey," Raoul Walsh's production for Paramount which features Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., Greta Nissen and Louise Fazenda.

"The Enchanted Hill," one of Peter B. Kyne's best sellers is keeping the Irvin Willat company busy both in and out of the studio, as it is a Western picture with a modern trend. Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, Noah Beery, Mary Brian and Richard Arlen are featured.

The productions under preparation for filming in the next few weeks are "Miss Brewster's Millions," starring Bebe Daniels under the direction of Edward Sutherland; and "Sea Horses," which Alan Dwan will come to the West Coast to produce.

"Dance Madness"

Robert Z. Leonard has begun work on "Dance Madness" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, announces Harry Rapf, associate executive under whose supervision the film is being made. Conrad Nagel and Claire Windsor have the leading roles in this original screen story by S. Jay Kaufman, which has been adapted to the screen by Max Marcin. Bert Roach has a prominent role in this elaborate production, an ultra modern story dealing with modern foibles such as the craze for jazz in hilarious and exceedingly dramatic fashion.

Paramount's "Peter Pan" Now Booking; Meets Big Demand

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION announces for the approaching holidays the availability of new prints of "Peter Pan," Paramount's Christmas holiday feature of last year, directed by Herbert Brenon and starring Betty Bronson.

Betty Bronson, Paramount star, as "Peter Pan." New prints of this delightful picture will be available for showing during the Christmas holidays.

"Peter Pan," it is stated, is now being booked for this year's holiday season in compliance with the wishes of exhibitors throughout the United States, some of whom assert their audiences will want to see "Peter Pan" each year, during the winter months.

Coupled with this announcement is the statement that the widespread demand for "Peter Pan" will in no way interfere with Paramount's plan to release for the 1925-26 holidays Mr. Brenon's newest Barrie story, "A Kiss for Cinderella," in which the charming Miss Bronson is again starred.

"Peter Pan," the whimsical story of child life for persons of any age, played day and date in more than two hundred and fifty theatres in the United States and Canada, during the Christmas holidays last year, creating new box office records in many houses, and scoring remarkable results in the big cities.

In New York City the outstanding wallop of Main Street was the simultaneous presentation of the screen production of "Peter Pan" at the Rivoli and Rialto. These houses, with a combined seating capacity of 4,160 played to $59,503 with the picture. The Rivoli took in $30,213 and the Rialto banked $29,290. In Philadelphia, the Stanley did a land office business, while Los Angeles, Washington, Boston, Chicago, Buffalo and Baltimore, filed reports of business on "Peter Pan" that exceeded the greatest expectations of Paramount executives.

In addition to the many box office sensations following upon the release of "Peter Pan," the files of Moving Picture World are replete with statements from first run theatre owners and managing directors designating this production an artistic triumph Something away off the beaten path was achieved by Mr. Brenon in his finished work.

After the wedding, Max Ginsburg and little Timmy Kelly seem disconsolate at the loss of their boarder, who got married and went away. Jackie Coogan is the star of "Old Clothes," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

Betty Bronson, Paramount star, who achieved fame in "Peter Pan." In "A Kiss for Cinderella," also from the pen of Sir James M. Barrie, Miss Bronson is expected to score again in a play of whimsical charm.

but prior thereto the world at large read how an "unknown" girl had been selected to play "Peter," and it was not long before Betty Bronson became one of the best known girls on the screen.

In "Peter Pan" Famous Players-Lasky Corporation possesses an asset which cannot be accurately appraised in 1925. Any valuation on this picture must necessarily be a hazardous guess, because it has that rare charm that will make it "a demand performance" for many years to come.

"In every year," one reviewer wrote, "a fresh host of children will arrive at that age (we do not dare to suggest the precise age!) when they will want to see 'Peter Pan,' while the children who saw it 'last year' will insist on seeing it again. And the cagey daddy, the frivolous aunt or uncle, or the sly old granddad will find many an excuse to take their little relatives to a theatre where 'Peter Pan' is showing. It's one of those things that can't be helped."—C. E. H.

Pay Visit to President

Coolidge Receives Mr. and Mrs. Lubitsch and Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Warner

President Coolidge gave an audience in Washington last Monday (Oct. 18) to Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Lubitsch and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Warner, who made the trip to Washington especially to meet the nation's chief executive.

The party arrived on Sunday night and stopped at the Wardman Park Hotel. Jack Connolly, who represents the Hays organization in Washington, had arranged all details to such a nicety that it was only necessary to stop at the German Embassy and have Mr. and Mrs. Lubitsch sponsored by the German officials in Washington before visiting the executive office.

They were received at 12:30 in the President's office. Mr. Connolly explained to Mr. Coolidge that the United States had taken Mr. Lubitsch from Germany, and that he intended to remain in this country. The President wished him lots of luck and expressed the same wish for H. M. Warner.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner returned to New York the same night.

AMERICAN MANNERS. (5,200 feet). Star, Dick Talmadge. An amusing, entertaining action picture. My Friday and Saturday crowd liked it. Of course it is overdrawn and unreasonable in spots, but they seem to like it anyhow. I bought a few of these to try them out. If the rest are as well liked as the first I expect to snap up a bunch of them. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, okay. Special, no. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre, Texas.

FIGHTING DEMON. Star, Richard Talmadge. Another good action stunt picture from Talmadge, who seems to be making new friends with each new release. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday and special, no. Very good appeal. All classes in big City. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

FRIVOLOUS SAL. (7,305 feet). Star, Eugene O'Brien. A fair box office attraction which failed to register for me owing to title and poor advertising accessories. The picture, however, is there if you can put it over. I could not. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Appeal, eighty per cent. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

LET'S GO GALLAGHER. Star, Tom Tyler. F. B. O.'s surprise star and a good one. Keep the boy, dog and horse in this series and this star will get over good, as they have given him a good start. Here's luck to the new star. Tone, good. Good appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admisison 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

RIDIN' THE WIND. Star, Fred Thomson. Fred and Silver doing their stuff as per usual, but in my humble opinion does not register as good as "The Bandit's Baby," which I think is the best that he has ever made. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

THAT MAN JACK. Star, Bob Custer. Have not had a bad Custer yet, and all of them good, with plenty of action and good casts. This boy is a comer. Tone, good. Special, no. Good appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-5. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre, Piqua, Ohio.

TRIGGER FINGERS. (4,775 feet). Star, Bob Custer. If you want a real action western don't fail to play this one. A good one that sure will please. Will please anywhere as a western. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, eighty-five per cent. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

THREE WISE CROOKS. Star, Evelyn Brent. My favorite star doing her stuff as only Evelyn can when it comes to the crook parts. Boy, she is sure there. Every picture gets better and better. Keep it up, as you sure have some friends out here in the tall and uncut. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

WALL STREET WHIZ. Star, Richard Talmadge. True to name, a whiz, Dick doing his stuff in the regular Talmadge style. This is the kind that the fans love. Give us some more like this. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

WHITE THUNDER. Star, Yakima Canutt. Yakima acts as a "fool" at first but gets okay at the end. A fair western. Sunday and special, no. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admisson 10-25. D. C. Smith, Fordyce Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

First National

BLACK OXEN. (7,831 feet). Star cast. A book story that is very good. Not much action in picture, but had some patrons say, real good. I think not much of it. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

GIRL IN THE LIMOUSINE. (5,650 feet). Star, Larry Semon. A dandy comedy from start to finish. Lots of action and it will please in any theatre. Play it. As good as any of Lloyd's comedies. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Appeal, one hundred per cent. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND. (7 reels). Star cast. A very good program picture. Nothing big but will get by. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (7,700 feet). Star cast. This is old, but splendid entertainment. No one can go wrong playing this. Pleased ninety per cent. Nelson & Ottem, Rex Theatre, Osnabrock, North Dakota.

SECRETS. (8,345 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. A wonderfully good production that should please everyone that you can get in. However, I couldn't get many in. Took in only eighty per cent. of rental amount. Norma and Constance, Gloria Swanson, Marion Davies and all the rest of the female stars mean nothing here. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, yes, where Norma has a following. Very good appeal. Rural and village class town of 400. Admission 15-30. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (240 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

THIEF IN PARADISE. (7,251 feet). Star cast. One great big picture which flopped for me. I paid too much for it and spent some real money to put it across, but failed. The picture is good. I had to kick about the price. Don't pay too much for it. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Appeal, eighty per cent. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 10-25, 15-30 for specials. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

TWENTY-ONE. (6,560 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Good picture. Rental too high for this small town. Had to raise admission prices, and then failed to realize a profit. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star cast. The question may not have been answered on the screen, but evidently the title had the ladies interested, for I've heard several favorable comments, to the effect that they liked the picture, but it was entirely different than they expected. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. General appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, special, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

Fox

DEADWOOD COACH. Star, Tom Mix. A good action western that they all like to see Tom in. Tone, good. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. Laborers and farmers town of 343. Admission 15-30. J. M. Patterson, Little Gem Theatre (250 seats), Hunter, Arkansas.

DICK TURPIN. (5,224 feet).. Star, Tom Mix. "Ye Gods! What next will the producers do? This is Tom in one of those d—— foreign costume pictures." (This is all I heard in regard to this picture. In my town a costume picture or a European story is poison to the box office. We have had so darn many of them in the last few years.) I wonder when the producers will learn that a star no matter how popular can lose that popularity by being put in rotten pictures or unpopular pictures. Tom Mix is a western star. And a western star he should be allowed to remain. "Dick Turpin" is a fairly good picture. But if I wanted to kill Tom Mix in Graham I would try to get another picture like it. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. Special, no. Fair appeal. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre, Graham, Texas.

IRON HORSE. Star, George O'Brien. The best picture for a small town since the "Covered Wagon." Buy it right and cash in on it. Jas. B. Leaut, Liberty Theatre, Leonard, Texas.

WINNER TAKE ALL. (5,949 feet). Star, Buck Jones. The kind that all Buck Jones fans like. Good Saturday night program. Should go over in any small town show. Lots of competition, first class show, Chautauqua and "Peck's Bad Boy." Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Farming class town of 3,500. Admission 10-25. J. P. Martin, Majestic Theatre (325 seats), Liberal, Kansas.

Metro-Goldwyn

BANDOLERO. (7,000 feet). Star cast. This is a good picture but didn't pull them in. Those who saw it were pleased. Ends with an exciting bull fight. Lost money on it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

SINNERS IN SILK. (5,700 feet). Star cast. A good picture, that pleased the majority. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, okay. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Fordyce Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

WIFE OF THE CENTAUR. (6,586 feet). Star cast. A fair program picture. Made a little on it and guess it pleased. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Fordyce Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

Paramount

ALASKAN. (6,758 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Very good; had many favorable comments and it drew better than the average. Meighan seems to be a drawing card here. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw town and farming class, town 600. Admission 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

A SON OF HIS FATHER. (7 reels). Star, Warner Baxter. Very good feature. Pleased one hundred per cent. Tone, good. Sunday and special, no. Good appeal. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK. (6,874 feet). Star cast. Some got kick out of this, but the majority didn't know what it was all about. Lost me money. Print new. Not much appeal. No as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

CHANGING HUSBANDS. (6,799 feet). A Paramount comedy that pleased them a hundred per cent. Cecil DeMille is one of the few directors whose names mean much to my patrons. I advertised DeMille and Leatrice Joy and attracted a fair house, which thoroughly enjoyed this little program picture. Raymond Griffith made a decided hit. Suitable for Sunday?—well, maybe! But not if the majority of your patrons are Methodists! Not a special. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

COMING THROUGH. (6,522 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Pleased all who saw it. Thomas is popular here. Good tone. Sunday, yes, special, no. R. P. Monahan, Grantview Theatre (250 seats), Grantview, West Virginia.

COMING THROUGH. (6,522 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Paramount picture with the very satisfactory combination of Thomas Meighan and Lila Lee. An extra good program picture that drew well and pleased them all. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Print good. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

DANGEROUS MONEY. (6,864 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Not my kind of picture; but I had favorable comments, and it was well acted. Some of the scenes were very fine. Fair tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday. Draw farming and town class, town 600. Admission 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

DEVIL'S CARGO. (7,980 feet). Star Pauline Starke. A fair program show which is rather rough for the ladies. We played it on a Saturday and seemed to please the kids and young men fairly good. Pauline Starke was good in this. Good tone, fair appeal. Not a Sunday picture or special. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

EAST OF SUEZ. (6,821 feet). Star, Pola Negri. A good picture. Pola at her best. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town of 3,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

EMPTY HANDS. (6,976 feet). Star, Jack Holt. A better than the average program picture that drew well and pleased ninety per cent. (The ten per cent. who failed to register approval did not care for the scenes wherein Norma lost her bathing suit. (N. B. They were feminine patrons.) Better not use it if your patrons are too particular. Not a special. Photography and scenery very good Nice print. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

MANHATTAN. (6,415 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A star who is rapidly gaining the popularity formerly tendered Wally Reid. A very good program picture that drew average attendance and pleased ninety per cent. Sunday, maybe, special, no. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

REGULAR FELLOW. Star, Raymond Griffith. We shelved this an hour before a matinee and used "Lost, A Wife" instead which providentially was in the express office for some unknown reason. The prestige of the smallest theatre in the U. S. would be lowered by using "A Regular Fellow"; no story; insipid comedy; absolutely inane throughout. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, no. No appeal. Mixed class town of 1,400. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

SPANIARD. (6,676 feet). Star, Ricardo Cortez. This picture very much like "Blood and Sand," only consider it a much better picture. Bull fights in this picture wonderful; also some pretty scenery. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montreal.

STEPHEN STEPS OUT. (5,152 feet). Star, Doug. Fairbanks, Jr. I saw a portion of this in a Syracuse theatre and was not impressed with it. It was shipped to me as a substitute for one which I refused to run because of the severe criticism in exhibitors' reports. Seeing it from the beginning I was pleased with it. A good story of a boy full of pep. Pleased my audience. A different story. No love scenes. Good tone. Sunday—(a feature that is not good for Sunday is no good any day!). Draw mill and farming class, town of 1,000. Admission twenty-five cents. L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

STORY WITHOUT A NAME. (7,912 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. A pleasing program picture. Different from the usual plots. Tone, good. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. John Cleva, Jr., Enterprise Theatre, Glenalum, West Virginia.

STORY WITHOUT A NAME. (7,912 feet). Star cast. An exceptionally good picture, but we played it too late to tie up with title contest, consequently the title failed to draw. Picture is okay. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, yes. High appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25. E. W. Collins, Liberty Theatre (500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Glory Be! Dave's In Again!

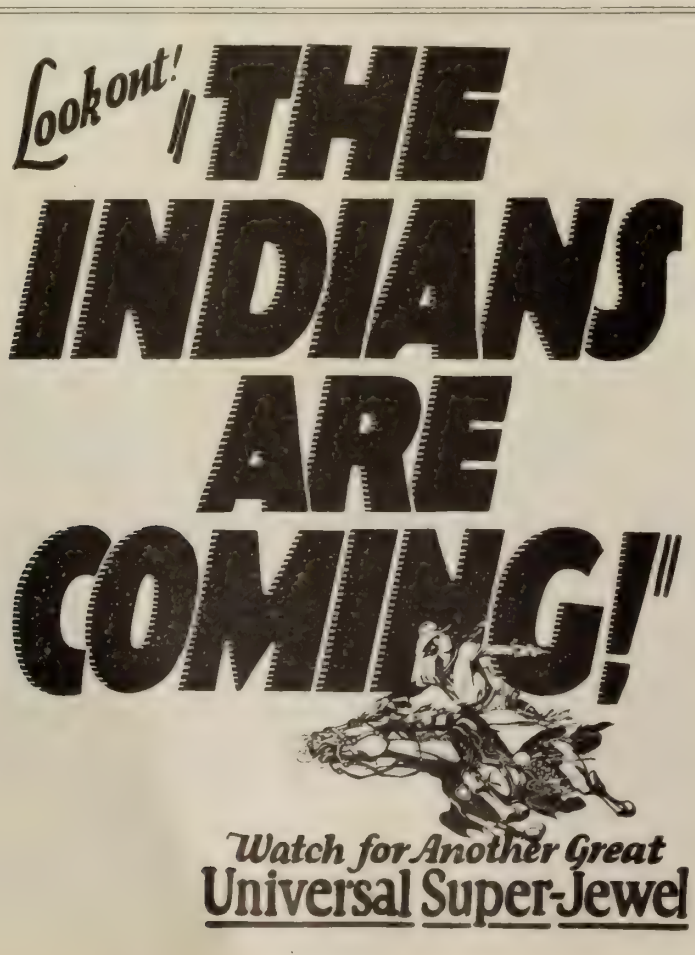
Ken Thompson busted in again last week. Now that old dependable, the fellow who first held the record for quantity of tips sent at one time—a man whose sincere service led him to get every audience reaction before he'd send in a tip—Dave Seymour's in again!

"A little notation on page one," says Dave, with his four long sheets of close-spaced tips coming in this week, "tells you that I had a little spare time.

"I wished to help out, and that tells it all!"—Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

How about L. M. Zug, Dolph Schutz, Thos. L. Haynes, Louis Pilosi, J. F. Ptuett, W. E. Elkin?

S. O. S., Boys!



STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN. (6,986 feet). Star cast. This is just a little bettter than the average and should go well anywhere. There are some very tense scenes and the audience is kept in sympathy all the time. It pleased very much here. Good tone and apeal. No for sunday, as special questioned. Draw all classes, city 15,000. Admission 10-25, 15-25. Ed. Malhiot, Monarch Theatre (569 seats), Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN. (6,986 feet). Star cast. An excellent offering. Marmont does some exceptional work in this and has a fine supporting cast. Comments all favorable. Fine tone. Appeal, eighty per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town 1,500. Admission 10-40-50. E. L. Wharton, Orpheum Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montana.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. The best picture of the year. In spite of four stormy days, did very good business to thoroughly pleased patrons. This picture is the sort that will bring to your show people who are not in the habit of attending moving pictures, and are a real credit to the industry. Box office value of this picture is of the best. Sunday, yes, special, yes. Print fine. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. Great picture; I believe I had the most money in the house I ever had. People came to see this that don't come to see a picture show often. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farming and town class, town 600. Admission on specials. 25-50. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. A really great picture that will do any house good to show it. I ran it three days to good crowds. Couldn't make anything, on account of high price; but I was giving them something worth while and am satisfied. Every exhibitor, big and small, should run this picture. Had all preachers and influential citizens behind it. Tone O. K. Appeal, 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. "Wonderful." Don't pay too much. Just broke even here on three-day run for we gave it all to the exchange. Draw all classes, town 1,500. E. L. Wharton, Orpheum Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montana.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. Played three days to the house records for receipts, but not attendance—as we charged fifty and thirty-five cents. It is a wonderful production and should draw everybody. The churchgoers will flock to see this one; they did for us. It did not draw very many youngsters. This show should keep DeMille's name before the people forever, as it is a great show with something more than entertainment in it. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TROUBLE WITH WIVES. (6,489 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. A farce comedy feature that's great. Get them in and it will please. Ford Sterling a scream in this. Good tone. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). A Zane Grey attraction with a well chosen cast who acceptably play the parts assigned to them. Jack Holt is a popular western hero and Mr. Beery departs from the villain role and has the part of a likable old desert inhabitant. Billie Dove looks beautiful, which is about all that is necessary in this picture. Opinions concerning color film are divided; some care for it and others do not care for too much of it. Picture drew well, and pleased. Suitable for Sunday but not as a special. Print very good. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. This is one of the poorest of his (Holt's) pictures. The title is misleading, as there is no horse action except in one or two short scenes. The rest is just plain, ordinary western. Fair tone. No appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, city 15,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. Ed. Malhiot, Monarch Theatre (569 seats), Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

Rushed in "Bees"

"Dear Van and 'Gang'—Am rushing you a report on 'Keeper of the Bees' as I am the first one in the State of Oklahoma to run this." So says Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma. And here's the hot tip:

KEEPER OF THE BEES. (F. B. O.) Star cast including Clara Bow. Here is a PICTURE that will yank folks into the old joint that have never been known to jar loose. Had a cold, blustery night to run this; but they came till we were unable even to furnish standing room. We also had a hunch and raised our admission price to 25-50, which, in a small town, will generally sink you: but they dug up their four bits and came anyway. Oh, Boy! but it is a "Grand and Glorious Feeling" to fill up the old joint to the brim at four bits a throw. While the picture may, for some towns, be a little weak, it will satisfy them and you have enough left to pay the rent.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Good western. Pleased majority. Tone, good. Appeal, good. Sunday and special, no. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

Producers' Dist. Corp

RECKLESS ROMANCE. (5,530 feet). Star cast. A fair comedy but not a knockout. Some liked it fine, others didn't. Draw below average business for us. Tone, yes. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, fifty per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

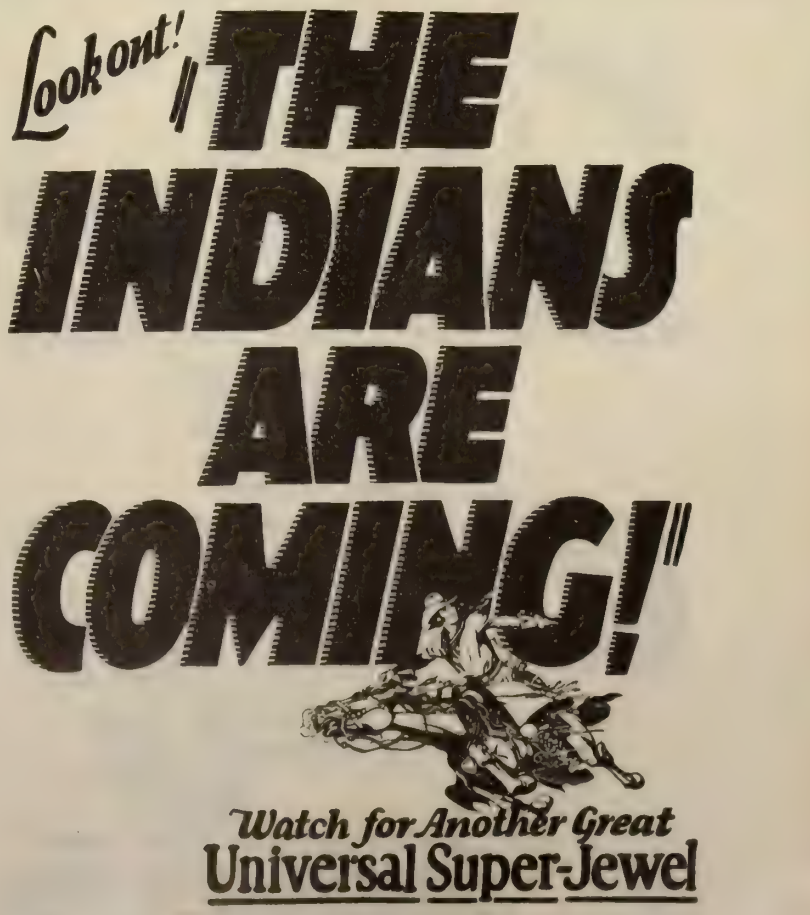
SOFT SHOES. Star, Harry Carey. Harry Carey didn't go over here. Good crook story. Print in fair condition. Sunday and special, no. Farming class town of 3,500. Admission 10-25. J. P. Martin, Majestic Theatre (325 seats), Liberal, Kansas.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Good Saturday night program. The best of the series of Harry Carey's. The only one that has made any money for me. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, one hundred per cent. Farming class town of 3,500. Admission 10-25. J. P. Martin, Majestic Theatre (325 seats), Liberal, Kansas.

United Artists

AMERICA. (12 reels). D. W. Griffith prod. I have been wrong not to send reports, and I would be twice wrong if I didn't say this one, "America," must be the classic of the screen; it is the duty of every exhibitor to show it, not only for the box office, but for the prestige of his theatre and the humoring of his public. This is one of the best pages of American history. The picture should never die. If any picture can be called super-special, or any other superlative, this is one. Chas. Morel, Star Theatre, El Dorado, Arkansas.

DOROTHY VERNON OF HADDON HALL. Star, Mary Pickford. This is an ancient costume picture but well done and is suitable for the better patronage. Would class it a poor drawing card for farming communities and western fans. It is really an artistic picture and we played it on a night that it pleased. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Audience appeal, seventy-five per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.



EXTRA GIRL. Star, Mabel Normand. Wasn't a bad comedy drama, but I was late playing this one, but it had a lot of good comedy in it. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

Universal

BIG TIMBER. (4,650 feet). Star, William Desmond. Below average program picture. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, fifty per cent. R. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre, Matoma, Kansas.

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD. Star, Reginald Denny. The best comedy drama I ever ran and will back any amount of publicity. Will please any audience. A few more such pictures would put us on easy street. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, one hundred per cent. L. J. Morse, Palace Theatre (400 seats), Winnsboro, South Carolina.

CIRCUS CYCLONE. (4,307 feet). Star, Art Acord. Give us some more features like this, Carl; this is a hummer. In fact all of the Second White List have been good ones so far. My folks are beginning to learn when they see Uncle Carl's name on a picture that it is a good one. Keep 'em a rollin'. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Every time you send a tip you're telling the exhibitors, "I'm a real exhibitor. I am generous. I am the sort of chap who believes in spending a little time to help the other fellow."

I'll bet ninety-nine per cent. of you are that sort of folks.

Why not let the world know it?

You don't have to blow your own horn.

Just—

SEND TIPS.

GAIETY GIRL. (7,417 feet). Star, Mary Philbin. No appeal at my house. Failed to get film rental by $2.50. Can't say it is a bad picture, but nobody cared to see it. Was to run it two nights but pulled it the first. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, thirty per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

LORRAINE OF THE LIONS. Star, Norman Kerry. Oh, boy, another Babe Ruth from Universal. One more home run by Uncle Carl. We cleaned our spark plugs, adjusted the carburetter and stepped on the gas on this one, and we crammed them in until their feet stuck out of the windows. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Appeal, good. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Martin, Majestic Theatre (325 seats), Liberal, Kansas.

Fair appeal. Small town class and farmers' town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

SIGNAL TOWER. (6,714 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. A good railroad drama that has a good story and good acting. There is a child's part all through the story which helps make it please. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. Town and country class town of 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denney, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

TAMING THE WEST. (5,304 feet). Star cast. This is a better than ordinary western. Pleased all who saw it and drew more than the average business. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday okay. Special, no. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

FOR ANOTHER WOMAN. (State Right). Star cast. The wise guys state that we only have a total eclipse every 78 years, as this print was so dark we were unable to tell what it was all about. Might be a good picture if one were able to see it. Doubtful appeal. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

HEART OF ALASKA. (Lee-Bradford). Star, Maurice Costello. This is a real good picture, but advise you to use it as a double bill picture, as there are some who will kick. Print new. JUSTICE OF THE FAR NORTH. (C. B. C.) Star cast. This picture is better than ordinary. With the right handling it could have been a super-special. The title, advertising possibilities, and paper are exceptionally good. If you run it tell them about the National Geographical Society and the "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes." These scenes are wonderful. The photography is bad. However, a subtitle explains why. The drama is ordinary and the acting amaturish. But it did better than usual business. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday and special, okay. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

You Know Now

Guess by this time you've all got the idea of turning to the "Little Picture With the Big Punch" department for the generously sent tips on short subjects.

So I won't keep on saying it. Our good friend H. H. Hedberg wrote that he liked the new placement. Hope all of you did. Shoot in shorts when your features are filled in on the tip blanks.

SPORTING CHANCE. (Tiffany). Star, Dorothy Phillips. Dorothy comes back to the silver sheet with a bang in a race horse story that knocked 'em over. Excellent cast, good acting, and a climax that will show at the box-office the next night. Boost it sky-high. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. Mixed class town of 1,400. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

TRAIN WRECKERS. (State Right). Star, Helen Holmes. One of her old time railroad stories and was good for that kind. Had lots of action in it and plenty of railroad trains. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

UNCHASTENED WOMAN. (Chadwick). Star, Theda Bara. This will probably get over all right in the city, but out here in the sticks it flopped with a dull, sickening thud, as it sure left a bad taste in our mouth. One scene that the producers take advantage of and advertise on their three sheets is where one old boy grabs Theda and proceeds to bite a large chunk out of her neck. While Theda has a very nice looking neck, and probably there are a large number of patrons and exhibitors who could and would be glad to make a meal on said neck, I think someone showed mighty poor judgment in putting such a scene in the picture, to be shown to our young folks. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma.

WHO CARES. (Columbia). Star cast. This picture registered the poorest business I have had in six months. I just cannot account for it, unless it was the weather being cold, dreary and damp. Also the first snow of the season. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. All classes town of 2,000. Admission 10-25, specials, 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

WIN, LOSE, OR DRAW. (Artclass). Star, Leo Maloney. A real good Maloney. One that will please every western fan that you can get in and will entertain those that are not western fans. Tone and appeal, good. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

"East Lynne"—William Fox

Fine Version of Play That Has Lasted For Fifty Years Should Please Picture Patrons

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

For a full half century "East Lynne" as a play has proved a box office bulwark and financial haven for theatrical stock companies. There are probably few persons, especially among the grown-ups who have not seen it at least once or read the story as a novel. We doubt if any dramatic situation is better known than the touching climax in which the wayward mother returns in disguise to the bedside of her sick child.

The opportunity to cash-in on this tremendous popularity is now afforded the picture showman in the screen version offered by William Fox. There is a tremendous ready-made audience waiting to see their old favorite on the screen, and they won't be disappointed at the way Fox has handled it.

In case you are one of the few who do not know the story, we will sketch it briefly, Carlyle, a wealthy young Englishman buys a debt-ridden estate from Lord Mount-Severn and persuade his daughter, Lady Isabel to marry him though she loves the rascally Sir Francis. Years pass, and this pair are blessed with two little kiddies. A villager, the father of a wayward girl, is murdered and Richard the brother of Carlyle's former sweetheart, Barbara, is accused. Barbara makes an appointment with Carlyle to ask his help. Lady Isabel, misunderstanding, leaves her kiddies and goes with Sir Francis who ill-treats her and finally casts her off. Returning to England she gets in a wreck and is reported dead. Carlyle eventually marries Barbara. Lady Isabel learns that her oldest child is ill, and posing as a nurse goes to him and nurses him to health. Then she becomes ill and dies, happy in the thought she has saved her child's life and that Carlyle who has recognized her will keep her secret.

The story is laid in rural England of a generation or more ago and no attempt has been made to modernize it. In fact the quaint styles of the period add to the interest and fit in well with the type of story, which written before the vogue of ultra-realism belongs to the school of the stagy and theatric where the desired effect rather than hard and fact logic in building the situation is the goal. As an example of this type "East Lynne" is well up front and an excellent piece of stagecraft. It is essentially an emotional melodrama with a lot of sure-fire angles. There is an abundance of plot, excellent building up of characterizations, a murder, dramatic conflict, sympathy, at least three romances, including one which supplies comedy relief and which has been used to smooth down the sad ending of Lady Isabel, and exceptional pathos and mother-love in the big climax.

Under the direction of Emmett Flynn, this story has been given an elaborate production. The atmosphere of an English town of fifty years or more ago is interestingly reproduced, and aided by an excellent cast, the story has plenty of meat to hold the interest throughout its nine reels. Possibly some of the scenes can be shortened, but there are none that should really be left out.

With the exception of the absence of the spoken word, all the angles that made this story a favorite for years are present and it has been produced on a scale impossible on the stage. With all of these points in its favor, it looks like it should prove a favorite with the big majority of movie fans though it probably won't appeal to the sophisticated or the super-flapper.

Every role in the picture is finely handled and in keeping with the scale of the production. The burden of the story falls on Alma Rubens and she fully measures up to its possibilities. Edmund Lowe as the hero, Lou Tellegen as the gentleman scoundrel, Frank Keenan as the chief justice, Marjorie Daw as the ingenue, Belle Bennett as the wayward girl, Paul Panzer as her father, and in fact every one in the large cast scores individually and aids in making this a well-rounded performance.

Pete Morrison Returns to "Big U" in a Film With Exciting Story and Plenty of Action

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

There's plenty of action based on a fast, exciting plot in "Triple Action," a Blue Streak Western in which Pete Morrison returns to Universal. The story deals with cattle rustlers and rangers and at times taxes the imagination, but when this happens there is always something spectacular to divert the beholder, such as a rough-and-tumble fight, an aeroplane speeding through the sky or a parachute drop. The chief fault may be said to be a tendency toward the characters posing in deep thought or being occupied with desultory conversation when a call for help comes; in real life, in such an emergency, there would be a faster getaway.

This picture is embellished with some of the finest shots of hills and prairies that we have seen in a long time. Director Tom Gibson also has showed skill in selecting his interiors and the result, with good acting on the part of almost all the artists, is a close approach to realism.

This is the story. Dave Mannion loses his sheriff's badge because the Braxton gang has driven diseased cattle past his patrol. He goes to work in earnest and finds that Eric Prang is the gang's spy. He locates a herd of cattle and is shot by the bandits. Donna Mendez, daughter of the head of a hacienda, rescues him. In the meantime, Doris Clayton, whom Dave loves, has been tricked by Prang into going to the hacienda and is locked in a room. Her brother, an aviator, goes to her rescue but is shot. Landing his 'plane in a field he meets Mannion, still weak from the bullet wound, who persuades him to return. Dave leaps from the plane in a parachute and the plane crashes to earth. Single-handed, Dave conquers the gang, gathered at the hacienda, and regains his badge.

Hopwood's Stage Play Under Sidney Olcott's Direction Becomes an Amusing Farce Comedy

Reviewed by E. W. Sargent

In its early reels "The Best People" offers a satirical sketch of a collection of society snobs. It is rather unpromising material and the action develops slowly. Then suddenly it accelerates and shoots along to a climax that verges upon the farcical in the boisterousness of its action and winds up with a minimum of disentangling; in fact the disentangling is part of the farce and the final fade is one of the best laughs in the picture. More of this saving grace seems to come from Sidney Olcott's production than from the scenarist's development, but the chief point is that what promises to be a tiresome story whirls off to a brilliant close that more than redeems a prosy opening.

It is a simple enough story. Mrs. Lenox is marrying her daughter to the scion of another "best family," but the girl prefers their chauffeur, who has red blood instead of blue. Bertie Lenox has fallen in love with an impossible chorus girl who will not marry him until he gives up his money and goes to work. Rockmere, the fiance, has arranged a supper with Alice O'Neill, the chorus girl, and her chum, Millie Montgomery, also of the chorus, with the idea of buying Alice off.

Bertie resents this private-room affair. There is a sidewalk fight outside the supper club that lands most of them in the police station, where Millie bails them out with the money Bertie's father has given her to enlist her aid in breaking off the distasteful match, and they all roll home in a taxi the next morning. The children get their hearts' delights, and Millie lands Bertie's uncle, a self-constituted social arbiter, who richly deserves his fate—and seems to enjoy it. It can be seen that there is not much plot to the story, but that leaves all the more room for action.

It is one of those society plays that will hugely interest the small town fan, but there is sufficient sophistication to hold the attention of the big town patron, as well. Most people are going to enjoy it, from one angle or another.

From the play by David Grey and Avery Hopwood.
Scenario by Bernard McConville.
Directed by Sidney Olcott.

The outstanding figure is the chorus girl of Margaret Livingston. She overplays, almost too heavily at times, but she gets the role over, and takes the interest that properly belongs to Esther Ralston, who cannot get away from her role. William Austin, as the silly fiance is responsible for some good scenes while Larry Steers, as the Uncle, shares the male honors with him. With Ernie Adams as the taxi driver, who jacks up his car front and runs up a huge bill by turning the wheel while his fares peacefully sleep, they supply such comedy as Miss Livingston does not contribute. The minor roles are all satisfactorily handled and the production details are high-class.

Kathlyn Williams, as the mother, looks the role she plays, save that she does not give it the suggestion of caddishness the author has indicated. Edwards Davis, as the father, looks more like the "straight" man in an Irish sidewalk team than a prosperous lawyer, and Warner Baxter, as the chauffeur, shares Miss Ralston's fate. The priggish role cannot be made human.

Olcott has made a laughing success out of a most impossible collection of characters by making a farce of what was intended to be high comedy, but the end justifies the means. He gets the laugh and should win audience satisfaction.

Buster Keaton and a Cow Divide Honors in Slaprobatic Comedy Burlesquing a Western

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Our hat is off to Buster Keaton! In "Go West" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in which he quadruples as author, director, scenarist and star, by using a quadruped, a modest mild-faced cow, as the centre of interest, he has injected an entirely new personality in screen comedy. Now who ever saw a cow in a leading role when not on the other end of a string?

Good, clean, wholesome fun with snappy gags and slaprobatic comedy makes "Go West" a humdinger. Buster is seen as a drifter. By amusing means he reaches New York which proves too much for him and by a simple comedy expedient lands on a ranch, friendless and alone. He strikes up a strong friendship for the cow and then the "human" or should we saw "cow-interest" begins. The owner finds it necessary to ship a thousand steers. A rival attacks the train and drives off the cowboys. Buster hidden in a car goes through, delivers the consignment at the stock yard and as his only reward chooses the cow and takes her away in style in a touring car.

This is all there is to the story, but in a comedy the story itself is of secondary importance. It is the gags that count and here they are plentiful, mostly new and all good. The cow, Brown Eyes, is listed in the cast as "A Bovine" and this film can with all propriety be called a bovine comedy, for in addition to this one cow that appears as the foil for Buster's comedy the target of the heart interest and even comes in for a romantic bit in the burlesque happy ending, Buster has used a whole flock of long horn cattle with telling comedy effect. Possibly you have become surfeited with vast herds used for thrill purposes, but did you ever see a big herd supply the comedy?

As you have probably already surmised, "Go West" is a burlesque on the slap-bang Westerns. It is really more than this for it is a snappy satire on this type of entertainment. There are few of the familiar sure-fire thrill-action situations that have not been brought in, twisted around and made to yield laughter.

Adolphe Menjou Reaches Stardom in a Fine Comedy Brilliantly Directed by Monta Bell

Monta Bell has made something more than a "good audience picture out of the play, "The King." That isn't saying that it is not packed with audience appeal. It is. To the brim. But it carries something more. It has not only humor but intelligence and even a dash of heart interest. Up to the tag, evidently intended to satisfy the demand of the "they lived happily ever after" patron, it is a clean cut rapidly moving comedy with farcical touches that do not descend to buffonery. There is even a "custard pie" angle when a cream puff, lands squarely on the kingly eye, and there is every excuse for using this comedy standby. Bessie Love has a bouquet in one hand and the cream puff in the other. She means to toss the roses to the King, but in her excitement she uses the wrong hand.

The story is simple; the King who must be King in spite of the one honest love of his life. You even conjure up a little sympathy for him, though Menjou has shown that he is abundantly able to provide heart balm for himself. He comes to America to negotiate a loan. There he meets the one girl with whom he falls sincerely in love. Then he turns her over to her fiance again and goes back to marry a hard boiled princess. That's all there is to the story. You have heard it before. But it is told with a wealth of delightful incident that will appeal to everyone from the kiddies and the lowbrow to the intellectual who affects to despise comedy. You cannot despise this comedy because there is clean cut motivation of every incident. It is not a succession of loosely strung gags, but a steady and logical progression to the only logical end.

There are some delightfully planned sequences, notably the visit to the home of an astounded owner of a chain of gas stations and a trip to Coney Island, with a wealth of "human" stuff between the King and a typical American boy. There is a sprightly playtime in Paris and a delightful interlude with a Mrs. Nash, whose "line" is indifference, and who gets badly tangled in the line.

Menjou, as the King, has a congenial role. It does not give him the deep possibilities of Forbidden Paradise, but it does afford ample opportunity to put over his agreeable personality. Greta Nissen is lovely to look upon, and Bessie Love, as the contrasting type of wholesome American girl, is an excellent foil as the King's one real love. The others are all thoroughly competent, but subordinate to the main role.

Both the scenarist and the director should be given their full measure of praise, for each, particularly Monta Bell, has worked with sympathetic artistry, and turned out a corking good picture.

Cyclone Scene Furnishes Punch Climax for Film Featuring Irene Rich and Clive Brook

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

That life itself is a compromise between opposing forces, the ideal and the practical, the good and the evil, is the idea behind "Compromise," a Warner Brothers production in which Irene Rich and Clive Brook are featured.

This is worked out in a story which has as its central character, Joan, a woman of high ideals who from childhood had had to play second fiddle to her selfish, pampered half-sister. Joan expects marriage to bring happiness and it does for a time, but Nathalie, the sister, true to form, schemes to win Joan's husband Alan, and succeeds, and not content with this, arranges a surprise meeting to gloat over her conquest. Symbolic of the conflict between husband, wife and sister, there is a terrific cyclone which brings to Joan a realization of the truth of the theme and she forgives Alan.

Under Alan Crosland's direction this story which was adapted from a novel by Jay Gelzer has been given a high class production. Miss Rich of course appears as Joan, a type of neglected wife role with emotional opportunities, and, as always, she is excellent. The plot is rather thin and while the story never becomes really gripping, sympathy for Joan, some rather peppy jazz sequences, and Pauline Garon's vivacious performance as Nathalie should prove entertaining. Added to this is punch of a cyclone scene in which buildings tumble down as the principals scurry for shelter. No miniature this, a big street scene in which houses and stores are wrecked and a church steeple twists and fall, narrowly missing the passers-by.

Clive Brook gives a finished, dignified performance as the husband and the minor roles are pleasingly handled by a well selected cast.

Farce Comedy Starring Monte Blue Works Up To A Climax That Both Thrills and Amuses

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

For his newest staring vehicle for Warner Brothers, Monte Blue has been supplied with an automobile story that is out and out farce comedy, both of these angles being brought out in the appropriate title, "Red Hot Tires."

Monte sees a girl and becomes so infatuated with her that he runs his car into a steam roller and as he expresses it afterwards every time he sees her something happens. The girl's father is chief of police and to cure her of speeding, he puts her in jail. Monte demands the same treatment and is accommodated but gets out first and strives to get back in only to find the girl has been released and then has a time getting out. Crooks kidnap the girl and Monte overcoming his fear of autos since his first accident gives chase, fights all over the house in which they take refuge and finally licks the crooks and wins the girl.

The story starts out rather leisurely and while there are some amusing situations in the early accident and jail sequences it does not really get pepped up until the chase starts. Some of the gags are of a familiar sort but there are good gags with the girl's slipper and this angle has been played up to advantage, all through the picture and supplies some surprise laughs when she has to don heavy shoes which serve to keep the hero aware of just where she is when the gang is chasing her.

Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, Featured in Film That Should Please Fans

Robert T. Kane's first for First National, "The New Commandment," looks like a good box office picture. It has an exciting story with a dramatic romance, stylish backgrounds and a splendid cast including Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon and Holbrook Blinn. As the characters are wealthy people and their surroundings typical of a sumptuous living, picture audiences ought to revel in the atmosphere. Furthermore, the introduction of much sentiment—perhaps sentimentality—into the love scenes will please those who like their romances sugary.

Col. Frederick Palmer's novel, "Invisible Wounds," supplied a wealth of action and detail for Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin, the adaptors. Director Higgin has handled this plenitude of riches well, maintaining the suspense at all times and permitting adequate characterization by the players without interfering with the plot action.

The colorful nature of the story is apparent from this synopsis: Mrs. Ormsby Parr, a scheming society woman, wishes her stepdaughter to marry Billy Morrow. A yacht takes the party to France and Billy runs away to Paris. There he meets Gaston Picard, a painter, and Rene Darcourt, an American girl turned model temporarily. Billy and Rene fall in love but Billy comes to doubt Rene because of her occupation and suspicion of Picard. War comes and Billy enlists. Wounded, he is taken to a chateau and meets Rene again. Doubts vanish and all ends happily.

Miss Sweet gives a fine interpretation of the misjudged girl and Ben Lyon is excellent as her lover, though direction at times seems to make him over-act. The other players do uniformly good work.

One of the best scenes has to do with a fight in a cabaret. Lyon and George Cooper, who plays a chauffeur, are great in this, lending it all the realism of a real, desperate scrap. The battle scenes also are picturesque, especially those of the chateau while being bombed by a German 'plane, though the escape of Ben Lyon from death taxes the imagination and it will occur to some people that the Germans have been already been blamed enough for the war.

Oh, by the way, the "new commandment" is: "Thou Shalt Not Doubt," in this case the girl you love. This picture is designed to be good entertainment, it seems, and the picture fills the bill in that respect.

Typical Richard Talmadge Production Gives Star Many Chances for His Athletic Stunts

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

A typical Richard Talmadge production. This statement pretty well covers the case in estimating the entertainment value of "The Wall Street Whiz" the newest of the series in which he is being starred by F. B. O.

Dick is cast as a snappy young society man who under cover operates in the stock market, being in reality the mysterious "Wall Street Whiz." In a cafe he has an encounter with crooks, the place is raided and he seeks refuge in an auto containing a new-rich woman and her daughter. When he introduces himself as a Butler, the job is offered him and he accepts. Eventually he saves the girl's father from being ruined by a financial shark and wins the girl, but not until after he has had a strenuous time to keep his identity and a few more encounters with crooks, yeggs, etc.

In carrying out this masquerade, eluding his friends and looking after his own affairs he has a strenuous time, including several opportunities for his familiar line of stunts like jumping on and off moving autos, vaulting over stairways and banisters, tumbling over tables, and fighting off a half dozen men at one time.

Talmadge is, of course, thoroughly at home in situations of this kind and although the story is weak and the situations implausible and theatric, the stunts and fast-moving action will probably satisfy his fans. It does not, however, rate quite up to several of his earlier vehicles.

The supporting cast is entirely satisfactory. Marceline Day is attractive in the opposite role and Dan Mason gets in a few laughs as her father.

and in one scene he has even kidded his own inability to smile. While Brown Eyes does no stunts other than showing her friendship for Buster and following him around like a dog, she gets you just the same, in fact, the novelty of her role come near stealing the stellar honors from Buster. The others in the cast are O. K., but they don't amount to much; yes, there is a girl, and a pretty one, Kathleen Myers, but it is Buster and Brown Eyes and the long horns that hold the stage.

The gags in this comedy are too numerous to mention in detail. Naturally the use of the cows opens up an entirely new field of possibilities and Buster does not seemed to have missed any of them. There is a good laugh in the simple way that Buster gets where he wants to go by choosing the right freight car, in the manner of showing elapsed time and in a host of other gags. You will hold your sides when you see him leading the thousand head through the streets using Brown Eyes as the decoy and when the herd becomes separated and Buster dons a devil's costume and the cattle, seeing red, chase him to the stock yards, it is a roar.

The separation of Buster from the herd leaves them without a leader and they proceed to invade barber shops, beauty parlors, department stores and even the police station. The mad scramble for safety opens up a familiar filed of slaprobatics that is always good for laughs and the working out along the "bull in the china shop" angle is good for a lot of chuckles.

"Go West" is a laughter cocktail for any audience. The "wise'" ones who sniff at westerns will like the satire immensely and the average fan will enjoy the uproarious comedy. The ending is a gem, where Buster chooses the cow instead of the girl, and should make anybody smile. It is all excellent, clean, wholesome fun.

Once the chase begins, it proves to be a well balanced combination of thrill melodrama and farce comedy, the director playing up one angle against the other to good advantage, holding the interest and suspense and supplying excellent comedy relief. In fact this climax should be fast and funny enough to satisfy the most exacting fans.

Monte does good work but Patsy Ruth Miller runs him a close second for honors. The others in the cast have little to do but do it well.

"Red Hot Tires" should prove pleasing entertainment in the average theatre.

Little Pictures with the Big Punch

News, Reviews and Exploitation on Short Subjects and Serials

A Department Devoted Exclusively to the Pictures, Short in Footage But Long in Drawing Power

"Rustlers from Boulder Canyon"

(Universal-Western-Two Reels)

A young girl and her small brother occupy a tiny cabin and are driven out by the rascally ranch foreman when she resents his attentions. A two-fisted stranger comes to her rescue. The boy overhears a plot to rustle the cattle. The foreman is caught red-handed leading the gang and the stranger turns out to be the new owner of the ranch. He "orders" the girl out of the cabin to take a honeymoon trip with him. The action is punctuated with snappy fighting and good horsemanship, and despite the familiarity of the situations, there is a certain amount of punch and realism that makes the story more than usually convincing. This picture featuring Edmund Cobb, therefore proves to be an entertaining Western which rates a little higher than the average.—C. S. S.

"Let's Go Fishing"

(Cranfield & Clark—Scenic—One Reel)

Despite its title, this reel has nothing to do with fishing, it is a scenic of Holland or rather it deals more especially with the quaint customs and costumes of this country. There are shots of cities and country but most of the action concerns a native wedding before the magistrate and in the church and different kinds of folk dancing that is interesting and amusing. The title refers to a young husband's desire to go fishing, as explained in the subtitles, while his wife insists that they continue sightseeing.—C. S. S.

"Holland"

(Post-Scenic-One Reel)

One of the series of Post pictures "In Other Lands". Much of this reel is photographed from boat decks and we get interesting views of the canals, rivers and other water-ways of Holland. It is a comprehensive scene, with a lot of beautiful shots of this quaint country, including scenes in Amsterdam, Edam (where the cheese comes from) Zealand, the lovely island of Marken and what is described as Holland's picture book, the town of Volemdam where the old Dutch costumes including the baggy trousers, and wooden shoes are still worn by the natives. An interesting and instructive reel.—C. S. S.

"Sweet and Pretty"

(Educational-Comedy-One Reel)

An innocent young man, an attractive brunette who goes to the park with her dog in a baby carriage in the care of a blonde nursemaid, and a flirty foreigner are the ingredients of this Cameo comedy. The innocent chap, Cliff Bowes, is continually getting in wrong even to the extent of pushing the brunette into the lake after he has rescued her "darling dog" from a watery grave. It is slapstick of a familiar kind and is of average amusement value.—C. S. S.

"The Peacemakers"

(Fox-Comedy-Two Reels)

Theatres that are using Fox's amusing series of two-reel comedies based on "The Married Life of Helen and Warren" by Mabel Herbert Urner, will find that this issue fits in nicely with the preceding number "All Abroad." While the story in each is complete, in the former comedy we left Helen and Warren on shipboard, and that is where the action in this issue begins. The "plot" is good farce and embodies a veritable comedy of errors. Helen and Warren try to patch up a quarrel between newlyweds. A masked ball complicates matters and to add to the dilemma a hen-pecked husband and his domineering wife figure in the mix-up. Before the happy ending, Warren has "kidnapped" Betty in place of Helen and Helen has been similarly treated by the young husband. Finally everything is O K and to prove it the newlyweds starts quarreling again. We almost overlook the fact that a divorce lawyer looking for business adds his mite to the affair and succeeds in stirring up trouble. The action is fast-moving and although the situations are all familiar comedy stand-bys, they are sure fire mirth-makers, making this offering bright and pleasing.—C. S. S.

"Kick Me Again"

(Universal-Comedy-One Reel)

To the list of occupations that the rotund Charles Puffy has tried since he was starred in this series of Universal-one-reelers add that of assistant dancing teacher. The title is justified by the fact that Puffy's broad back offers an alluring target for the ballet girl's kicks. Puffy hides a plate at a strategic point to trap the next offender who proves to be the boss, played by Joe Engle. While this humor may not be very refined it is amusing for the slapstick fans. A jealous husband in search of his frivolous wife results in Puffy putting on a ballet costume and the laughs that this will get can easily be imagined. There is a chase in which Puffy hides in the girl's room where hubby finds him. One of the best laugh-getters in this series.—C. S. S.

"Fire Away"

(Educational-Comedy-Two Reels)

Jack White tries his hand at kidding the familiar type of Western features in this Mermaid comedy for Educational. St. John is starred in the role of the hero, a mining engineer who goes west, gets mixed up with a gang of bad-men, saves the mine and wins the girl. A number of the stock situations in western thrillers are burlesqued, and in the course of the action Al disguises as a scarecrow and later has an awful time trying to load a pack mule. White has introduced quite a few clever touches in the handling of these situations and altogether the picture should provide amusing entertainment for the majority of fans.—C. S. S.

"Felix the Cat in the Cold Rush"

(Educational-Cartoon-One Reel)

Pat Sullivan's famous cartoon cat, Felix, gets in bad again with his owner and seeks refuge in a refrigerator. He gets so cold that he has a wildly imaginative dream of being in Iceland, where all sorts of amusing and impossible things happen. For instance he extracts the aching tusks of a walrus and uses them for skiis. When the door of the ice box is opened Felix is frozen in a cake but quickly thaws out in front of a hot stove. Up to the standard of amusement value of this series.—C. S. S.

"The Honor System"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

This Paul Terry-Aesop's Film Fable depicts and escape of animal convicts from a prison and their subsequent return when chased by thousands of guards. It starts off like a world-beater, then the interest slackens through a lack of good gags. Toward the end it gets going again.—S. S.

Producers and Distributors of Short Features Form New Trade Association

THE producers and distributors of short subjects have formed their own trade association.

This far-reaching decision was arrived at in a meeting of representatives of the short subject companies, held on Wednesday, October 28, at the Hofbrau Haus, Broadway and Fifty-third Street, New York City.

The official name of the short subjects organization will be decided at a later session.

A temporary board of officers was elected to serve until permanent officers have been elected. Wednesday's election resulted as follows:

P. A. Parsons (Pathe), Chairman.

Gordon White (Educational), Vice-Chairman.

Julian Solomon (Davis Distributing Corp.), Secretary.

A committee to draft a constitution and by-laws was designated as follows:

Julian Solomon (Davis), Chairman; Paul Gulick (Universal), and Nat G. Rothstein (F. B. O.).

The following were appointed members of the publicity committee:

Henry Clay Bate (Universal), and Edward F. Supple (Pathe).

The short subject association contemplates an organization that will bring the producers and distributors into closer relationship, and directly benefit the exhibitor. The members, through their respective advertising, publicity and exploitation departments, will formulate plans for the future handling of short features that will appeal to showmen more than ever before.

A meeting of this group will be held on Wednesday afternoon, November 4, when the constitutional committee will report. Thereafter the work of permanent organization will go forward rapidly, and an intensive campaign begun by this new association looking toward wider distribution of short features.

"Oh Buster!"

(Universal-Comedy-Two Reels)

Such a pippen of a comedy was the first of the series of Buster Brown two-reelers made by Century and released through Universal, that the producers had to go some to beat it, but in "Oh Buster" the third of this series they have succeeded. Frankly, it is one of the brightest and most entertaining comedies we have ever seen, regardless of length. It should prove a regular riot with the kiddies and amuse the grown-ups just as much. This time, Buster is continually having trouble with the butler and makes life miserable for him. Buster and his sweetheart Mary Jane are invited to spend a week-end with the lad's uncle who insists that Tige be left behind. Of course Tige has no such idea, he tags along anyway and when a book agent appears with a brief case Tige gets in solid with the old man by chasing him away. But, when the directors of the bank appear with brief cases, Tige repeats the performance with an entirely different result. A point in favor of this comedy is the fact that unlike a lot of kid comedies, there are no pranks that the mischievous kid can try to copy at home and get in trouble. But it is all good funny, fast-moving stuff just the same. Arthur Trimble as Buster is great, and Doreen Turner is fine, the sour-faced butler is amusing, but after all it is Pete the dog as Tige that is the hit of the picture. His stunts are wonderful and very amusing. Pete's expression when he drinks gasoline in place of water is a riot and, Oh Boy, what a laugh when he pulls a lot of his other tricks, especially when he jumps into an auto and lands on the other side.—C. S. S.

No Let Up on Fox Comedies As Halfway Mark Is Passed

AS the halfway mark in the production of comedies was passed at Fox Films West Coast Studios a few days ago, the hum of activity, so to speak, became a veritable roar.

George E. Marshall, general supervisor, and his directorial staff, including Robert Kerr, Daniel Keefe, Thomas Buckingham, Bryan Foy, Benjamin Stoloff, Lew Seiler, Al Ray and others, have never been quite so busy as since they swung into the second half of the production calendar.

Perhaps the most important tidings from the Fox fun factory is the announcement that Carroll Nye, who first attracted by his clever work with Corinne Griffith in "Classified," has been signed to play leads in the series of O. Henry comedies. Nye won recognition as a clever juvenile almost overnight and his first Fox picture will be "Cupid A La Carte." Production is already under way, under the direction of Kerr, Daniel Keefe who was originally assigned to pilot this O. Henry tale to the screen.

"Should Sailors Marry?"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This is Clyde Cook's second two-reel starring vehicle under Hal Roach. A sailor who joined the navy to see the world and who spent his four years in a submarine, Cook too indulgently reads a matrimonial advertisement, inserted by a divorcee who needs funds to pay alimony to her husband, a wrestler. Cook and the widow marry. The ex-husband is an occupant of the household and to him Cook's wife flies for sympathy when things go wrong. Husband and ex-husband sleep together and fight over the bed clothes. Finally Cook falls out of the window. Thrill stunts on the skeleton of a skyscraper follow. Noah Young plays the ex-husband and Fay Holderness the wife. James Parrott directed. The subject has much humor and should please all audiences, though it is not one of the best examples of Clyde Cook's work.—S. S.

EDDIE GORDON, THE CENTURY COMEDIAN, IN "CRYING FOR LOVE."—Director Noel Smith has whipped this two-reel comedy into splendid shape, with excellent work by a splendid cast in support of Eddie.

Pathe Comedies Continue to Get Large Amount of Newspaper Space

MORE and more space in the newspapers is being given screen comedies and Pathe subjects, in particular, are continuing to command a generous amount of attention in both editorial and advertising columns.

In an article in the Wilmington Morning Star, Wilmington, N. C., the publication comments on the contract of the Royal Theatre of that city for the series of Pathe comedies by stating that "it was one of the most important of the coming season's bookings made by the theatre management."

Continuing, the publication says: "The Royal management has been waiting for the past year for two-reel comedies to reach such a plane that they could be presented satisfactorily along with the great motion picture features and not until this year have comedies reached such a point. The Pathe Comedies are of the highest type made, playing the finest theatres everywhere. It is believed that they will be a welcome attraction at the Royal."

Another indication of the rise of the comedy as a factor in the exhibitors' advertising scheme is shown in a page advertisement appearing in the Muskogee, Okla., Daily News. In announcing its advanced selection of production, the Broadway Theatre, Muskogee, gives approximately one-fourth of the page to the Pathe Comedies. The featured player in each series of comedies is named as well as the producer. A streamer across the page reads:

"You See a Pathe Two-reel Comedy Every Time You Come to the Broadway."

Pathe All-Comedy "Circus" Idea Featured by Big House

THE idea of a Pathe All-Comedy Week or Circus, originated by the Egyptian and Aztec theatres in San Francisco, during which all their house records were broken, has been taken up by other theatres throughout the country.

The latest house to feature a comedy-bill exclusively is the Class "A" Theatre, another San Francisco theatre. This theatre held an all-comedy circus for one day, October 9. Thousands of circus heralds announcing the "big fun show" were distributed, and the event was a tremendous success.

The Circus program presented: "Cannon Ball Express," a Mack Sennett comedy; "Fast Company," an "Our Gang" subject from the Hal Roach studios; "Jeffries, Jr." a Charlie Chase two-reeler and "Hunters Bold," a Spat Family fun-film.

Roach Back from Trip; Six Units Working on New Product

HAL ROACH has returned to his California studios after several weeks' business trip in the East, during which he conferred with the executives of Pathe Exchange, Inc., the distributors of his product, and W. B. Frank, his Eastern representative.

Six production units are busy on new subjects for Pathe release. Production schedules are lined up for "Our Gang," Charley Chase, Glenn Tryon, Clyde Cook and the all-star unit making Hal Roach "Star Comedies," while the Rex Unit making "The Devil Horse," a feature, are in the final stages of production.

Eric Mayne and Lyle Tayo have been added to the cast of the current "Our Gang" comedy, directed by Robert McGowan, in which Mary Kornman, Jackie London, Farina, Joe Cobb, Johnny Downs, Mickey Daniels and Jay Smith appear. "The Gypsy," an elaborate yacht, is the location of the greater part of the story.

Glenn Tryon will switch directors on his next fun vehicle. While Fred Guiol is directing a new all-star comedy, Tryon will launch a fun-film under the direction of James W. Horne, who guided him in "Hold My Baby" and other pictures.

Will Lambert, who has been associated with a number of the film studios as a designer of screen actresses' gowns, has been engaged in that capacity at the Hal Roach studios by F. Richard Jones, director-general.

Lou Seiler Begins Another Fox Comedy

Lou Seiler has started production on his latest Fox Film Imperial Comedy, "The Flying Fool," with Marion Harlan and Sid Smith in the leading roles.

"The Flying Fool" is Director Seiler's eighteenth production for William Fox and from all indications it is going to be very funny.

Supporting Mr. Smith and Miss Harlan are Harry Woods, William Cartwright and Harry Tenbrook.

"The Flying Fool" is being screened under the personal supervision of comedy director in chief, George E. Marshall.

Change in Release Date

Pathe announces that "There Goes the Bride," a Hal Roach two-reel comedy, will replace "A Punch on the Nose" on the October 25 release schedule. The last-named subject will be released a little later on. James W. Horne directed "There Goes the Bride," under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.

Burns Starts New Comedy

Neal Burns has started on his new Christie Comedy, "The Man Pays," under direction of Robert Thornby. Very Steadman again appears opposite Neal in this production.

Prominent Comedians Support Roach Stars in New Comedies

SUCH well known screen comediennes as Cissy Fitzgerald and Gale Henry are new members of supporting casts in new comedies being produced by Hal Roach for Pathe release.

In the current Glenn Tryon comedy, directed by Fred L. Guiol, the cast includes Cissy Fitzgerald, Sue O'Neill, Vivian Oakland and Jack Clifford.

Gale Henry has completed a role with Charley Chase in his latest two-reeler directed by Leo McCarey. Also included in the cast are Katherine Grant and John Cossar.

Jimmy Finlayson, the wandering comedian of the Roach forces, who makes an annual pilgrimage in the summer to France and Scotland is again busy at work. Director-General F. Richard Jones has promised to give Finlayson atmospheric backgrounds in the way of sets representing European countries, so that the comedian will feel at home.

"The Wooden Wedding"—not "wooden anniversary"—is the title of Charley Chase's latest completed picture. This comedy is something of a blow to romance for it tells the sad story of a young man who receives a mysterious note as he goes to the altar

Robert McGowan has completed the latest "Our Gang" and is away from the studio preparing a new plot. McGowan gets away by himself for a few days until he gets an "angle" and works it up fairly well. He absolutely refuses to transfer it to paper. He says that no man can direct children and get scenes exactly as they are written on paper without destroying the naturalness of the youngsters.

Mary Kornman, leading lady of "Our Gang" is through with dolls now because a little sister has arrived at the Kornman home. Mildred Jean Nornman is the name of the new arrival and Mary has adopted her as her one and only doll.

New Ones Announced

Fox "O. Henry" and "Helen and Warren" Comedies

Fox Films announces the launching of two new comedies, one in the O. Henry series and one in the Helen and Warren married life series, with casts up to the high standard maintained in all the Fox short subjects this season.

"The Silent Witness" is the title of the Helen and Warren two reeler based on another of Mabel Herbert Urner's stories. It will be directed by Tom Buckingham, who has just returned to the Fox lot with an enhanced reputation for putting punches into comedies. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley continue in the roles of Helen and Warren, the newlyweds, supported by a cast including David Butler, Grace Goodall, Grace Darmond and Mickey McBan.

"Cupid a la Carte" is the new O. Henry being produced under the direction of Daniel Keefe. Florence Gilbert, brilliant comedienne who has been carrying the leading feminine role in the Van Bibber comedies has been lent to the O. Henry production unit to play the role of Mame. Carroll Nye has been cast as the hero of the story. Maine Geary and Sidney de Grey have important roles.

Pathe Issues Exploitation Aids on Its News Weekly

THE exploitation aids which have been provided for exhibitors by Pathe on short product have now been extended to include the Pathe News and the result has been a noticeable increase in theatre advertising and publicity reading notices.

A special series of mat ads are issued for the more important news events covered and these have been featured by showmen in connection with the Scopes "Evolution" trial at Dayton, Tenn., the wreck of the Shenandoah, the rescue work of the navy after the disaster to the submarine S-51 off Block Island, the World's Series, the Franco-Riff War, and scenes of the wrecked Hawaiian flight plane.

Twenty Pathe News stills, with credit lines, of the Franco-Riff War and the S-51 disaster were carried in the New York press and many of the illustrations received front-page space in the daily publications. The lightning speed with which this news material was gathered brought it to the newspaper composing rooms ahead of the photos supplied by picture syndicates.

Novelties Vital, Says John Arthur

THE case of short film subjects in the Dominion of Canada is sharply delineated in a great many instances among aggressive exhibitors in both large and small cities who are anxious to get the utmost out of their selected programs. The matter is ably summed up by John Arthur, manager of the Hippodrome, Toronto, one of the most important of all moving picture halls in the Dominion.

"Novelties on the program are of inestimable value," says Mr. Arthur. "These may be achieved by clever selection of the films exhibited, by introducing an instrumental or vocal number or by employing a pretentious prologue, thus rounding out the evening's entertainment. The exhibitor who understands thoroughly the psychology of entertainment will never permit his patrons to become bored, restless or dissatisfied.

"Balancing an elaborate bill involves more psychology. In my own experience I have found that the ideal program for larger cities consists of an overture occupying ten minutes, a weekly review for ten minutes, a bright divertissement running five or six minutes, by a short reel topical or cartoon, then an organ solo, the comedy and the prologue or musical presentation leading into the feature picture. You will see by this arrangement that the first part of the program is very peppy and that the program gradually works around to a proper setting for the dramatic feature. If it happens that the feature is in comedy vein, the type of divertissement may be reversed, thereby preserving diversified entertainment.

Jack Arthur has a real way of advertising the numbers that are to be presented during the week. Invariably the newspaper displays contain the line, "Program and Presentation by John Arthur." This means that the short features, the music and the diverting extras have been planned by Mr. Arthur himself and the patrons look for his handiwork. The numbers on the program are listed as "Units of DeLuxe Entertainment" or under some other expressive title, and they are announced in some such way: Unit No. 1—Overture, "Festival," Famed Hippodrome Orchestra, John Arthur and Lloyd Collins conducting; Unit No. 2—Hippodrome News Review; Unit No. 3—Aesop's Fables; Unit No. 4—Ernest Hunt at the Wurlitzer; Unit No. 5—"The Talking Point;" Unit No. 6—Comedy Creation; Unit No. 7—Presentation to the Feature, with Arnold Becker, Leon Leonidoff and Florence Rogge. This is all introductory and then comes the main attraction, the feature film production.

Cook and Roach Comedies Head Pathe Program for Nov. 8 Week

CLYDE COOK in "Should Sailors Marry?" his second two-reel starring vehicle under the Hal Roach banner and "Are Parents Pickles?" a Hal Roach single-reeler with Jobyna Ralston and Jimmie Parrott, supply comedy on the Pathe short feature release schedule for the week of November 8th. Other releases of the week are the seventh chapter of the thrilling Patheserial "Wild West," "Aesop's Film Fables," Pathe Review, "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News.

"Should Sailors Marry?" gives Clyde Cook a wide range of scenes in which to display his versatility. Cook appears a jolly sailor who joined the navy to see the world and spent four years in a submarine. Cook is supported by Noah Young as the wrestler-husband, and Fay Holderness as the wife. James Parrott directed.

"Are Parents Pickles?" is a one-reel comedy with Jobyna Ralston and Jimmie Parrott. Jobyna is a girl who loves music. Gilbert Pratt directed.

"The Champion Cowboy" is the title of the seventh chapter of the spectacular Patheserial "Wild West" staged on the 101 Ranch, with the Miller Brothers' Wild West Show supporting the cast of screen players. One of the features of this chapter is a rodeo in which remarkable skill is shown in real contests to determine who is the champion cowboy of Oklahoma. Jack Mulhall is the "champion cowboy" and Helen Ferguson is the featured feminine lead. C. W. Patton is the producer.

Pathe Review No. 45 shows a distinctive Pathecolor series entitled "American Wild Flowers," featuring "The Thistle" in this issue. "Our Gang at Home" is the process-camera subject which shows the Hal Roach kiddies and their director Robert McGowan in strange stunts photographed by Alvin V. Knechtel. "Forest Food Supplies" completes the reel.

"The Honor System" is the release of "Aesop's Film Fables." "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the schedule of Pathe for the week of Nov. 8.

"Life's Greatest Thrills" Goes Over Big in Europe

"Life's Greatest Thrills," the amazing motion picture of International Newsreel that has created such a sensation throughout the United States, is duplicating its spectacular success in Europe.

Through arrangements made with the Paris office of International Newsreel, a gala presentation of "Life's Greatest Thrills" was given by the Societe de Fetes Versaillaises at Alhambra Hall, Versailles, on October 5 and 6, for the benefit of the French soldiers in Morocco. "Life's Greatest Thrills" was made the feature number on the program, which included selections by Mlle. Demougeot and Mons. Henri Peyre of the Paris Opera, Mons. "Reelviews" and "Searchlights" to be Released Through Red Seal

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal, signed a contract this week with I. M. Bortman, president of Urban-Kineto, whereby Red Seal will release two new series being prepared at the Urban-Kineto Studios under the supervision of Max Fleischer.

"Reelviews" will be a film magazine of current topics. Arrangements have been completed so that Fleischer will have a man in almost every part of the globe ready to go out and take needed scenes. In addition, Fleischer is kept informed by cable of just what important events are going on, so that he has his finger on every important event that has film interest.

"Searchlights" is the name given to a series of one-reelers on popular science, edited and titled by Fleischer in accordance with the standard he himself set with the "Einstein" and "Evolution" films.

All of the series will be made with the assistance of experts, and Fleischer's contract gives him scope to engage the best man in his line, regardless of where he may be.

Through Dr. S. E. Witt, the New York physician who introduced the "Animasa" treatment for high blood pressure and arteriosclerosis into this country, Fleischer has already concluded negotiations with Dr. H. H. Wirtz, the German scientist who discovered "Animasa," to come to this country and supervise a health film.

To Direct Standard Comedy

"Silm" Summerville, erstwhile star comedian and now one of the most popular comedy directors, has been signed by Joe Rock to film his next Standard production which will go into production this week. The elongated megaphone wielder has at various times during recent years been associated with the directorial staff of Fox, Universal, Keaton and other well known comedies.

Wins Riesenfeld Gold Medal Award

Two Red Seal Featurettes, the three-reel version of "Evolution" and "Thru Three Reigns" finished in second and third place in the Riesenfeld Gold Medal Award for the most novel short subject of the year ending Sept. 1. First place and the medal were won by "The Voice of the Nightingale," produced abroad by L. Starevitch and released by Educational Films.

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal, while quick to announce his congratulations to the winner of the award, was highly gratified at the standing of his own films in the contest. The judges consisted of Harold B. Franklin of Famous Players and Joseph L. Plunkett of the Strand, New York; Jack Partington of the Rothschild houses, San Francisco; Frank L. Newman of the Famous Players houses in Los Angeles; Harry C. Arthur of the M. P. Capital Corporation, and Fred Meyer of the Palace, Hamilton, Ohio.

Boys, the Comedy, the Serial, the Magazine or News, Cartoon, Scenic or special short subject might help some exhibitor to book in a life-saver—if you used it and found in it that kind of a little picture with the big punch—don't forget to mention it when you send in your dependable tip blank.

VAN.

ASSORTED NUTS. (State Right Comedy). Star, Billy Franey. Here is one that will make the hardboiled fan set up, get up on their hind legs and howl with glee. Two reels. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

BAD BOY. (Pathe—Comedy). Star, Charlie Chase. This is a real good comedy and star is bound to please. Print new. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

BOTTLE BABIES. (Pathe—Comedy). The best Spat Family comedy we have had to date. You would never die laughing at these, though. This one got a few laughs, however. Kenneth Thompson, M. W. A. Theatre, Hancock, Wisconsin.

DAY DREAMS. Star, Buster Keaton. Just a fair comedy. Has some humorous situations but dragged somewhat. Nelson & Ottem, Rex Theatre, Osnabrock, North Dakota.

GOAT GETTERS. (Educational Juvenile Comedy). If this one does not get the laughs have them examined for the incurable blues. This is a one hundred per cent laugh producer. Two reels. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

HELLO, HOLLYWOOD. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Lige Conley. The same old story—another Mermaid Comedy! Lloyd Hamilton did a bit in this in the studio stuff that helped bring the laughs. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Draw better class, town 4,500. C. A. Anglemore, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

HIGH SOCIETY... (Pathe-Comedy). "Our Gang." Another Riot and uproar from the "Gang" which pleased. I run these after my opposition and hear no complaints. Print good. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Great appeal. All classes, in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

HIT THE HIGH SPOTS. (Pathe-Spats Comedy). Another Spats Family comedy. There are pretty slow for anyone unless they appreciate the idea the director attempts to put over. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconson.

HOLLYWOOD KID. (Pathe—Comedy). This is quite interesting in addition to being funny, as Mack Sennett himself appears in it. Kenneth Thompson, M. W. A. Theatre, Hancock, Wisconsin.

HUNTERS BOLD. (Pathe—Comedy). Our first Spat Family comedy, and we would say that they were made to appeal to a certain type of audience only. A few laughs in it. Kenneth Thompson, M. W. A. Theatre, Hancock, Wisconsin.

HOW THE ELEPHANT GOT HIS TRUNK (F. B. O.-Cartoon). A pleasing cartoon produced by Bray. You can buy these right and they are nice "fill-ins." Print new. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

LINE'S BUSY. (Arrow-Comedy). Star, Billy West. Another very silly comedy. Star seems to be camera shy, continually looking at the director or cameraman. Print new. Poor appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

ONE SPOOKY NIGHT. (Pathe-Comedy). Another good laugh maker. These Sennetts are all good on the average. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

ONE TERRIBLE DAY. (Pathe-Comedy). Our first "Our Gang" comedy. These are well produced and acted. Pretty clever stuff in them and yet they do not seem to get the laughs here. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

POWDER AND SMOKE. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Blanche Mehaffy. A one-reel comedy burlesque on westerns. Fairly good, with several laughs. Drawing farming class, town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

PERILS OF THE WILD. (Universal—Serial). Star, Bonomo. Am now on episode eight. While this serial has broken no records it has been fairly popular. The story is nothing like the book I read. A large number of people have made this statement to me. But at that it has a nice following of grown folks as well as children. I would call it an average serial. I have shown lots that were better and lots that were worse. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. Fair appeal. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre, Graham, Texas.

RAYMOND HOME TOWN MOVIES. (Raymond & Son). These two men are now operating in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio. They take local views (especially of the school children) on Eastman miniature film that is directly convertible to a positive. This is projected through a Kodascope. Here they took scenes that occupied about ten minutes in showing. Their proposition with me was that they get sixty-five per cent. of gross and reimburse me for half of my outlay for rental of my regular program. This seems like a wad to hand over to them, but doubt if they could do it much cheaper. This should be a pretty good proposition in almost any town that is too small to afford a regular local news reel, provided you give them your weak nights. The drawing attraction is strong, especially if they can "shoot" all the school pupils. The superintendent and faculty of the school here cooperated very willingly. Rural and village class town of 400. Admission 15-30. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (240 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

SKY PLUMBER. (Pathe—Comedy). Star, Arthur Stone. Stone is a new one with us. He also has some new gags that brought laughter, and then some. Get this one and nail down your seats. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Theatre, Hancock, Wisconsin.

UP ON THE FARM. (Fox—Comedy). Thrilling Fox comedy that made 'em gasp. Most of action took place on top (supposed to be) of skyscraper. You can guess the rest. It satisfied Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Hammerslough Gets Two Big Weeks For Beauty Contest for Paramount Camera

ONE of the most profitable beauty contests ever worked by a single house recently was engineered by Charles Hammerslough, of the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y. It gave him a week of big business, following a ten-day newspaper campaign, and then gave him a second good week when he displayed the results of the first week's work.

It was an inexpensive stunt, so far as money is concerned, but it gave him some of the best business the house ever enjoyed.

The Lobby Display

Moreover, it was framed so that there was no comeback. There was no promise of a studio engagement, and he had the stamp of Paramount back of his campaign, for the basic idea was that Paramount, following the Betty Bronson discovery, was looking for new faces. Because of his connection, he was able to get the services of a Paramount cameraman from the Long Island City studio.

Tied the Newspaper

The first move was to tie the Newburgh News to the announcement that in its search for new faces Paramount was sending a lighting outfit and a cameraman to Newburgh to make tests.

The first and second prizes were visits to the Paramount Studio, but with the newspaper back of the scheme, it was easy to get local merchants to contribute other prizes. The first prize winner was given a hat box, with toilet accessories, and there were shoes, hats, purses and other articles for the runners up. All of these were on display in the lobby of the Broadway for a week in advance of the tests.

A committee of solid citizens was appointed to eliminate from the contest the hopelessly unfit, but a sufficient number of local girls were selected to ensure two or three tests at each performance, and this, even without the contest feature, was found to interest the audiences.

A particularly good lobby appeal was a question mark formed of circular photographs of Paramount's women stars, with a blank for the period in which was a question mark with "What Newburgh girl's photo will fill this space?"

This was put into the lobby ten days in advance, when the newspaper publicity first broke.

A somewhat similar panel carried stills showing the making of pictures, mostly underlined pictures.

The tests brought out crowds that completely filled the house each evening, for the draw was not solely from the friends of the contestants. It was of general interest, and the same people came in several times through the week.

Girls Get the Tests

After the tests were made, a second week was devoted to the screening of these films, after which each girl received her test with the compliments of the theatre. It was the announcement of this fact which brought out so large a list of applicants. Even those who did not feel they could win at least felt certain that they would receive something worth while, and each time these tests are shown to admiring friends the Broadway gets good advertising.

A City Helps Sell Ten Commandments

City officials in London, Ont., materially aided the campaign on The Ten Commandments at the Capitol Theatre.

Tom Logan got permission to stencil the sidewalks and post the traffic tower while a large banner faced the entrance to the Fair Grounds, where most everyone in that section of the country saw it.

The Chief of Police sponsored the ten commandments for traffic regulation, making it the ten commandments of public safety for fair week, and these were widely thrown out. The copy was taken from the elaborate press book on this feature.

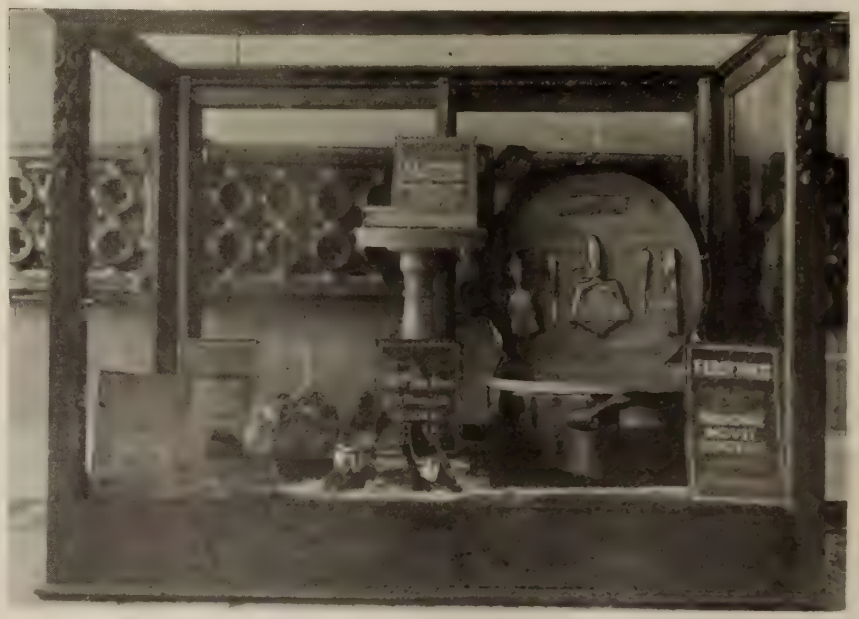
This was built up by a newspaper prize contest for the best ten commandments on any subject and the entrants covered a wide variety of subjects, all of which interested the newspaper reader.

With heavy lithographic billing and an enlarged newspaper campaign covering three weeks' advance, the picture was put over nicely against the opposition of the fair, or more correctly, the advertising got business from the attendants at the fair, which then helped rather than hurt.

More Bottles

Eddie Collins used the herald in a bottle idea for The Ten Commandments at the Queen theatre, Galveston, Texas.

One thousand vians were thrown from boats on the incoming tide to be captured by bathers at the local beach. It's a good stunt unless you get your feet cut on the broken bottles.



A LOBBY DISPLAY OF THE BEAUTY CONTEST PRIZES

Charles Hammerslough, of the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh, got a week of big business out of a beauty test and another big week when he ran the screen tests made the first week, working the stunt in conjunction with the Paramount Theatres Department.

Signal Flags, Plus Hustle, Win for Midshipman

Sells Midshipman With Signal Flags

About the meanest house to sell from is one in a town so close to a large city that the city paper comes to more homes than does the local issue. The management cannot afford the heavy cost of the city papers, and the local does them little good.

That was what H. W. Sherburne, of the U. C. Theatre, Berkeley, Calif., faced when he had to sell The Midshipman practically in competition with Loew's Warfield Theatre, San Francisco.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

THE FRONT DISPLAY

He figured that outdoor work would be his best bet, and he arranged a display for the house front with a cutout, naval signal flags and a three-foot letter banner. It looked like a lot of money, but the cost was under $20.

Then he piled a better bet on top of that. He got a banner across Telegraph Avenue, just in front of the most-used entrance to the University of California, which is said to have the largest registration of any University in the country. About 10,000 students daily pass through this gate twice, and they faced this banner for a week.

Backed by newspaper and litho campaigns, the picture played to the best four-day business the house ever had.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

SEVEN musical incidents and two film subjects made up the program of which "The Dark Angel" was the feature photoplay. The running time of the complete show was 1 hour and 53 minutes, of which time "The Dark Angel took 1 hour and 10 minutes. The Mark Strand Topical Review ran its accustomed 8 minutes and the musical numbers, including "Richard Wagner" film in the Famous Music Masters series, required 35 minutes.

The Wagner was scored with the master's best known compositions, played by the orchestra of thirty-five pieces. The lights were as follows: steel blue Mestrum flood on the orchestra from the dome; blue foots and borders on large stage; lavender and amber spots crossing the ceiling, and magneta spots on the mirror mosaic vases in the windows at either side of the stage. This subject ran 11 minutes.

Jean Bennett, soprano, sang on the apron of the large stage "Pace Pace" from "La Forza del Destino," and Harry Breuer, xylophone virtuoso of the orchestra, played a medley of popular songs from his accustomed place in the orchestra. The selections were "I'm Tired of Everything But You," "Pal of My Cradle Days" and "I Miss My Swiss."

In a full stage setting representing a little darky cabin as the sun went down, Carlton Gerard, basso, sang "Goin' Home" from the Largo of the New World Symphony by Dvorak. Working up to this solo was a medley played by the orchestra and danced by four members of the ballet corps. These girls were dressed as piccaninnise. The selections were a medley with "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," "Old Folks at Home" and "Swanee River." At the finish of the dance the basso, costumed as an old Negro, came on carrying a sack of cotton on his back. The set was lighted from the sides by open box lamps of steel blue. This brought out the characters in a semi-silhouette manner, giving the impression of dusk. Four minutes.

After the Topical Review came Lilly Kovacs, guest pianist of the orchestra, who played Gounod's "Faust Waltzes."

Redferne Hollinshead, lyric tenor, on the apron of the orchestra stage sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine" (Ball) and "Macushla" (Rowe). There was an amber spot on the singer from the dome while other lighting remained as in the previous number.

The final presentation preceding the feature was a "Slavic Dance" by the Mark Strand augmented ballet corps. The music used was Brahms' "Hungarian Dance No. 5." The set represented a gypsy camp, with a landscape back-drop on which was painted a gypsy wagon and tents. Four minutes.

Makes Improvement on Post Card Idea

On several long runs in New York patrons have been given cards to be addressed and mailed to friends expressing approval of the picture. The idea, if we remember rightly, was first used for Over the Hill. The addressed cards were mailed by the management.

The same idea has been worked recently by the Franklin theatre, San Francisco. The card was straight black and white, along the general lines of a newspaper display ad, but the front bore the script message: "Be sure and see The Iron Horse at the Franklin theatre. I think it's great. Well worth your while." There was plenty of room for the signature. In the box for the stamp was the statement that the management would supply the postage on address cards.

This was the old style. The Franklin added a new touch in the shape of a detachable coupon on one end which read: "If you enjoy The Iron Horse, the Franklin management will appreciate your signing and addressing this card to a friend. Either hand to an attendant or deposit it in the box in the foyer. We will stamp and mail." It was signed by the manager, J. M. McClure.

PUTTING OVER THE FRESHMAN AT THREE PITTSBURGH HOUSES

Rowland and Clark played the Harold Lloyd picture at the Liberty, State and Blackstone, using a joint perambulator for the three and shilling in a lot of extra business. The dummy with a football for a head should prove useful to other exhibitors.

Shot Pretty Girls for Pretty Ladies

Raymond Jones, publicity man for the Melba Theatre, Dallas, Texas, adapted the street photograph stunt to advertise Pretty Ladies.

He put a cameraman on the street to shoot all the pretty girls he saw. The prettiest of each day's catch was printed in the Journal and the owner of the face received $5 and four tickets on calling at the newspaper office.

The stunt was worked for nine days, and had the entire town talking about the idea and the play. This was started here in New York some years ago and has been working nicely ever since.

Only the prettiest girls really are photographed, but the shrewd cameraman will take plenty of blank shots to interest as many as possible in the contest.

Paged the Stars

When the Temple theatre, Toledo, played Secrets of the Night, Andy Sharrick, Universalist, dropped in to see if he could help. He devised a float to trail the Eagles parade, held during a convention.

A pretty girl rode on a truck containing a black box. She threw out cards with the statement that the secrets of the night were contained in the box with "Ask the Eagles; they know."

Waiting for the train, the station was crowded with people waiting to see the delegations arrive. Chartering two red caps for half a dollar apiece, he had them page Virginia Valli, Laura La Plante and Reginald Denny. The crowd got the idea the film stars must be in the crowd and the Eagles were forgotten for the time being.

Shadow Panel Makes Nice Lobby Display

Several managers have worked shadow panels in their lobby displays to bring in some sinister figure, but here is a straight display which C. B. Stiff planned for the Imperial Theatre, Columbia, S. C., on Kiss Me Again.

Still Scores

The name-in-the-classified-ads stunt was worked by the Lyric Theatre, Lima, Ohio, to the same old results when it played East Lynne. The newspaper told all about the time-honored play, free for nothing, and it cost the theatre half a dozen passes a day—singles, at that.

SHADOWY SHAPES

The lower picture is a straight photograph, but the heads of the man and woman in the upper section are cutouts mounted behind gauze, each with a flasher. These were so timed that first one and then the other head would flash, then both together, and repeat. It built a nice extra business for a very small investment.

TIEUP CARDS ON BETTY BRONSON APRONS ON TWO PLAYS

The Golden Princess and Not So Long Ago are advertised through a hook to the Betty Bronson aprons. It's the same apron, but presumably a new card will issue for each title as released. Just one of the many hook-ups Claud Saunders has planted.

Texas Trail Drivers Revive the Pony Express

Texas Pioneers to Aid Pony Express

The Old Trail Drivers' Association, of Texas, which nobly came to the aid of North of 36 last season, is arranging a reunion at which a drive will be started for funds with which to erect a monument to the old trail drivers.

One of the exploitation stunts will be a revival of the pony express, one rider going from Galveston to Houston and San Antonio while a second will make the run from Dallas, via Fort Worth, Waco and Austin to San Antonio.

Motion pictures will be made along the routes and shown at the convention, later being turned over to the Ladies' Auxiliary to be used in the drive.

Paramount's The Pony Express has been tied into the stunt, with Paramount doing the local filming, and the picture is riding publicity in the seven large newspapers of the state as well as in a string of nearly 5,000 smaller papers served by the Western Newspaper Union.

This stunt will help put the picture over all through the Southwest with a single intensive drive, for the interest in the Association is more than State-wide.

Curtis Dunham, Paramounteer, and John J. Friedl, of the Palace Theatre, Dallas, put the deal over; one of the biggest hooks Claude Saunders' hustlers have made.

For Classified Ads

Varying the telephone number or name in the classified ads stunt, John J. Friedl, of the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, put over a new one with the help of Raymond B. Jones, his publicity accumulator.

The name of Sally was sunk in a large number of classified ads. You had to ring these and bring the sheet to the newspaper office. The contestants ringing the largest number of names received ticket prizes.

This sounds simple enough, but with a large number of advertisements it was not as easy as it looked and few caught them all.

A Paramount Release

AN EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD HANDLING OF THE MANICURE GIRL

It's the same old stunt of a lobby manicure girl on The Manicure Girl, but William S. Wilder, of the Nova Theatre, Norfolk, Va., made a real "production" in one corner of his lobby. The card and advertisement paid the cost of the girl.

Rode Rex

When he played Black Cyclone, Charles R. Hammerslough, of the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y., put out a spirited black horse, ridden by a skilled horseman. The effect was so good that many believed the horse to be Rex himself.

He backed this with a distribution of 3,000 of the booklet heralds from the Pathe Exchange.

Taking advantage of the publicity the News-Scimetar was giving a local exponent of the Charleston, George E. Brown, of Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis, put her in his bill with The Coast of Folly and got his September opening over to better receipts than the season warranted.

Ties Shoe Brands to Paramount Play

Leon J. Bamberger, of Claude Saunders' exploitation department of Paramount, has effected a tie-up with two shoe concerns on The Trouble With Wives.

You may recall that this very bright little comedy deals with a shoe manufacturer, his wife, his pretty designer and a blundering friend, hence the shoe hook-up.

The F. Mayer Boot and Shoe Company, of Milwaukee, is suggesting that "The Trouble With Wives is improper footwear," and is supplying its dealers with window cards in red and black, with the cut of a shoe and ankle. It is also supplying a two-column ad mat and will give one pair of Martha Washington shoes for a prize for any contest a theatre may originate.

The Thomas G. Plant Company, of Boston, making the Queen Quality and Dorothy Dodd shoes, is less liberal with prize shoes, but is sending out a pair of handsome cards, each with a scene from the play.

All you have to do is to ask your local dealer about the idea when you have the picture coming.

A Don Q Whip

For the New York run of Don Q, a mechanical sign with a whip lash was the marquise attractor. Charles H. Amos, of the Carolina Theatre, Greenville, S. C., got much the same effect with less cost.

He mounted a cutout from the 24-sheet on the top of the house, using the figure of Don Q and the whip. The lash of the latter was cut out and replaced with translucent material and backed by flashers, with the result that at night the lash seemed to be flickering through the air. A spot was used to illuminate the rest of the figure.

Dominating a Page With Very Little Cost

Dominates a Page With Small Space

It's not so much the space you take as the relation of this space to others and the use you make of it. A. S. Rittenberg, of the Fulton Theatre, Jersey City, sends in several clippings which show how he hogs the local theatrical pages with small space investments, though these are larger than the others, though not much larger than for the State, just above, which looks smaller because it is so filled with type. This is a 90x2 or a drop of a little more than six inches, but by using ample margin on a one-column cut from the press book on this Cosmopolitan production, he makes Zander the Great stand out above everything else on the page. A two column cut would have spoiled this result, for the effect is gained almost wholly through the white space and an absence of the usual type filler. This is not an accident of chance, for the same effect is gained weekly. It's fatal to feel that you simply must use a two column cut in a two column space. Often the single column will do much better, just as a two or three may work better than a four in a four-column width. Don't feel you must use type to hold a cut in position. They have quoins and furniture to wedge in with.

A Chariot Chase

Most of the lobby work at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., is done in a banner-style shadow box above the entrance. For The Ten Commandments Frank J. Miller cut five chariots from the lithographs and placed them so they have the impression of a whole flock of Egyptian jitneys racing across the scene.

All Type Appeal For East Lynne

Because it had Fox's East Lynne for its world premiere, Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, worked extra hard on the picture, employing among other ideas a number of reader ads to pave the way for the regular campaign. This is a two sevens, apparently one of a series of three. Twenty-five years ago hardly a town was too small to escape at least two Uncle Tom's Cabin shows and one East Lynne. It was in the repertoire of every "rep" show, was tented through the smaller towns and was a favorite even in the city theatres supporting stock companies. Generally you could count on at least one Ten Nights in a Barroom, too. Today the old favorite seems to need a little explanation to the rising generation, and this has been done very nicely by the Cleveland management. This is a good line for city and even town theatres to follow, though we believe that East Lynne is current still in the remoter sections.

Camera Contest

To put over California Straight Ahead, which naturally appeals particularly to Californians, the National Theatre, Stockton, sold the Evening Record on a contest for the best amateur photographs of the beauties of the city and state.

It gave an extra boost to the business, though this Denny picture is a self-seller in California.

Coast of Folly Has Good Cut Material

One of the most effective cuts offered on any Swanson picture in a long time is the cut of Gloria in a beach hat which the Columbia Theatre, Washington, D. C., used in abbreviated form in its two sixes on this production. This is the essential portion of the cut, and the oddity of its shape helps to get attention for it. A squared cut would take up much more room and not give as good an effect. The lower line cut seems to be a reduction of a larger four column cut, but it works as well in the narrower space. The selling talk in the upper part of the space is well done, but it offers the

Gave It the Air

One of the best sellers in the campaign of the Terminal Theatre, Newark, N. J., on the Fox release, As No Man Has Loved, was the broadcasting of excerpts from Edward Everett Hale's story on which the production is based, with a sketch of the intervening incidents. It coaxed them away from their loud speakers to see the rest of it.

Another valuable hook-up was a special showing to the Sons of the American Revolution as well as the officers of the American Legion. Officers of both bodies urged the full membership to attend.

Valuable use was made of an enthusiastic letter from a local minister, who also gave pulpit mention to the picture.

With several good book tie-ups, the picture was sent over to real business.

As the cut shows, the train on which much of the action of the Lloyd comedy happens is shown running into a tunnel in the mountain atop of which Rex makes his home. This makes a very effective display and gives an equal appeal for both pictures. Generally Newark theatres play up one feature and slide on the other, but it seems to have been felt that even in reissue Lloyd was worth strong mention.

Vanishing American Charlotte Knockout

With a 2,000 standout on the closing night, the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., wound up the biggest week it ever had, and this in spite of the fact that there was a Made in Carolina exposition to supply a strong counter pull.

Perhaps it might better be written "because of," for the exposition officials got solidly back of the film in return for the work of Paramounteer W. J. Wall, who handled the exposition advertising on the argument that it would make a goodwill stunt.

The Committee appreciated Wall's intelligent aid, and the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who toured that section of the state for the exposition, had a good word for the Vanishing American, and whooped up the fact that this was the world premier and that Charlotte would see the picture some weeks in advance of the official New York opening.

One of the cooperative stunts was a movie ball at which Lois Wilson and her sister acted as judges. Miss Wilson also made a personal appearance at the theatre the final night, which partly accounts for the excessive standout that evening, though the picture had been pulling big all through the week.

A bannered trolley was used for three days in advance and during the week, and the Saturday before the opening the High School Band gave a traveling concert on the trolley, the only cost being a pair of seats to each player.

The exposition shared the cost of 40,000 rotos used as an insert in a Sunday paper, and helped to a 40 foot banner across the Big Corner. The film was insured for $100,000 and much use was made of this policy.

A notable feature of the engagement was the number of patrons who came two or three times.

Full Publicity for Lost World

George J. Schade, of Sandusky, played The Lost World to capacity. He deserves to, for he started in to promote this title last winter, after he had seen the Rothacker film. He arranged to be interviewed by the papers, and gave a different story to each, but always working in the suggestion that The Lost World was the Barnum and Bailey of the pictures.

To keep things going he worked a stunt we do not recall having seen used before. He had noticed an occasional society item that someone had visited another town and had seen this or that picture, among other things.

When the picture came to Cleveland, he gave a friend a pair of tickets to the show, and ran an item in the society column. He did this again when the show came to Detroit and repeated on the Toledo engagement. Each time other social lights went to see the film, just to be in the swim.

As a result, interest was kept alive. People talked about the picture, and kept on talking. They knew it was coming to the Schade, and they were willing to wait, but they waited with some impatience.

Then just before the opening, one of the newspapers was tied in to an identification contest on the correct naming of the various prehistoric beasts. There were stills at the theatre correctly labeled, and so the stunt was not too difficult.

When the picture did come he played it at regular prices.

$1 for Your Time

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete, in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Pitcure World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts after the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

Important—Film Executives!

This Quick Reference Picture Chart is your servant in an effort of Moving Picture World to give Exhibitors ALL THE FACTS about the pictures they are going to run.

You can do a heap to make this service more complete!

Jazz up the fellow who takes care of this sort of information in your organization!

Say to him—or to her if that's the way it stands—"Send Moving Picture World's QUICK REFERENCE PICTURE CHART all the dope—ALL THE DOPE, understand!—on the pictures." Emphasize this by adding, "Be sure to notify them of change in titles, of change in footage on pictures. Send the style of story and the star. AND BE SURE YOU SEND IT!"

Do this, won't you? It will help us help you help exhibitors.

The Theatre of To-Day

Equipment—Presentations—Prologues—Music

Edited by Colby Harriman

Is a Presentation Panic Approaching?

PERHAPS we may be criticized for asking such a question. Maybe the fluttering of the production pulse which we have noticed is due to a temporary condition born of excitement rather than to some organic trouble, but recently we have received letters from producers and managers throughout the country in which were expressed all manner of opinion, offering innumerable prophecies as to what the jazz movement will do to the standard presentation program. To us it seems to be much ado about nothing. After analyzing the situation in various key centers, we find that jazz programs are provincially popular rather than universally. In Chicago, naturally, with a man of Paul Ash's personality and ability, the idea is great and succeeds in the theatre where Paul Ash happens to be. But other theatres that have tried to copy the idea have met with only a mediocre degree of success. With all due respect to Ben Bernie it has been found through our own personal observation, and the study of various audiences' reactions, in New York City, that the interest has not been retained in proportion to that of Ash. This is not a criticism nor a comparison of either man, as both are capable. It merely proves our point of location, and audience demand and reaction. It must be remembered that Bernie is confronted with the problem of transient audiences, while Ash may classify his as average. Following the methods as outlined by Ash and Bernie, producers in smaller districts have attempted to carry out the excellent program suggestions, but it has been found that for a steady diet the jazz program does not get over as well as the diversified one, which is now in force. It does not seem to us that it is a battle between the standard form and the new jazz policy; it is not a question of the survival of the fittest as it is of the adjustment of this production complex. We find producers and managers following one particular theme. Too often they have not the confidence to produce the extremes in a single bill, that is where the greatest fault lies. Too much of a thing is bound to pall. This needs no argument. The consistent program of extreme diversity, brimful of novelty will get the results. Why worry about your inability to secure a second Paul Ash or Ben Bernie when you have it within your own power to draw the crowds with diversified programs. People today demand novelty. Sometimes it behooves us to study ourselves, the fault may be with us rather than with the public. The individual producer holds the key.

Riesenfeld Resigns Rivoli Rialto

DR. HUGO RIESENFELD, Managing Director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres, New York City, has tendered his resignation, to take effect in the near future. It is with regret and a degree of surprise that the production fraternity receives this announcement. Dr. Riesenfeld is regarded as one of the outstanding figures in the development of First Run programs. He is an unusual combination of artist and business man, and during his regime at these theatres he not only made them national institutions, but has offered a variety of programs which were punctuated with unique ideas and stage novelties. He may be called a "short subject specialist," and his success in presenting the subjects of all types and forms has aroused comment throughout the industry. It has not been announced as to the future plans of the Doctor, but we are taking this opportunity of expressing to him in behalf of all producers our sincerest wishes that the days ahead may be his best ones, and that he will continue in the capacity for which he is so ably fitted.

Irvin Talbot At Mosque

Irvin Talbot, who has been first conductor at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, is riding on a crest of popularity as the musical director of Fabian's new Mosque Theatre, Newark, N. J. Mr. Talbot's career has been of unusual interest, his work as a conductor beginning at the age of 13. For a number of years he was first violinist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra under Dach. During the World War he was band leader of the 69th Infantry receiving a commission of Lieutenant, and then followed an engagement as musical director of the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis. For the three years he was associated with the Rivoli Theatre orchestra he evidenced such ability as to mark him one of the leading musical directors on Broadway. Mr. Talbot has been in demand as a guest conductor. During the past Summer he conducted the orchestra of Grauman's Metropolitan at Los Angeles. He has a penchant for hard work. Every film subject, whether a one-reeler, cartoon or a super feature, receives the same high degree of care and accuracy in the compilation of its score. His understanding of the various moods, and in the selection of a musical theme to interpret them, is at times startling. Mr. Talbot is an extremely young man, and in view of his numerous accomplishments, is certainly deserving of much praise.

Short Subject Novelties

EVERYBODY is sitting up and taking notice of the movement inaugurated by the Moving Picture World to emphasize the value of the short feature in the general program make-up. We are interested in this from an added angle as the short feature is ideal in forming a basis for novel presentations. What the other producer will do with the short subjects is of general interest to the producers generale. The response to the call for short subject prologues and presentations is greater than we expected, and from leading producers some excellent treatments are reported. We may term the short subject a "producers paradise," and within it he will find the variety, the novelty, the meat of diversity, for which he is striving. There are music subjects, scenics of all types, trick subjects lending themselves to mechanical features, comedy and dramatic subjects that can be given an added pantomime or revue, and other opportunities in these single reel gold mines.

We want to hear from all producers. Producers in the large and small theatres. We want to know what you are going to do or have done with short subjects in presentation, prologue or epilogue treatment. This is not a case of pioneer work, but one of being suddenly awakened to the effect that you are a millionaire in ideas. We will be glad to publish your ideas in this department.

Rothafel's New Gang

S. L. ROTHAFEL has opened his offices in Steinway Hall and is scheduled to introduce his new "gang" over the radio within a few days. The personnel of his new organization exceeds in quality the original company of artists. The MANAGEMENT of the Milwaukee Theatre are introducing some orchestral novelties in a series of a musical travelogue. Each week the orchestra is to present a number indicative of a foreign country as "they tour the world." It is an inexpensive proposition and one which is bound to be popular.

"Romance and the Ages"

A Four-Part Offering, Which Should Appeal Because of Its Novelty—Blending of Music, Colors and Lighting Will Aid in Presenting a Popular Prologue

Moving Picture World Present ations—Devised By Colby Harriman

WE ARE offering a production novelty which may be termed a presentation serial inasmuch as the story, told in four individual episodes, forms a completed narrative. The idea prompting the creation of such a novelty has been partly technical and partly due to the volume of subject matter which presented itself in the selection of this particular theme. Romance in the various Ages as reflected in the dance and love songs includes compositions from practically the entire category of song and dance. The technical basis is a composite set, by which is meant a setting that "grows," that various units are added each week to the setting of the previous week, not only changing its appearance but resulting in a set of unusual proportions for the final feature. The theme embraces so many periods that to properly tell the story, it is necessary to divide it into four groups, and in dividing the theme it has been found that a story or subject can be completely told in one presentation, and at the same time form a link in the chain.

The first number represents the primitive period, and this Episode is entitled "DAWN." The general routine should include a brief cycle of aboriginal dances such as the tribal dances of Love and Triumph. The dancing should be primitive in its formations set to a definite rhythm, the sounds being produced either by striking with the cupped hand the bare thighs of the accompanist, or by pounding a hollow log with a club. Add to this some of the tribal chants which can be found in musical selections which were used in connection with the dance ceremonials and especially at the primitive betrothals. A man and a woman, the man a singer and the woman a dancer, should be featured in this number, as the two characters will be used throughout the serial. The balance of the routine is detailed in the specifications following:

PLATE 1. A sketch of the setting for the First Episode. The archway in the foreground which is painted in a neutral is highlighted to give the effect of rocks. A ground row with rock top is placed up center and back of the silhouette drop, a distant rock piece is silhouetted. A set rock at extrme right in the foreground and a set tree opposite at left with a foliage border noticeable at the top of the arch complete the setting.

PLATE 2. Ground plan for Episode 1 shows the position of the various units of the set and indicates a platform back of the rock profile which is silhouetted on the drop hung in two. The dancers clad in primitive costumes dance in silhouette on the platform. The effect is better as it does not give the character a definite outline. The singers work in front of the silhouette drop.

PLATE 3. The basic set which is used for the foreground in all four numbers consists of a cut drop or constructed arch on a frame which is hung in one. Two columnar shells (2) are placed right and left as indi-

PROLOGUE

Joseph Plunkett has produced an excellent prologue for the featured picture. The scene suggests a downtown section of New York, in the neighborhood of an "L" station. The super-structure, an elevated railway with attendant surroundings is visible in the foreground, and a typical building background. The elevated structure effect is achieved with two units painted to represent the girders and supports placed in one and up in three. A stairway which leads from center off left extends to the border. A newspaper stand is built in underneath the stairway. Flats painted to represent houses with accompanying fire-escapes, store fronts, etc., are placed in alignment as the background. The whole atmosphere is one of activity. A hurdy-gurdy is heard grinding out a popular air as the curtain opens revealing the Ensemble dressed in "Bowery togs" doing a dance number entitled, "Downtown." There is a push-cart peddler up right center, a policeman talking to a group around a lamp-post up extreme right. Various characters passing to and fro all dressed to carry out the effect of lower New York on a "home day." Ed and Marion Rutt do a novelty Bowery dance. Tevis Huhn, banjoist, renders several numbers, Ethel Bryant is introduced as a Charleston specialty. The various characters stroll off stage as Everett Clark comes from the newsstand and sings "Little Annie Rooney" the theme song of the picture. The lighting treatment which is dominated with canary and amber gradually dims and at the end of the picture fades out as the main titles of the picture are flashed on the scrim.

The musical part of the Strand program consists of the overture, "Buffalmacco" (Gasco) with Carl Edouarde conducting. The organ solo is "Sometime," Fiorita.

CAPITOL THEATRE
New York City

(Week Oct. 18th)
Featured Picture: "Fine Clothes"

The surrounding program includes a group of four divertissements.

1. Gladys Rice, Marjorie Harcum and Sigurd Nilssen render "Goin' Home" from the Largo of the New World Symphony (Dvorak). The setting consists of a cut arch drop in one, three fabric tree trunks hung in the opening, two at right and one at left, the tip of a foliage border seen at center, and the end of a rail fence at extreme left. Three characters are silhouetted against an amber background.

2. Mme. Gambarelli, prima ballerina, dances to the "Red Rose" from "Ballet of the Flowers," by Henry Hadley. She appears crouched in a large basket of flowers which is placed center. Gold toned drapes highlighted green are hung as a backing. The curtains are drawn in a sweeping fold at center, and a black plush used as a backing which emphasizes the light tones of the basket covered with red roses. The dancer is clad in a pink dancing costume.

3. Caroline Andrews renders "Una Voce Poco Fa" from "Barber of Seville" (Rossini) in an exquisite setting which consists of a flat at center with an arched opening painted to resemble stonework. Dark tapestry drapes are hung right and left in heavy folds. A curtain is hung in the center of the opening cut in a heavy fold and draped to the left of the arch. A clavichord is placed at right and a tapestried chair at left. Fabric backing is used outside of the archway. The whole set is in subdued tones, deep blues, purples, the singer working in canary spot dressed in light colored gown.

4. Doris Niles and Ballet Corps present "Pierrot's Serenade" with music by Drigo, in a setting which is fantastic. A set house of toylike proportions is painted on a flat and cut out, placed at center. Red roof and buff walls carry out the scenic treatment. Blue fabrics are used to mask the ends of the set piece and carry off. A foliage border hung in folds is placed in one. Red patent leather drop is hung as a backing, this being highlighted in blue from the sides. The girls dressed in "Pierrot" costumes of white, and Miss Niles appearing in a ballet costume of yellow.

MOSQUE THEATRE
Newark, N. J.

(Week Oct. 27th)
Featured Picture: "The King on Main Street"
(Paramount)

An elaborate surrounding program has been arranged for this picture. Irvin Talbot and the Mosque Grand Orchestra present as an overture "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," Liszt. This is followed by a number entitled "Autumn Days," a seasonal tone poem featuring Beatrice Hall, soprano; Hilda Barr, contralto, and Victor Henry, baritone.

Mme. Ella Daganova, prima ballerina, presents a dance specialty entitled "The Genii and the Vase," a Myth Dance of Old Araby. The setting consists of a large constructed vase of Arabic design placed on a draped pedestal at center against a black background which is highlighted scarlet from the sides. The dancer is clad in colorful Arabian costume of an early period. The vase is highlighted green and amber from the side, the dancer working in a split canary and amber spot. Balance of the foreground is subdued with purple. This is followed by a film novelty entitled "A Nocturne in Color." Two scenic films, resplendent with water falls minus the titles are projected simultaneously on a scrim, the two pictures are upside down, resulting in unusual fantastic formations. Two singers dressed in Indian costumes are placed in back of the scrim and highlighted with a spot from the side, render "Waters of Minnetonka."

The presentation feature is a Hallowe'en novelty entitled "Jack O'Lantern." The scene represents a corner of a harvest field with a massive pumpkin at center with a face cutout. The small pumpkins with similar treatment are grouped at the left. Corn shocks and attendant props are used to dress the set. A witch appears at the opening weaving a spell over the scene and exits as the pumpkins in the foreground become animated, and members of the ballet corps dressed in black with white stockings and long white gloves treated with radia-active paint, wearing pumpkins on their heads, do a weird dance. The lights in the set slowly change from the subdued tones to warmer colors as the Hicks Brothers, banjoists, dressed as scare-crows appear in the eyes of the large pumpkin and a pianist in similar costume is seen in the mouth opening below them. They render one number which is followed with the introduction of Mary Howard, dressed in a Hallowe'en masquerade costume rendering a seasonal dance specialty. The Hicks Brothers follow this with an unusual banjo novelty. The ballet enters dressed as farmerettes and do a spirited number with the entire company.

Chicago

Featured Picture: "The Pony Express"
(Paramount)

A diversified program has been arranged and staged under the supervision of Francis A. Mangan.

Overture, "American Fantasy," Victor Herbert.

Albert E. Short presents a very well arranged overture in which are interpreted several American patriotic airs as Victor Herbert historically composed them.

A picturesque tableau portraying the landing of Christopher Columbus follows the overture. The stern of the Santa Maria appears floating at anchor, while upon the shore Columbus and three Indians stand together.

The presentation includes:

1. "Kings of Syncopation."

This presentation has as a background a black drop, upon which seven clown costumes of various, bright colored stripes and squares are stitched, leaving openings for the heads of seven musicians, who render two syncopated numbers. Roy Dieterich, tenor, sings "I'm the King of Jazz."

2. "The Magazine Girl."

Organ solo, "Il Guarany."

Leo Terry renders this delightful organ number in an enhancing manner, which is one of the reasons for his well-earned success.

Prologue to "Pony Express."

The curtain is opened revealing a rolling prairie, shrouded in the blue haze of approaching evening. A canvas-covered wagon, in the back of which two buckskin-clad pioneers are seated is halted on the prairie.

cated, and the leg of the arch joins the column at (a) and (b). Two columnar shells may be used as returns. The set should be painted a dull gray and if given a stucco effect the base for lighting will become more effective.

The lighting in Episode 1 should consist of a dull green and blue foreground; the rocks and trees in the foreground highlighted on the edges with amber, the two characters working in canary shaft spots placed on the sides, and an orange and rose medium on the lamp placed back of the silhouette curtain to highlight the dancers.

Better Projection Pays

How It Is Done Counts

W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island, says: With relation to the report made by Arthur Gray, Boston, Mass., September fifth issue, concerning sprocket hole shapes, would say that in the issue of July 4 was an article with a piece of film containing the same sprocket holes, sent you by myself. At that time I reported that the film ran quietly.

Out of the entire stock of positive prints used by the New York City Pathe exchange, the stock which is marked, on its border, "Pathe Cinema France" is the only film which runs quietly, but it runs very quiet indeed.

All the rest of the stock (much of which is unmarked) runs, by comparison, very noisily. Some of the stock is marked "Du Pont." All the pathe stock other than that marked "Pathe Cinema France" has sprocket holes with sharp corners. I also note that all Pathe stock is apparently a bit thicker than the stock used by others.

Many brands of film having the sharp cornered sprocket holes runs quietly when new, which fact has puzzled me and delayed any attempt to make report on the matter.

I note that the Eastman folk have changed their type of perforation, and now use a round cornered hole, which thus far has seemed to me to be a big improvement.

I would like to measure the holes in noisy film, but inasmuch as I do not own a micrometer caliper I guess I will have to pass that up. With so many fly-by-night exchanges busting into the business there are bound to be cheap prints, and I am forced to the belief that these cheap prints are not carefully made. Take two foot lengths of some of them, lay them over two foot lengths of the same stock and see how the holes match up. Try it!

Of course where I am I get mostly old prints, but once in a coon's age they seem to make a mistake and send me a new print.

Brother Budge is a musician who, for some reason which he explained long ago, but which I do not now remember, gave up projecting musical sounds and, instead, took up the projection of motion pictures. When he made the change, he was not satisfied to merely learn enough to "get by," which I am sorry to say is the case with all too many men. When he began to project motion pictures he also began to study. He was not satisfied to watch the wheels go round, and the light leave the condenser and reach the screen. He demanded information as to exactly WHY those wheels performed, and in precisely what manner those lenses operated and did certain things

Budge is a comparatively new man in projection, but even so, I venture the assertion that he is a more progressive, better informed motion picture projectionist today that many, many men who have been "getting by" in projection for ten years past. He is in some ways a better man right now than they will ever be. Budge represents the type of man who is the coming man in projection affairs. The other type of man represents the element which will, sooner or later, be eliminated, and without having the least idea in the wide world why they lost out.

Request Unheeded

Brother Budge noticed the request of this department, which works constantly for YOU, that projectionists take note of the difference in performance, if any, of different shapes and types of sprocket holes. The matter was of GREAT IMPORTANCE, as you certainly all understood, from the standpoint of the projectionist, as well as of great importance to the Committee of Standards and Nomenclature of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, of which the editor is a member. It also is of great importance to the industry in many ways.

You were all asked to take note of any difference there might be in steadiness of the picture and noisy running there might be in different types of sprocket holes.

OUT OF ALL THE MANY THOUSANDS OF READERS THIS DEPARTMENT HAS, ONLY TWO MEN, BROTHERS W. C. BUDGE, SPRINGFIELD GARDENS, LONG ISLAND, AND ARTHUR GRAY, BOSTON, MASS., HAD SUFFICIENT RESPECT FOR THEIR PROFESSION AND ENOUGH ENERGY TO ACCEDE TO THE REQUEST, AND MAKE A REPORT.

If that hurts your feelings I have absolutely NO excuse to offer. This department is read by many thousands. That is NOT a blind guess. I have ample evidence of it. It benefits them. Few have the nerve to deny that fact, but when those thousands are asked to do a small, but very important thing to HELP THE WORK OF THIS DEPARTMENT, TO HELP THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY AND TO HELP PROJECTION, ONLY TWO OF THEM ALL GET BUSY AND DO IT.

Yes, Brother Budge, it is true that you made a report ahead of that made by Brother Gray. However, you merely reported that the holes in question ran without noise, while Gray made a COMPARISON. It is not always the fact that a report is made which is of large importance. It is how that report is made. A single report that those holes ran quietly had little value, though had a large number made even that simple report it would have had large value.

Gray, as you may remember, found that two adjoining sections of film ran very differently. On examination he discovered that one had the type of sprocket holes under discussion (round corner), which ran quietly, hence, at least by inference, with slight strain on the film and the sprocket teeth, whereas the other had square holes, which ran noisily, hence, by inference, with greater strain both on teeth and holes.

Important

Now, men, I will ask you once more to take careful note of how the various types of sprocket holes perform. If you find that one film runs noisily, and another quietly, try to find out what difference or differences there may be, and send in a report, accompanied by samples of both films, if practicable. The samples are not really necessary, however, if you will carefully describe any difference you may find and describe the exact difference in performance. Men, I am NOT asking these things because they help either myself or this department. I ASK THEM FOR THE BENEFIT OF YOU, OF MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION, AND OF THE INDUSTRY. Get that simple FACT fixed in your heads and HELP THE PROFESSION OF PROJECTION BY DOING AS I ASK.

REMEMBER THIS: A beginner (by comparison) like brother Budge, who does his best to help both himself and the profession, may be a beginner, BUT he nevertheless is of far more real value to the industry, and to his chosen calling in life, than is Mr. Wise Guy, who has had years of experience, but who sits in solemn silence, like a crab in its shell, hugging his often very scant knowledge to his bosom, making not even the most slight attempt to do one solitary thing except "get by" as long as he can in the best job the union will supply him.

Union Saddled

That type, of which there unfortunately are many, just plain ride in a more or less comfortable saddle, and their saddle is strapped tight to the back of the union. They are a pestilence and a nuisance, both to the profession of projection and to any union, though as a general proposition unions have not yet awakened to that FACT. It is such men that hold back the profession from really being one. One "beginner" like Budge is worth a dozen of them, or will be in the days to come.

Straight talk? Yep, that's true, but DENY OR DISPUTE IT IF YOU CAN! I defy you to do it. If you can prove my statement to be wrong, I will apologize like a man. BUT first you have to show wherein and in what way I am wrong, and remember this: The 'Yes man' is NOT always your real friend. Very often it is the man who makes you mad enough to want to pull his block off by telling you the BALD HEADED, UNPALATABLE TRUTH, who is really one of the best friends you've got. Think it over.

Question No. 373—Roy Saxon, Lufkin, Texas, submits this as a practical question: Is it or is it not advantageous to keep the framing lever in as nearly as possible one fixed position at all times?

I am sorry to say that no reply appears from Brother Saxon, so we do not know just what particular idea he had in mind when he asked this question. I am going to take up considerable space just showing you the diversity of opinion held by men on a thing of this sort. It is surprising.

Messrs. Thoreau, Clark and Richards, Vancouver, British Columbia, hold this view:

On the Power projector the distance between intermittent sprocket and aperture is altered when the position of the framing carriage is changed. It is increased when the lever is down, hence the framing carriage up, and vice versa. Theoretically increase of distance between intermittent sprocket and aperture has a tendency to make for unsteadiness of the picture when the perforations of the film are not perfect. In practice, however, we have never found this so-called defect to be apparent on the screen, if it really exists. However, due to the fact that it is not always possible to frame exactly when threading, we believe it to be the best practice to have the framing lever of the Power almost all the way down, but due to tendency to leak oil when in full down position, the Simplex almost all the way up.

On the Power projector the toggle gear arrangement which permits framing, causes a slight disarrangement of the shutter timing, which must be compensated for by a slightly wider master blade in the rotating shutter. However, due to the speed of the intermittent movement the thing as a whole balances up very well with other makes of projector.

Alex Wineki, Saginaw, Michigan (always write your name very plainly), says:

Yes, it is advantageous to keep the framing lever in fixed position, because with the Power when the framing carriage is all the way down it is a bit hard to get at the lower loop, and in case the film broke you would have to re-thread, which would take too much time (I don't quite get that, but I'm just showing you the diversity of ideas. There is a lot of that on many of the questions.—Ed.) With the Simplex this would not bother, but you have a better oil circulation by having the framing lever dead center.

So far as has to do with the projector running better with the framing lever in one fixed position, there is nothing to that. Any projector will run just as well and smoothly with lever in one position as in another.

C. O. Henning, Pastime Theatre, Iowa City, Iowa, views the matter as follows:

"I have always found it to be an advantage to keep the framing lever on a Simplex in a central position. Then when it becomes necessary to use it, it may be moved in either direction to eliminate the misframe with the shortest possible movement, which makes it the least noticeable to the audience. When it is in any other position, a quarter frame off may require the framer to be moved three-quarters of a frame, this is a nice sight to view when you are watching a picture. A misframe is uncalled for, except on the first showing of the picture when it has not been screened for the orchestra.

Ray Gnaegy, Paducah, Kentucky, has this to say:

It seems to me it is of advantage when using a Power to set the framing lever so as to keep the intermittent sprocket as near to the tension shoes as possible. However, I don't believe it really makes as much difference as one would at first glance suppose.

W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island, says:

It is always advantageous to keep the framing lever in the center of its travel, because should a misframe occur (of course such things should not occur. That is all very well for the big theatres where the films are carefully examined and screened before projection, but not all projectionists are so fortunately situated, and until they are, or exchanges become very much more perfect, misframes WILL occur) you can frame the picture without nearly so much movement on the screen to disturb the audience. Nothing I know of looks quite so bad as moving almost a whole picture up or down to frame it. It surely does jar an audience.

F. H. Moore, Taunton, Massachusetts, takes this view:

No matter what the make of projector, I have found it best to keep the framing lever about midway of its travel, then when the time comes, as come it will in most theatres, when you have to frame, the movement on the screen is not so much as it might be, and probably would be were the framing lever near the end of its travel either way. By this I mean, thread in frame with the framing lever set midway of its travel.

Glenn Wallace, Muskegon, Michigan, lugs in still another idea and dumps it down with a thud. He says:

I agree with the editor that Brother Saxon probably had reference to one particular projector, and that was the old Power Six, and Six A, with the steel toggle gear, which when you had to frame your picture set up a howl of protest, which meant that the strain on them was greater than when in another position. That has all long since been eliminated, but there is another advantage in keeping the framing lever in one position as much as is practicable, and that is the relation of the intermittent sprocket to the aperture. I have the idea that when the distance between the two is increased, an added strain will be placed on the film sprocket holes, particularly if projection at high speed, with heavy tension. My idea is that because there will be more film because of the greater distance, there will be added strain on the sprocket holes.

Of course there is a slight additional weight of film, the inertia of which must be overcome when it starts. That is true, and to that extent you are right, but after all the additional weight is so very slight that I think it may be said to amount to nothing at all in practical effect—Editor.

H. E. Hurlbutt, Star Theatre, Oshkosh, Wisconsin, takes this view:

This question may be answered with a "yes" on two conditions, viz: The position in which it is proposed to keep the framing lever, and the type of framing device on the projector used.

In the case of the Power projector, where moving the frame lever alters the distance between intermittent sprocket and aperture, it is good practice to maintain the framing lever as nearly as possible in one position, but first the position of the framing carriage in which the projector operates best should be ascertained by experiment.

All projectors do not operate alike. Some run most smoothly with the intermittent close to the aperture, and some with it farther away. On the type of projector where framing is accomplished by merely revolving the intermittent sprocket circumferentially—around its own axis—the only advantage would be in ease of framing, in case such a misfortune befell one in the middle of a reel, if the framing lever be set central with respect to its travel.

G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois, says:

Yes, there is an advantage in setting the framer midway of its travel, or action, except in theatres in which the films are all always gone carefully over and put into such condition that framing is never necessary—the film being threaded in frame, of course. With the framer central the picture may be framed with the minimum of movement upon the screen.

As to friend Saxon having a particular make of projector in mind, I don't think so, though due to added tendency to oil seepage it is not advisable to run with the Simplex framer in its lowest position more than is necessary; also in my opinion the toggle gear of the Power runs a bit better when the carriage is in central position, though I admit this may be largely imagination on my part.

And there you are. I have, as I said, printed all these answers just to show you what an astonishing number of ideas there

Question No. 402—Can you connect a projector arc lamp to a 2-wire or to a 3-wire system at any point, and under all conditions of commercial voltage?

Question No. 403—Practical question submitted by Chas. C. Colby, Santa Fe, New Mexico. Suppose you test across the two outside wires of an Edison 3-wire system, using two 110 volt incandescent lamps in series, and get full light. You then, using only one 110 volt lamp, test from one outside wire to neutral and get only a faint glow. You test from the other outside wire to neutral and get nothing at all, what would this indicate? Or suppose you test from outside wire to outside wire, using two 110 volt lamps in series, and get only a red filament, but from one outside wire to neutral you get full light and from the other outside wire to neutral you get only a red filament. What is wrong?

Question No. 404—Suppose your theatre main switchboard to be supplied with 3-wire feeders. The manager comes rushing up, all out of breath, and asks why a part of the auditorium lights have suddenly gone dim and others very bright. What are you going to tell him, without the slightest hesitation, is wrong?

Question No. 405—How many wires are usually found in 2-phase and in 3-phase circuits?

Question No. 406—Why did many of those who started out answering these questions in the beginning acquire such a bad case of cold feet, pop back into their hole and pull the hole in after them? I am reminded of the number who have dropped out by the fact that I today received answers to the set beginning with 378 from our old friend Harry Dobson, Toronto.

New men come in occasionally, and we welcome them cordially to the family, or as Roxie puts it, "The Gang," hoping they will stick, but darn it we do hate to lose the Old Timers. Fell, of Collingswood, New Jersey, has also fell by the wayside—temporarily only I hope.

may be concerning things which seem quite simple. The editor would set the framing lever central, for the reasons set forth by various ones, and if the projector did not operate well with the lever there he would most emphatically want to know WHY.

Question No. 374—Another practical question, this time by T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama. Using carbons well within their rated capacity, either positive or negative pencil—burn to a long, slim point. What is the probable cause, or what various things might be the cause?

I forgot to say that in addition to those named, W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa, and Chas. C. Colby, Santa Fe, New Mexico, also answered question No. 373 more or less acceptably. And now to proceed.

All those before named, except Wineki, who only answered two of the set, made good answers to 374; also William L. Barton, Houston, Texas.

Hanover replies thus:

Penciling in carbons may be due to any one of the several causes, or to a combination of one or more of them.

Usually it is due to current overload—current in excess of the capacity of the carbon, but by the terms of the question this is "out," so we must look elsewhere.

A carbon which is considerably too soft in its shell composition, or which offers abnormal resistance to the current, will have a tendency to pencil below its capacity as judged by its diameter. Why the soft carbon pencils I am not sure, but believe it to be because of fault in its binding material—the material which is used as a binder for the carbon itself, and which is presumed to be transformed into carbon of a sort in the baking process, is of very poor quality, and disintegrates in the heat of the arc, thus permitting the carbon particles to fall away before they are volatilized. This, mind you, is only a sort of guess, so if I am in error don't laugh. (Don't think your "guess" is such a bad one, though the further fact that a very soft carbon naturally has not the adhesion of particles a hard one has, due, in part at least, I think, to less applied pressure in the process of manufacture, may have something to do with it. Also I am not sure, but soft carbon has a higher resistance. Don't laugh if I'm wrong, for I, too, am making a more or less intelligent guess. It is impossible to know, or at least to remember, all of such details as this, and there is not time to ask a manufacturer for the absolute low down on it.—Editor).

Abnormal resistance will cause a carbon to pencil, because it sets up abnormal heat, and abnormal heat in a carbon always has tendency to cause penciling.

Anything which sets up abnormal (unnecessary) heat in the carbon will tend to cause it to pencil, therefore if my carbons, or either of them penciled under the conditions named I would first examine the contacts, to see if they were of ample area and in good condition, because poor contact sets up heat; also I would be very sure the lamphouse ventilation was free and open, for the same reason, and I would test to find out if the amperage was not really higher than I thought it was, because if the carbons were only working a little below rated capacity—as carbons are supposed to do in projection work—a comparatively small boost in amperage, which if it came gradually might not be noticed, would do the trick.

This set of answers is getting lengthy, due to my action with regard to the first one, and Hanover's reply is, I think, so excellent that we need not publish any more, except to just list the causes set forth by Messrs. Thoreau, Clark and Richards. They are: "Dirty contact jaws. Badly pitted jaws. Jaws made of metal having a too-high resistance. Faulty carbon, or badly mixed composition in manufacture. Faulty line-up (don't get you there.—Ed.) Soft carbons. Poor lamphouse ventilation, caused most likely by lack of attention on part of man or men in charge. Ammeter out of order, showing less amperage than is really being used. Damp carbons."

Question No. 375—Describe a cartridge fuse, in detail.

Brother Gnaegy replies thus:

A cartridge fuse consists of two metallic terminals joined by a "barrel" of insulating material, which also is fireproof. Inside the barrel is an electrical conductor made of fuse metal which connects the metallic terminals; also the terminals are connected by a "pilot wire," which is a small wire of fuse material passing to the side of the barrel and just under a small hole in the same, over which is placed a paper label. This pilot wire is presumed to fuse when the main wire does, and in so doing discolor the paper label so one may tell by glancing at it whether or not the fuse is "dead." The pilot is not present in refillable fuses.

In non-refillable fuses the barrel is filled with a powdered, non-conducting material which serves the purpose of instantly breaking the arc when the fuse blows.

In some fuses there is an air chamber, its purpose being that, the heat conduction through insulating material being slow, the temperature of the fuse wire will rise rapidly, and always in the same proportion, regardless of what the temperature of the outside air may be, which is presumed to establish a practically constant point of fuse capacity at point of blowing.

'Ll right, brother Gnaegy, go up to the head of the class, though several of the gang gave you a narrow squeak for that distinguish tonnor.

Question No. 376—Name and describe two types of cartridge fuses.

Everybody made good on this, of course. Hurlbutt says:

There are two types of cartridge fuse, the difference being in the kind of terminal used. One of what is called a "ferrule" contact, which consists of a metallic "ferrule" placed around and engaging the barrel at either end. This ferrule is slipped into what amounts to a spring contact, the same being two metallic clips engaging with the fuse block terminals at their lower end, and terminating in up-standing prongs, shaped to fit the contour of the fuse ferrule, which spring apart to receive the ferrule when it is shoved between the clips under pressure.

The other type is the same, except that in either end of the fuse is a short bar of copper, to which the fuse wire is attached at its inner end. This bar is of width and thickness varying with the amperage capacity of the fuse. These copper contact bars are designed to slip between two copper contacts on the fuse block. The contacts are made precisely the same as are the contacts of an ordinary knife switch.

All right, all right! Shut up! You've told the story, and told it well, so let's hie us a step forward and tackle

Question No. 377—Suppose you took charge of a new installation and found there would be a maximum current consumption, at times, of 150 amperes of current in the projection room.. The projection room supply circuit you found to be fused with 200 ampere cartridge type fuses, with ferrule contact in good condition and tight.. Would you accept the layout?

Brothers Budge, Thoreau, Clark and Richards, Wallace, Hanover and Doe saw the fly in this one and—swatted it. Gnaegy did it neatly and expeditiously, as follows:

I would NOT! The layout is neither safe nor correct. Cartridge fuses with ferrule contacts are used only on circuits carrying sixty amperes or less. Moreover I believe that fusing at 200 amperes for a 150 ampere consumption is allowing a too-wide margin of safety.

Gnaegy is the only one who, in my judgment, made an absolutely 100 per cent correct reply, though Wallace came pretty close to it. You will note that the question distinctly states that the MAXIMUM current consumption would be 150 amperes. True the wires would carry 200 amperes, but it does not follow that the motors or lamps would stand such an inrush of current as a rise in voltage which would run the amperage up to about 220 amperes, which would be required to blow these fuses, and though the separate circuits are all fused, I hold it is good practice to fuse quite a bit more closely than that, remembering that fuses are designed to carry ten per cent. over and above their rated capacity. As to the ferrule contact, I refer you to pages 112-113 of the Bluebook. Examine wording on diagrams at top of pages.

AN AFTER DINNER SPEECH

By an exhibitor who has just come back from Hollywood

Mr. Toastmaster and Fellow Showmen:

I'm no speaker.

I let my house front do the talking. (Applause.)

While I was in Hollywood one studio impressed itself upon me.

That's the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer outfit.

And I'll tell you why.

What's the use of kidding ourselves about pictures.

We know what fills the seats. (Cheers)

And Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer knows how to cater to our public.

I saw some of the things that they've got coming.

And I realized that the best business move I ever made was when I signed for The Quality Fifty-Two.

I overlooked no bets while in Hollywood. (Laughter)

Seriously, pictures like "Sally, Irene and Mary," and Norma Shearer with Lew Cody in "Free Lips," are pictures that I as an exhibitor would produce.

They've got one called "Bright Lights" with Charlie Ray and Pauline Starke.

The story of a small-town boy who falls for a Broadway beauty.

That picture is a winner.

Every Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture I saw I felt this way about.

They've got my slant on pictures and I believe in my slant because it's been making money for me. (Applause)

I saw Mickey Neilan making a comedy called "The Great Love."

Watch for that one, gentlemen.

I saw Mae Murray doing an Apache scene in "The Masked Bride."

Coming after "The Merry Widow" that beautiful girl's going to bring in a lot of cash customers.

I guess I sound like a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer salesman. (Laughter)

Well, I am, practically, because every Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exhibitor gets to be a salesman for the product sooner or later.

I had a great season so far with The Quality Fifty-Two.

But I've seen a lot more of it.

And if you ask me what I liked best in Hollywood I'll answer frankly.

I liked best looking over those Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer winners that are still coming to me on my Quality Fifty-Two contract.

"MADAM BEHAVE" comes from a money family—the Al Christie Comedy Specials—whose reputation for luring the dollar from the pocket of the patron to the cash register of the exhibitor is established by the marvelous records of "Charley's Aunt" and "Seven Days."

Made for Entertainment Purposes Only—that's "Madam Behave." Built around a sensationally successful French farce, and with two of the greatest stars of the day in the leading roles—Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington—directed by Scott Sidney, who was responsible for "Charley's Aunt," and carrying all the Christie sure-fire comedy gags, "Madam Behave" has all the elements of a Riot.

Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington are two of the greatest box office assets on screen or stage today.

Miss Pennington is an outstanding star of Ziegfeld's Follies—and she's just as magnetic on the screen.

Do you back them up with Perfect Projection? Are you telling your public not only how good your pictures are but also how clearly and perfectly you are projecting them?

It's an appealing argument to Mr. and Mrs. Public. Many times it's the deciding factor with them. Furthermore they will advertise it for you. Perfect Projection will give your theatre the very best kind of word-of-mouth advertising.

Shaking Hands with the Clouds

FOR thirty-five minutes last Tuesday Warner Bros. owned the most novel theatre in the world. In a little over half an hour their investment soared to the SKY and came to EARTH. Not a penny was lost in this amazing theatre deal. But two dreams met in the transaction. And a new chapter was written in the history of the MOVING picture.

SKY WRITING.

The theatre which Warner Bros. so briefly and so historically acquired was the Sikorsky Theatre, the giant biplane built and piloted by Igor Sikorsky, the Russian inventor. High up in the clouds above Long Island Warner Bros. staged on last Tuesday the first exhibition in America of a motion picture in an AIRPLANE.

A little portable projector whirring against the roar of two twelve cylindered motors! A screen made of airplane WING linen hanging snug in the bow of the ship—a FEATHER borrowed from plumage of the EAGLE! Instead of a clock above the proscenium arch—an ALTIMETER every "minute" on its face meaning a thousand feet in AIR!

No need for STUDIO clouds to move across the stage for the prologue of THIS picture. New clouds were born in NATURE'S studio for this feature every minute.

The only standee—or rather "KNEELEE"—in the house was J. Harrison Edwards, crouching at the projector on the floor of the cabin amongst PATRONS who were willing to offer an insurance policy as the possible price of admission.

Jack Edwards, in charge of exploitation of Warner's Theatre, is the man who originated and staged this unique presentation. Edwards, in his own way, will rank with the other famous "NUTS" of history—"nuts" like C. Columbus, R. Fulton, and T. Edison.

To us Columbus, Fulton, and Edison are great men. They got their start, however, under the TOLERANCE accorded men just one jump ahead of the MAD HOUSE superintendent.

Marie Prevost in "Bobbed Hair" was to have been the heroine of this AERIAL RELEASE. At the last moment a print of "Bobbed Hair" was not available, and Rin Tin Tin galloped to the rescue in "The Clash of the Wolves."

The dog fought a brave battle on his sky screen against the sun beating in through the cabin windows. But the SOLAR "baby spot" proved too strong for him. Nevertheless the experiment was a success.

Now, moving pictures have been exhibited in queer places before. In an igloo on the rim of the ARCTIC the Eskimo has been startled by slow movies of himself, his seal and his polar bears. On a coral isle in the SOUTH SEAS the cannibal has gazed in wonder at his own behavior.

But up in the clouds above LONG ISLAND one GREAT DREAM clasped hands with another—the motion picture and passenger service in the air. The meeting was more than the product of an exploitation mind. It showed ANEW that the heights of the motion picture as a medium of entertainment are far flung as the sky toward which the Sikorsky Aerial Theatre vaulted.

A few pounds of celluloid, a few pounds of projector and an airplane wings over land or sea with a LAUGH in its heart!

Get the picture, not so very many years ago, of a row of still cameras standing at the turn of a race track, to make a "moving" picture of a horse race. THEN get the picture of two rows of audience,—including Mr. and Mrs. Undersigned—sitting in the cabin of an airplane; tearing through space at one hundred miles an hour, watching Rin Tin Tin, the modern four-legged parallel of the original subject.

The motion picture climbed skyward last Tuesday on the shoulders of a scientific giant—aviation. Every day a tiny strip of celluloid reaches out and clasps an art or a science to itself with hoops of steel.

The motion picture is the meeting place of all the arts and of all the sciences. The INFANT industry, but born in the LAP OF THE GODS and there reared.

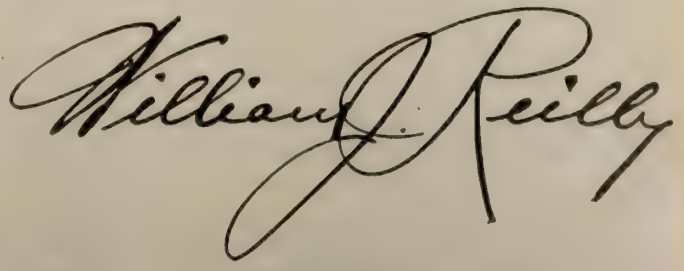
It was fitting that the first airplane exhibition of motion pictures should have been presented in the plane of Igor Sikorsky. And that Sikorsky himself should have piloted the first aerial theatre through the clouds. For Sikorsky is a DREAMER. His original financing was done by hard working Russians who believed in him. Refugees who could ill afford the luxury of a vision gone wrong.

There is coming a time when not one but many theatres will travel in the air. When Warner Bros. will add an AIR DIVISION to their exchanges. When Rin Tin Tin will gallop across the Atlantic in thirty-odd hours. When the nimble witted moving picture critic of the "Aerial Express" will radio back his first wise crack review: "Here's a picture no air audience can WALK OUT on."

And who knows but by that time the Air Traffic Board will have judiciously ordered the gentle regulation of "Dropping the MOVIE CYNIC"—overboard?

Last Tuesday was Election Day. Warner Bros. were elected the Wright Bros. of aerial exhibitors. It was not a landslide. It was a SKYSLIDE.

AND we voted THIS ticket:—We are prouder than ever to be associated with the MOVING picture industry.



Something That Is

Keep Riesenfeld on Broadway

DR. HUGO RIESENFELD has resigned as managing director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres. Whatever his plans, Hugo Riesenfeld should not be permitted to leave Broadway. He belongs to Broadway. He is as much a part of Broadway as the lights that make it the world's most famous Mazda Mall.

They tell us that it is lonesome up on the PEAKS of success. Not many folks to talk to. And those you CAN talk to not very human. You know, the kind of guys who have the first dollar they ever earned framed on the wall. Hugo Riesenfeld is on a peak, but it is NOT lonesome up where he is. Because he talks the language of entertainment and millions climb up EASILY to listen to him.

SINCE Dr. Riesenfeld came to the Rialto ten years ago thirty million people have paid to see pictures as he presented them in the theatres under his direction.

You cannot be a swivel chair director and bring them in like that. Riesenfeld's doctors and his family have told him that there is such a thing as an eight hour day. It has been the exception where Riesenfeld has not done TWO eight hour days in one swing around the clock.

What you can do in the marble palace on Broadway and the stucco house on Main Street are identical. You either GET somewhere or you don't. Every showman may not have the staff which Riesenfeld has. But with the tools he DOES have he can WORK just as Riesenfeld has.

Broadway is pretty well filled up with first run houses. Any one who thinks there is no competition on Broadway is out of focus.

But it takes more than bricks, mortar and films to make a picture theatre a productive investment. It takes showmanship. Riesenfeld has it.

Put Riesenfeld in Bellaire, O., or Painted Post, Nev., and he will make just as fine a success as he has on Broadway.

But Broadway is his playground. Broadway is his showground. For SOMETHING that is CONSTRUCTIVE: —Keep Riesenfeld on BROADWAY.

Action—the Best Loud Speaker

EVER since press books and exploitation books were published, publicity and exploitation men in New York have said to the exhibitor: "Tie up with THIS." And "Hook up with THAT."

SUGGESTION is all right. DOING IT YOURSELF is better yet.

In the press book of "The Last Edition," an Emory Johnson production for F. B. O., Nat Rothstein laid out a stock "last edition" for exhibitors to use as a "final edition" for their local newspaper, explaining that the exhibitor could localize the miniature paper in a way to get the best results. A good piece of advertising SUGGESTION.

THEN Nat went out and DID IT HIMSELF. On election day in New York he put newsboys on the streets with a "last edition" of his own. Starting early in the morning these boys gave New York the scarehead news "WALKER WINS," and advertised the local showing of "The Last Edition."

Jimmie Walker won, the saints be praised, as every one knew he would, including Nat Rothstein.

ACTION is the best loud speaker in the world. That's ACTION. That is DOING something CONSTRUCTIVE.

What's RIGHT with the Movies

WHAT'S RIGHT with the movies? It is a pleasure to write it—the CHRISTIE BROTHERS. In olden days majesty was surrounded with the HOKUM dictum, "The KING can do no wrong."

The rate of exchange on the kingly crown has fallen low. The head that used to be uneasy under a crown is now glad to ease under a Stetson.

But we'll gamble that if we were to propose: "The CHRISTIES can do no wrong," there would be joy in every movie Mudville from coast to coast.

There is something about these men that makes you LIKE them, ADMIRE them, TRUST them. To meet Al and Charlie Christie is to know a couple of PERSONABLE gentlemen, who talk PLEASINGLY of GOOD things.

Fourteen years ago these brothers made the FIRST picture in Hollywood. In an orange grove where a HOTEL of theirs now stands they shot three hundred feet of PICTURE for Nestor. When they packed their negative into that orange grove they probably did not pack an inch more than three hundred feet.

Well, you're either played or seen "Charlie's Aunt," so you know how they shoot 'em now.

The Christie brothers today are producing for Educational twenty-eight two-reel comedies under the brand name which they have made stand for clean entertainment. They operate the Metropolitan studios, producing fifteen features for Producers Distributing Corporation's current program.

We are certain that every one in the business who know the Christies wish there could be a LOT more like them in the industry.

There is ANOTHER man in the Christie family who, like them, talks clean and shoots straight. Pat Dowling. He has been a member of the Christie film family as advertising and publicity director ever since it began. And he has reflected, in all his contacts and all his dealings, the SUNNY manner in which the Christies operate. The MANY men Pat Dowling has met in his MANY swings around the country will stand pat on Pat.

"The KING can do no wrong" was majestic applesauce. But "The CHRISTIES can do no wrong" is STRAIGHT stuff. What's RIGHT with the movies? The Christies! That includes Pat Dowling.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

WILL H. HAYS
PRESIDENT
COURTLAND SMITH
SECRETARY

November 4,1925.

Mr.William J.Reilly,
Editor,The Moving Picture World,
516 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

My dear Mr.Reilly:

I have just noticed your editorial, "Gentlemen of the Sales Jury ---" in this week's Moving Picture World and I am very much interested in the case of Mr.Higley. If there is anything this office can do to help out, please do not hesitate to call upon us.

In a message I sent to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, and which was delivered at their banquet in Grand Rapids on October 6th, I stated:

"If any exhibitor in Michigan or anywhere in the country has a real grievance against any of the producers or distributors who are members of this association and will call my attention to such grievance,the good offices of the association will be immediately and sympathetically used to bring about such conferences and consideration of such grievance by the parties interested that a fair solution may be quickly sought. It is our purpose to bring about an adjustment of every real grievance wherever and whenever any such exists."

I find that most difficulties between exhibitors and distributors are only misunderstandings that can be quickly settled to the satisfaction of both parties when once they are brought together. I am sure you know -- and I want exhibitors to know, that we are ready at any time to help all the Mr.Higleys in all the Rushmores throughout the country.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes always,I

Sincerely yours,

WHH:m

THE philosophers tell us that only an exile can understand an exile. That may be true as far as UNDERSTANDING goes. But what about actual HELP? An exile cannot LIVE on solace that confines itself to WORDS. Sympathy is human, but it is not a negotiable asset. You cannot cash pretty speeches in at the bank.

Today in almost every form of human endeavor ORGANIZED instruments of ASSISTANCE are at hand. We have them in the moving picture business. In exhibitor organizations, state and national. And in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., headed by Will Hays.

LAST week in an editorial headed "Gentlemen of the Sales Jury," we asked that something definite and CONSTRUCTIVE be done for A. H. Higley, owner of the 260-seat Rushmore Theatre in Rushmore, Minn., who wrote this to us: "I have closed my house for the present, due to lack of patronage, and hardly think I will open again. If the small town theatres want to live, there will have to be something done on the part of the exchanges to give us a better rate, because the large towns are getting even a cheaper rate than we small fry. I CAN PROVE THIS."

One more theatre in the zone of high MORTALITY. One less EXHIBITOR.

What's to be done for the Rushmore Theatre and every property like it, whether Rushmore be in Minnesota or in Pennsylvania?

The fact is that Mr. Hays is the first and only one to come forward with an offer of SOMETHING that is CONSTRUCTIVE. His letter is reproduced above.

SOMETHING remains to be said by the Minneapolis exchange managers who serve Rushmore and by sales executives in New York. What's the verdict on Rushmore, gentlemen of the sales jury?

In the meantime, Mr. Higley, tell your story to Mr. Hays.

Woodhull, president; Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the Board of Directors; L. M. Sagal, treasurer, and Joseph M. Seider, chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee, has been holding a series of meetings in New York City from Wednesday until Saturday of last week, and has taken up an intensive study of the general situation which confronts the industry at this time.

The expected move to appoint a business manager and install him in separate offices for the conducting of the business affairs of the association has been accomplished and the appointment is announced of Joseph M. Seider, president of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey as business manager, and new and larger quarters have been engaged for the organization at 745 Seventh avenue, New

Mr. Seider will immediately proceed with the organization of a Service Bureau for exhibitors and take up in a large way the conduct of the affairs of the organization in conjunction with the national president and the Administrative Committee, which functions for the National Board of Directors.

The Administrative Committee and Mr. Seider have had a series of conferences with Will H. Hays, president of the M. P. P. D. A., with a view of advancing the general conditions. Progress was made on the question of a more equitable contract. Several suggestions for the perfection of the arbitration situation have been advanced and most cordially received. The further co-operation of the two great branches of the motion picture industry holds forth great promise for real advancement in solving many of the vexatious problems.

Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Ball is Huge Success; Crowd Enormous

AFTER the last couple had left the dance floor, after the last of the great array of entertainers had finished their act and the lights were dimmed at the Hotel Astor, it was realized by the enormous crowd which attended that the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Club on Saturday evening, October 31, had hung up another record by putting over the greatest event of its kind in the memory of Manhattan. Over 50 entertainers from Broadway's biggest hits contributed to the mammoth entertainment program.

Many of the most prominent persons in the show world were on hand, some to perform, others as guests.

Nils Granlund, to whom the club is largely indebted for the magnitude and success of the affair, acted as master of ceremonies and started things off with a bang by introducing the comely chorus of "My Girl," and Marie Saxon, star of his "Merry, Merry."

A player small in stature but big in popularity was Norman Phillips, Jr., of George White's "Scandals," who spilled some of his best stories. Next come Schwab and Mandell's "Captain Jinks" players, J. Harold Murray, featured song writer of the show, who sang "Mandalay" and did a number with the girls; then Joe E. Brown, the comedian, who did his comedy special with Olivette, and an eccentric dance.

The "Dearest Enemy" company was next. Charles Purcell and the Colonial Male Chorus were followed by a song and dance number by Chas. Purcell and Helen Ford.

Then came the ladies of the "Gay Paree" ensemble, followed by the Totem Pole number from "Rose-Marie." Kick-in-the-Pants Keeler "Charlestoned" all over the lot.

Then came the colorful pageant from Ziegfeld's "Louis the XIV.," including the "When You Smile" beauties who did one of their most popular numbers. Miller and Lyle kept the audience laughing. Earl Carroll's pulchritudinous "Vanities" belles brought the visual part of the affair to a temporary close with two pleasing numbers.

Entertainers and guests then adjourned to the dining rooms where an excellent early morning supper was served at 3:15 A. M. The entertainment was resumed once more with the choicest offerings of New York's most popular night clubs. Among these were the gloom-chasers of the Silver Slipper, the Oriental Frolic from the Club Caravan, the Hokum Revue of Lew Brown and Sydney Claire of the Melody Club, the Del Fey Club presented its "Fascinations," followed by the "Frivolities Numbers" of the Frivolity Club, and then from the Club Alabam' "Alabam' Fantasies."

At 6:45 the orchestras struck up the music for the last dance. Among the orchestras that lent their talents were those of Emil Coleman, Harry Archer, Jimmie Carr, Paul Specht, Wheeler Wadsworth, Fletcher Henderson and Ben Friedman, Arthur Hammerstein, Al Lehtz, Will Fowler and those of the night clubs mentioned.

Among the notables present were Marcus Loew, Al Jolson, Mae Murray, William Russell, Hope Hampton, Esther Ralston, Helen Ferguson, Lucy Fox, James Kirkwood, Lila Lee, Johnny Hines, Dorothy MacKaill, Walter Miller, Lois Moran, Fanny Ward, Niles Welch, Ruth Stonehouse, Arnold Daly, Sigrid Holmquist, Allene Ray, Fay Lanphier (Miss America), George White and many others.

ASSOCIATED EXECUTIVE VISITS COAST

Oren Woody, recently appointed special representative for Associated Exhibitors, has arrived on the coast for a month's visit. Oren is a brother of Jack Woody, general sales manager of the company. While here Mr. Woody will assist in an advisory capacity the producing units releasing through Associated. He is at this time particularly interested in the Monty Banks and Strongheart features, which are being produced under the supervision of Howard Estabrook.

Ohio Churchmen Are On the Warpath, Reports Say

The Ohio atmosphere is full of rumors, apparently from a reliable source, that churchmen are about to resume the warpath, with the elimination of Sunday movies as their objective.

Well executed efforts in the past in many Ohio cities, and the smaller ones in particular, have resulted in closing some of the picture houses and a few of the legitimate theatres. Exhibitors and legitimate managers in the larger cities, when attacked, have fought back with determination, and as a result Sunday business in flourishing.

On the statute books of Ohio is a very ancient law making it unlawful to conduct any entertainment on the Sabbath day where admission was charged. This dust-covered provision was enacted into law approximately the same time some busy Ohio legislators went on record with another famous bit of legislation which someone hauled out at the last session of the General Assembly and had repealed.

Now, according to reports, a fight is to be launched to have the law enforced. This information comes on the heels of action by one Buckeye church organization providing for the appointment of a special committee to aid the state picture censors. Naming of this special committee is said to be the initial step in the proposed crusade for dark playhouses on the Sabbath.

COMPROMISE REACHED

An agreement has been reached between the Rochester theatres and the members of the Musicians' Union. The musicians refuse to state what the agreement involves. They had asked for a boost of $7 a week for men working six days a week and a raise of $10 for those working seven days. The managers had offered a compromise rate of $3.

Paramount Replies to Commission's Charge of An Attempted Monopoly

Merge in the West

The Golden State Theatre and Realty Corp. of San Francisco, operating thirty-three picture houses in Northern California, has joined a merger which includes the Far West Theatres, Inc., of Los Angeles and the North American Theatres, Inc., a New York syndicate. Harry Arthur, formerly general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., is vice-president and general manager of the latter concern.

The Golden State Theatre & Realty Corp. is building eleven additional houses in Northern California and owns an interest in twenty-one theatres controlled by the T. & D. Jr. Enterprises.

It has recently added to its chain the new Wilson Theatre at Fresno, Cal., jointly controlled with Ackerman & Harris; the Atkins Theatre, in course of construction at Berkeley, Cal., and the Theatre Visalia, Visalia, Cal. The purchase of the latter involves the acquisition of a site for a new house adjoining the Masonic Temple site. Cecil B. de Mille, producer and director, has been made a director of the Golden State Theatre & Realty Corp.

Hays Commended for Care of Children in the Studio

Recommending that other great industries emulate the motion picture industry in providing the most improved conditions for the education and care of children, the National Association of Compulsory Education Officials, one of the most powerful of all educational bodies, in its recent convention in Duluth, Minn., adopted a resolution giving high praise to motion picture producers.

The resolution was adopted after the Los Angeles Board of Education, represented by its director of child welfare, Professor Raymond B. Dunlap, reported to the body just what methods obtained in the motion picture studios for educating and caring for children used in pictures.

The association also commended Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., for establishing "Saturday Morning Movies" for boys and girls. The association recommended that teachers and parents give thorough support to these programs wherever they are shown.

Bulky Brief Written in Defense of Manufacturers' Right to Sell Product Directly to Consumer, Without Middlemen

IN a brief filed with the Federal Trade Commission on November 2, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation makes a general denial of the charge that it "conspired" to establish a monopoly in the industry. It consists of two bulky volumes. The preface states that it is written "in defense of the American manufacturer to sell his product directly to the consumer, without the interposition of either wholesale or retail middlemen." One sub-heading declares that neither "Famous Players-Lasky Corporation nor any of its constituent corporations now has, or ever has had, any semblance of monopoly in any branch of the motion picture industry."

It further states:

"A motion picture producer, like any other manufacturer, may lawfully sell its product directly to the ultimate consumer and may lawfully own the facilities—that is, theatres—necessary for such sale."

Commenting on the statement of the commission's counsel for the issuance of an order requiring the respondents to divest themselves of property estimated to be worth $100,000,000, the respondents declare that "they are not at all disturbed by the fact that any such order would revolutionate the whole motion picture industry and require like action against substantially every one of the larger and better known producers and distributors, the undisputed evidence being that integration of exhibition with production and distribution has been a common practice from the very inception of the industry."

A suggestion is made that some competitors of Famous Players and affiliated companies may be operating in violation of the Anti-Trust law.

Denying the charge that it "controls" and "dominates" the motion picture industry the brief states that the Famous Players produces about one-eighth of the total number of feature pictures manufactured; distributes about one-eighth of them and is interested in less than one one-hundreth of the motion picture theatres and about one-fifteenth of the key city first run theatres in the country. It states in this connection:

"Never has it produced more than one-fifth of the total number of feature pictures manufactured; more than one-fifth of the total number of feature pictures distributed nor operated more than one seventy-fifth of the motion picture theatres or more than one-tenth of the first run motion picture theatres in the country."

The brief continues:

"While the brief of commission's counsel contains constant references to the control and domination of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and its size, neither the examiner nor commission's counsel ever directly gave the commission any idea of the size of competitors or of the size of the industry as a whole. Indeed, they vigorously suppressed all efforts on the part of respondents' counsel to show these facts after the respondents had been compelled to produce figures showing their own size and growth."

The brief also denies control of motion picture "stars," showing that respondents "at no time had in their employ more than one-third of the stars of any class, character, sex or description."

Eleven other producing-distributing corporations are named, and the leading stars employed by these corporations, with the following statement:

"Most of these companies, directly or by means of subsidiary corporations, also distribute pictures produced by others.

"There are about 100 smaller producers who distribute their product through at least forty State right distributing organizations, each of which maintains from one to ten exchange offices in different part of the country.

"The examiner seeks to create the impression that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is an organization of tremendous size, which has undergone tremendous growth since 1918. He finds that its outstanding common and preferred stock has doubled since 1918; that its surplus has increased tenfold; that it now pays twice as much out in dividends as it did formerly; that its profits in the last four years have increased 33 1-3 per cent.; that the value of its physical equipment, including land and buildings, has increased forty-fold between 1917 and 1923, and its tangible assets have trebled between 1918 and 1923. This statement, standing as it does in a vacuum, is worthless. What have its competitors been doing? The more and absolute size of the respondent constitutes no violation of either the Sherman act or Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission act."

Touching upon the application of the Anti-Trust law to the case, the brief, after quoting decisions, avers that under the Sherman act the "wrongful intent" has to be "accompanied by conduct which had some chance of succeeding to carry out this intent." It continues:

"Though the Federal Trade Commission act gives remedies which are more elementary than the Sherman act, nevertheless the Federal Trade Commission act is not concerned with mere moral deliquency, but with conduct which if not arrested will 'probably' create a monopoly to the detriment of the public. If from the relative situation of the 'combination' such a monopoly is 'improbable' of accomplishment no mere 'intent,' however often verbally expressed, can give legal grounds to issue a cease and desist order. Every corporation has the intention to get as much trade power from its competitors as it can, and in this sense every corporation may be said to have the intent to monopolize. Therefore, it is the conduct and the relative situation of the corporation which must determine the question whether proper grounds exist for issuing the order."

The brief quotes a decision of the United States Supreme Court in which this statement appeared:

"There is no limit in this country to the extent to which a business may grow."

The brief makes references to a statement of the commission's examiner that the United States Artists Corporation had difficulty "in finding a satisfactory market for its pictures in sections where the first-run situation is largely controlled by one company." As to this, the brief says:

"The only testimony in support of that part of the examiner's findings is the testimony of Mary Pickford. All of the sales representatives of United Artists pictures, who were questioned about it, flatly contradicted the testimony of Miss Pickford, and she, as well as her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, at the end of a long cross-examination, admitted that they must have been misinformed and mistaken when they testified that they found difficulty in finding a market for their pictures and that their pictures had been 'excluded.'"

Admission is made by the respondents that "preference is given to its own pictures, all other things being equal." The brief continues: "But while we insist that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has the absolute legal right to devote all of the time of all of its theatres to the showing of its own pictures, the fact is that the great majority of the time of the theatres in which it has an interest has been taken up in the exhibition of the product of its competitors."

For the past week or so the New York Morning World and other big newspapers throughout the country have been running the Federal Trade Commission on the Famous Players case, written by James Robbins. Last Sunday Adolph Zukor replied in a long article in the World. The opening of Mr. Robbins' article, quoting Mr. Zukor, is as follows:

"Domination of the motion picture business?—'We only do from 10 to 15 per cent. of the business—I haven't the exact figures; that is only a rough guess.'

"Oppressive methods?—'There have been none to my knowledge; never in my experience. My enemies, if I might call them enemies, are but my competitors.'

"Forced presentation of poor pictures?—'One can't tell what a picture is until it is sold and the public passes on it. That is very obvious.'

"An open market?—'Absolutely'."

A description of Mr. Zukor follows, then a history of the results of his remarkable business acumen. Later in the article Mr. Robbins quotes Mr. Zukor as saying:

"First National, organized as an exhibitors circuit for distribution, suddenly went into producing and tried to get our stars. If the exhibitors were entering into production it was evident the producers would suffer. To protect our business we had to become interested in exhibition, or theatres. We had to create a permanent outlet for our product. Nothing else was left for us to do. They were so active in New England, and the South, particularly, we had to get in or get blocked out. We had acquired the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres here. It was particularly necessary to have first-run houses.

"There is nothing Greek about it. We had no thought of control. It was the mere thought of protecting our business and to perpetuate it. How can any one without a market for his product continue in business?

"Theatres required management. With that thought in mind I watched the field, selected Balaban & Katz and made a deal to turn the management of our theatres over to them. The management may be transferred here. Mr. Katz is here now. They will handle the management in the way they can most efficiently. It is out of our hands now."

Thomas Meighan Gives $1,000 Check to Jewish Drive

A donation of $1,000 by an actor not of the Jewish faith to the $4,000,000 drive being made by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies was one of the features of the meeting of he sub-chairmen of the Theatrical and Motion Picture Division at a meeting at the Hotel Astor, New York. The donor was Thomas Meighan, and William Brandt, who made the announcement, added that Mr. Meighan had offered to give his services in any way possible to aid what he considered one of the most worthy causes in the world.

Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players, is the chairman of the Theatrical and Motion Picture committee and he called the meeting to discuss plans for raising the quota. The speakers included, in addition to Mr. Zukor, Maurice Goodman, representing the attorneys; J. P. Muller for the film salesman; A. Weinberg for the screen advertisers; Julius Tannen for the actors, and J. B. Basson for the motion picture operators.

The meeting agreed that Mr. Goodman and Mr. Weinberg hit the nail on the head when they said that the way to raise the quota was by personal solicitation, and that no other method could compare with that.

Many Attend Cornerstone Laying of Fox Exchange and Buxbaum Luncheon

New York Exhibitors Turn Out in Force Despite Raw Weather—Borough President Wields Trowel—Old Film and New Sealed

MARKING a great forward stride in Fox Films' distributing organization, the cornerstone of the Fox New York Exchange at 343-45 West 44th Street, New York, was laid on October 28 by Julius Miller, president of the Borough of Manhattan, in the presence of more than 150 exhibitors of the metropolitan area.

The large turnout of exhibitors in spite of the cold, raw weather gave ample evidence of the warm regard they have for Harry H. Buxbaum, manager of the exchange. The street in front of the flag-bedecked pavilion was choked with the crowd witnessing the cornerstone ceremonies. A captain of police, a dozen patrolmen and a mounted policeman were present to keep order and lend color to the occasion.

Into a niche in the stone, Borough President Miller sealed two cans of film that illustrate in a striking manner the remarkable development of motion picture production in the thirty-one years that have intervened since the first picture was screened on February 5, 1894, by J. A. Le Roy with the first projection machine, which he invented and made with his own hands.

One can contained a reel of selected scenes from "The Iron Horse," the Fox photo-drama based on the building of the first transcontinental railroad, which is typical of the modern superproductions. The other can contained bits of film clipped from pictures shown by Mr. Le Roy in 1894, 1895 and 1896. Among the subjects in the samples of early film were the coronation of King Edward VII. of England, a pickaninny being bathed, fire and flood scenes and a locomotive in motion.

As Mr. Le Roy said in the accompanying note, "These were considered wonderful pictures in those days." To a visitor from Mars excavating in the ruins of New York a million years from now, the two cans of film will give significant evidence of the changes wrought by thirty-one years. Certified accounts showing the financial condition of Fox Film Corporation as of June 27, 1925, and the New York Stock Exchange listing were also placed within the cornerstone. Mr. Le Roy, whose shop is a couple of doors from the new exchange, was present at the ceremony.

Following the laying of the cornerstone, Mr. Buxbaum was host to the exhibitors at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor. In his speech at the luncheon, Borough President Miller lauded the motion picture industry for the progress it has made.

John C. Eisele, treasurer of Fox Film Corporation, predicted increasing prosperity for both exhibitor and producer. In a brief speech James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the Fox organization, paid tribute to Mr. Buxbaum for the efficient manner in which he has been handling the distribution of Fox pictures to exhibitors of the New York district.

The luncheon itself was served "in five appetizing reels with a sumptuous prologue." The prologue was nothing less than "Iron Hors d'Oevres." Then came "dotted line olives au Grainger," "trowel" soup and "darne of halibut a la cornerstone." The "third sequence" consisted of "Tom Mix" broiled chicken from the wide open spaces." Of course there were plenty of other appetizing dishes along with these, and the FOX FILM EXCHANGE MADE HISTORY when the cornerstone of the new Fox Film Corporation Exchange, at No. 345 West 44th Street, was laid, on October 28. The Hon. Julius Miller, President of the Borough of Manhattan, laid the cornerstone, and after repairing to the Hotel Astor, H. H. Buxbaum, head of the New York Fox Exchange, presided at a most appetizing luncheon. In upper right hand inset, Mr. Miller laying the cornerstone.

Fox Theatres Corporation Will Direct Destinies of the Fox Chain of Theatres

A NEW company to be known as the Fox Theatres Corporation with an authorized capitalization of 4,000,000 shares of common stock of no par value, is to be incorporated under the laws of the State, according to an announcement this week. The stock, it was said, will consist of 3,900,000 Class A shares, and 100,000 Class B shares, each class sharing equally in the earnings. Control of the company, however, will rest with the Class B stock which will be held by William Fox and his associates.

The announcement says that the company will begin its corporate existence with assets of more than $20,000,000 of which $11,000,000 will be cash and $9,000,000 in equities in theatres, and that the only indebtedness will consist of $1,300,000 represented by real estate mortgages.

A statement issued by bankers interested says that the theatres and interests in theatres now controlled by William Fox and his associates will be taken over by the new company. The equity in these properties is put at $9,000,000, accumulated out of earnings from an original investment of $5,000 by Mr. Fox in 1905.

In addition, the statement says that this investment has paid Mr. Fox and his associates $6,000,000. The theatres to be included in the group which the Fox Theatres Corporation will control or hold substantial interest in are listed as follows:

In New York, Academy of Music, East Fourteenth Street; Audubon, 163d Street and Broadway; City Theatre, East Fourteenth Street; Crotona, Tremont Avenue; Japanese Gardens, Ninety-sixth Street and Broadway; Nemo Theatre, 110th Street and Broadway; Star Theatre, 107th Street and Lexington Avenue. In Brooklyn, Folly Theatre, also the American Theatre and Terminal Theatre, Newark; Liberty Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J.; American Theatre, Paterson, N. J.; Fox Theatre, Jamaica, N. J.; Fox-Washington Theatre, Detroit; and the Plaza Theatre and Isis Theatre, Denver.

Adolph Eisner Talks Again on Producer-Owner Theatres

HAVING delivered his first broadside, Adolph M. Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas City, and present owner of the Circle Theatre, now steps forth with still another verbal harrangue apropos the producer-owned theatre question.

"I guess it looks as though I am going around with a chip on my shoulder," apologizes Mr. Eisner for his second outburst. The fact that the first interview credited to him, which was printed in Motion Picture World two weeks ago, has aroused some resentment interests him keenly for he believes good will come of it.

"Why all the pro and con relative to admitting to membership in state organizations the producer-owned theatre?" he asks. "It seems ridiculous to even bring it up for the reason that the matter can easily be handled with by-laws and in some states this is being done very satisfactorily.

"Is it not a fact that whenever pressure is needed one way or the other that these large theatre chains are implored to do this, that or the other to get the desired results?

New York Pathe Exchange Has Hallowe'en Party

A successful Hallowe'en party was held at the Pathe New York Exchange at 1600 Broadway on Friday evening, October 30. The main sales room was turned into a big dance hall, illuminated by the customary weird lights and Jack-o-lanterns of this occasion. Herby Steiner's Jazz Orchestra provided music.

One of the big events was a Charleston contest. Prizes went to the Misses Mildred Barry and Ida Benjamin and Mr. Benson. A pie contest was another feature. Honors were won by Joe Katzoff. An old-fashioned one-step contest was won by Amelia Macek and Jack Brecker.

In addition to practically the entire New York Branch office personnel, a delegation from the Pathe Home office attended the festivities, making it one of the most successful social events of the 1600 Broadway Patheites.

NATHANSON DINES REISMAN

Phil Reisman, sales manager of the eastern division for Famous Players, was tendered a dinner at the Royal Edward Hotel, Toronto, by N. L. Nathanson, prominent Canadian theatre owner. Prior to assuming his post in New York, Reisman was general manager for Famous Players-Canadian Corporation.

Prominent officials from New York who attended were: Sidney R. Kent, Robert Kane, E. A. Eschmann, George W. Weeks, A. M. Botsford, Charles E. McCarthy, E. W. Hammons, Bogart Rogers, John D. Clark, Eugene Zukor and Mel Shauer.

luncheon ended with "Genoise glace diplomate Buxbaum" with a sip of "moka hokum."

Fox claims that the New York Exchange will be the most scientifically laid out film exchange in the country, with every modern appliance for the handling and distribution of films and accessories. The building will be three stories high, with full basement, covering a plot 50x100.

Construction will be absolutely fireproof. The building will be of reinforced concrete, with all steel partitions, a full sprinkling system, and every other modern safety device. The exterior will be of burnt red brick with a purplish cast. There will be plenty of exits. In addition to the two front doors, one for shipping and the other for entrance and egress, a fire tower will be constructed in the rear to provide an exit to 45th street.

Elaborate provisions have been made for the comfort and convenience of visiting exhibitors. A lounge and reception room, opening out of the palatial projection room, will be up for the visiting exhibitors on the third floor. There will also be fireproof vaults for the storage of films. An electrically operated dumbwaiter will convey films to the different floors.

Mr. Buxbaum and his staff will occupy the second floor. The shipping room for handling incoming and outgoing films for the metropolitan area will be on the street floor. Posters, press books and other accessories for exploiting and advertising pictures will be handled in the basement.

Among those present at the luncheon and cornerstone ceremonies were William Benson, H. Yaffa, Henry Huber, M Schane, A. Stanzler, Harry Brandt, C. H. Moses, Lewis Moses, B. Brodie, J. M. Benas, L. Hollywood's Fourteenth Anniversary

Al Christie Took First Films There

By Pat Dowling

Advertising and Publicity Director of Christie Film Company

FOURTEEN years ago, on October 27, 1911, Al Christie took the first motion pictures in Hollywood with a little group of then unknown actors. Today there are twenty-four studios actively making pictures in the film center of which Hollywood is the hub, making a total of 114 new films in actual production on this date.

When Al Christie took Hollywood's first pictures as manager and comedy director of the Nestor company which prospected westward in 1911, the first movie, a little three hundred foot affair, was shot without benefit of fancy electrical equipment in an orange grove on Hollywood boulevard where now stands the Regent hotel, owned and operated by the pioneer Christie brothers, Al and Charles, the latter of whom is now president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers which numbers in its ranks companies capitalized at many millions of dollars, and operating in a group of the finest studios in the world, which the producers say, will always stay in Hollywood and its environs.

"The closer and closer dependency of the producing companies on one another for reasons of plain business economy and better working conditions all down the line, the vast number of permanent homes which have been built by motion picture people, and the group of solid subsidiary businesses which have grown up around motion pictures and which each individual producer needs for the proper carrying on of his enterprises are the three outstanding reasons why picture making is in Hollywood to stay," is the statement of C. H. Christie who now heads the association.

"The size of the film industry at the present time in and around Hollywood is seen in the facts that fifteen thousand people are engaged in making pictures regularly, getting an aggregate payroll of twenty-five million a year. These picture companies are making 85% of the total picture production in America here. The payroll figures do not of course include those vast allied industries such as costume companies, property supply firms, laboratories, equipment manufacturers and building material houses which are an important factor in serving the studios. Nor do they take into account the large number of motion picture clubs, banks and hotels which are dependent on the industry in many cases almost exclusively.

"Naturally, the heaviest investment in motion pictures is in the multitude of beautiful new picture theatres which are springing up all over the world. The tremendous amounts of money invested in theatres is the reason why the quality of pictures will never be allowed to decline. The most significant movement of the next few years in the picture business will be the awakened interest on the part of the men who have huge fortunes tied up in theatre properties in seeing that the best pictures play in the best theatres, making it easier for the public to pick its entertainment in the nicest surroundings."

AL E. CHRISTIE CHARLES H. CHRISTIE

The famous Christie Brothers began "shooting" pictures out in Hollywood fourteen years ago—before a lot of present-day "celebrities" knew what it was all about. Few names stand out with greater clarity, and the production record of the Christies is of the highest standard.

The story of the Christies' own part in the growth of Hollywood is in itself an interesting example of achievement from small beginnings fourteen years ago. Starting with practically no capital and with only a fixed aim in supplying short comedy entertainment, the Christies have sold laughter so successfully during these years when the industry has gone through all its growing pains that today they are ranked among the largest makers of pictures in the industry. Their activities on their fourteenth anniversary of Hollywood include the making of twenty-eight two-reel comedies at their Christie studios, and the operation of the Metropolitan studios which will produce fifteen full-length feature productions this year for release through Producers Distributing Corporation. The successful operation by the Christies of their realty corporation and also the Christie Mortgage Corporation is only one of the many instances which show how closely allied are the motion picture men with the business and development side of the Hollywood community, another very good reason apparently for the solidity of the motion picture business in Hollywood.

Coincident with the Christie's fourteenth anniversary in Hollywood was the fact that C. H. Christie as head of the producers' association, presided at a dinner at the Hollywood Athletic Club on the Anniversary evening at which the guests of honor were the ten members of the United States Senate Committee which is in the West considering the details of the huge Boulder Canyon dam project.

Zukor Disclaims Intention of Hampering Film Progress

ADOLPH ZUKOR, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who by a vote of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers ranks first in the list of the motion picture industry's twelve greatest men, was honor guest of that organization last week at its weekly luncheon at the Hofbrau House. In addressing the asssemblage Mr. Zukor said:

"A good many things have been said and printed about me individually, some by men who do not know me, lots of it by men who do, but I am satisfied that some may be present here who will agree on one thing at least to their knowledge—that I have never deliberatly done anything that would hamper the progress of the motion picture. And I want you to know that the welfare of the motion picture is nearer and dearer to my heart than any financial gain.

"When I first entered the picture business as an exhibitor my family had a circle of friends. When these friends of ours found out I was in the picture business, we would see little by little that these friends dropped away, and we did not receive their invitations to call on them, and they stopped calling on us. We did not know the reason, except we scented it was because I had entered the moving picture business, which, fifteen years ago, was somewhat degrading. I then remarked to Mrs. Zukor, 'Do not worry, moving pictures are all right, and some day these very people who give us the go-by may be very glad to accept us.' And I am very thankful that moving pictures have made such strides that I and my family, and all of us here, can hold our heads up and be proud to be identified with screen entertainment.

"I have tried to analyze just what elements were responsible for bringing the moving picture before the public in the right light, and I cannot help but acknowledge that the men who have been in charge of the publicity and advertising of this industry are responsible for its prestige about 50-50 with the producers who have tried to make worthwhile pictures.

"I distinctly recall when I first started in the picture business in my humble way—just as I have continued during the last fifteen years—that it was considered bad ethics, or at least bad business, to mention the names of the people who appeared in the picture. When I began advertising the names of the players in my first pictures, people in the trade warned me that it was not good business. Well, it was good publicity and that publicity attracted the public.

"Since then we have steadfastly advanced. We first advertised a number of pictures and a number of people collectively in the trade papers. Subsequently, we began to realize that if we focused our efforts on individual pictures with individual names therein, that we had a better opportunity to attract further attention. And not until three years after the Famous Players organization was in existence did we dare to advertise in the newspapers. And from that day to this—and I have never changed my mind on that—I believe that the men who are in charge of publicity, and the men who are in charge of advertising, and the newspapers, are just as important to the moving picture industry as are the men who make the pictures, or the players who play in the pictures.

"I think the future success of the motion picture—and not one of us here can tell to what degree it will develop, though we may think and dream—depends upon how ably you men place before the public, truthfully and honestly, the things that your respective companies are undertaking to do.

"You have to take each picture individually, you must exploit and advertise that picture consistently from the time it is started—from its very inception—until finally it goes over with the public and at the box office. I believe that newspaper advertising and publicity are going to play a greater part in the moving pictures than they have played in the past.

"My thoughts, my methods and my desires are no different today than they were the day I undertook to make pictures. I rejoice with each individual in the industry, and with every corporation, that succeeds in making a creditable contribution to our business."

"Happy Choice" Says Cohen Of Seider Appointment

SYDNEY S. COHEN, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Board of Directors and prime mover in the building of the Play Date Bureau, commented on the appointment of Joseph M. Seider as Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A. in the following statement:

"The selection of Joseph M. Seider as Business Manager of the National Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America by the Administrative Committee is a most happy one and one which will meet with the approval of Independent theatre owners throughout the country. For my part, it is both a privilege and a pleasure to welcome Mr. Seider to this new field of endeavor for which, by reason of his energy and talents he is so eminently fitted; a field which properly worked, as it will be, will relieve from a mass of detail those of us who have been daily wrestling with the problems confronting our fellow theatre owners.

"Members of the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A. (of which Mr. Seider is a member) who met in New York last week in conjunction with the Administrative Committee and the Play Date Bureau, heartily endorsed and enthusiastically approved Mr. Seider's intelligent handling of his duties as Chairman of the Contract Committee. To such wholehearted and approving endorsements, I feel I can add little more than to say that I feel that both Mr. Seider and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are to be equally congratulated upon this new alliance."

R. H. Cochrane Commissioned in the United States Army

R. H. COCHRANE, vice-president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, took the oath of office on Friday, October 30, as a Major in the Signal Reserve Corps of the United States army. The oath was administered by Captain O. A. Hess, adjutant of the 77th Division, Organized Reserves, the reserve division located in and around New York City.

The ceremony was under the direction of General Peter E. Traub, a veteran fighter and noted as the commander of the Thirty-fifth Division in France. General Traub, who as colonel now is chief of staff of the 77th Division and its active head, personally journeyed with his adjutant from the U. S. Army Building, New York City, to the Universal home office. The ceremony took place in Major Cochrane's private office and was witnessed by several Universal executives.

General Traub explained to Major Cochrane the valuable co-operation and assistance which can be given the army by leading citizens in industry and commerce, and stressed the important part moving pictures now play in war, at home, in the field, in neutral countries and even in the territory of the enemy. The willingness of high officials in the picture industry, such as R. H. Cochrane, to take an active interest in the army's plans and preparedness programs, is regarded by the army as a bright augury for whole-hearted co-operation of industry, commerce and the military in any future emergency.

Following the swearing in of the Universal vice-chief, Major Cochrane was the host at a luncheon in the Hotel Gotham.

This is Major Cochrane's first commission in the military service, but during the World War he did much valuable work for the government, being stationed in Washington from time to time and contributing his services in a branch of war work which had far reaching effects although little has been published regarding it. The relation of the picture industry to the building up of America's war spirit is one of the most astounding phases of the war. The results were a revelation to the entire world.

Kirchner of Michigan Charges Showmen With Laxity

In a report submitted to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan last week, E. E. Kirchner, chairman of the arbitration committee, stated that 55 per cent of the claims that have been lost by exhibitors have been lost because they have failed to take an interest in their cases.

"When you get a notice that claim has been filed against you and you pay no attention to it, you are only kidding yourself and no one else," Kirchner wrote exhibitors in summing up the situation. "If you fail to present any evidence, or refuse to take any interest in the case, that claim is most certain to be filed against you and a judgment rendered against you."

Alice Calhoun Sells Her Interests in Seven Houses

Alice Calhoun, the film star, incidentally one of the cleverest business women of the Hollywood film colony, has sold her interests in seven theatres to the Pacific Theatre Company, Inc. Miss Calhoun is vice-president of the Hansen Theatre Company.

The houses involved in the deal include the Larchmont in Beverly, Lake in Walnut Park, Estrella near the Plaza, Home on Western Avenue, Mark Strand, San Pedro and two new theatres under construction.

The price paid was $250,000. The Hansen Company is building two new theatres, the Marquis in West Hollywood, which will open in November and a theatre on Hollywood boulevard between Bronson and Gower, work on which will start next week.

Embassy Company, St. Louis, Adds Three More Theatres

ANOTHER major picture theatre deal has been swung in St. Louis. On Sunday, November 1, the Ashland Theatre, 3522 North Newstead avenue, and the Newstead, 4366 Lee avenue, were taken over by the Embassy Amusement Company, and on December 28 the same company will assume charge of the Mikado Theatre, Hamilton and Easton avenue.

The company is to pay Joseph Litvag an annual rental of $16,000 for the Ashland and Newstead, while Henry and William Scherrer will receive a rental of $24,000 annually for the Mikado. The Mikado leases will run for 20 years and the leases on the Ashland and Newstead for 10 years each.

In addition, the Embassy Amusement Company has announced plans for a 1200-seat theatre to be erected at Marcus and St. Louis avenues at a cost of approximately $150,000 and will also let contracts in the near future for the 2000-seat Sanford Theatre at Union boulevard and Ashland avenue.

The company also operates the Embassy, 4924 Delmar boulevard, a 850-seat house and an adjoining airdome of 1380 seats, the Plaza, Ciare and Etzel, 735 seats, and the Union, Union and Easton avenue, 1147 seats. The Mikado seats 1608; the Ashland, 900, and the eNwstead 665. The combination seating capacity of all its houses will be 10,500. It is also dickering for two other houses in St. Louis.

The deal gives the Embassy Amusement Company a dominant position in the northwestern section of St. Louis.

The officers of the company are: A. Laventhal, president; Ruby Laventhal, treasurer; Louis Stahl, vice-president; George A. Lubeliy, secretary, and Maurice Stahl, general manager.

Maurice Stahl general manager of the company has the distinction of being one of the youngest and at the same time one of the oldest in point of service in the St. Louis exhibition ranks. He started his career back in 1908 as an usher for his father in the old Liberty Theatre on Easton avenue. He served in general utility capacities for a few years when he entered the employ of the General Film Company as a booker. Later he was made a salesman.

Since then he has served as salesman for Paramount, First National and various other national distributors. During the World War he was in the Motion Picture Department of the Army, being stationed at the Pathe Studios in Paris. He has had experience behind the motion picture camera.

In more recent years he worked for the St. Louis Amusement Company as manager of its leading houses. He opened the Tivoli in University and the Arsenal in South St. Louis for that company, and also handled the run of "Robin Hood" at the Pershing Theatre for that company. Other houses he managed were the Pageant, Shenandoah and Grand-Florissant.

In addition to being general manager of the Embassy Amusement Company he is interested with George Skouras in the Aubert Theatre, Aubert and Easton avenues, and an adjoining airdome, and also in the Chippewa Theatre, Broadway near Chippewa street. Although he has been in the business for 17 years, Maurice Stahl is but 31 years of age.

The Embassy Amusement Company has announced managers of its various houses as follows: Embassy Theatre, Donald W. Ross, former treasurer for Loew's State Theatre; Mikado, Maurice Stahl; Union, Louis Stahl; Plaza, Wilton Colonna; Newstead, Joseph Litvag, and Ashland, Roy H. Hughes.

CONTEST PLANNED THEATRE

A controversy is on between the Moose Lodge and the City Council of Sedro Woolley Wash., over the building of a new theatre. Dr. M. B. Mattice is championing the cause of the Moose, and in defiance of the City Fathers plans to go ahead and build a theatre, prepared to stand the consequences. Deputy State Fire Marshal W. A. Groce, called to investigate the conditions here, advised against building the theatre in a frame building and said that the city should have a fire ordinance and enforce it.

Exhibitor Interest Keen at Washington Meeting

Exhibitor interest was keen in the forthcoming convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington in Seattle on November 4. It was decided to make the affair a one-day convention, packed full of official business, giving the visiting exhibitors an opportunity to attend to business matters on Film Row the following day before returning to their homes. There was a grand banquet and ball at the Olympic Hotel in the evening, in which exchange men and their employees and families joined with exhibitors in making it an all industry affair.

Committees in charge of the work were: Convention committee, H. W. Bruen, chairman; Frank Edwards, Robert W. Bender, LeRoy Johnson, Mrs. Don Geddes, Si Danz, J. W. LaVigne and L. R. Stradley. Entertainment, R. W. Bender, chairman; LeRoy Johnson. Reception and Floor, L. O. Lukan, chairman; Joe Bradt, LeRoy Johnson and the convention committee. Tickets, J. W. LaVigne and J. M. Hone. Film Exchange, Charles W. Harden and J. A. Gage.

$1,000,000 Fox Theatre to Rise on Main Street, Buffalo

ONE of the largest real estate transactions ever made in Buffalo, N. Y., has been closed by the Fox Film Company and associates, Edward Fay of Providence and Mike Comerford, of Scranton, Pa., in the lease for a long term of years of the property at 608-618 Main street. Leasing of the property alone involved a sum of more than $3,000,000, according to Harvey Harrison of the Harrison Real Estate company, which negotiated the deal.

Ground will be broken shortly after the first of the year for the new house to cost $1,000,000. First-run films and vaudeville will be the policy. The capacity will be 4,000. Two main entrances will lead to the theatre, one on Main street near Dickinson's jewelry store, occupying a frontage of approximately 70 feet, and the other on Chippewa street, directly behind Rudin's drug store, with nearly the same frontage. The huge auditorium will occupy ground in the rear running through to Pearl street.

The Fox theatre will be the third theatre in Main street between the blocks of Chippewa and Tupper streets. The Buffalo Theatre for the Shea Amusement company is nearing completion and Famous Players is planning a house at 622 Main street. It also is reported that negotiations are now under way for a site in the same locality on which another picture theatre will be built.

Fox company officials says a new house is needed in Buffalo for the outlet of Fox films. The new playhouse is also part of an enormous expansion program. Explaining the situation in Buffalo, Fox officials say their product is not getting proper exhibition because of the limited number of first-run theatres.

The Main-Chippewa corner, according to Mr. Harrison, is the most valuable piece of property in Buffalo at the present time. He said the lease was closed with the Coplon Brothers, who bought the property several years ago from the Peabody estate. The Fox house will have a frontage of 187 feet on Main and Pearl streets and 232 feet on Chippewa street. Stores will be built in front of the auditorium.

New Chicago Chain

Another theatre circuit is in the making in Chicago. Eddie Trinz, manager of the Pantheon for Lubliner & Trinz, and Harry A. Gourfain, formerly production manager of the Senate and Pantheon, have taken over the Calumet Theatre on the far South Side under the name of the Gourfain and Trinz circuit and will add other houses to the chain latter on.

GERMAN PRODUCERS BUY THEATRES

The Ufa plans this year to exhibit sixty of the major American productions, according to a recent report to the Department of Commerce by Assistant Commercial Attache Douglas Miller in Berlin, and have been getting their theatres in shape for the fall and winter seasons. A number of new theatres have been purchased. Mr. Pommer, managing director of the Ufa, recently gave the figures at 130 now actually in the possession of the Ufa; a great many more, however, are controlled by this firm. The Phoebus Company has also been purchasing theatres, mostly of lesser importance, and has its own chain now not only in Berlin but also throughout the small cities.

BANKRUPT IN CHICAGO

According to the Journal of Commerce, Clarence Jalass, a motion picture operator, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court in Chicago listing liabilities at $41,248.35 and no assets.

Smith General Sales Manager Of Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

OSCAR A. PRICE, president of Associated Exhibitors, this week added another important announcement to the almost weekly sales recurring since control of that distributing organization was recently taken over by P. A. Powers and Mr. Price. The latest news in the new program of expansion comes with the statement that E. J. Smith, for years among the industry's better known sales executives, has taken over the reins of general sales manager of Associated.

Mr. Smith succeeds J. A. Gove, who has held that post for the past few years and who now resigns to enter on activities in another branch of the industry. Mr. Gove states that his future plans are in the process of shaping and not yet ready for announcement.

E. J. Smith comes to Associated Exhibitors with a long record of sales successes in the picture industry. He grew up in the Universal organization when the "Big U" roster boasted that fast stepping crew of go-getters, including Joe Schnitzer, Harry Herman and Art Schmidt. Picture veterans still point to the results achieved by that "flying squadron" in those hectic days.

When Universal faced the herculean task of taking over distribution of its own product in England in 1920, Carl Laemmle scanned the organization and chose "Eddie" Smith for the job. His labor included the establishing of a complete exchange system, the selling of Universal product for new higher prices in opposition to its own pictures still being block-booked through previous distributors, and the launching of the first big Laemmle specials. Records achieved on "Foolish Wives" and other specials in the face of the multitudinous details of a new organization still continue high-water marks in British film distribution.

The best index to the success recorded by the new Associated Exhibitors sales manager is given in the fact that it was scarcely two years later when Carl Laemmle once more issued the call to higher honors, this time bringing Mr. Smith back to the United States to assume the reins as sales chief of the home organization.

Later he joined the F. B. O. sales staff, going from an executive post there to take on similar duties with the Warner Brothers organization. It is known that while negotiations looking towards his acquisition by Associated Exhibitors have been on for some time, it was only with utmost reluctance that Warner Brothers consented to release him from a long-term contract to enable him to take complete charge of the rejuvenated Associated.

Sales plans on the new season's product will be discussed, and on Sunday the assembled managers will view a number of the spring and summer pictures which have been completed.

A special car attached to the Century carried the home office officials, among whom were: Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Sidney R. Kent, Eugene Zukor, Mel Shauer, A. M. Botsford, Charles E. McCarthy, Walter Wanger, Harold B. Franklin, Bogart Rogers, Claud Saunders, Russell Holman, Phil Reisman, John D. Clark, G. M. Spidell, G. B. J. Frawley, B. P. Schulberg, Mike Lewis, A. O. Dillenbeck, Henry Salsbury, Edwin C. King, William Le Baron, John Butler, Joseph Seidelman, John Ragland and Leslie Whelan.

Rowland and Spring to Supervise New Sales Committee of First National— Eschmann Goes to United Artists

E. A. ESCHMANN, for several years general manager of distribution for First National Pictures, Inc., has resigned to take effect December 10.

Ned Marin and Ned Depinet have joined First National and with A. W. Smith, Jr., will comprise a sales committee to function under the supervision of General Manager Richard A. Rowland and Samuel Spring, Secretary-Treasurer of the company. It is understood that Mr. Spring will act as chairman of the sales committee.

Both Mr. Marin and Mr. Depinet have gained enviable reputations through the effectiveness of the policies which they instituted as members of the sales committee of the Universal company. Prior to his association with Universal, Mr. Marin was with Famous-Players and later with Distinctive. He moved to Universal at the time Al Lichtman took charge of the sales for that company. Mr. Depinet is particularly well known in Southern districts, where he has been located during most of his motion picture career.

As first assistant to Mr. Eschmann during the past two years, Mr. Smith has come to be recognized as one of the most capable and aggressive of sales executives. His work has been particularly notable in the handling of First National's specials which have been placed directly under his supervision.

Executives of First National expressed keen regret at Mr. Eschmann's resignation in view of the many successful policies he has instituted since his association with that company. Before becoming General Manager of Distribution for First National, Mr. Eschmann occupied a similar position with Pathe.

As we go to press the news comes that Mr. Eschmann will take charge of distribution for United Artists Corporation.

Mr. Eschmann will take his new post as assistant to President Hiram Abrams, beginning about December 10.

Both Mr. Abrams and Mr. Eschmann confirm the news, each one expressing gratification on the appointment.

Many Accomplishments Noted at Meeting in New Jersey

THE Walt Whitman Hotel at Camden, N. J., was the scene of one of the best attended and constructive sessions when the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey convened on Thursday, October 29. It was the fourth regular session since that memorable Asbury Park convention. Immediately after Sidney Samuelson, chairman of the board, completed the work which the routine matters entailed, the meeting was turned over to the attention of the extensive and sweeping report of the president, Joseph M. Seider, which included a review of the activities of the organization in the political campaign in New Jersey and an analysis of the possible results.

That the exhaustive campaign laid out at the annual convention was being adhered to with clocklike precision, was evidenced by the encouraging report on several matters which required drastic surveys. For one, the matter of reduction on light and power is rapidly nearing a successful culmination, and ere many moons elapse the theatre owners of New Jersey will enjoy the fruits of the work done by the sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Unger and Hildinger, by saving considerable revenue on the reduction.

The board proceeded to discuss the Famous Players-Lasky-Traco Theatre case and it was evidenced that keen interest was aroused by the action of the Famous Players against Mr. Hirshblond.

Undoubtedly, an ineradicable precedent has been established by the admirable action of R. F. Woodhull, president, and Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A., in the ingenious handling of the Kingston Armory exhibition. And that the exhibitor organization has been successful in effecting an Americation tie-up with Governor Alfred E. Smith, manifested itself convincingly when the governor revoked the permit for the use of the armory for exhibition purposes.

The proposed amendment to the Federal copyright law is a greater menace to the theatre owners than is realized by them. Mr. Seider reported on the contemplated activities of the M. P. T. O. A. in this relation. He reported the request of A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the Administrative Committee of the national organization, that the theatre owners of New Jersey interest themselves in an effort to defeat this proposed legislation and asked them to request their congressmen and senators to vote against the amendment in the form in which it is proposed.

The directors received with gratification the report relating to the adjustment of the dispute with Pathe relating to the release of Langdon comedies.

There was a dinner served before the session was called to order. Much commendable phraseology is being expounded on the superb manner in which Directors Benjamin Schindler of Camden, N. J., and Jacob Fox of Burlington, N. J., officiated as hosts.

The fact that the meeting was in Camden did not deter men like Charles Hildinger of Trenton, Peter Adams of Paterson, Leon Rosenblatt of Bayonne, William Keegan of Trenton, Sidney E. Samuelson of Newton, I. M. Hirshblond of Toms River, Leo Juskowitz of New Brunswick, Leon Brandmaker and Jacob Unger of Newark, E. Thornton Kelly of Palisades, Peter Kaliakman of Gloucester, Lew Peizor of Audubon, Ben Hatney of Riverside and Joe Marick of Bordentown from journeying many miles to attend this memorable session.

Pete Adams will be the host of the board when it will next convene in Paterson on November 19.

British Company Formed; Will Build Studios and Produce Big Pictures for World Markets

BRITISH NATIONAL PICTURES, LTD., a newly organized company, announced on November 3, plans to build studios near London as part of a campaign to produce motion pictures in England to compete with American pictures.

George T. Eaton, a retired Australian cattle dealer, is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the company. The managing director is J. D. Williams, founder and for many years general manager of First National Pictures. Mr. Williams is the only American connected with the firm, all the other officials being English, and the capital is all English.

A statement set forth the fact that English stars and stories will be employed, although when renting producers use the studios the producers may use any stars they desire.

Mr. Eaton announced that he is financing the company to the extent of $250,000, which sum, he said, would assure the building of the first studio. Stock will be sold to the public later. The company's plans include the purchase of 100 acres, on which eight studios are to be centralized for the use of independent producers, this being part of a scheme to encourage and assist British productions. The studios are to be larger than any of those in Hollywood or any other of the American motion picture centres. Mr. Eaton said he expected the first studio to be completed within three months and the first picture to be finished within four or five months.

Mr. Williams, speaking at a luncheon today, said there is a demand in the United States for English films, which could be made cheaper in England than in America. He said he hoped to distribute the company's films through 14,000 independent theatre proprietors in the United States who are eager to show a certain number of foreign films as drawing cards.

Incorporations

Seven companies incorporated to enter the motion picture business in New York State during the past week. While three of the companies did not state the amount of capitalization, the seven remaining companies revealed capitalization of comparatively low amounts. The newly formed companies included the following: International Film Arts Guild, Inc., $5,000, Symon Gould, Abraham I. Menin, New York City; Irving Caesar, Brooklyn; Boulevard Theatre Corporation, $10,000, Elias Mayer, Louis Schneider, Maxwell Maged, New York City; Colony Theatre, Inc., $10,000, Frank Rusnalem, Max Amsterdam, Isidor Weiss, Brooklyn; the Charmont Theatre Guild, Inc., $10,000, A. W. Fauci, Bernard Gagliano, N. F. Restucci, New York City; Culver Export Corporation, David O. Decker, Sydney S. Braunberg, Andrew Bellanca, New York City.

"Joyous Max" and Wife Die Together; Cuneo a Suicide

Max Linder, famous film comedian, and his wife committed suicide recently. "Joyous Max's" third attempt was successful. Last year in Vienna and this year in Switzerland he tried it, as a result of nervous depression. Once his wife was found unconscious beside him. According to the coroner, Max gave his wife a sleeping potion of veronal and opened her veins with a knife. Then he opened his own veins. Just a week before the Linders had seen the film "Quo Vadis," in which Petronius and Eunice bleed themselves to death. It is thought that this scene gave "Joyous Max" his inspiration. And he was rich and in love with his wife, with whom he eloped three years ago. She was Mlle. Peters, daughter of a wealthy Parisian restaurant owner.

There also has been a suicide in the film colony in Hollywood. Lester H. Cuneo, 37 years old, a director and actor, died of a pistol wound which the police called self-inflicted. He had quarreled with his wife and she had filed a suit for divorce. He was a native of Oklahoma and attended Northwestern University.

Treatment of Animals In Studio Lauded By Association

The care used in motion picture studios in protecting animals from harm has won for motion pictures the friendship of one of America's strongest organizations.

The American Humane Association, which is the national body made up of important societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals, has extended high praise to the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president, for the comprehensive work of the organization in preventing cruelty to animals.

The American Humane Association, at its annual meeting in Toledo recently, held up the Hays Organization as "a guide and example to all other interests and organ: tions responsible for the care, safety humane treatment of animals."

Sheehan Signing Up Stars as Big Mid-Season Pictures Are Launched

RENEWAL of production activities in a volume that surpasses anything the big Fox Film West Coast Studio has witnessed this season has followed the appearance there of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the corporation.

Worn out as the phrase "galaxy of stars" is, it is the only one that can do justice to the lineup of stars and featured players the Fox executive has "OK'd" for the important group of mid-season releases he has launched in work.

Betty Compson, Matt Moore, Clara Bow, Bert Lytell, Vivian Oakland, Earle Williams, Nigel De Brullier, Frank Keenan, Huntley Gordon, Herbert Rawlinson, Vera Lewis, Grant Withers, Stanton Heck, Reed House, Will Walling, Walter Pidgeon, Rose Blossom, Charles Lane, Roy Atwill, Francis MacDonald, Kathleen Myers, Nina Romona, Gladys Brockwell, Warner Oland, John Patrick, Oliver Hardy, Jacques Rollens, Gustave Van Seyferitz, Carolynne Snowden, Frank Currier and Virginia Madison are some of the real box-office names Mr. Sheehan has had Casting Director James Ryan sign up to supplement the Fox stock company's own group of contract stars and players.

These players will be distributed in leading and supporting roles in "The First Year," which Frank Borzage is directing: "The Peacemaker," a Buck Jones starring vehicle over which W. S. Van Dyke is wielding the megaphone; "The Golden Butterfly," being directed by John Griffith Wray; "Daybreak," a Rowland V. Lee production; "Palace of Pleasure," which Emmett Flynn will direct, and the modern sequence of "The Ancient Mariner," which Chester Bennett was lured back from other business to supervise in his own brilliant way.

Since the original announcement two important changes have been made in the cast of "The First Year." Frank Currier has been cast in the role of Dr. Myron Livingston instead of J. Farrell MacDonald and Virginia Madison will be Mrs. Livingston instead of Emily Fitzroy. These changes were made necessary by the fact that both the supplanted players were tied up with other directors who could not spare them. J. Farrell, for instance, is out on location, hundreds of miles from Hollywood with John Ford making "Three Bad Men." He is one of the bad fellows and as might be expected is seldom "out of the picture."

The rest of "The First Year" cast remains as originally announced. Matt Moore is Tom Tucker, Kathryn Perry will cease being Helen in the Fox Married Life Series long enough to be Grace Livingston in the Borzage production, John Patrick is Dick Loring, Frank Cooley is Pa Livingston, Margaret Livingston is Mrs. Barstown and Carolynne Snowden is Hattie.

The little girl whose name describes her so well, Rose Blossom, was secured to be Buck Jones' leading lady in "The Peacemaker." This is the sixth starring vehicle of the ace of western stars for the 1925-26 season. The others who will support Buck in this production are Will Walling, Reed House, Stanton Heck, Grant Withers, Kathleen Myers, Marion Harlan, Oliver Hardy and Jay Hunt.

For "The Golden Butterfly," a story which points out the folly of following the crowd in the Game of Life, there has been assigned Director Wray the following al-star aggregation: Alma Rubens, Bert Lytell, Herbert Rawlinson, Frank Keenan, Vera Lewis, Carolynne Snowden and Huntley Gordon. This cast speaks for itself. Every name in it has box-office drawing power. Verily, this will be a production for which to hold out some playdates.

As a starter for "Daybreak," Rowland V. Lee's production, the following incomparable players have been cast: Jacqueline Logan, Lou Tellegen, Roy Atwill, Walter Pidgeon, Gustave von Seyferitz and Charles Lane. The others will be announced later. "Daybreak" is an adaption of the sensational New York and London stage success, "The Outsider."

Although by this time a reader might think there were no more players left for Emmett Flynn's production "Palace of Pleasure" such is not the case. Emmett must have a pull with Mr. Ryan, the casting director, for here are the cinema brilliants he had assigned to his latest: Betty Compson, Edmund Lowe, Francis McDonald, Nina Romano, Warner Oland, Harvey Clark, Sammie Blum and George Seigman. And there are more to come.

"Palace of Pleasure" is based on "Lola," a play by Adolf Paul. Lola Montez (played by Betty Compson) was one of the most colorful figures in Europe in the Nineteenth Century. She was an Irish girl who posed as a Spanish dancer and left a trail of hearts and political intrigue behind her that puts DuBarry to shame.

For the modern sequence of "The Ancient Mariner" the splendid cast of the Henry Otto fantasy sequence has been supplemented by the addition of Leslie Fenton, Margaret Livingston, Clara Bow, Nigel De Brullier, Earle Williams and Hallam Cooley. Add Paul Panzer, who plays the title role, Vivian Oakland and Gladys Brockwell to these and you have a cast pretentious enough in itself to carry any production.

And the Fox production activities do not cease with the foregoing. Tom Mix, having finished "The Best Bad Man" on the day Mr. Sheehan arrived, is now lining up his forces preparatory to starting on another of his starring vehicles titled "My Own Pal." This will be a typical Mix production with a strong cast of box-office favorites.

On the comedy lot George Marshall, supervisor of all Fox two-reelers, has every one of his unexcelled laugh directors going at top speed. And in addition to that George will have a surprise announcement about something big for the trade in a day or so.

Sax Will Make 12 Gothams As Scheduled; Last 4 in Work

BEFORE leaving for California last week, Sam Sax of Gotham Production and president of Lumas Film Company, took exception to rumors circulated that various independent producing and distributing concerns were about to curtail production and fail to make delivery on pictures already announced.

"You can state most emphatically for me," said Mr. Sax, "that the twelve Gotham Productions to be distributed by me through Lumas Film Corporation will be delivered on or before the release date assigned each picture.

"Our December and January releases are now in the vaults and may be secured by our regional distributors ten weeks in advance if they so desire. We are also four or five weeks ahead on our advertising accessories and gaining more time with each succeeding production.

"This does not imply that we are feverishly rushing to grind out pictures. It simply means that we have a most efficient production organization, working smoothly and without friction. My purpose in going to California at this time is to put the final four of the present series of twelve into production and also to lay the foundation plans for production for 1926-27. These plans will be announced in good time and when they are announced they will be definite and not subject to any radical change. The changes will be made in advance and not after so that the exhibitor and exchange man may know exactly what he is buying and be sure of getting it."

Seattle Exhibitor Smashes All Records with "Unholy Three"

UNSOLICITED reports from enthusiastic exhibitors testifying as to the steadily improving quality of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product continue to be received by exchanges throughout the country. The most recent testimonial received by M-G-M's Seattle, Wash., exchange, comes from the Winter Garden in Seattle.

"At the time we contracted for the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product," writes Manager Frank Edwards of the Winter Garden, "we were very skeptical as to the results of this move on account of our having enjoyed such phenomenal success at an established lower rate of admission.

"We feel that we should let you know that our new policy has been a complete success. We are just finishing a four-day run on 'The Unholy Three,' and we are pleased to say that it has smashed every existing record.

"From the trade journals we notice that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product is proving phenomenally successful all over the country, and we want to assure you that it has certainly done its bit for us."

"The Unholy Three" is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production directed by Tod Browning from the Tod Robbins story adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young. Lon Chaney and Mae Busch are the featured players.

Books Biblical Picture

Eastman Theatre, Rochester, Plays "Bethlehem" First of Pathe's New Biblical Series "A Pilgrimage to Palestine"

"Bethlehem," the first of the new Pathe Biblical series, "A Pilgrimage to Palestine," has been booked for early showing by the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, which is famed for its fine programs.

In acquiring this series Pathe believed that exhibitors will welcome the opportunity to book a series of single-reel pictures of this high character. These subjects are specially suitable for showing during the Christmas season, dealing as they do with the locales of Christ's activities from His birth, through His early and later ministry up until His death upon the cross.

Altogether twenty subjects of this series will be available to exhibitors during the forthcoming months.

"The Holy Land Film Company, of Cincinnati, are the producers of "A Pilgrimage to Palestine" series.

The company but recently finished photography on another Zangwill play, "We Moderns," as a stellar vehicle for Colleen Moore.

Contracts have just been closed by First National covering the purchase of the motion picture rights of "The River," a play by Patrick Hastings.

BRENDA BOND

The young Boston society girl, has been signed to play the lead opposite Johnny Hines in "Rainbow Riley," Mr. Hines' forthcoming First National release.

Beautiful Press Book

80 Page Publication on "The Sky Rocket" Starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce, A Work of Art

"The Sky Rocket," starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce, the picture in which "Peggy the beautiful" makes her screen debut, will have the largest campaign or press book ever issued on any single motion picture in the history of the industry.

It was originally planned by Robert E. Welsh, director of advertising and publicity for Associated Exhibitors, to release a de luxe press book in twenty-four pages but after giving the matter further thought he decided to enlarge the book in keeping with the importance of the production.

The book will be a de luxe affair, leather bound with ribbon stitching. Thirty-two pages of the book will be devoted to publicity stories while thirty-two pages will consist of newspaper advertising copy. In the straight line drawing of "The Sky Rocket" ads, Mr. Welsh has struck a new line of thought. In the past it has been the custom to select scenes from the picture for this purpose, but in this case nothing but original drawings by famous artists will be used.

The first eight pages of the book will be devoted to introductions and indorsements with the next eight pages comprising special newspaper serial articles on beauty and fashions. Eight pages will be devoted to posters and accessories.

According to advices rceeived by Oscar Price, president of the Associated Exhibitors, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, now resting in Paris following the completion of her first screen vehicle, "The Sky Rocket," will return to America to start her second picture before the first of the year.

"Steel Preferred" Completed

Actual camera work on "Steel Preferred," the new Metropolitan picture for release through Producers Distributing Corp., has been completed and this production is now being edited for early release. Walter Anthony, prominent journalist and title specialist, has ben engaged to write the titles.

POLA NEGRI

As the colorful "Carlota Villalon" in "Flower of the Night," the distinguished Paramount star has one of her choicest roles.

IN "THE PONY EXPRESS" ERNEST TORRENCE has the role of a blacksmith who is also a minister. As usual, Mr. Torrence scores one of the biggest hits of the Paramount success.

Screen Play as Monument To Memory of Anna Held

A SCREEN play that will also be a monument to a famous actress is what Tod Browning, noted director, is to endeavor to make out of Lon Chaney's forthcoming starring vehicle, "The Mocking Bird," based on an original story by Mr. Browning. Its heroine, played by Renee Adoree, will represent Anna Held as she was at the start of her career, when she sang her way to fame from the stages of cheap London music halls.

Both Browning and Chaney knew Anna Held intimately, and they have crowded the heroine's part with little touches which are real personal reminiscences of the French comedienne. The play will be staged at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios on an elaborate scale.

"Both Mr. Chaney and myself," said Browning, "are enthusiastic over the idea of painting a picture of the real Anna Held as a tribute to one of the best and noblest women the speaking stage ever knew. We both knew her well—knew the tragedy that underlay her life, her goodness to all about her, and the determined struggle that won her fame.

"Anna Held was known to the world as a frivolous beauty; but to us who knew her she was one of the noblest women the stage has ever known. This is the woman we shall try to show—the real Anna Held. We hope that the picture will, in a way, be a sort of monument to her; a sincere tribute from two old friends and ardent admirers."

A big cast, including Lew Cody, will be augmented by a number of professional vaudeville stars for the new picture, production on which will start shortly. Waldemar Young has made the screen adaptation.

Five More Specials to Come From F. B. O. Western Plant

F. B. O. still has five more specials to produce before it completes its current program, according to advices from the F. B. O. Studios in Hollywood.

Among the remaining features will be a racing melodrama called "The King of the Turf," by John Brownell. Work will begin in two weeks, it is stated. "The King of the Turf" will treat of the drama of the race course from a new angle.

Other big features will be two stories by Laura Jean Libby, to whose work F. B. O. has exclusive screen producing rights. They are "When His Love Grew Cold" and "A Poor Girl's Romance." The first named will be launched in a week with an all star cast.

Others will be "The Isle of Retribution" by Edison Marshall and Emory Johnson also will contribute another melodrama, the title of which is being withheld.

THE DAZZLING "DREAM SCENE" in Gloria Swanson's forthcoming Paramount picture, "Stage Struck." Gloria is an actress on an Ohio River show boat, but any aspiring girl is permitted to dream of the success that comes after long years of hard work. This is one of the most exquisite scenes in any Gloria Swanson picture.

First National's "Classified" Praised by Big Newspapers

FROM all sides come the most enthusiastic reports of the reception being accorded First National's latest Corinne Griffith production, "Classified," that is surpassing any figures heretofore set by this popular star at first run theatres.

Taken from Edna Ferber's beautifully human story of New York life, it offers a remarkably effective combination of star, story and author. Released October 11, "Classified" has already established itself as one of the strongest pictures that an exhibitor can book, judging from reports received by First National from the key cities.

Following are comments from some of the more important newspapers:

The News, Cleveland: "Produced with an imagination and dexterity so sadly lacking in many a photoplay, it becomes cleaner, adroit and grown up in its every phrase. It is filled with those little subtle touches which make one remember it long after leaving the theatre."

Times-Star, Cincinnati: "'Classified,' First National's picturization of Edna Ferber's story, makes excellent screen entertainment. We do not know how closely it follows the original, but the scenario contains plenty of action well seasoned with modern romance. And best of all it has as its star Corinne Griffith, than whom there is no lovelier feminine vision on the silver sheet."

Commercial Tribune, Cincinnati: "Corinne Griffith and Edna Ferber combine in making 'Classified' one of the most entertaining pictures shown here in some time. And in the matter of players—well, Corinne Griffith wuold make any picture in which she appeared."

H. P. Lieber of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, wired: "'Last week we played Corinne Griffith in 'Classified' and entertained thirty-eight thousand happy patrons and when we say entertained we don't mean maybe. Everybody raved about this one. It is immense."

The manager of the Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, reports that "the picture was very well received by patrons and a remarkable business was done. Corinne Griffith is a great favorite with many. In this picture she is at her best and also has a very good supporting cast.'"

New Rayart Pictures

Johnston Announces Completion of Four Big Productions—Five Others in Works

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures, who is in Los Angeles in the interest of his firm, announces the completion of the following features during his vacation in California. "The Fighting Thoroughbreds," a race track fight story with Billy Sulivan; "The Midnight Limited," a melodrama with Gaston Glass, Wanda Hawley and Richard Holt. "'Hold Everything" (temporary title) starring Billy West; and "Racing Romance," starring Reed Howes, with Virginia Browne Faire as leading lady.

The following pictures are now being prepared for immediate production: "The High Flyer," an aeroplane story starring Reed Howes; "The Windjammer," a circus story starring Billy Sullivan; "The Salseman," a feature comedy starring Billy West; and "Bride and Gloom," a Butterfly Comedy starring Gloria Joy. While in California, Mr. Johnston will also select casts for the next melodrama of the Rayart series which will probably be "The Last Alarm."

Mr. Johnston also announced the signing last week of a contract for Jack Perrin to be retained on the Rayart program for the season of 1926-7 during which season he will make eight pictures from published stories. The picture will be semi-western in nature and production will start in April. Perrin still has two pictures to make for the current season's program for Rayart.

Lubitsch Seeks Citizenship

Ernst Lubitsch, the Warner Bros. director, is to become a full-fledged American citizen. He has taken out his first papers and is eagerly awaiting the day when he will officially proclaimed a genuine member of Uncle Sam's household. In introducing Lubitsch to President Coolidge at the White House, last week Jack Connolly, who represents the Hays organization at the capital, mentioned the director's eagerness to become a citizen, and Lubitsch was certain he received a firmer pressure of the hand and a broader smile from the Chief Executive as Mr. Coolidge wished him "the best of luck in this country."

Gotham Productions Score Big Success with British Public

ALTHOUGH a comparative newcomer to the English market, Gotham productions have scored a striking hit with the British public. The latest evidence of this being contained in a recent cablegram from Herbert Case Hoagland of Stoll Films Ltd., British distributors of the new Gotham Twelve, to Sam Sax, producer of the Gothams. Mr. Case cables: "Trade Showings First Four Gothams Great Success Everybody Enthusiastic How Many More Productions Ready Exhibitors Asking For Immediate Bookings."

The four productions referred to in the cablegram being: "The Overland Limited," "The Police Patrol," "A Little Girl In A Big City" and "His Master's Voice."

The British trade press also gave these productions very favorable reviews and the same points of excellence that appealed in the critics and the public in the U. S. also were favored in England.

When Stoll Films Ltd. arranged for the British distribution of the Gotham Product with the Inter-Film Co., who control all distribution rights outside the U. S. and Canada, it was the intention of the British organization to make the first Gotham release for next March. So quickly did the British exhibitors acclaim the production, however, that an immediate release was decided upon.

Prints of the second four in the Gotham twelve, "The Part Time Wife," "One of the Bravest," "The Shadow on the Wall" and "The Phantom of the Forest" are being forwarded to Europe now with the final four to be delivered within the next few weeks.

Columbia Pictures Corporation Officials Point Out Causes of Unrest in Industry

JOE BRANDT, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation, and Jack Cohn, treasurer of this independent producing company, last week issued a joint statement in which they point out the existence of unrest in the industry due to "machine made products" and "broken promises by producers" and demanding "fewer and better pictures."

The joint statement follows:

"The present chaotic conditions in the motion picture industry are due to the broken promises of producers. Never in the history of motion pictures has such a situation confronted the exhibitors as at the close of the 1925-1926 season, and the producers are, in a large measure, entirely to blame for a situation which has forced many exhibitors into a position where they feel unable to depend on, and have an entire lack of confidence in, the promises of producers to deliver the number of pictures they promised to produce at the beginning of the current year.

"The overzealous and avaricious attitude on the part of some of the producing organizations at the beginning of the season in announcing a formidable production program has been responsible for lulling a great many exhibitors into a sense of confidence and false security which has been ruthlessly destroyed in many cases before half the season was over by the retrenchment on the part of producers. Announcements of big production programs which have later been cut down by as much as 50 per cent, in some instances, has wrought havoc among the exhibitors dependent upon these companies for their play dates.

"The officials of the Columbia Pictures Corporation, are in the unique and secure position of being one of the few producing companies to have kept absolute faith with the exhibitors in producing our full quota of eighteen pictures, as announced at the beginning of the present season, and this organization is prepared to back up the statement by the fact that they now have in their possession the negatives of the eighteen pictures scheduled for release. And these pictures were made in spite of the fact that exhibitors, who at the beginning of the season, promised their whole-hearted cooperation, had in a sense withheld some of their support and given the business that they had promised Columbia to other organizations.

"It must not be gathered from this statement that the officials of the Columbia Pictures Corporation, desire any erroneous impression formed that they did not get their share of the bookings from the exhibitors this year. Every exhibitor who knew his business realized the box office value of Columbia Pictures with the result that they included the entire Columbia program in their list of bookings, realizing that the support of worthwhile independent producers was a means to safeguard their interests no matter what political or business move the non-independent organizations made.

"That the producers have learned the error of their ways is evidenced by the fact that announcements have already been made by many of the companies that they will not announce as many pictures for production for the coming year as they did at the beginning of the present season. They have come to realize that promising to throw on the market more pictures than can possibly be consumed has brought about a condition whereby not only the producers' income has considerably suffered but the returns of the exhibitors have also been materially curtailed, by reason of forcing the exhibitor to sign up for more pictures than he needed in order to get a few leaders among exhibitors to create a demand for production that they only hope to make. In this is the crux of the whole situation. Instead of offering fair competition among all the large motion picture producing concerns, they adopted this method of securing an outlet for product than common sense should have told them would mean flooding the market with surplus product.

"Supply and demand must govern every business and the picture industry is no different from any other industry and this is the time for producers to ponder over the conditions as they were this year and realize that they must be conservative in their estimate of productions to be made in future. Once they have announced the number of pictures they should go through. The time to retrench is at the beginning of, not in the middle of, or at the end of the season.

"The spirit of fair play must be more evident next year than ever before as the unnatural and unhealthy competition which was prevalent this year has forced upon many producers the conclusion that less picture of a better calibre will bring in more revenue to the exhibitor and more revenue to the producer—the public demand for better pictures has been blazoned forth in the newspapers, and it behooves the producer to read the handwriting on the wall and get out of the system of machine-made pictures and produce fewer pictures but of better quality.

"While speaking of fair play, it is not amiss to refer to the developments in the last few weeks. The big producers have realized what the exhibitors failed to realize when independent productions were offered them at the beginning of the year. The general merit of independent productions prove beyond doubt that the brains of the motion picture industry were well distributed among independent producers, and that they were as capable of making better productions consistently than at any other time.

"As proof of this statement, comes the negotiations by the large companies for the men who have put the independent market on its feet this year. However, independent producers have come to realize that with the kind of competition they are offering the larger producing concerns, the exhibitors will, without doubt, eagerly look forward to independent pictures to release them from the conditions heretofore mentioned in which they were to a large extent responsible themselves."

JOE BRANDT

President of Columbia Pictures Corporation, reports this week on the completed programme of Columbia's eighteen productions for the 1925-26 season, and comments, somewhat caustically, on the conditions prevailing throughout the industry.

JACK COHN

Vice-President of Columbia Pictures Corporation, joins Mr. Brandt in a statement setting forth the views of these independent producers regarding the conditions existing today throughout the motion picture industry.

Tyler's Next for F. B. O.

"The Wyoming Wildcat" has been selected for the permanent title on Tom Tyler's next F. B. O. production, according to announcement made at the lot. Work has just been begun on the picture under the direction of Robert De Lacey. Virginia Southern, Tom Delmar, Billy Bennett and others support the star. The picture was formerly called "The Rolling Stone."

The story is an original by Percy Heath. Arthur Statter did the adaptation and continuity.

Christie Consummates Deal For Davis's "Nervous Wreck"

THE long pending negotiations for the purchase of the screen rights to Owen Davis's famous stage comedy "The Nervous Wreck" were consummated this week, according to an official announcement from Producers Distributing Corporation in which Charles and Al Christie are reported as securing the screen rights.

Al Christie's estimate of "The Nervous Wreck" as the most valuable piece of property offered by the stage in recent years, is justified by the fact that this farce, after running to capacity business for a solid year at the Sam Harris Theatre in New York, and for almost the same period at the Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles, is now being presented in almost every civilized country throughout the world.

Four road companies have presented the play in every important city in the United States, and during the past year, five hundred rights have been sold for its presentation by stock companies.

During the past season, in London, England, it proved the biggest success in recent years, and in international theatrical circles, "The Nervous Wreck" is looked upon as the biggest farccial success in the past five years.

"The Nervous Wreck" was first written as a novel by E. J. Rath, and prior to its stage triumphs it enjoyed a remarkably big sale as a two-dollar book. Following its dramatization by Owen Davis and its successful presentation on the stage, the story was republished by Grosset & Dunlap and its current sales have reached enormous figures.

Al Christie will produce the story as an elaborate feature for release through Producers Distributing Corporation following "Madam Behave."

HOBART HENLEY

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, who is responsible for a long list of really big screen successes for this house (as well as others), is now at work on "Free Lips," Norma Shearer's forthcoming starring vehicle. Lew Cody again plays opposite the beautiful M.-G.-M. star.

F. B. O. Is in Home Stretch Of Its 1925-26 Production

WITH the completion of "The Midnight Flyer" F. O. B. has swung into the home stretch of its big 1925-26 production program. From now until early spring the big plant at Melrose avenue and Gower street Los Angeles, will function at full blast, not only with F. O. B.'s own units but with companies of some of the most prominent independent stars and producers, including Douglas McLean, Larry Semon, S. S. Hutchinson, Howard Estabrook and Monty Banks.

Feature productions will continue to occupy the attention of F. O. B. executives and directors. Harmon Weight, director of "Drusilla With a Million," is filming oil flood scenes for "Flaming Waters," featuring Mary Carr, Malcolm McGregor and Pauline Garon. J. Grubb Alexander is writing the continuity for "The King of the Turf," formerly called "The Futurity Winner," a racing melodrama by Louis Joseph Vance and John Brownell. Work also is progressing on scripts for two Laura Jean Libbey stories, "When His Love Grew Cold" and "A Poor Girl's Romance," both of which will shortly be filmed. Emory Johnson also is planning another melodrama to follow his newspaper drama, "The Last Edition," just completed.

With the return of Evelyn Brent from her vacation in New York, it was announced by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the studio, that she would start work this week on "A Broadway Lady," a romance of the New York show world. It is by Fred Kennedy Myton. Maurice Flynn will start work in a few days on Gerald Beaumont's very interesting story, "The Kitten and the King."

Fred Thomson has completed "All Round Frying Pan" and next week starts "The Tough Guy" (tentative). Dick Talmadge is expected shortly to return from New York to resume work on his long term contract with F. B. O. Tom Tyler is galloping through his latest western feature, "The Wyoming Wildcat."

F. O. B. also is active in the short subject field. Series will shortly be filmed from stories provided by Sam Hellman and H. C. Witwer and work is progressing on the "Mazie" series by Nell Martin, which stars Alberta Vaughn.

"The Barrier" Company

Pat Harmon has joined the cast of Rex Beach's "The Barrier," now in production at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios under the direction of George Hill. Harmon will have the role of the first mate. The company, which includes Norman Kerry, Henry B. Walthall, Lionel Barrymore, Marceline Day, Bert Woodruff and George Cooper, has left Culver City for Balboa Beach, where an entire village has been erected for special shots. Harvey Gates adapted the Beach novel to the screen.

Henabery Assigned to Direct Monty Banks in "Play Safe"

JOSEPH HENABERY has been assigned to direct Monty Banks in a six reel comedy entitled "Play Safe" which will be released through Associated Exhibitors, Inc. This comedy, which is a Howard Estabrook presentation, is the first in a new series of comedy-drama-thrill features which are scheduled for release through the company of which Oscar Price is president.

"Play Safe" marks Mr. Henabery's return to his earlier style of directing. He will be remembered for such successes of this calibre as "Say, Young Fellow," "The Man From Painted Post" and especially for "His Majesty, the American" which was one of Douglas Fairbanks' early starring vehicles.

"The Pinch Hitter" and "The Clodhopper," both starring Glen Hunter, are Mr. Henabery's latest work. These pictures are listed with Associated Exhibitors' "Triumphant Thirty" and their release dates have already been announced.

New Billy West Feature

Billy West has finished his second five-reel feature, in which he plays the leading role, and it is to be released by Ray Johnston on the Rayart program. The title for the present is "Oh, Horace!" The supporting cast includes Emily Fitzroy, Clara Horton, Yvonne Hughes, Bill Dyer, Stanton Heck, John J. Richardson, George Perriault, Joe Bonner, Lon Poff, Nelson McDowell and Dorothy Vernon. Jack Nelson directed.

Shooting Big Outdoor Scenes For Fox's "The Golden Strain"

LED by Victor Schertzinger, more than 600 inhabitants of the Hollywood film colony have left for the wilds of Arizona where the outdoor scenes of what promises to be Schertzinger's greatest picture, "The Golden Strain," will be filmed.

Much of the picture will be shot at the historic 10th Cavalry Post and the troops will have an important part in the production. In addition to the cavalry, Schertzinger will employ 1,000 Apache Indians in many of the sequences.

Incidentally, "The Golden Strain" is the first of four stories by Mr. Kyne, published in the Cosmopolitan magazine, which have been purchased by Fox Films. The scenario was written by Eve Unsell and with Schertzinger's master hand directing, the success of "The Golden Strain," from a box-office standpoint, seems assured.

De Mille and Metropolitan Studios Merge; Extensive Program Planned

AS a preliminary step to a most extensive program for the 1926-27 season, official announcement has just been made of the consolidation of the Cecil De Mille Studio at Culver City and the Metropolitan Studio in Hollywood with the production activities and the officers of both studios unified under Cecil B. De Mille.

Plans for this amalgamation which have been under discussion for some time, were perfected this week upon the arrival in Los Angeles of John C. Flinn, general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, and president of Metropolitan Pictures Corporation. The consolidation brings under Cecil De Mille's general supervision a program of between forty and fifty features to be released during the 1926-27 season by Producers Distributing Corporation.

William Sistrom, general manager of the Metropolitan Studios, will assume the general management of the consolidated organization. The appointment of Sistrom to this position will allow De Mille greater freedom for concentration on his personally directed independent pictures, the second of which will be "The Volga Boatman" on which De Mille is planning to start immediately.

Fred Kley, heretofore general manager of the De Mille Studio, has been apointed personal representative of De Mille in the field of distribution and will divide his time between Los Angeles and New York. Kley's wide acquaintance in all branches of the industry qualifies him exceptionally for this work. The executive committee of Metropolitan Pictures Corporation consisting of Messrs. Charles and Al Christie and John C. Flinn, will extend its business supervision to embrace all the activities of the combined studios.

Under the plans of the consolidation, Cecil De Mille's name will be withdrawn from all productions excepting those which he personally directs, as soon as the 1925-26 schedule of pictures is completed. This arrangement will eliminate the confusion in the public mind caused by De Mille's name appearing on both productions made under his supervision and those made under his personal direction. De Mille's present plans call for three massive personally directed productions. These will carry his name exclusively and all other productions made at either studio will be known as Metropolitan Pictures.

With between forty and fifty productions planned for production under the unification of the two studios, as compared with this year's total of twenty-nine pictures from Metropolitan and De Mille, an increase of approximately eighty per cent in output is indicated for the 1926-27 season. Under the present 1925-26 schedule, seventeen productions are listed to come from the Metropolitan Studios and twelve from the De Mille Studio, with contributions from Christie, Neilan, Stromberg and Sebastian bringing the total to thirty-seven productions on Producers Distributing Corporation program.

The consolidation of the facilities and the executive control of the De Mille and the Metropolitan Studios marks another interesting development in the rapid and progressive affairs of Producers Distributing Corporation since its reorganization on January 1, 1924, In less than two years this organization has come from a standing start and a position in the background of the indusrty to a place among the foremost releasing companies.

In January of this year, Cecil De Mille acquired a large interest in Producers Distributing Corporation and this resulted in producing affiliations that gave the company the highest grade of product. Only a few months ago, Metropolitan Pictures Corporation was formed and the Hollywood Studios acquired for the production of Metropolitan Pictures, George Melford and Frances Marion Productions for release through Producers Distributing Corporation. These productions augmenting the features from Al Christie, A. H. Sebastian, and Marshall Neilan, placed Producers Distributing Corporation in a powerful position in the independent field; and now under the consolidation of two great producing plants this position is made still more dominant.

I. E. Chadwick Returning from Busy Coast-to-Coast Trip

WITH the current season having reached the halfway mark, Chadwick Pictures Corporation finds itself with nine of its scheduled features already released, two in production, almost completed, and the remainder following very closely, one after the other, within the final two months of the year. The distributed pictures have met with nation-wide success and the exhibitors are clamoring for more.

I. E. Chadwick, president of the Chadwick Pictures Corporation, the Merit Film Exchange, and the Independent Producers Association, is returning this week from Hollywood and his coast to coast trip, during which he witnessed and supervised production activities of his producing units in Hollywood and thoroughly surveyed the field of independent distribution and exhibition in the key-cities of the country. Chadwick has placed his successes in the independent market and is bringing the latest completed production, "The Count of Luxembourg," with an all-star cast making it one of the finest pictures made by the company George Walsh has the title role.

The West Coast force at present are working on "The Transcontinental Limited," a railroad romance guaranteed by its prize cast to be one of the most interesting pictures in many years. Johnnie Walker, Mary Carr, Eugenie Gilbert and Alec Francis have roles of importance, and the successful work of these stars in the past points to an unusually fine film.

"The Bells," starring Lionel Barrymore; "Winning the Futurity," and the remainder of the George Walsh series, will close a year of hard work for Mr. Chadwick and his co-workers.

"Do Clothes Make the Woman?" F.B.O. Picture Starring Mrs. Rudolph Valentino

"DO CLOTHES MAKE THE WOMAN?" has been selected as the title of the picture which F. B. O. will produce in the East, starring Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, professionally known as Natacha Rambova.

Harry O. Hoyt, who will direct with Daniel Carson Goodman, under whose personal supervision the film will be produced, is at work on the continuity. Mrs. Valentino sailed on Election Day from Cherbourg on the S. S. Leviathan, and expects to arrive in New York next Monday. Work will start as soon as the complete cast has been assembled.

Mrs. Valentino has been affiliated with the motion picture industry for many years. She recently produced a very beautiful picture called "What Price Beauty?"

Her decision to return to the screen as a star was more or less expected by the Hollywood and New York film colonies. Mrs. Valentino is regarded as an individualist of high talents and originality.

GERTRUDE OLMSTEAD
Is always of the greatest assistance to the photographer, and invariably manages to get something unique out of her poses. She recently completed her role in "Time, the Comedian," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Film Technical Advisor

Terry Spencer, a lieutenant in the English army during the World War, and later with ths same organization in Egypt, has been re-engaged by Scott R. Beal, production manager of the Corinne Griffith Productions, in the capacity of technical advisor for "Mlle. Modiste."

Mr. Spencer acted as technical advisor on "Caesar's Wife," recently completed by the First National star. Many of the sequences of this production were laid in Egypt.

Pick Release Title

"The Splendid Crime" has been selected as the final and release title of "Magpie," William de Mille's original story which he is producing for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton are featured in the attraction.

Four Small Town Houses Play "Hell's Highroad" Day and Date

SIMULTANEOUS runs at a number of theatres in big cities are not new nor unusual, but to practically monopolize the screens in a small city, as recently accomplished in Rockford, Ill., by Producers Distributing Corporation is a novelty in small town showmanship and a stunt that attracted the widest attention.

Under a combined booking agreement, four theatres in Rockford, the Dreamland, the Strand, the Columbia and the Family, presented Cecil B. de Mille's first independent picture, "Hell's Highroad" simultaneously after an advertising campaign in which exceptionally clever "institutional" copy was used to herald the unusual showing.

The four theatres, situated at conveniently reached points of the city, advertised the four simultaneous showings as a desire on their part to present "Hell's Highroad" at the one time in several theatres in order to accommodate the great number of people who wanted to see it, and at the same time permit everyone to view the production without the inconvenience of travel.

The stunt proved a big success and at a later date it may be repeated with other productions released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

Production Now Resumed at First National's N. Y. Studio

AFTER a four-weeks period of inactivity production was resumed this week at First National's New York studios when "Too Much Money" was started with John Francis Dillon directing.

"Too Much Money" is an adaptation of Israel Zangwill's stage play of the same title. Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson have been brought on from Hollywood to play the featured roles. "Too Much Money" is a story of a man who has enormous wealth and a beautiful wife, but who lacks happiness because the wife devotes her time to society. He conceives the idea of signing his money over to a friend temporarily and facing his pampered wife in the role of a penniless man. This is done and the result makes for a picture which First National executives believe will be one of the best domestic dramas seen on the screen in some time. Stone will be the wealthy husband and Miss Nilsson the pampered wife.

Present plans also call for the start of "Men of Steel," the big steel "special" which will be filmed from an original story by Milton Sills who will also have the starring role in the picture. George Archainbaud will direct under the supervision of Earl Hudson, head of First National's Eastern production units. In the supporting cast will be Doris Kenyon, Mae Allison, Claude Gillingwater, George Fawcett, Victor McLaglen and John Philip Kolb.

"The Midnight Sun" Next Big Universal Picture Completed

WORD comes from Universal City that the last camera work has been completed on "The Midnight Sun," the new big super-production being made by Universal to follow in the footsteps of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom of the Opera." Dimitri Buchowetzki is in charge of the production.

"The Midnight Sun" is being made with an all-star cast, but prominent in the principal roles are several featured players. Laura La Plante heads the cast, in the role of Olga, the prima ballerina of the Imperial Russian Ballet. Pat O'Malley also has a leading role, that of Grand Duke Sergius, of the Imperial Russian family. The story of "The Midnight Sun" deals with court and stage intrigues of Russia in the height of its history, just before the Great War.

Other Principals in Cast

Other principals in the strong cast are George Siegman, Theodore Korloff, Cesare Gravina, Arthur Hoyt, Earl Metcalf and M. Vavitch. Nina Romano also has a prominent role in the picture.

The picture is now in its cutting stage. Universal's leading cutters and editors have been assigned to the task of putting the finishing touches on the big spectacle drama. It is expected that the picture will be finally completed within ten days or two weks.

The action deals with the struggle of the two giants of Russia, the Grand Duke and the banker for the love of Olga.

Warner Bros. to Release Four Productions During November

FOUR feature productions, all of them of a different type will be released by Warner Bros. during November.

"Seven Sinners," starring Marie Prevost and Clive Brook will be the Nov. 7 release. This is an original story by Lewis Milestone and Darryl Francis Zanuck, directed by Mr. Milestone. Supporting Miss Prevost and Mr. Brook are John Patrick, "Heinie" Conklin, Claude Gillingwater, Mathilde Brundage and Fred Kelsey.

On Nov. 21, Lowell Sherman's first picture for Warner Bros. will be released. It is "Satan in Sables," from Bradley King's famous story directed by James Flood. In the cast, beside the famous stage star, are Pauline Garon, John Harron, Gertrude Astor, Frank Butler, Otto Hoffman, Richard Barry, Francis J. McDonald, Frances Raymond, Richard Botsford, Myrna Loy and Don Alvarado.

"Rose of the World," adapted from Kathleen Norris's famous novel, will be released Nov. 21. This was prepared for the screen by Julien Josephson and directed by Harry Beaumont. It has as its star Patsy Ruth Miller, who is supported by Rockliffe Fellowes, Alan Forest, Pauline Garon, Alex Francis, Lydia Knott, Barbara Luddy, Helen Dunbar, Edward Piel, Jr., and Carrie Clark Ward.

"Clash of the Wolves," another Rin-Tin-Tin production, will be the Nov. 28 release. This is an original story by Charles Logue, adapted for the screen by the author and directed by Noel Smith. June Marlowe plays the leading human role and others in the cast are Charles Farrell, Heinie Conklin, Will Walling and Pat Hartigan.

Hutchison to Make Series of Big Pictures for Associated Exhibitors

THE return of Samuel S. Hutchison, pioneer producer, to active production is marked this week by his announcement from the West Coast that he has a budget in excess of $500,000 with which to get underway an elaborate program.

Under the Associated Exhibitors Inc. banner, Hutchison is ready to commence work on the first of his series, a big comedy from the story by Frederick Isham, author of "The Three Live Ghosts," "Nothing But the Truth" and other popular sellers. Hutchison, according to his production manager, Clarence White, has already picked three other laugh features to follow the first which is titled "The Nut Cracker."

Other feature production in his 1925 program broadside are to be made from highly successful stage plays or novels of many editions. These are the work of famous playwrights and authors for which Producer Hutchison has expended thousands of dollars to secure the screen rights. Announcement of their titles and the casts, which will include film celebrities of the highest calibre, will be shortly announced by Production Manager White.

Hutchison has already signed up the leading figures in "The Nut Cracker." He expects to commence "shooting" on his feature comedy within the course of the next few days. Edward Everett Horton has been signed to star in "The Nut Cracker." With him will be co-starred Mae Busch. These two will be supported by an excellent cast including Harry Myers and Tom Ricketts.

Lloyd Ingraham, who has been associated with such stars as Douglas MacLean, for whom he supervised the making of "The Hottentot" and "Going Up," Charles Ray and many other celebrities of the screen in some of their most important productions, has been engaged by Mr. Hutchison to direct "The Nut Cracker."

Ingraham is particularly enthusiastic about "The Nut Cracker," expressing wonderful prospects for this riotous comedy of domestis life wherein Horton essays the role of a henpecked husband in a brokerage office who finally tears himself loose and delves into the most unproarious adventures.

With such men as Ingraham and Clarence White, formerly in a big executive capacity with Film Booking Offices, on his personal staff, Hutchison feels assured that his new unit will achieve the greatest success of any of the film enterprises with which this noted producer has been associated since his earliest relations with the old Mutual company. In this respect, however, he regards more highly than anything else his connection with Associated Exhibitors.

"My connection with Oscar Price's company assures me of the greatest success," Mr. Hutchison states. "I regard that affiliation as primary. With the stars that I have at my command, one of the best directors in the field, an excellent production manager and a wealth of the best books and plays for my screen material. I know that my product will be classed with the very finest in the industry."

The veteran producer believes that there never was a better time for the production of good comedies than today. "I am concentrating on comedies with strong human interest ingredients so as to give them a real starting point and not surrounding them with a lot of unrelated slapstick antics."

Before "The Nut Cracker" is completed work will be commenced on the second of the series of four comedies.

Mr. Hutchison, who formerly produced pictures at Santa Barbara, had until recently been devoting his interest for the past years to other business ties in the Middle West. He produced many of the successes of a decade ago including "Damaged Goods" and "Flying A" pictures.

"The Gold Rush" Plays Day and Date in Penn.

SHOWING Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" day and date at Loew's Colonial, Reading, Pa., and Loew's Regent, Harrisburg, made it possible to put on an effective though similar campaign in each city.

Larry Jacobs, Loew's Colonial, started his campaign a week before the opening with a uniquely worded message to all city officials, from the Mayor down, calling their attention to value of picture entertainment, and to "The Gold Rush" as a live wire tonic for happiness. Brunswick record shops carrying the Chaplin records gave big window displays, as did the Postal Telegraph branches displaying half sheets of congratulatory messages to Chaplin from Hollywood stars.

A well groomed man, wearing Tuxedo clothes, went into the better class stores of all kinds and distributed the Chaplin "Gold Rush" coin. This man also carried invitations to city officials and prominent citizens. He did not carry any sign.

A similar campaign was put on in Harrisburg by Sidney Gates of Loew's Regent. An added feature was the use of spare tires of Yellow Taxis, and the use of a Chaplin imitator leading a mule with mining prospector's kit. In the lobby of the Regent there was a phonograph which played the Chaplin song records as part of the Brunswick tie-up.

New Fairbanks' Picture

Select Cast for "The Black Pirate" Will Be First Star Attempted in Color Photography

Present indications are that the cast for Douglas Fairbanks' forthcoming screen feature, "The Black Pirate," the first photoplay he has attempted in color photography, will be one of quality rather than number. Just now only two women are scheduled to appear in this film—Billie Dove in the leading feminine role, and her maid, not yet selected.

Among the men in the cast are Donald Crisp, who dircted the last Fairbanks offering, "Don Q," and who this time will be seen as a one-armed Scotch pirate, a characterization so cleverly devised as to completely mask his identity. Sam De Grasse, villain, will work his way through the picture in another of his characteristic roles. Anders Randolf, one of the best of the character players, has an interesting part, which unfortunately ends all too soon when he dies early in the film in combat with the star. Others who will be seen to advantage are Roy Coulson, Charles Gorman and Al Mac Quarrie, all of whom had parts in "Don Q" and other Fairbanks productions.

Sherman in "Satan in Sables" Wins Reviewers in New York

LOWELL SHERMAN in the Warner Bros. production, "Satan in Sables," enjoyed a good week recently at Warners' Theatre, and won favorable comments from the New York reviewers. Extracts from some of these follow:

Louella O. Parsons, American: I listened for an opinion from the Warner audience and this is what I heard repeated word for word: "Lowell Sherman is simply grand. I love him in this picture." Mr. Sherman is a good actor and I like him very much. Gertrude Astor, looking very lovely, is a new kind of blonde. Pauline Garon does very well as Colette and John Harron gave a creditable account of himself. I feel in my bones "Satan in Sables' 'is a money-maker.

Alma Talley, Morning Telegraph: A colorful melodrama. James Flood in directing it has invested it with considerable charm. It moves along easily and consistently and there are bright little touches of humor. On the whole it is the sort of picture that Lowell Sherman fans, and audiences in general, will like. The star plays the hero in his usual suave fashion. Pauline Garon is charming as the little dancer. Johnny Harron and Gertrude Astor round out the cast nicely.

Regina Cannon, Evening Graphic: Lowell Sherman, 'twould seem, never steps out of his character. Not that Mr. Sherman is the bad, bad man he portrays in pictures. But his mannerisms, his detached air, his nonchalance and aloofness are all with him off the screen as well as on. It's difficult to criticize his performance when one feels he's just being himself. As Colette little Pauline Garon is a delight. John Harron gives a splendid characterization. He is a very good actor and we predict that it won't be long before he's doing "bigger and better things."

Sun: Mr. Sherman is an actor who can hold an audience. He makes his role continually interesting.

Roxy to Stage "Stella Dallas"

S. L. Rothafel (Roxy), as a special courtesy to Samuel Goldwyn, the producer, will stage and direct the presentation of "Stella Dallas," when it opens at the Apollo Theatre, November 15, for an extended run.

BUSINESS PROSPERITY BRINGS IN U. S. COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY—And if you don't believe this we'll say something anyway. Col. W. J. McIntosh, United States Comptroller of the Currency, and right-hand man to President Coolidge in the latter's efforts to stabilize the financial problems of the country (at the left), visited the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City a few days ago, when he was greeted by Mae Busch, the charming M.-G.-M. player, and Louis B. Mayer and Fred Niblo, the director (at the right).

Added to Cast

John Roche, Stanley Taylor, Carl Stockdale, Arthur Thalaso and Eve Southern have been added to the cast of "The Agony Column," Monte Blue's next starring vehicle for Warner Bros., which is now in production. Miss Southern is to replace Myrna Loy.

Mathew Betz has been selected to play a part in "Nightie Night Nurse," Syd Chaplin's second production on the current Warner schedule. Patsy Ruth Miller is playing opposite Chaplin and among the others in the cast are Gayne Whitman, David Torrence, Edith York and Raymond Wells. Charles Reisner is directing.

Starts Work on "The Cave Man"

Marie Prevost has started work on her next Warner Bros feature, "The Cave Man," with Matt Moore playing opposite. This story by Gellette Burgess was one of the dramatic hits of the stage. Miss Prevost will have such a part as she had in Ernst Lubitsch's "Kiss Me Again," while Matt Moore will be presented in an entirely new type of character.

Starts on "Agony Column"

Dorothy Devore has been cast for the leading role in "The Agony Column," Monte Blue's next starring picture for Warner Bros. Production has been started with Roy Del Ruth directing. The balance of the cast includes Helen Dunbar, Heinie Conklin, Myrna Loy and Otto Hoffman. The story is by Earl Derr Biggers and was adapted for the screen by E. T. Lowe, Jr.

Lewis Added to Cast

Watler P. Lewis, well-known screen player, has been added to the already large cast of "The Green Archer," the new Patheserial now in the making. Lewis has been cast as Coldharbor Smith, owner of a waterfront saloon in this adaptation of Edgar Wallace's novel prepared by Frank Leon Smith and directed by Spencer Bennet.

Belle Bennett Signed for "The Reckless Lady"

Robert Kane has signed Belle Bennett for the title role in "The Reckless Lady," the production he will start immediately following "Bluebeard's Seven Wives." "The Reckless Lady" is by Sir Phillips Gibbs and is one of the best sellers. It will be a first National release.

Howard Higgin has been selected by Mr. Kane to direct "The Reckless Lady" and with Sada Cowan he will also make the screen adaptation.

The supporting cast will include James Kirkwood, Lowell Sherman and possibly Ben Lyon and Dorothy Sebastian.

Arlen's First for Paramount

Michael Arlen's first studio activity for Paramount will be to adapt his story, "The Ace of Cads," as a stellar picture for Adolphe Menjou, it was announced by Hector Turnbull, supervisor of production at Paramount's West Coast studio.

The author's first original story for the screen to be written when he has mastered film technique will be a starring vehicle for Pola Negri, this arrangement having been entered into several months ago between Mr. Arlen and Paramount.

Universal-Keith-Daily Mirror Tie-up To Select New York's Prettiest Girl

PROBABLY the biggest newspaper-theatre-picture tie-up ever made has just been aranged by the Universal Pictures Corporation, the Moss, Keith and Proctor interests and the N. Y. Daily Mirror, to exploit the final stages of the Laemmle-Mirror Beauty Contest. This contest is being conducted by C. E. Holah, director of Universal's cross-country mobile studio unit, the "See America First" caravan. The winner not only will be starred in a Universal two-reeler to be made in New York entitled "Peg of New York," but also will receive a six months' contract at Universal City.

As a result of the gigantic theatre tie-up, the semi-finals and finals in the beauty contests will be held on the stages of the various Keith theatres, winding up with the grand final picking of the winner on the stage of the New York Hippodrome, under dramatic and elaborately staged ceremonies.

Seven or eight of the "See America First" contest winners are now at Universal City, being trained and getting actual experience in Universal pictures. They include the winners from San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Omaha, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit and Toledo. As soon as "Peg of New York" is selected and the New York "See America First" two-reeler is completed, she will join the group at Universal City.

Eighteen theatres will participate in the semi-final eliminations, in addition to the finals at the Hippodrome. These theatres are as follows: Keith's 81st St. Theatre, Keith's Fordham Theatre, Keith's Jefferson Theatre, Keith's Prospect Theatre, Brooklyn; Keith's Greenpoint Theatre, Brooklyn; Moss' Broadway Theatre, Moss' Regent Theatre, Moss' Franklin Theatre, Moss' Coliseum Theatre, Keith's Hamilton Theatre, Keith's Royal Theatre, Columbia Theatre, Far Rockaway; Orpheum Theatre, Brooklyn; Moss' Flatbush Theatre, Brooklyn; Keith's Riviera Theatre, Brooklyn; Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, Proctor's 58th Street Theatre and Proctor's 125th Street Theatre.

The eighteen winners from the various theatres will participate in the finals to be held Monday, November 9, on the big Hippodrome stage. They will have a dramatic entry, being brought in in the big "See America First" studio caravan, which will be run right onto the Hippodrome stage for this event. The finals at the Hippodrome will be noteworthy.

Secrecy and Mystery Feature Production of "The Bat"

IMAGINE a dozen of the most prominent motion picture players, each of practically equal importance in the cinema world and in box-office drawing power, cast for the same screen features—and their names kept secret. Imagine, also, the scenario writer being obliged to take an oath to the film producer that he will not reveal to any person whatsoever any single detail of the story. Imagine a director being obliged to take a similar pledge that he will not reveal a single item concerning the story, the cast or anything else.

Imagine these conditions, and have a fairly good idea of the secrecy and mystery that surrounds the preliminary steps in Roland West's forthcoming production of "The Bat," mystery sensation of the stage, motion picture rights of which Mr. West recently purchased.

In Mr. West's office recently Julius Josephson, scenario writer, took a solemn pledge not to reveal at any time any details of his story for the picturization of this sensationally successful mystery play. Just about all that the public is going to be permitted to know about "The Bat" before they see it on the screen is Mr. West's statement that the plot will be juggled just enough from the stage version so audiences never will know the identity of "The Bat" until the final moments of the screening.

"The picture will be a complete surprise even to those who have seen the stage play," said Mr. West. "For the first time in the history of the picture industry a photoplay will be made without the fanfare of publicity trumpets. We will try at all times and in all ways to keep secret all information concerning the production. No visitors will be permitted on the sets, in the studio or on the lot, and not the slightest bit of information ever will be offered concerning the progress of the picture."

"Classified" Breaks All Records in St. Paul

Another record for "Classified," the latest First National picture starring Corinne Griffith, was scored last week at the Capitol Theatre, St. Paul. In addition to establishing new figures for this house, "Classified" also topped the gross business at the State Theatre in Minneapolis. This is particularly significant in that, according to a statement from I. H. Ruben, of Finkelstein and Ruben, this is the first time the Capitol Theatre has ever topped its sister theatre in Minneapolis.

Robert Cain Added to "Too Much Money" Cast

Robert Cain, well known on stage and screen for his interpretations of villain roles, has been added to the cast of "Too Much Money" which First National is making in New York. Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone have the featured roles. John Francis Dillon is directing. Cain has the part of Dana Stuart, one of those gay bachelors who love only other men's wives.

GEORGE WALSH is "Renee Duval," "The Count of Luxembourg," in the Chadwick picture of this latter title, and the star is capably supported by Helen Lee Worthing, former Ziegfeld Follies beauty, who has the role of "Angele Didier."

Fox Buys More Popular Plays and Novels for Production

FOX FILMS has brought screen rights to ten of Charles H. Hoyt's big stage successes, four modern stage hits and three current novels, according to news re- from Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, who is now conferring with production executives of his organization in Hollywood.

The Hoyt plays thrilled an earlier generation of American playgoers and made the name of the playwright a household word twenty or thirty years back. In that colorful period of the American stage, a Charles Hoyt play spelled success. All of them start with "A." Otis Harlan, who played in the Fox screen version of "Lightnin'" and "Thunder Mountain" this season, played the title role in "A Black Sheep."

The other celebrated plays in the Hoyt list are "A Temperance Town," "A Trip to Chinatown," "A Runaway Colt," "A Milk White Flag," "A Rag Baby," "A Brass Monkey," "A Day and Night in New York," "A Dog in the Manger" and "A Hole in the Ground."

The four recent Broadway hits contained in Mr. Sheehan's announcement are "Pigs," "The Family Upstairs," "Going Crooked" and "The Way Things Happen." The Fox raid on Broadway is growing greater. "Pigs" is John Golden's litter of laughs. Anne Morrison and Patterson McNutt wrote the play and Frank Craven staged it. After ten month on Broadway, "Pigs" is making a cleanup on the "subway circuit" preparatory to going on the road.

"Going Crooked" will be launched on Broadway this season after six successful weeks at the Cort Theatre in Chicago and a brief road test. The play was written by Aaron Hoffman and Willie Collier, Sr., and the latter is bringing it to New York. One of the Fox scouts saw its admirable screen qualities while it was playing in Chicago, and the deal was completed.

"The Way Things Happened," produced by A. H. Woods in association with Guthrie McClintock, was written by Clemence Dane. Katherine Cornell was featured in the principle role in the 1924 season.

"The Family Upstairs" is a slice of American life written by Harry Delf and produced by Sam H. Harris this season. It is a stirring drama with a theme that hits home and hits hard. It's the story of what happens behind the closed doors of half the homes in America.

"Married Alive" is a current novel by Ralph Straus which was purchased from Henry Holt & Co. The story centers about a professor of psychology at Cambridge whose frank comments on women and love have made him widely known. Straus has written a bold novel with a modern theme which probably will cause as much debate as Hutchinson's latest novel, "One Increasing Purpose." The other two novels to which Fox has secured screen rights are "Frozen Justice," by Ejnar Mikkelson, and "Down to Earth" by Julius Perutz.

Pick Title for Next Corinne Griffith Film

"Flirtation" has been selected as the title for the next First National picture starring Corinne Griffith, originally called "Caesar's Wife," a story by W. Somerset Maugham. Miss Griffith has completed work in this production under the direction of Irving Cummings with a supporting cast including Percy Marmont, Malcolm McGregor, and Warner Oland.

"Flirtation" is said to offer Miss Griffith a role unlike anything she has had in the past and to present a story particularly strong in its development from a motion picture standpoint.

The national release date set for "Flirtation" is December 13.

Added to Cast

Several additions have been made on the Metropolitan unit now filming "'The Million Dollar Handciap."

Lon Poff, well-known character actor, has been added to the cast, Norman McLeod, "comedy constructor" has been loaned by the Christie Comedy Company to supply the ideas for the comedy touches in the production, and Douglas S. Dawson has been assigned as assistant to Mr. Scott Sidney, director. Dawson acted in the same capacity on "Steel Preferred," which picture is now being edited.

McLeod was "comedy constructionist" on such well known successes as "'Charley's Aunt," "Seven Days" and "Madam Behave."

Valentino to Attend Opening of "The Eagle"

Word has been received from Los Angeles that Rudolph Valentino will leave there Tuesday for New York to be present when his new picture, "The Eagle," opens Sunday (Nov. 8) at the Strand Theatre.

"The Eagle" is Valentino's first production for United Artists Corporation and he says he has put his best work in this film; and is anxious to be here for the premiere showing at the Strand to study the audience reaction and also see the film as it is unwound with the musical score which has been arranged by Louis Gottschalk.

Marcus Touring Exchanges

Lee Marcus, sales manager of F. B. O., is off on a ten-day tour of the Central Eastern exchanges of the company. Mr. Marcus will visit Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland.

"The Live Wire" Booked Heavily in Key Cities

THE highly enthusiastic manner in which the representative first run theatres have been booking "The Live Wire," Johnny Hines' initial starring feature for First National, affords ample evidence of the popularity of this star and the success of his first picture.

Included among the latest bokings on this Johnny Hines production are the following key city theatres: Capitol, St. Paul; State, Minneapolis; Golden Gate, San Francisco; Orpheum, Oakland, Calif.; American, Salt Lake City; Olympia, Boston; Olympia, New Bedford; Strand, Hartford; Olympia, Lynn; Broadway, Lawrence, Mass.; Olympia, New Haven; Karlton, Philadelphia; Central Square, Cambridge, Mass.; Olympia, Brockton, Mass.; Strand, Dayton; Rialto, San Antonio; Strand, Grand Rapids and the Dome, Youngstown, Chio.

With "The Live Wire" doing excellent business, and "Rainbow Riley," Hines' next for First National promising to become an even more elaborate and more humorous production than its successful predecessor, the Johnny Hines-First National series should prove to be a most remunerative one for the distributors, the producer, the star and exhibitors.

De Mille Engages New Production Manager

Preview Critics Praise Valentino in "The Eagle"

PRIOR to the shipping East of the first print of Rudolph Valentino's first release for United Artists Corporation, "The Eagle," the picture was previewed by several of the leading film experts and newspaper critics, and their comments are given briefly as follows:

George Shafer, Chicago Tribune—"To my mind this is the best picture Valentino ever made, not excepting 'The Four Horsemen.' He is in his element in this type, and I hope to see more Valentino pictures in this lighter vein. Summed up, my criticism would be: "Cast—perfectly balanced. Acting—excellent. Sets and atmosphere—amazingly well done. Direction—defies criticism. I believe this picture will be very popular with all audiences and will make a great deal of money."

Monroe Lathrop, Los Angeles Evening Express—"The picture is admirably acted and directed, is full of humor and is a credit to United Artists Corporation. I did not think a picture of this atmosphere could be made in Hollywood and keep the spirit so fully."

Lincoln Quarberg, United Press—"I enjoyed the picture immensely and believe it will be a great success. Certainly, Valentino has at last found his forte. I find no basis for adverse criticism.

Fred Fox, Film Mercury—"'The Eagle' is one of the best pictures of the year. I have not seen 'The Big Parade,' but unless I am mistaken I shall still consider 'The Eagle' the picture of the year. I believe it is invaluable to Valentino as a comeback vehicle, and will reinstate him in popular favor. 'The Eagle' is a costume picture which is not a costume picture, which I consider very high praise, indeed."

A. L. Wooldridge, representing eight large metropolitan daily newspaper, including the New York World, Kansas City Star, Portland Oregonism St. Paul Dispatch, Oakland Tribune San Francisco Chronicle and the American Weekly, (Hearst Sunday Magazine)—"The picture is very good indeed. It holds the interest from the start and the costume angle is never realized. I believe it will be very good for Valentino."

Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times—"My opinion cannot be definite because, unfortunately, I did not see all of the picture. I am anxious to see the rest of it (the first part) this week at the studio with Mrs. Schallert. On the whole, the picture seems to be excellent. It is a great comeback for Valentino. Miss Banky is marvelous. Brown's direction is adequate up to the finish. The scenes of 'The Eagle' in the house of his enemy, including the bedroom and the bear scenes, were very well done. I consider the audience reaction excellent.

Florence Lawrence, Los Angeles Examiner—"I sincerely believe 'The Eagle' is a very good picture. I liked Valentino's work, and also that Miss Banky."

Harry Carr, Los Angeles Times—"This picture is unquestionably Valentino's finest and I believe it will put him back where he belongs—at the top of the list. The action and the settings were excellent, and the direction beyond criticism. I am very enthusiastic about the picture, and believe it will be an ovrwhelming success."

MRS. RUDOLPH VALENTINO An artist to her finger tips, has signed a contract with Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., to star in an F. B. O. Gold Bond production.

Critics Praise "Don Q"

Fairbanks in "Don Q" Wins in Cleveland

"Judging from the many outbursts of genuine merriment, Douglas Fairbanks in 'Don Q.' most people will agree that this picture is highly entertaining," said the reviewer for the Cleveland News when this United Artists Corporation release was shown at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland. "I think you will enjoy this photoplay, even as I enjoyed it. So will your wife, and so will your old man."

"There is much that is engaging, much that is gallant, much that is amusing in 'Don Q' and his romantic adventures," said the reviewer for the Cleveland Press.

"Put it down in your memory that 'Don Q' is a great piece of enterainment—eleven reels of romantic magnetism, heroic charm, gorgeous background, all traveling at the rate of ninety miles an hour on he highway and sixty on the turns," said W. Ward Marsh, in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. "Doug has never leaped so high, moved as quickly or kept in such constant motion so long before. The man isn't human; that's what he isn't."

Weiss Brothers Receive Three Feature Productions

Warner Pictures Please Exhibitors

John Hamrick, the well-known Northwestern exhibitor, who recently signed contracts for the Warner Bros. product for his Blue Mouse Theatres in Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., and Portland, Ore., has written a letter to Harry M. Warner, in which he says:

"Your 1925-26 product surpasses anything you have ever made and my patrons share with me this same belief."

This letter was written after some of the early numbers on the Warner schedule had had notably successful runs at the Blue Mouse Theatres.

The Multnomah Theatres Corporation, operating ten suburban theatres in Portland, Ore., also has signed contracts for the full Warner forty, according to advices from that city. Among other houses which have signed up for the full product in the last few days are Pantage's, Kansas City, and the Ellsworth, a Kansas City suburban theatre; and the Rialto, at Enid, the Criterion and Empress at El Reno, and the Cozy, at Okmulgee, Okla.

The American Theatre, in Terra Haute, Ind., a house devoted largely to the showing of Paramount product, has contracted for ten Warner specials.

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

Schenectady Exhibitor Now "Sees Red"

Hand a red pencil to Claude V. Fish, owner of the American Theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., and he "sees red" in more ways than one. In other words, Mr. Fish's pet aversion is a red pencil. It appears that Mr. Fish was playing the races at Saratoga one day last summer, and lacking an ordinary lead pencil borrowed one from a friend with which to mark the odds against his selections. By chance, the borrowed pencil was a red lead. Every horse picked by Mr. Fish that day finished outside the money, so it was only natural for him one night last week to refuse to sign a certain paper when the owner of the paper calmly handed him a red pencil.

Mr. Fish is not only an exhibitor, but he is president of the Bowling League in Schenectady, a lieutenant in the Arab Patrol and an officer in the Elks Lodge. He has been running the American for seven years and at first worked days as an inspector in the General Electric plant, and then plugged away at the theatre until nearly midnight. Finally getting on his feet, Mr. Fish resigned his daytime job and now devotes to his theatre as much of his time as is left from bowling and marching and working degrees. Business has been good this summer and fall, although like other houses in Schenectady the first of every month slumps off when the people are paying their rent, gas, electric and other bills. The American Locomotive Works, however, has an order for 100 engines and many an extra dime will find its way into the picture theatres because of that order.

The sales force in every exchange along Film Row is on tiptoes every time the expressman enters these days. Claude Wade of North Creek has promised, at least so the film men say, a hind quarter to every exchange, and in view of the fact that there are now a dozen or more exchanges in Albany, it looks as though Mr. Wade, if he keeps his promise, will have to call for aid from among his fellow hunters.

Father Blais, who is running the theatre in Schroon Lake these days, along with his church, is as busy with one as he is with the other, for he is now operating the theatre four days a week and doing an excellent business. Father Blais isn't inclined to take anyone's word for the pictures he books, and whenever possible prefers a screening.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Milligan, who are running the Broadway in Schuylerville, are now operating four nights a week. It has been quite a while since the two were along Film Row, but whenever they strike town there is always a warm welcome waiting for them. Unassuming and as honest as the day is long, their friends are legion.

Up in Hogansburg, which is about as far north as one can go in New York State without stepping onto Canadian soil, there is a theatre run by J. L. Thompson and known as the White Deer. One half of the house is in New York State, the other half in Canada. Members of the St. Regis tribe of Indians make up a good part of the patronage and the Wild Westerns are prime favorites.

Poccio and Dennis will reopen the Auditorium in Utica on November 14. There is quite a little activity in Utica these days, for Pop Linton is hustling along his new house, hoping to have it in readiness for opening sometime in December or January, while Sam Slotnick, formerly of Mohawk, is also erecting a new theatre in Utica.

The first presentation in Central New York of "The Phantom of the Opera" will take place on November 9, at the State in Schenectady. Manager James Roach is making great plans for the presentation and many exhibitors will be on hand.

Although Bill Benton of Saratoga Springs doesn't pretend to be much of a politician, he certainly stands in with the state senators from his district. The other night when Mr. Benton's new house in Mechanicville was opened, he received a handsome basket of flowers from Senator Brown, while former Senator Fred Kavanaugh wired his congratulations. The Film Board of Trade and the picture salesmen's association also sent flowers and good wishes.

Joe Braff's house, the Lyric, which in times past was the White Way, where the late Samuel Suckno got his start, and which has been closed for many months, is scheduled to reopen in the near future. The theatre is located between the Regent and Royal Theatres in Albany.

Between laying concrete and getting his hens to lay eggs, Lawrence Tefft, an exhibitor of New Berlin, simply doesn't have time to meet film salesmen and doesn't hesitate to tell them so. Mr. Tefft reports business as being "just fair" but doesn't specify whether he means the theatre, the sidewalk or the poultry business.

John Augello of the Family Theatre in Utica is spending quite a wad of money these days in changing the theatre into stores and in building a new theatre next door. Mr. Augello is rather close-mouthed and film salesmen, upon returning to Albany, declare that they do 99 per cent. of the talking when ever they are dealing with Mr. Augello.

E. J. Wolfe of the Bijou in Lowville was broken-hearted the other day when he went to one of his prize kennels and found the best dog of the lot stretched out dead. The dog had been slightly ill the night before. The animal had taken first honors at practically every dog show in the East United States and was regarded as the most valuable animal in all Northern New York.

Without a cent of outside capital, Whitney, Young and Pierce have about completed the Capital in Ilion, a 1,600-seat house scheduled to open November 16 and a theatre of great beauty. Robert Pierce will manage. Messrs. Whitney and Young were in New York recently, visiting the big theatres along Broadway and getting ideas which they will incorporate in their own house.

Once upon a time, Meyer Schine was almost a fanatic when it came to taking exercise. Over at the "gym" he would go for an hour's workout a day. But that was before he was married. Mr. Schine is now putting on weight and when anyone suggests exercise, he merely smiles. Of course he did journey up to Syracuse a week or two ago for one of the football games there, but that could hardly be termed his exercise.

The sympathy of the readers of the World is extended to Patrick Quinlan, a well known exhibitor of Chateaugny, in the recent loss of his wife.

A detective has been working during the last two weeks in an effort to unearth the firebug who attempted to burn down the new theatre being erected by Mr. Cornwall in Coxsackie, which will open about December 15. So far the detective has been unsuccessful.

The Odd Fellows Hall in Gardiner, which was dedicated about a month ago, is to run movies once a week during the winter.

Leave it to Louis Scott of Cazenovia to know the best bets along Broadway before booking. Mr. Scott's daughter is now attending a college in New York City, and arrangements have been made to the end that the young woman will be furnished with passes to the Capitol Theatre each week, where she will review the picture that will later be played in the well known Central New York village.

Nate Robbins of Utica, now a vice-president in the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Company, wears a broad grin these days, according to the film men arriving back from the pent-up city. Rae Candee, who is associated with Mr. Robbins, is back from his hunting trip. Film Row, without getting so much as a peep at venison, is now wondering what Mr. Candee really went hunting for.

Frank Braymeier, who is now handling the Barcli in Schenectady—and you can gamble your last dollar that he will put the house on the map—will shortly raise admission prices from 25 to 30 cents, with matinees remaining at 15 cents. Mr. Braymeier knows everyone in town, and through a friend in the General Electric Works will install a couple of searchlights that will play on the house during the evening.

On account of the lighting system going out of business at the American in Schenectady a week ago Saturday night, "The Making of O'Malley" was brought back last Friday night and played to big business.

Joe Saperstein of Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany will present the silver loving cups as well as the cash prizes on the night of November 9 to the winners of the Charleston dance contest what has been running for several weeks. A similar contest will start almost immediately after, as Mr. Saperstein has found them to be good drawing cards.

Mike Kallet, who runs the Madison in Oneida, paid one of his periodical visits to Film Row during the past week. Meyer Freedman of the Rialto in Schenectady was in New York City last week. Louis Buettner of Cohoes was also in town and so was Mrs. Buettner, the latter enjoying the show at the Capitol Theatre while her husband shopped along the Row.

William Shirley of Schenectady, who has been journeying back and forth to Florida for two months or so, doesn't look for the present boom to last and will sell out his holdings at the earliest possible moment. He may return to Schenectady within a month or two. At least, this is the latest word from Mr. Shirley.

What's Ben Davis, formerly of the Schine circuit, and who has been living at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany for the last month, got up his sleeve? Mr. Davis was in New York for five or six days last week, came back to Albany and then announced that he would probably return to New York almost at once. Mighty mysterious, but according to reports, Mr. Davis may shortly be heard of as having a chain of houses.

L. I. Connors of Cambridge will no longer be associated with the film business, resigning as a salesman at the F. B. O. exchange last week and moving on to Boston, where he will enter the ice cream business with his uncle. A year or so ago, Mr. Connors was running three theatres, one in Cambridge, one in Granville and another in Salem.

The theatre in Victory Mills, run by Sam Cummings, opened on November 1, for two nights a week.

William Curry, who is now running the Victory at Cambridge, had his troubles last week when his house was in darkness for two nights through failure of film to reach him.

A news note from Schenectady is to the effect that Miss Betty Feuer of the Crescent Theatre has passed her road test and is now a qualified automobilist under the laws of New York State.

Have you kicked in with your Box-Office Reports to our Little Van? If not—do so now!

A Correction

"David Perkins is a busy man these days, what with having two of Lowell's leading film theatres under his direction. These are the Merrimack Square and Strand, both Paramount houses."

This item appeared in a recent issue of Moving Picture World. Samuel Dorgan, directing manager of the Strand, writes:

"This theatre is not in any way connected with Famous Players or the so-called Paramount houses and neither is Mr. David Perkins connected with the management. For your information we would advise that this theatre has been under this management since the theatre was built eight years ago and that no change is being contemplated."

We regret the error.

Being on the second floor the house is subject to drastic requirements and William F. Haitz, owner, seems to be uncertain as to the future of the place. The house has been closed several weeks. It had been used of late as a picture theatre by Harry D. Crosby under a temporary certificate issued by the state labor department. When the theatre was closed the order was revoked and now the owner must comply with pending orders, twenty-two in number, before he can again open the place. The Dellinger has been a Batavia institution for fifty-one years.

"The Amundsen Polar Flight"

Remarkably Interesting Pictorial Record of Attempted Flight to the North Pole by Aeroplane

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Tremendously interesting scenes of the Amundsen expedition to near the North Pole are being released by Pathe under the title of "The Amundsen Polar Flight." The 2,683-foot picture is authentic and a wonderful box-office attraction by reason of the publicity attending the flight and the interest of what the camera captured. Pathe claims that the subject is "one of the most remarkable human screen documents ever recorded since the advent of the cinema," and Pathe is right.

The film takes the spectator on a "personally conducted" tour with the aviators and their two 'planes. There are close-ups of Raold Amundsen, Lincoln Ellsworth, Lieutenants Riiser-Larsen, Omdal and Dietrichson and of Master Mechanic Karl Feucht, all now well known to the public.

The film starts with the transportation of the dismantled 'planes by steamer to the base in the Arctic where they are assembled. Then comes the dash through the air for the Pole. There are thrillingly impressive scenes of ice packs and icebergs. The 'planes descend when half the gasoline is consumed, and the spectator sees the struggle to merge the forces of Amundsen and Ellsworth, the men with the latter leader dragging a big container of gasoline across treacherous ice after their 'plane is abandoned. Scenes follow of the desperate attempts of the combined forces to clear take-off surface for their sole remaining 'plane before the ice cracks underfoot.

Maps clearly illustrate the passage of the 'planes both toward and from the North Pole.

The wild homecoming at Oslo harbor occupies considerable footage and is wonderfully impressive. Thousands of craft jam the harbor. At the King's palace they are decorated for valor.

"Mazies Won't Tell"

(F. B. O.—Series—Two Reels)

In the fourth issue of "The Adventures of Mazie" her two pals decide they don't like her boss's girl and plant Mazie's picture in a bathing suit on his desk. He fires her. She aids her pals as detectives at a swell dance in guarding the jewels. The pals, Al Cooke and Kit Guard, turn out to be rotten detectives, for jewels are found in Mazie's room. It develops that they have been placed there by a burglar who was in league with the boss's sweetheart. Mazie is vindicated and gets her job back again. The standard of pep, interest and humor is holding up well in this series and it should prove as popular as the earlier ones in which Alberta, Kit Guard and Al Cooke have appeared. Larry Kent, the boss, is a newcomer, but he is fine looking and entirely satisfactory as the hero.—C. S. S.

"The Constant Simp"

(F. B. O.—Series—Two Reels)

With this, the second issue, the new F. B. O. "Adventures of Mazie" series gets well under way. Alberta Vaughan appears as Mazie, a go-getter stenographer who by strenuous methods lands a job with a lawyer. Coming down late, she is fired, but gets her job back by collecting a bill during which she discovers the debtor is the head of a counterfeiting gang. Kit Guard and Al Cooke appear as her two boob admirers and as usual supply considerable comedy. In this instance it centres around a bouquet which one gives the boss by mistake and when he tosses it out the window the other one picks it up. There is good snap, action and comedy and it is thoroughly entertaining. —C. S. S.

"Or What Have You"

(F. B. O.—Series—Two Reels)

Here is the third of "The Adventures of Mazie" series. Once more, Mazie, the go-getter stenographer, proves of great assistance to her boss, a struggling young lawyer. A professional crook who gets hit by autos and sues for large sums is unmasked by Mazie, who, posing as a salesman, calls on him and gets him dancing the Charleston. Her two boob friends, now detectives, snap a picture of the scene and although the picture was no good, the bluff worked. Well up to the first of the series in humor and interest.—C. S. S.

"Cleaning Up"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Johnny Arthur's first starring comedy for Educational was a corker, and although of an entirely different type, his second is just as funny. It is not so much the fact that Johnny has new material, for in the first he got his laughs largely out of a flivver and in this one he shows up what happens when a husband tries to clean house, but it is his amusing personality and the clever gags that have been provided for him. For instance, there is nothing new if a husband makes a wreck of his house in attempting to straighten things up, but what Johnny managed to do to his is good for a lot of real laughs. Among other things, he covers the parlor with feathers from a leaking pillow, the firemen invade the kitchen and deluge the place, the bathtub overflows, and finally his big dog smashes nearly everything that is still intact when it chases a cat all over the place. There are some witty subtitles and plenty of real good laughs in this comedy. All classes should find it amusing, but the married folks and especially the wives will discover that it is especially so, for they can appreciate the situation.—C. S. S.

"Two Many Bucks"

(Universal—Comedy—Two Reels)

While Western in atmosphere, like the previous two-reelers released under Mustang brand by Universal featuring Pee Wee Holmes and Ben Corbett, this one is really a comedy. It deals with the rivalry of this pair of cow punchers for the hand of a fair maiden and the schemes they employ to get the best of each other. Pee Wee tampers with the steering gear of Ben's flivver which runs amuck. He takes the girl to a rodeo where a prize is offered for riding a broncho. Ben paints another horse the same color as the broncho, but Pee Wee outwits him. Ben is thrown, Pee Wee rides the substitute and is about to cop the reward when Ben turns a hose on the horse, reveals its true color, and The episode with the broncho is amusing and there are some situations that are good for laughs. An amusing number.—C. S. S.

"Beware of Your Relatives"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

Built around the familiar idea of a chap having to marry a certain girl to inherit an estate, this Blue Bird comedy featuring Neely Edwards nevertheless has some good laughs due to the amusing slap-stick actions of the girl's tough brothers and their chase of the nero after he has had a good look at the girl. The best laugh however is based on a toothache. Neely goes to a dentist and while trying to summon courage to enter the office, a pretty nurse comes out followed by the jealous dentist who hits Neely in the jaw for flirting, knocking out the offending tooth. This reel is well up to the standards of the series.— C. S. S.

"Hot Feet"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

At least four different comedy devices have been employed in this single reel distributed through Educational. First a cheap sport gives a girl an engagement ring and his dog continues to embarrass him by retrieving the box showing it was bought at a five and ten cent store. Next, an old negro mammy, a colored butler and a pickaninny are shown, being afflicted with the Charleston dance craze Then when the character woman says she cannot eat any cake but chocolate a white cake is covered with shoe blacking and the guests of course get all smeared up. Finally, a little hooch in the punch causes the staid old lady from the country to put on kid clothes and with her boob nephew to "'show up the crowd" as dancers. While much of the humor is forced the abundance of material offers such a variety that it is bound to get laughs from the average slapstick fans. Cliff Bowes is featured; cast as the old lady is one of the best known comedienne and soubrettes of several years ago, Elfie Fay, well known to the older generation. She does good work.—C. S. S.

"A Speedy Marriage"

(Universal—Comedy—Two Reels)

Fast-moving slapstick in which Wanda Wiley is called upon to do some strenuous stunts, characterizes this Century Comedy distributed through Universal. While enjoying enormous wealth and luxury, Wanda suddenly learns she must be married within a few minutes in order to retain the money. There is a mad rush to reach her lover, during which she is chased by a horde of traffic cops and escapes by invading a toy store and bombarding them with toys and also by diving into an open man-hole. After various other mishaps she picks up her lover and they collide with another car. Both cars are wrecked, then Wanda discovers the other car was driven by a minister who marries them on the fatal minute. There are some clever and amusing lightning effects in the first reel where the lightning goes in the mouth and out of the ears of the butlers and through their clothing causing them to act as if they had fits. There is certainly no dearth of action here and it should please the Wanda Wiley fans.—C. S. S.

"Hot Doggie"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Although Walter Hiers is the star of this two-reel comedy distributed through Educational, the little dog Buddy gives the picture its title and comes very near stealing the laurels away from Walter. As is usual with comedies made by Christie, there is a definite idea running all through the picture. This time, Walter is an unwelcome suitor and his dog delivers messages for him. Finally he gets a letter from a rich uncle who is coming and will give him a million if he is married. Walter meets with all sorts of trouble, forgets the license, burns it up, forgets the ring, is robbed of his clothes and to cap the climax has a run-in with a stranger who proves to be the rich uncle. The girl, however, uses her wiles on "uncie" and all turns out O. K. Buddy, the dog, is certainly a remarkable animal and does a lot of stunts that are both clever and amusing. The action is fast, with a laugh every minute. It is one of the best of the recent Christies.—C. S. S.

ANOTHER CHARMING O. HENRY STORY SCREENED
In "Shoes," one of William Sidney Porter's most delightful little tales, Marion Harlan is again seen as "the O. Henry Girl." Daniel Keefe directed this two-reel feature for William Fox.

New York Daily Gives Space to "Felix the Cat" Caricatures

MORE persons than usual, 330,000 more in fact, had an opportunity to laugh at the antics of "Felix the Cat," the comical feline star appearing in Educational Pictures, when the rotogravure section of the New York Herald-Tribune on Sunday, October 25, featured a series of "Felix" photo caricatures.

Felix "crashed" his way into the picture pages of this metropolitan Sunday newspaper in the manner that would do justice to Temmany Young himself. Not only did Felix "crash in," but he also "strutted in," in his own inimitable feline way—via "The Charleston."

On the Sunday afore-mentioned, the famous Pat Sullivan character dominated one of the picture pages with four views of his version of the dance as taught him by Virginia Vance, leading lady of Educational-Mermaid Comedies.

Not to be outdone by the "thousand and one" celebrities who have been breaking into print these days, by showing pictorially the "fad fond" multitudes how they do the "Charleston" and having himself a few new ones up his pelt, Felix decides to broadcast evidence of his skill to the world.

That he does this satisfactorily is borne out by the fact that following the use of this pictorial feature by the Sunday Herald-Tribune, another great news organization, King Features Syndicates, requested the use of the pictures for distribution to about fifty of the principal newspapers throughout the country subscribing to this Hearst feature service—a most decided publicity "beat" for Felix.

This and many other Felix publicity ideas may be used to advantage by exhibitors who have booked the Felix cartoon series. For instance, the photo of a pretty local girl could have a small cut-out of the cat pasted on her check—call it a new beauty spot fad or what you will. A prominent boxer could be posed boxing and Felix afterwards inserted as a sparring partner. Felix directing traffic could be inserted in place of the regular officer over a photo of the busiest corner in your town.

Think up a few of these trick photographic stunts yourself, Mr. Exhibitor. Send any print you desire Felix inserted into, to the exploitation editor of this publication and they will be returned promptly with a quaint figure of the cat carefully inked in. This is the sort of picture material that your local newspaper is usually willing to print—it has humor and local interest, a most ideal combination.

Universal Arranges Short Subject List to Aid Exhibitors in Selecting Programs

By FRED J. McCONNELL
Sales Manager of Short Subjects.

UNIVERSAL is definitely in the front ranks of the short product field this Fall. All along the line, vast improvements have been made in the quality of short product entertainment put out by the Universal studios and the releases scheduled have been arranged with an eye to the best interests of the theatre owner. The releases are not only suitable for the exhibitor who is supplementing his long feature with carefully chosen comedies or other shorts, but the grouping of Universal short product has been made to fit the man who runs all short product programs.

The weekly short product releases of Universal, in themselves, make an ideal short product program for any house. They include a one-reel Bluebird comedy, the International Newsreel, a two-reel Century Comedy, an Adventure Picture of two-reel chapters, and a dramatic Mustang Picture or two-reel western—eight strong reels of selected entertainment. From time to time, these releases are supplemented by a special release, such as The Gump Comedies, two reels each, or "Little Red Riding Hood," a Century special, recently issued.

In the Adventure Picture field, Universal promises to outstrip all past efforts. Universal's Adventure Pictures are ten-chapter serials, and are being made this year as a result of a new policy in serial production. This policy is based on the selection of stories and subject matter for serials which will admit of national tie-ups and exploitation. They are based on American history, famous books or interesting inventions.

The Universal schedule for 1925-1926 includes six Adventure Pictures, made with popular stars and directed by men of top-notch rating in the serial production field. For sales purposes, the pictures are known as The Lucky Six. In the order of their release they are "Perils of the Wild," made with Jack Mower, Joe Bonomo and Margaret Quimby, now being released; "The Ace of Spades," starring William Desmond, just beginning its release period; "The Scarlet Streak," starring Jack Daugherty, for release beginning Dec. 21st; "The Winking Idol," with William Desmond, for release February 22nd; "The Radio Detective," starring Jack Daugherty, supported by Margaret Quimby, for release April 28th, 1926, and "Strings of Steel," for release beginning June 28th, 1926.

"Perils of the Wild" is based on the famous story, "Swiss Family Robinson." "The Ace of Spades" is built around the great land-rush days of early Oklahoma history. "The Scarlet Streak" is based upon the famous Death Ray invention now current in the news. "The Winking Idol" tells of the mysteries and treasures of the Aztecs, in a story written by Charles E. Van Loan. "The Radio Detective," written by Arthur B. Reeve, is a story of the famous scientific detective, Craig Kennedy, and his work with the Boy Scouts in solving mysteries by radio. "Strings of Steel," written by Philip Hurn, is a story of the pioneering days of the telephone.

The Century Film Corporation, producers of Century Comedies, is making a great advance in its forthcoming product. In planning the 1925-1926 comedies, Julius and Abe Stern, the officials of the Century company, took several radical steps. In the first place, following a long and careful survey of the comedy field, they determined to make outstanding improvements in stories, in studio facilities, in production personnel and in the quality of the players and supporting casts.

Another innovation in Century Comedies, is the distinct grouping of the season's output into Star Series; the pictures made by each star, such as Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian and others, to be considered as a separate brand of pictures. This was decided upon when returns early this year conclusively proved that Miss Wiley and Miss Marian had built up for themselves a strong clientiele and that their comedies, as such, were in unusual demand. Thus, the Star Series plan is expected to be of great advantage to exhibitors, by reason of the fact that the Century Stars have individual box-office values in different theatres.

A third Century innovation is the acquisition of the screen rights for a novelty series of two-reel comedies—the Buster Brown Comedies—being made from the celebrated newspaper cartoon comic by the noted artist, R. F. Outcault. The Century Company is making these pictures as straight comedies, not as animated cartoons. The result is a high class brand of two-reelers which already have won a place for themselves on the first-run screens, although only two of the series have been completed so far.

In the new Gumps, Universal has an excellent comedy series for the 1925-1926 mark. A series of twelve of these two-reelers is projected, to be released one picture a month. Joe Murphy, the living image of Andy Gump, plays the leading role. Fay Tincher is seen as Min. These pictures are being made with especial care and cost in production. When Universal found how well the first series was going over, the new series was planned to be an even better box-office bet. These comedies are crashing into the first-run houses all over the country and are reported to be exceptional successes. They are being produced at Universal City by Sam Van Ronkel for Universal release. The first of the new series, "Andy's Lion Tale" was released October 26. The second, "Chester's Donkey Party," will come along November 30.

In its one-reel comedy product, Universal has made great strides in the past few months. This brand is known as the Bluebird Comedy series, and the one-a-week releases are made with popular comedians and built around logical and interesting stories. Thre stars are used, Charles Puffy, Arthur Lake and Neely Edwards. Charles Puffy is the internationally known fat-man comedian brought over to this country from Europe by Carl Laemmle. His comedies are proving to be excellent sellers, Universal reports. Arthur Lake is the original youngster in Universal's popular Sweet Sixteen Comedies, based on juvenile love and other experiences of the first-long-pants age. This series of Sweet Sixteen Comedies is being continued with Lake for release under the Bluebird brand. Neely Edwards, one of the most popular comedians on the screen, has just returned to Universal to make fun-films for this one-reel schedule also.

Universal's Mustang Pictures, the 2-reel western brand, remain as the outstanding short product release in the entire screen world. Universal long has featured these two-reelers. Such western stars as Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson, William Desmond, Art Acord and other popular cowboys, got their start in Universal westerns. This year, however, Universal has enlarged its two-reel western department and promises an unusual output.

In the first place, a new galaxy of western stars have been acquired. Among them are Edmund Cobb, Fred Humes, Jack Mower, Ben Corbett and Petey Holmes. Most of these men are graduates of Universal famous band of Ranch Riders, the hard-riding, straight shooting bunch of horsemen who have made Universal western features stand apart from other pictures of the cowboy days. A corps of expert western directors has been engaged for these two-reelers. Among them are Vin Moore, V. Nordlinger and William Wyler.

These two-reelers are being produced so that they can bear the brunt of a short product program in any theatre, or can bolster up a weak feature. Universal reports that hundreds of theatres throughout the country are using Mustang Pictures as features, along with comedies and a serial.

One of the special series to be put out in the Mustang release schedule this year will be a succession of pictures made from W. C. Tuttle's famous Magpie stories of magazine fame. Ben Corbett and Petey Holmes are to be featured in this series.

Universal short product also will contain an improved series of International Newsreel releases, twice a week. Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of the International Newsreel Corporation, announces that the International Newsreel not only will be better in quality during the coming months, but also that additional facilities and plans have been perfected to increase International's service to exhibitors.

Educational Comedy Makers Have Large Studio Space

MIDSEASON at Educational Studios in Los Angeles finds the units producing comedies there enjoying the greatly increased stage spaces as well as the most modern studio facilities which have been installed on the grounds of the studio.

The fourth stage is completed, bringing the total to 38,000 square fet of covered stage space available to the Short Subject producers.

Not only has the stage space been greatly enlarged over that previously used by these companies, but in the estimation of Jack White, the director general, an increase of thirty percent in efficiency is possible from the same amount of space. Lack of adequate room has somewhat hampered production in the past, slowing down the directors and adding to the cost of production.

Several radical changes in studio construction have been incorporated in the design of the new stages. Two of them are elevated fourteen feet, the first story being occupied by scene docks, storerooms for bulky props, a garage for the company trucks and a stock room for motor parts. Cement flooring has been laid over the two stages.

The stages proper, while resembling the conventional ground floor stage, have been especially braced against vibration. One side of the building is finished to resemble an office or apartment front with store windows along the level of the street. This will, in many cases, obviate the necessity of securing permits to photograph exteriors on busy streets and the annoyance of working surrounded by a crowd of curious onlookers.

"At the start of the producing season," said Jack White during his recent visit to New York, "I promised that every picture from our new studios would be a feature in everything in length. That was before we could take advantage of the greatly improved studios which we now occupy. I now repeat that promise, for I know that the first releases of Hamilton, Mermaid, Lupino Lane, Tuxedo and Juvenile Comedies have come up to that standard.

"With all the advantages of the new stages and improved facilities, we will make them even better. We do not intend to make them cheaper for we are spending more than ever on our product. Our improvements have been more than justified, for we find that we have secured more production value, dollar for dollar expended, than at any other time in our existence.

"The new surroundings have had their effect on the morals of our stars and our staff also. It is almost impossible to estimate this value, but it is reflected in their daily work. Large, clean and comfortable dressing rooms, stages, property rooms, electrical departments complete in every detail, and the atmosphere of efficiency, have had their effect on every one of the staff. They are full of enthusiasm, and this enthusiasm cannot help but make their work better than ever before."

"A Peaceful Riot" to Be Next Blue Ribbon Comedy

Joe Rock denies that Herron, Ill., is the locale of his new Blue Ribbon comedy "A Peaceful Riot" which he has placed in production at the Joe Rock studio at Hollywood.

Alice Ardell and Slim Summerville head the cast which includes Max Asher, Harry Martell, Leon Kent, Ethan Laidlaw and others. The comedy satirizes the recent Russian trend in filmdom and opens a new laugh vein.

Two directors appear in the cast, as both Slim Summerville and Leon Kent have won their spurs as directors. Tweedy, who is handling the megaphone, was once a comedian.

Four Units at Sennett Studios Busy on New Two-Reel Comedies

FOUR production units are busily engaged in the making of new two-reel comedies for Pathe release at the Mack Sennett studios in California. Alice Day, Harry Langdon and Ralph Graves head their companies in their respective series and Billy Bevan leads in the film being made by the all-star unit, for the "Mack Sennett Comedies series."

Alice Day is being directed by Eddie Cline in a new two-reeler, and she is supported by Danny O'Shea, Joe Young, Mary Ann Jackson, Andy Clyde, Barney Hellum, Edward Quillan and Irving Bacon.

Harry Langdon is being directed by Harry Edwards, who has guided this famous comedian in most of his popular screen successes. Harry plays the rcle of a musician. The cast includes Ruth Hiatt, Vernon Dent, and Frank Whitson.

Ralph Graves is being directed by Lloyd Bacon in a fun-film involving a dental parlor. Thelma Parr, seen opposite Graves in several of his recent Pathe two-reelers, is again the star's leading lady. Others in this picture are Marvin Lobach, Eugenia Gilbert, Lee Willis and William McCall.

Billy Bevan and the "Mack Sennett" two-reel unit are being directed by Alf Goulding in a boarding house story. Natalie Kingston, Dave Morris, Patsy O'Byrne, Sunshine Hart and Barney Hellum are in the cast.

Comedies completed include an Alice Day comedy directed by Eddie Cline and a "Mack Sennett" two-reeler directed by Gilbert Pratt. Final titles on these new Pathe comedies have not been announced.

Two Special Comedies Listed By Century for November

JULIUS AND ABE STERN, officials of the Century Film Corporation, announce an unusual schedule of releases for the month of November. Five two-reelers will be released in all, including a new Buster Brown Comedy and a Century Special entitled "Red Riding Hood."

"Red Riding Hood" is a screen adaptation of the famous fairy story and was made with an all-star cast. Included in those who took part in this production are Arthur Trimble, now popular as Buster Brown, Baby Peggy, Louise Lorraine and Peter the Great, the famous dog star. Peter the Great, not to be confused with Pete the dog comedian, now playing Tige in the Buster Brown comedies, is seen in "Red Riding Hood" as the Wolf.

The Century release schedule includes comedies by Edna Marion, Wanda Wiley and Eddie Gordon, in addition to the two aforementioned.

The first release for the month will be "Nursery Troubles," an Edna Marian Century Comedy directed by William Watson. It depicts Edna as a nurse-maid in a baby-checking establishment. Besides containing several amusing and entertaining baby sequences, in which a dozen or more of lusty infants provide sentiment and comedy, "Nursery Troubles" shows Edna in a delightful role, filled with humor and laughable escapades. It is scheduled for release November 4th.

The next Century release, on November 11th, will be "A Taxi War," in which Eddie Gordon is seen as a belligerent taxi-driver, whose chief rival is played by Larry Richardson. Their troubles and battles will afford great satisfaction and amusement to anyone who ever harbored vengeance against a taxi-driver. It was directed by Noel Smith.

On November 18th, a new Wanda Wiley Comedy will be released. It is "A Speedy Marriage," and was directed by Edward I. Luddy. Miss Wiley's chief support in this two-reeler is Charles King. Its action concerns her escapades in dodging a group of persistent motorcycle cops, and the various disguises and occupations she takes to throw them off the track.

The Century Special, "Red Riding Hood," will be released November 21st. It is an ideal picture for children, and makes the fairy story thrilling and graphic, while at the same time, including many comedy scenes and laughable situations. Baby Peggy makes an ideal "Red Riding Hood." Some of the film is in color, and the tie-up with the title is doubly effective.

The last Century release of the month, on November 25th, will be "Oh, Buster," the third of the Buster Brown comedy series, and said to be far superior to the first two which now are establishing new records for Century Comedies. "Oh, Buster" was directed by Gus Meins, a newcomer to the Century lot. He has obtained the maximum comedy out of the ability of Pete the dog comedian, and has made Tige a very laughable and important figure in the picture. These comedies are adapted from the famous R. F. Outcault newspaper cartoons, but are played by real people. Buster is played by little Arthur Trimble, Mary Jane by Doreen Turner and the butler by Pinto Colvig.

Burns Starts New Comedy

Neal Burns has started on his new comedy at the Christie Studios, under the direction of Harold Beaudine. Yola d'Avril, formerly of the Parisian stage and of the "Follies" is appearing opposite Burns in his current vehicle. "Household Hints" is the working title of the production which Educational will release.

THIS SOCIETY GIRL GETS A KICK OUT OF LIFE IN THE "OPEN SPACES."—Wanda Wiley's latest Century comedy release, "Won by Law," a Universal release, shows us the delightful Wanda in a type of role that is refreshingly new to her.

"Brainstorm" Completed Latest Imperial Comedy

Director Robert Kerr has completed his latest William Fox Imperial comedy, "The Brainstorm," with Sid Smith and Katherine Bennett in the leading roles.

"The Brainstorm" has more locations than most two reel comedies, having covered Long Beach, Venice, Los Angeles, and Kernville, California.

Supporting Mr. Smith and Miss Bennett are Larry Stears and Frank Weed. "The Brainstorm" was filmed under the personal supervision of George B. Marshall, comedy director in chief.

Third Tuxedo Done

Johnny Arthur has just finished his third production for Educational-Tuxedo Comedies under the direction of William Goodrich. His latest two-reeler will show him as a boy in love with a girl who is movie-struck and in love with all the handsome heroes of the screen.

Pathe Announces Release of "The Amundsen Polar Flight"

PATHE announces the acquisition of the authentic motion-picture log of the Amundsen Polar expedition in the first attempt to reach the North Pole by airplane, which will be released on or about November 10 as a special screen attraction under the title—"The Amundsen Polar Flight."

Undoubtedly, this subject is one of the most remarkable human screen documents ever recorded since the advent of the cinema. It was photographed under the strangest conditions ever faced by a cameraman. He cranked his machine through all the perils of the Arctic air flight, even during the heart-rending period when they were lost to the world and facing death at every step, and only discarded his camera at the final moment when the last ounce of superfluous weight had to be dispensed with in the desperate but successful return trip.

As presented by Pathe, "The Amundsen Polar Flight" film takes the spectator on a "personally conducted" trip with the daring explorers who trusted their lives to Providence and two super-airplanes. Captain Raold Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, who at 63 sought to reach the North Pole by air, is first introduced. Then, Lincoln Ellsworth, the only American in the party makes a close-up bow. The two giant Dornier-Wal planes are shown. Each plane carried a crew of two besides the leader. With Amundsen in the N-25 were Liteutenant Riiser-Larsen, Norwegian Navy, and Master Mechanic Karl Feucht. In Ellsworth's plane, the N-24 were Lieutenants Omdal and Dietrichson.

An animated map discloses the fate of other expeditions, their routes and the route planned by Amundsen.

The picture is in three parts and will be released on November 10.

THE BIBLE LANDS TODAY AS PICTURED IN THE PATHE SERIES "A Pilgrimage to Palestine." This issue is the second and is titled "Nazareth."

Starts Second Mermaid Comedy

Stephen Roberts is starting on his second Educational-Mermaid Comedy starring Lige Conley with Estelle Bradley in support. The picture will take the comedy company to San Francisco.

Adams Starts New Comedy

Jimmie Adams starts a new Christie Comedy this week. Under the direction of William Watson, Adams will make "A Busy Bum." And for the first time in his cinema career, Jimmie will appear as "a knight of the Piccadilly in Rochester, the Apollo, Indianapolis; the Allen, Akron, O.; Loew's State, Memphis; Loew's Newark, Newark; as well as the Ascher Circuit, the Lubliner & Trintz Circuit, Finkelstein & Rubin, the Whitehurst circuit, the Saenger cricuit and similar chains.

In Leading Role

Virginia Vance will be seen again as leading lady with Lupino Lane, popular Follies comedian in his new Lupino Lane Comedy, "The Fighting Dude."

Pathe Short Feature Product Gets Big Display Space in Newspaper Advertising

NEWSPAPER clippings, photographs of theatre fronts and lobbies, house organs and letters reaching Pathe Exchange, Inc., offer conclusive proof that the short-feature comedy is being given more and more promotion space by showmen with each passing month.

The slogan that "anything that is worth buying is worth advertising" has caught on with exhibitors in a good many parts of the country. They have begun to appreciate the full box-office power of the short comedy and no longer use its length as a sole criterion of its entertaining value. A year or so ago a line or two of type, crowded in the feature space and sticking out like a sore finger, began to appear in the theatre advertisements. With the establishing of the ready-to-insert cornerblock copy by Pathe, the comedy got a fixed percentage of space in a good many pieces of copy. Now it is not uncommon to see the comedy taking up a third or even half of the advertising space and frequently the comedy is played up over the feature.

With the establishing of a series of Pathe Comedy weeks at the Egyptian Theatre in San Francisco, the entire advertising space was given over to the comedies.

The brand, the name of star and the title of Pathe's short comedies are now mentioned in a majority of the theatre newspaper advertisements, according to S. Barret McCormick, director of exploitation for Pathe. In slightly less percentage than this there is a cornerblock cut carried, with strong type display in many instances.

"We have frequently played up your Harry Langdon and 'Our Gang' Comedies over our feature production," says H. L. Davidson of The Burford Theatre Company, Arkansas City, Kans. We use the mats that your company furnishes free with each subject and find that they are very neat and effective. We also furnish our daily newspaper with readers and other copies of stories regarding the comedy release."

"There is no getting away from facts," says Nyman Kessler of the Atlantic Theatre, Atlantic, Mass., "advertising short features certainly draws dividends. From results to date, I shall continue to give as much attention to my one and two reelers as I do to my features."

In one issue of his house program, Mr. Kessler devoted seventy-five per cent of his space to the short features. The Burford Spotlight, house organ of the theatre chain referred to, runs cornerblock comedy ads in each issue as well as several readers. In the house organ of the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, the Pathe Comedy, as well as the Pathe News and Pathe Review, is given a good display just beneath the feature billing.

Editors of house organs say that the Pathe cornerblocks fit nicely into their make-up at the same time afford a much-needed comedy relief to the stories and billings of longer features. They are to the house organ what the cartoon is to the newspaper.

It was not so long ago that no pressbooks of any description were issued with the short comedy. For this reason the exhibitors never knew in advance what it was all about until the film arrived so that no effort was made to make a local tie-up with merchants. Pathe's four-page sheet gives complete information about the comedy and showmen are enabled to make tie-ups that are just as effective as tie-ups with their feature pictures.

Comedy displays now get a goodly share of space in the theatre lobbies and marquee. The Orpheum Theatre, Leavenworth, Kan., recently played "Our Gang" in the main lights to the exclusion of the feature film. A teaser question mark was used instead of the feature title. "Our Gang" even took precedence over the vaudeville acts.

THE WAY FRANK MILLER DOES IT.—The manager of the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., doesn't overlook any bets in featuring his short subjects. In this case Pathe gets the display honors.

Christie Plans 28 Two-Reel Productions for Next Season

THE season 1925-26 will mark the greatest in the history of the Christie Comedy. Production is well under way on a schedule which calls for twenty-eight two-reel productions, all of which will be released through Educational Film Exchanges. The new schedule, the largest thus far attempted, includes four separate series with Bobby Vernon, Neal Burns, Jimmie Adams, Billy Dooley and Walter Hiers as the stars.

But it is not only in numbers that the Christie program is big. Whatever the Christie stars may have offered during the past year, their new vehicles will be entirely different than anything they have ever attempted. Variety of characterizations in their offerings is the keynote of the new schedule, with one or more pictures released in each series, and thus far, they have adhered strictly to this rule.

This has been made possible partly through an exchange of directors with each production.

Earl Rodney, erstwhile Christie Comedian, has been raised to the rank of director, and with William Watson, Robert Thornby and Harold Beaudine, comprises the directorial staff.

Scott Sidney has been loaned to Metropolitan Pictures for one production. This production will be "The Million Dollar Handicap."

It is rather a difficult procedure to follow the Christie comedians in their respective efforts. Hiers' last effort was as a policeman; Jimmie Adams' most recent vehicle casts him as an immigrant; Bobby Vernon in his latest is an American Doughboy who returns to France four years after the armistice in search of his former sweetheart. Neal Burns has just finished enacting the part of a Swedish maid.

With the plan of alternating directors and a class of stories built around each of the stars, despite the enlarged production schedule each production will be distinctively humorous.

Frank Roland Conklin is editorial supervisor.

Sig Herzig and Hal Conklin are also working with Frank Conklin.

Norman McLeod is chief gag man at the studio.

Engages Well Known Players

Mildred Harris and Stuart Holmes Engaged By Hal Roach For Two Reel Comedies

Mildred Harris and Stuart Holmes, both well known to every movie fan, are the latest screen celebrities to be signed by Hal Roach for important roles in two-reel comedies for Pathe release. Miss Harris will appear opposite Charlie Chase and Stuart Holmes is working with Clyde Cook in his current comedy production.

The signing of these prominent players who have previously been identified with dramatic features is a continuance of Roach's announced policy of providing the best possible supporting casts for his various two-reel comedy series. Other dramatic players who have enhanced recent Roach casts are Gertrude Astor, Walter Long, George Siegeman, William J. Kelly and Lucien Littlefield. The producer believes that the dramatic players have an especially keen sense of acting values and are thus able to put over the comedy business effectively.

Miss Harris, long a popular featured player in special productions, will play the heroine opposite Charlie Chase in his next comedy which Leo McCarey will direct. Negotiations for Miss Harris' services were arranged by Warren Doane, General Manager of the Roach organization. Chase and McCarey have been preparing the new story under the supervision of F. Richard Jones, director-general, and are now completing the cast.

Three Directors in One Comedy

Two directors are being put through their paces by a third in Joe Rock's Blue Ribbon comedy "A Peaceful Riot" which is now being filmed.

Tweedy, known to millions as a comic of rare ability, is handling the megaphone, while his cast includes Slim Summerville and Leon Kent, who are directors as well as actors.

Special Local Editions of Pathe News

As an added service to exhibitors during the fifteenth anniversary celebration of newsfilms period, Pathe News will film and release exclusive and special local editions twice each week in all of the thirty-four big cities where the firm's exchanges are located.

Very often a news happening is not of national importance, yet it is of very great importance and interest to the locality in which it occurs. These special local editions will show the important events in each of the various cities and nearby territory immediately after their occurrence. They will picture well-known people and familiar scenes. Many people will have the novelty of seeing themselves and their friends; all will have the opportunity of seeing familiar scenes and landmarks.

Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News, made all arrangements for the making of the special local editions during his recent trip from coast to coast. It is this careful planning and the execution of these plans that has made this unusual special edition service to exhibitors possible.

F. B. O. Preparing for New Two-Reel Series

With work on the F. B. O. "Mazie" series by Nell Martin, speeding toward completion, plans are under way for a new two reel series by Sam Hellman called "Fighting Hearts" at the same lot, according to an announcement by B. P. Fineman, general manager of production.

F. B. O. promises to take a leading part among independent concerns in the two reel field. Following "Fighting Hearts" it will film "Bill Grimm's Progress" by H. C. Witwer.

Next season's plans, now being formulated, will embrace at least four two reel series by popular authors, it is stated.

Two Important Players Added to "Green Archer"

Ray Allen and Dorothy King, well known stage and screen players were added for the closing episodes of the Patheserial "The Green Archer." The already large cast of principals included the names of Allene Ray, Walter Miller, Burr McIntosh, Frank Lackteen, Wally Oettal, Walter P. Lewis, Stephen Grattan, Earl B. Powell, William Randall, and Jack Tanner. "The Green Archer" is an adaptation by Frank Leon Smith from the popular novel by Edgar Wallace. Spencer Bennet directed.

Ray Allen portrays the mystery role of Elaine Holding and appears to splendid advantage in this sympathetic type of characterization.

Dorothy King plays the part of Fay Savini and is one of the few screen celebrities who first entered the picture field as a scenario writer.

Virginia Warwick Returns to Screen in Pathe Serial

Virginia Warwick, former Mack Sennett player returns to the screen in an important role in the Patheserial production "Wild West," which features Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson.

Miss Warwick, who plays the second feminine lead in the Pathe chapter film, gives a highly commendable characterization as Elsie Withers, a jealous circus performer, ever seeking to defame the show's beautiful star, portrayed by Helen Ferguson.

GALLOPING VENGEANCE. (5,095 feet). Star, Bob Custer. A dandy from start to finish and winds up with a good lesson in it which I think all pictures ought to have. Star, Bob Custer and Bob sure did well in this one. People pass out and stop and say that's a fine show and that pleases me. Tone, good. Film in good shape. In fact, all the pictures I get from F. B. O. have been good and in good shape but a little to high. I get just as good pictures from others for less money, but I don't want anymore pictures from Progress. W. H. Clower, Liberty Theatre, Wirt, Oklahoma.

LET'S GO GALLAGHER. (5,182 feet). Star, Tom Tyler. A knockout. Small, but "oh my" this fellow looks enough like George O'Brien to be his brother. I hope F. B. O. will star him in another one like this. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

LIFE'S GREATEST GAME. (7,010 feet). Star, Johnnie Walker. A good picture, as baseball is the background. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

MAN OF NERVE. Star, Bob Custer. At last they have given Bob a story to appear in, must have been through error, as it seems to me that they have had a spite at Bob and picked the punkest stories heretofore for him. Give us some more like this, and Bob will commence to register at the old box office. Tone and appeal, good. Small town class town of 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

NORTH OF NEVADA. (5,000 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Fair western, lots of action but the white horse easily carried off the honors. Some horse; he will surely please horse lovers. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Small town class and farmers' town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

RANGE TERROR, THE. (4,378 feet). Star, Bob Custer. Our first Bob Custer picture which gave general satisfaction and produced a pleasant feeling in the box-office. It has no outstanding features, but is just a good hustlin' western that served to entertain. Tone and appeal, good. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

RIDIN' THE WIND. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. Good like all his others. Lots of action and comedy. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, seventy-five percent. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SILK STOCKING SAL. (5,367 feet), Star, Evelyn Brent. Pleased everybody and the majority classed this a good picture. Did a nice business. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading Pennsylvania.

THAT DEVIL QUEMADO. (4,720 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. A dandy little show that pleased everyone that saw it. Fred is going to be a "Comer" for us. He has what the massse like. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday and special, no. Student and working class town of 4,084. Admission 10-25. Raymond Cleveland, Lyric Theatre (500 seats) Lebanon, Tennessee.

WALL STREET WIZ. Star, Richard Talmadge. Just another good Talmadge and this boy is in a class by himself. It will take a long time to get anyone who can even come close to him. Tone and appeal good. Sunday and special, yes. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

First National

DECLASSE. (7,889 feet). Star cast. Good. Did nice business for three days. Griffith a favorite here. Special, no. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

DESERT FLOWER. (6,837 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Why can't we have more pictures of this type? Enjoyed by everyone and all go out pleased, then advise all their friends to come. Pictures like Colleen Moore is making are a pleasure to run. Moore is one of the best bets in the business today and any theatre not using them is just losing money. Played Sunday, good for any day. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

GRAUSTARK. Star, Norma Talmadge. A very fine picture, however, Talmadge doesn't mean so much as she used to since her appearance in so many costume pictures have no doubt distracted from her drawing power. This picture will please your audience and is up among the finest of the year. Tone, good. Sunday, okay. Special, yes. Appeal, eighty percent. Industrial class town of 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

HALF WAY GIRL. (7,570 feet). Star, Doris Kenyon. A knockout, thrills and action galore. Played Friday and Saturday and gave splendid satisfaction. You can stand on the door as they come out and throw out your chest on this kind. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

LADY. (7,337 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. Just fair. In my opinion too sad, though I must say that the work of Norma Talmadge was very, very good. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

LADY WHO LIED. (7,111 feet). Fair, gave general satisfaction. Lewis Stone always draws for me. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). Star cast. Gave best of satisfaction and did good business for three days at advanced admissions. For Sunday and special, yes. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

LOVE'S WILDERNESS. (7,037 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. This pleased quite well. South Sea scenes very good. Acting and cast fair. Will go over, although hard to put across in small place. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre, (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

MAKING OF O'MALLEY. Star cast. A story that holds interest and sends them home happy. Played Friday and Saturday and pleased highbrows and farmers alike. Clean and good for any day, play it. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

NECESSARY EVIL. (8,307 feet). Star cast. Good entertainment. Drew usual business. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

PACE THAT THRILLS. Star cast. Good entertainment. Played Wednesday and Thursday to ordinary business. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

SALLY. (8,636 feet). Star cast. Knocked 'em cuckoo, in my opinion better entertainment than lots of the so-called specials. First National can be proud of this one. Every house in every town should run it. Good for any day. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

SALLY. (8,636 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Nothing more delightful than to watch Colleen wade through a picture of this description. She sure works hard for the approval of the fans and her magnetic personality draws and keeps the audience with her. A dandy picture and a good remedy for the sick box office. Tone, good. Sunday and special yes. Appeal, one hundred per cent. General class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SCARLET WEST. Star cast. For houses that cater to western fans here is one that you will find hard to beat, especially good for this section of the country where the locale is laid. Drew extra business for us on Friday and Saturday. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

SELF MADE FAILURE. Star, Lloyd Hamilton. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

SHORE LEAVE. Star cast. Personally I did not care for this as well as "Classmates," but I got a lot of good comments and no knocks, so why worry. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

SILENT WATCHER. (7,576 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. This is a pretty good picture and will please all who see it, however, hasn't the box office qualities that will make it big money maker. A fine picture to run, but not big enough to get after in a big way, so save your enthusiasm for something more adapted to the box office. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Kentucky.

SO BIG. (8,562 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Colleen never before has done such acting as she did in this picture, especially the characterization of Selina Peake DeJong in her later years. Yet, evidently our patronage does not enthuse over this type of picture, or there wasn't enough appeal to invoke attendance. Lost plenty on this one, possibly on account of poor weather. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. General appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

SOUL FIRE. (8,262 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. A five reel feature drawn out into eight reels. Nothing in first three reels but a lot of blah! blah! about a young music composer who is looking for a soul inspiration or something like that in order to compose better music. He finally beats it from home leaving a fortune. Then the audience makes up for the picture. Is really entertaining from there on, William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SUNDOWN. (9,000 feet). Star cast. Fair, beef too cheap. H. Tammen, Moon Theatre, Yankton, South Dakota.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (8 reels). Star cast. A picture that carries a message for just the people who don't attend picture shows. Story carries intense interest and every bootlegger in the land should be compelled to see it, in an endeavor to "touch his conscience and reach his heart," if that be possible. Tone and appeal, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

Fox

CYCLONE RIDER. (6,672 feet). Star cast. Action, comedy, thrills, everything. Pleased immensely. The press sheet is a wow. I made a lobby display out of mine and it pulled more than all of the other paper. My print was very bad. Patches pulled apart by the dozens. Tone and appeal good. Sunday and special, no. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

DEADWOOD COACH. Star, Tom Mix. Tom Mix in one of his hard riding straight shooting and stage-coach stories. Of course, it is good for Tom is in a class by himself. He sure got well earned honors heaped on him on his recent pleasure trip to Europe. Draw from tourist class city of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

KENTUCKY PRIDE. Star cast. Three days to fair business. Picture is a poor race horse melodrama and fails to register. General class city of 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

Metro-Goldwyn

EAGLE'S FEATHER. (6,500 feet). Star cast. Was considered a good picture but failed to draw as it should. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

FASHION ROW. (7,300 feet). Star, Mae Murray. A new Mae Murray in a different role from her former prancing pictures and in which she does some real acting. The title is misleading as the plot is the melodramatic variety and Russian at that. But the public want it these days and it's spread on thick. If your people like this kind they will be pleased. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

MAN AND MAID. (5,307 feet). Star, Lew Cody. It's an Elinor Glyn story. About the poorest drawing power picture she has made. Nothing deep to it. Even the stars were the bunk. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

MONSTER, THE. (6,425 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Three days to good business. Picture liked by our patrons. Sunday and special, no. General class city of 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

WIFE OF THE CENTAUR. (6,586 feet). Star cast. Pretty good, but did not draw. Lost money on a two day run. Sunday and special, no. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

Paramount

AIR MAIL. (6,976 feet). Star cast. This is a good attraction and draws them in. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

SON OF HIS FATEHR. (6,925 feet). Star, Warner Baxter. Not new. As good as I expected and pleased fairly well. Nothing very heavy. The comedy situations were good. Paramount has made as good a picture here as they do with the Zane Grey's. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Town and country class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

THE SON OF HIS FATHER. Star cast. This one was good all right, yet it was a little disappointing to my patrons. It could have been better. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

COAST OF FOLLY. (7,000 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Good feature. Majority of fans expect too much of Gloria on account of name. Her acting is wonderful. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Not suitable for a special. Fair appeal. Mixed class town of 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star, Rod LaRocque. Nothing extra. Sea pictures not liked here. Broke even on it. Sunday, no. Special, no. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Fordyce Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

CODE OF THE SEA. (6,038 feet). Star, Rod La Rocque. A good sea picture, but they do not please here. They are looking for some jazzy stuff. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, seventy per cent. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordycke, Arkansas.

CROWDED HOUR. (6,508 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Here's a first rate war picture with Bebe Daniels as the central and enobling character, and leave it to Bebe to give a good account of herself. We need these reminders of great sacrifices made by the heroes who went over the top and suffered and died that we might be free. It is your duty, boys, to show this picture, and it's worth while, too. Draw from tourist class city of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

DRESSMAKER FROM PARIS. (7,080 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. This is a fashion parade of a picture that has them all beat a mile. Fourteen beauty prize winners who wear the lasest modes from Paris that will make your feminine patronage talk about it for nine days and besides a real love romance between Leatrice Joy and Allan Forrest and the mirth provoking Ernest Torrence thrown in makes an enjoyable evening's entertainment that should fill your house. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

EMPTY HANDS. (6,976 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Good outdoor picture. A little strong on the sex stuff, but I would say book it unless your patrons are too prudish. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Fair appeal. Small town class and farmers town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star, Cullen Landis. A dandy picture for all classes. Plenty of action and comedy, but will please the highbrows anyway. Cast, excellent. Tone good. Sunday, yse. Semi-speeial. Appeal ninety-eight per cent. Rural class town of 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT. (5,785 feet). Star cast. A mighty good picture. Will make you some dough if you will step on it. Sunday and special, no. All classse town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

ICEBOUND. (6,471 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A dandy William DeMille picture. Don't let them think it's a northern. Supporting cast is excellent. Good tone. Appeal, ninety per cent. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Draw farming class, town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

IN THE NAME OF LOVE. Star, Great Nissen. Clever comedy-drama that went over good. Greta is a comer there's no doubt; should please most any audience. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per

Between Ourselves

A get together place where we can talk things over

Boys, not long ago I jumped into another part of the magazine with our short subject reports—and some of you have voiced the opinion—held by many, I hope—that it was a good stunt—a step ahead in making things better for you.

This week I'm doing some more jumping—but it isn't a change in the reports activities—it's something entirely new.

You know it's been my idea to find out what you folks want—then go after it. Well—in another place in this week's issue you'll notice the spreading out of that idea in a new quarter.

I think you're going to like the new department.

I know I'm going to work for your interest there as I have here.

BUT I SHALL NOT LAY OFF STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER!

HERE'S MY PROMISE. I'M RIGHT WITH THIS DEPENDABLE TIP DEPARTMENT SAME AS ALWAYS—AT YOUR SERVICE. VAN.

cent. Mixed class town of 1,400. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

LIGHT OF THE WESTERN STARS. (6,650 feet). Star, Jack Holt. This is as good a Zane Grey as we have had for some time and pleased all my patrons. It is worthy of extra advertising in any house and is truly a big western. Much better than "Wild Horse Mesa." Special, yes. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. Industrial class town of 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

LITTLE FRENCH GIRL. (5,628 feet). Star, Alice Joyce. Just an ordinary program picture. Good for one day only. Put good short subject before and A-1 comedy following it. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

LOST, A WIFE. (5,377 feet). Star, Greta Nissen. Sophisticated comedy-drama. Not much story, but acting and settings splendid. Robert Agnew has an engaging smile but he worked it overtime in this one. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

LOST A WIFE. (6,420 feet). Star, Adolph Menjou. This is a sophisticated married life comedy drama. No true comedy but several amusing situations. But for the work of Menjou it would be away below the ordinary. He makes it a little better than the average picture. Greta Nisson, the new star, wears good clothes, but she isn't another Anna Q. Nilsson by any means. Her face would neither win a beauty contest or stop a clock. There are thousands of better looking girls in America who can act as well as she. A trifle risque. Sunday and special, no. Fair appeal. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre, Graham, Texas.

LUCKY DEVIL. (5,935 feet. Star, Richard Dix. My patrons sure did enjoy this one; it's good for any day and will be a good one for Saturday. It has everything—thrills, comedy. This one will go good for more than one day in small towns. Draw small town class. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

LUCKY DEVIL. (5,935 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Boys, here is a good one, and if you want a thriller, here it is. I think it has one of the best auto races I have ever seen in pictures. You can't go wrong on this one, as it will build up. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, city 15,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. Ed. Malhiot, Monarch Theatre (659 seats), Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

MARRY ME. (5,526 feet). Star, Dorothy Devore. Good program picture, but didn't bring them in. Price of picture too high. Only broke even. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, fair. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

MEN AND WOMEN. (6,232 feet). Star cast. Just did fair business for me. It is a very ordinary program picture. The title does not draw. Fair tone. No appeal and no for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, city 15,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. Ed. Malhiot, Monarch Theatre ((569 seats), Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

MISS BLUEBEARD. (6,453 feet). Star, Bebe Daniles. A comedy drama of the first rank. Raymond Griffith is really the "big show." He acts like a comedian. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. Farmers and merchants town of 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

MISS BLUEBEARD. (6,453 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Was a little late in using this picture, but consider it to be the very best comedy star has made. Was good from the start, which is not true of most pictures. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

NEW BROOMS. Star, Neil Hamilton. A very clever comedy drama that pleased quite well. Has not any extra drawing power. Picture will take where you have no rural patrons. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Town and country class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star, Jack Holt. One of the best small town pictures ever made. They all came and said it was great. Jack Holt, Ernest Torrence and Lois Wilson do the honors. Used extra advertising and drew a very, very good crowd. Paper is fine—business getter. Print was fair Suitable for Sunday and as a special. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

PATHS TO PARADISE. (6,741 feet). Star, Betty Compson. With Raymond Griffith and Betty Compson in a picture it just has to be good. This one is a knockout. Lots of action, laughs, mystery, and comedy situations. To see Betty and Raymond trying to steal the jewels from the owner and from each other was alone worth the price of admissions. All comments were favorable. However, the posters advertised Noah Beery. I couldn't find anyone who saw him. Tone and appeal good. Sunday and special, okay. All classes in small town. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

PONY EXPRESS. (9,929 feet). Star cast. A box office winner. Pleased patrons one hundred per cent. Tone, good. Sunday and special, yes. One hundred per cent audience appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placervile, California.

Sunday and special, yes. Very good audience appeal. Town and country class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

RUGGED WATER. (6,015 feet). Star cast. A waste of film stock; public no longer cares for crude stuff like this. Tone O. K. Poor appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw family and student class, town 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

RUGGED WATER. (6,015 feet). Star, Warner Baxter. Not as good as I expected: very little action. No good for Saturday. Will please the ones that like a sea story without action. Good tone. Appeal fair here. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SACKCLOTH AND SCARLET. (6,732 feet). Star, Alice Terry. A human story with a great appeal, portraying the waywardness of one sister and the self-sacrifice of the other. Alice Terry never looked sweeter nor acted better; and Dorothy Sebastian, a Ziegfeld Follies girl, is very good, indeed, as the frivolous, headstrong sister. Orville Caldwell is ideal as the bashful cowboy. A very convincing story and one that should satisfy the most exacting audience. Draw from tourist city of 3,000. Admission 20-50. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

SACKCLOTH AND SCARLET. (6,732 feet). Star, Alice Terry. Played two days to fair business. The censors sure played havoc with this, here in this state. Very good show for the women fans. Print was fair. Good appeal, tone good for adults. Maybe as special? Draw better class, town 4,500. Admis-

Al Hit Hard

Just after last week's issue started out with the call for help from some of the old-timers of "Our Gang" who had not been in lately, Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania, handed me a straight from the shoulder proof of his constancy with three envelopes, crammed with blanks—all filled out too.

The boys thank you, Al.

DIDJA EVER HEAR the story of the Jew and the Irishman? It seems that The Cohens and The Kellys sion 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Personally I don't care for this type of picture but I had better attendance than usual so Valentino must have some fans here. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Fair appeal. Small town class town of 600. Admission 10-20, 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

SALOME OF THE TENEMENTS. (7,017 feet). Stars, Jetta Goudal, Godfrey Tearle. A high priced picture and as sorry as I ever saw. Most of the people left the show before it was over. A bunch of Russian Jews thrown together—with no story. Tone, not any. Appeal none. No for Sunday or special. Draw from college town, 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

SALOME OF THE TENEMENTS. (7,017 feet). Star cast. Good program picture, but didn't bring them in. Lost money on it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, none. All classes town of 1,000. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

SHOCK PUNCH. (6,151 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Dix does some wonderful acting in this picture; consider it one of his best pictures. Picture has a few thrills—but consider it extra good. Good tone. Appeal, and Sunday, yes. No as special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

SINNER IN HEAVEN. (6,621 feet. Star cast. Boy! They sure liked this here. And this is a small town, too. I was afraid of it, but it sure pleased. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Appeal, okay. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

Sticking together, standing by. Giving their best without complaint. Telling you what's a good film to buy, tipping the one that ain't!

Regular fellows, men sincere, trying to serve their fellow men: boosting the stuff that you needn't fear—slamming some, now and then.

Just to the pictures, fair to you; whether they write high-brow or slang—give them the credit, these boys—true blue—PROUD TO BE CALLED "OUR GANG!"

SINNERS IN HEAVEN. (6,621 feet). Star cast. A jazzy picture, but that is okay, sometime. At lease I made money on it. That is what I am after. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Fordyce Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

PATHS TO PARADISE. (6,741 feet). Stars, Ray Griffith, Betty Compson. Raymond Griffith is becoming quite a favorite, and any picture in which he stars is sure to please all. Good tone and appeal. Draw mixed class, town 1,800. Admission 25. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvedere, New Jersey.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. First let me state that this is most emphatically a box office picture. It gets all the business there is to get. People came who do not ordinarily attend the picture shows. And they all said they liked it. It is a picture that people are afraid to say they do not like. I believe it is the best box office picture I have ever seen in my fifteen years in the show business. But in the face of so many glowing reports I am forced to say that I have seen lots of better pictures. The prologue is extra good. The only mistake in it was the unhappy choice of Roberts to play Moses. In viewing the picture I saw Roberts, not Moses. Roberts is one of the best and most popular actors we have but we do miss his cigar. He appears unnatural without it. The modern part of the story is fair. In fact, it is better than an ordinary drama. The picture as a whole is good, it is better than the ordinary but from all of the glowing reports I expected a much better picture. But I would advise any house to play it. Of course I don't suppose there is any money in pictures like these. The producers have them figured out to where the exhibitor only acts as an agent during the showing of such picturse, but it will draw tremendous crowds to your theatre and create worlds of good will. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, okay. Special, okay. Special, yes. All classes town of 3,000. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

THE TOP OF THE WORLD. (7,167 feet). Star, James Kirkwood. A South African locale rich in thrils and suspense with James Kirkwood playing a dual role and exquisite Anna Q. Nilsson displaying her emotional ability. There is a scene of a great storm and the bursting of a dam that floods the country and brings the lovers together and happiness. Good entertainment value. Draw from tourist class city of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

WANDERER OF THE WASTELAND. (6,700 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Wonderful scenery, fine story. Natural color, not a black and white scene. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. Farm class town of 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (250 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Another big one that missed. It is hardly above the average cheap western and is lacking in that something that is essentional to a good picture. If you have booked this for goodness sake don't say much about it. Not worthy of any extra advertising. Special, no. Appeal, seventy per cent. Industrial class town of 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats Hazard, Kentucky.

WILD, WILD SUSAN and LOVERS IN QUARANTINE. Star, Bebe Daniels. Here is two real good comedy dramas, both shows pleased my patrons. Good for Saturday or any other day, they will please them. Many good compliments from patrons. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

WILD, WILD, SUSAN. (5,774 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Far better than "The Manicure Girl" with the same star. Plenty of action and comedy. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

Pathe

GIRL SHY. (7,457 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. A good picture from every angle. But business was terrible. We're through with Lloyd's unless we can get prices commensurate with our patronage; any cheap western will get us more change than the best of the Lloyd's. Pathe and Lloyd take the dollars and leave the exhibitor a small crop of pennies. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. General appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. D. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

Producers' Dist. Corp

HARRY CAREY PICTURES. We can depend on Carey any time, rain or shine. He always packs them in here, and Producers don't try to take all the profit in film rentals. The prints are good. Carey's pictures are always good. He makes us money. Now what else could a fellow want? Student and working class town of 4,084. Admission 10-25. Raymond Cleveland, Lyric Theatre (500 seats), Lebanon, Tennessee.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star, Harry Carey. A good picture of its class and went over satisfactorily. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Schulberg

VIRGINIAN. Star, Kenneth Harlan. The best cowboy story every published, written by Owen Wister, dedicated to Teddy Roosevelt and splendidly put on the screen. The characters of the book are perfectly portrayed by Kenneth Harlan, Florence Vidor, Raymond Hatton and Pat O'Malley. It's a peacherino. Money in your pocket. Draw from tourist class city of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre, Kerrville, Texas.

WHITE MAN. (Schulberg). Star, Kenneth Harlan. (6,370 feet). A romance of the jungles, containing thrills, fights, love and everything that makes an exciting picture with a happy ending. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, seventy per cent. General class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Universal

HEADWINDS. (5,486 feet). Star, House Peters. A heavy sea romance with a reckless shipmaster who kidnaps the girl he loves on her wedding day, carries her to sea and through stern commands and finally tenderness, converts her to his idea of real love. A splendid picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. General class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

MAD WHIRL. (6,174 feet). Star cast. Another cheap program picture that means a loss to any one that plays it if their patrons are like mine. Don't boost this junk. Special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. Industrial class town of 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

OH, DOCTOR. (6,507 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. If all features were as good as "Oh, Doctor" and all film contracts as satisfactory as Universal's complete service, I would think the millenium for the exhibitor had arrived. Mill and farming class. Admission 25 cents. L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

United Artists

LOVING LIES. Star, Monte Blue. This picture was very well liked by patrons and we had many favorable comments on it. Did fair business. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

RICHARD THE LION HEARTED. Star, Wallace Berry. This may be a little old, but if you haven't played it, get it and turn it over to the Public School and it will make you money. It's a good picture, can be bought right and the kind that can be played in years to come. Very good tone. Probably suitable for Sunday. Very good appeal. Student and working class town of 4,084. Admission 10-25. Raymond Cleveland, Lyric Theatre (500 seats), Lebanon, Tennessee.

AMERICA. (14,000 feet). Star cast. While this may be considered an outstanding production something was lacking. In spite of extra exploitation it failed to draw. Those who saw it seemed satisfied without being enthusiastic, but the run showed a loss. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Vitagraph

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN. (6,893 feet). Star, Anita Stewart. A wonderful northern drama with Wolf, the noted war dog, sharing honors with Anita. Pictures of this sort gets them in on Sunday and this one is exceptionally good in direction, acting, scenery and story. Go after it strong. General class city of 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Sending dependable tips every week is a fine and generous habit to get into.

But if you can't get the time each week, then when you DO get time, don't shoot in just what you've finished playing—remember the ones you haven't reported and send them along too.

These free-will reports may seem to break in on other work—but just think how many of the boys are grabbing the tip department each week and watching for YOUR name!

Warner Brothers

MY WIFE AND I. Star, Irene Rich. This is just a fair offering and it don't pay to show such. Didn't draw very good. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Town and country class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

RECOMPENSE. (7,480 feet). Star, Marie Prevost. Here is a very fine picture. My advice step on it. War scenes very good and true to life. Acting and cast very good. Tone, fair. Sunday, fair. Special, no. Appeal, very good. Town and country class town of 1,200. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

LOVER'S LANE. (6,000 feet). Star cast. Fair program picture that pleased the majority. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

DANGER AHEAD. (State Right). Star, Dick Talmadge. Oh boy, the best of program pictures. Dick keep it up. Sunday, yes. Town of 3,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

LOST TRIBE. (State Right). Star cast. Very interesting travel picture for an educational show it was good. But it looks as though the rank and file don't care to be educated. WAGON TRAILS. (State Right). (5 reels). That made me money. A dandy western full of pep. If you haven't played this one buy it and play it. You won't be disappointed. Fine for any day that you want a real western. Tone good and films in good shape, as I find all of the pictures that come from Oklahoma. I've always found them fair in their dealings, a thing I can't say for some of the rest I have dealt with. The worst skinning I've had was from Progress. W. H. Rittenberg Makes a Plea for Better Ads To Get Real Results from Newspaper Work

RECENTLY we reproduced in the advertising examples section a display from A. S. Rittenberg, advertising manager of the Fulton Theatre, Jersey City, showing how he blanketed the page of theatre ads with a space not very much larger than the others for The Sky Raider. At various other times we have given similar examples, though this Pathe example was unusually good.

Acknowledging the use of the material, Mr. Rittenberg writes: "It certainly is a pleasure to receive recognition for what I think is the most important medium of advertising in our business—the newspapers. It is a mystery to me that so few exhibitors realize the value of this medium. Most of them are so inefficient in preparing their copy."

ANOTHER RITTENBERG EXAMPLE

We could write a couple of pages from this text and still leave much unsaid, but Mr. Rittenberg assuredly points to one of the largest wastes in the exhibition business—the inefficient newspaper display.

The Value Varies

Some managers will not agree with Mr. Rittenberg as to the vital importance of newspaper advertising. This is all—or largely—a matter of locality. Some sections can draw more from the newspapers than others. Lem Stewart places the average draught of newspaper advertising at about 20 per cent. In some localities this is less and in others much greater. It depends upon the town and the class of the patrons.

To Mr. Rittenberg, in Jersey City, newspaper work means more than it does to the small town manager whose patrons respond more quickly to the appeal of the perambulator and the lure of the lobby display. In the small town most persons get to see the lobby. Practically all can be shown the perambulator.

In Jersey City it is different. The Fulton draws from a larger radius. It is not probable that the bulk of the prospects pass the Fulton daily. Comparatively few would see the perambulator, since so many work in New York.

Papers His Best Bet

His surest means of reaching the greatest number is the newspaper, and even here he is handicapped by the fact that most of his prospects read the New York papers. They little more than glance over the Jersey City paper for the local news, and he has to work fast and surely if he catches them as they skin the pages. He must stand out. And he does.

Of course there is a large class who look the paper over in search of the amusement ads, and he wants to get their attention first, but the real trick is to catch the man who is not looking for amusement, but who is sold into the idea of going to see a show. That is where Mr. Rittenberg makes his advertising profitable. He takes a little more space and gets ten times the value out of the idea.

We reproduce one example; a cross page (short one column), on The Gold Rush. It appears on a page with other announcements of the picture, but the Fulton got it first, and he is trying to get as many as possible to see it at the Fulton instead of nearer home later on. Probably all of the border cuts were obtained from a single mat, but it looks like an elaborate design. For the second day he broke to eight four inch single scatters with five columns given to all of the local theatres. Your eye cannot strike the page without lighting upon Chaplin. It completely blankets everything else on the page. You see only Chaplin and the Fulton signature. It is not a new idea; he has worked it himself on other attractions, but after the first big smash the dividend space will kill everything else.

He got more than his share of the business through making the best appeal.

The Real Problem

But Mr. Rittenberg only skins the surface of the real problem. The big thing is the tremendous waste of opportunity that is represented by the inefficient work of thoughtless managers.

To most managers a newspaper ad is that and nothing more. It is a five or ten or fifty inch space into which something can be dumped. And most of them merely dump. They do not plan, they do not figure, often they do not even use the material created for their assistance by the producers of film. They seem to think that if they put some type into the space they are advertising.

They are not. Often they actually unsell the picture instead of disposing of extra tickets.

YOU GET THE IDEA SOMEHOW THAT CHAPLIN WILL BE THERE

A novelty display in seven ten and one-halfs for The Gold Rush from A. S. Rittenberg, of the Fulton Theatre, Jersey City, which supports his argument in favor of intelligent newspaper work to get the fullest returns from space investment.

Boston Braves Have Competition from Wm. Fox

No matter whether space costs ten cents an inch or fifty cents a line, the advertising is important, and the manager is cheating himself or his employer unless he makes the very best possible use of the space for which he is paying.

That is what Mr. Rittenberg means.

He knows that good work can be done, for week after week he goes out and licks most of the other ads. And he does it by giving time and thought to his displays.

How Is Your Show?

A manager who has to look after innumerable details may not have as much time for newspaper work as a special advertising agent, but we contend that he can give it some THOUGHT.

For more than fourteen years this publication has given not less than two pages of examples of newspaper advertising each week, with comment on the good and bad. Any manager within six months can learn to at least get good result through a careful study of these examples, and yet even the larger houses still offer work that would disgrace a high school boy.

If you can make a two dollar space sell $2.10 worth of tickets, you have a profit. If you can make it sell $20 worth of admissions, you have a larger profit. It is all merely a matter of thinking a little and studying a lot.

Why not get the most for your money?

Stressed Dreams

In the campaign on Beggar on Horseback at the New Madison Theatre, Madison, Wis., the dream angle of the play was stressed in most of the advertising elements including a phonograph hook-in to "dream" titles, which is a clever idea.

Students of the University of Wisconsin wrote advertising copy along dream lines, and 10,000 postal cards were mailed which were printed "Not a horse in it, nor a beggar. Just laughs, laughs, laughs." Some 15,000 broadsides were dropped from an airplane, and the perambulator was a man in fantastic dress on a caparisoned horse.

The newspaper advertising carried the line: "Don't send the kiddies. It's not for them." This may be taken to suggest an improper moral, which in turn might hurt the play. A better line would have been "they won't appreciate the satire." This will convey the suggestion that the adult readers will.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

William Fox's super-picture, "The Iron Horse," was somewhat longer than the average features used at this theatre, and, therefore, the stage numbers had to be cut down.

Consequently, there was only one stage presentation, this being in the nature of an atmospheric prologue built upon scenes from the picture. In addition there was the usual Mark Strand Topical Review. The whole show, however, required 2 hours and 12 minutes, of which time "The Iron Horse" took up 1 hour and 49 minutes; the prologue 5 minutes; and the Topical Review its accustomed 8 minutes.

Each deluxe performance, of which there are four, was opened with the popular Von Suppe overture, "Light Cavalry," played by the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra. The lights were as follows: foots and border of large stage in blue; two orange Mestrum floods of 150 amperes from the dome on the orchestra; spangled purple draw curtains closed across the small production stage and lighted by green foots, two lemon arc spots and two straw arc spots; mirror mosaic vases in transparent windows at either side of stage lighted by green and pink spots. Eight minutes for the overture.

Following the Topical Review came one of the most effective and elaborate atmospheric prologues that has been presented in this theatre for many a season. The scene represents Promontory Point, Utah, where the linking of the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific took place, and around which point the action of the picture is mostly centered. No details were overlooked to make the prologue realistic. The backdrop represented a typical western railroad station of the Reconstruction Period, with a set cabin to the right. Across the stage ran a railroad track, over which, at the close of the prologue, ran a profile reproduction of the famous engine "Jupiter," lighted and steaming as it slowly approached the station. A tenor, a baritone and a basso, costumed as "The Three Musketeers," the comic relief of the picture, were the central characters of the prologue. With them appeared six members of the ballet, costumed 1860 style, and a banjo player in the typical pioneer garb of the day. The selections used were as follows: "The Iron Horse March," played by the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra as an introduction: "John Brown's Body," sung by the "Three Musketeers;" "Silver Threads Among the Gold," by a tenor; "Jubilo" by a baritone; and "Drill Ye Terriers Drill," by the Ensemble. Lights: 3 amber spots and 2 orange box lamps on backdrop; orange baby spot shining through window in set cabin; red borders and amber foots. At close 2 light blue baby spots and blue foots dim up and all other lights dim off.

Whip Cracking Contest is a Don Q. Boomer

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

A FLOAT THAT CLEANED UP SUMMER BUSINESS IN BROOKLYN

This is a little late getting in, but this display packed the huge Metropolitan Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., during the September hot spell. The house's three lobbies were put into hula grass skirts to help things along. Not the marquise.

Whip Crackers Got Lot of Publicity

Knowing that cracking the stock whip such as Fairbanks uses in Don Q. is no joke, M. B. Hustler rolled up the publicity for the Capitol Theatre with a contest for boys under sixteen.

He tied up a local newspaper as sponsor for the stunt, and the paper liked it so well that it offered a radio set as first prize and ran publicity stories for a week, winding up with a 30 inch advertisement. The theatre gave prizes of $5 and $3 with a $2 booby prize to the worst performer.

The contest was decidedly colorful, for if you do not know how to manipulate the ten foot lash you are likely to wind it around your neck or a telegraph pole. One kid thought he was going to be chocked to death when the lash coiled about his throat.

The ten year old boy who stands just to the left of the picture of Fairbanks in the cut won the first prize, for he could get a report like a pistol shot out of the snaky lash.

After the contest the boys were paraded to the theatre to see the picture, and at every street corner the procession would stop to permit the winner to demonstrate his skill.

About three times to the block Mr. Hustler would have a boy planted on the sidewalk yell "Where you guys going?" and back would come the response: "To the Capitol Theatre to see Don Q." They didn't need a band.

Mr. Hustler says it's a wonderful business maker.

The band of the U. S. S. Savannah, a battle cruiser heading a submarine flotilla, played as a stage attraction the first three days of the run of Shore Leave at the Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, during the Diamond Jubilee celebration.

Marines and sailors from all United States and foreign ships were on the free list for the week.

Sent Sand

Using large sized pay envelopes, D. Roscoe Faunce, of the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., had them printed up: "A sample of Florida real estate sent you by Gloria Swanson from The Coast of Folly in which she appears all next week at the Strand."

Of course the envelopes contained a portion of sand. Hooking to the real estate boom and the fact that part of the action takes place in Palm Beach gave the stunt unusual appropriateness.

Tickets for Adonis Put Over Lightnin'

It is not altogether new, but it always is a hard worker.

The week before the showing of Lightnin' at the Colonial Theatre, Indianapolis, Bingham and Cohen sent a pair of seats to the secretary of each business lunch organization with the statement that they had been contributed by Madge Bellamy, of the cast.

The Rotary and similar organizations used the item to jazz up the luncheon period, to the handsomest man in the organization. and a few pairs of tickets brought an unusual amount of solid publicity.

The newspapers ran good-natured stories and told the night the tickets would be used, and in a number of instances delegations from the club were present to cheer their winning member on his entrance.

It worked very well in Indianapolis, but it's great small town stuff.

Science Stunt

One of the ideas which helped The Lost World over to a breaker business at the Strand Theatre, Hartford, Conn., was a pseudo scientific stunt.

A series of illustrated stories was run in the daily paper describing the various monsters shown in the Rothacker picture. The contestant, working from the measurements given, was required to work out the approximate weight of the beasts.

Some trusted to lead pencils and paper. Others rushed off to the library to borrow the encyclopedia, but all were given a real interest in the coming attraction.

THE BOYS WHO SNAPPED THE STOCK WHIP IN SACRAMENTO

It is not as simple as it looks to get a snap out of a ten or twelve foot stock whip, such as Fairbanks uses in Don Q. All of these youngsters tried it as an advertising stunt for the Capitol Theatre and a ten year old boy walked off with the prize.

The Series Card is a Good Seller for Serials

Series Cards Have Stood a Long Test

Just to prove that he is offering no snap judgment, M. W. Larmour, of the National Theatre, Graham, Texas, sends in a set of five serial cards used by him to put over The Ace of Spades, with a similar set used last year for The Ghost City, and a set in 1923 on The Beasts of Paradise. He says that he works it every year, but only once a year. This is the first card of the present series.

THE SERIAL CARD

The other four cards are precisely similar save that they carry different numbers. The idea is to get a full complement of five cards through exchange.

Mr. Larmour makes one number the control, printing fewer of these than of the others, but says that he issues about double the number of control cards since only about half of them are turned back in a town his size.

The other four are put out in large numbers so that the children may have plenty of trading material. The advertising value comes from the efforts of the children to acquire a complete set of cards.

The idea is far from new. Thirty odd years ago you got a pipe if you collected coupons to spell the name of a brand of pipe tobacco, and even that was not the start.

It's not new, but it is a first class annual stunt, particularly for a serial. We mentioned this last year, when Mr. Larmour sent that set in, but the idea seems to have been forgotten, so we are starting it on its rounds again. Try it and you'll be pleased with the result.

Years ago the Star Theatre, Chambersburg, W. Va., had its roll tickets printed with a letter of the house name, offering admissions for sets spelling "Star." It had the town in a ferment for a while. You might try that, too.

When you get a good idea, pass it along for the benefit of the rest. They do the same for you.

4,000 Megs

Catering to the University crowd, E. B. Roberts supplied a batch of 4,000 megaphones at one of the big games on the home grounds, to tell that The Freshman was coming to the Majestic Theatre, Austin, Texas. This was one meg to each 2½ patrons, but it was sufficient.

A local clothier paid for the printing in return for a small card announcing the display of College Freshmen's suits in his window, and gave plenty of advertising space in the window, as well.

The Freshman broke the records at regular prices and attendance records at any price.

around the graduation exercises of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. It was fine publicity, though it came too early to have the fullest effect, since the picture was not ready for release. The Valentine advertises this picture, but there is no mention made of the fact that the picture actually was made in Annapolis. There is a reference to 2,400 cadets just back of Novarro's neck, but nothing to tell that these actually were cadets and not California extra players. There is also the statement that "You'll roar at the pranks of the Naval Academy," but nothing to tell that the academy was the real thing and not a studio set. And the pranks were "at" rather than "of" the academy. There is nothing in the entire space to mark this as a special locale. Moreover the display is not particularly good. The half tone of the star is very weak and there is nothing in the two line cuts to contribute particular strength. It is like buying butter at a butter price and selling it for oleomargerine. On the other hand the Washington space carries strength. There is more authority to the black lettered star and title, and the super-imposition on the naval scene makes a direct hook-up to the naval atmosphere. Moreover there is a strong style appeal with the fact that the picture was made at Annapolis for the heading. It's the first thing you get, after the title. The statement is made that "this is the picture that was filmed at the Naval Academy in June." Very wisely there is no reference to the President's refusal, but you'll probably remember that, and there is a strong line toward the bottom which tells that the picture was "produced with the cooperation and approval of the U. the cast." There is also room for mention of four supporting players and a full listing of the short features. This merely goes to show that there is something to this advertising game other than cuts and type. The Toledo space probably got all the Novarro fans. Probably it did a satisfactory business. But we think that some who did not come, who are not Novarro fans, might have been coaxed with the appeal of government cooperation. Assuredly it would not have driven business away to have used the better cut and the ready made selling angle.

Chaplin Ad Not a "Better Than"

Pin a fragrant rose to someone out in Cleveland. We do not know who it is, but he works for the Circle Theatre there, and he fixed up this 150 by 4. It's a nice open display, with plenty of appeal, but that's not the reason the rose is awarded. Take a look at the Benday panel. In the smaller sized cut it may not be as legible as in the original, so we will save your eyes. Instead of proclaiming the fact that The Man on the Box is "better than Charley's Aunt," this genius tells that "By comparison Charley's Aunt was only a pacemaker." What do you know about that? Instead of pulling the old bromide out of the corner, this chap gets something that sells ten times as well. He says it is better than the other, but he does not use the threadbare old phrase. He dug into his brain and got out a new and better idea. He gives the impression that this is not merely better, but very much better. "Better than" has simply come to mean another play with the same star as a former success. It has lost any ring of conviction through overuse. It is more apt to kill a sale than to clinch one. This will work only on a comedy, but perhaps it will lead you to get out a new one for a drama. We heartily hope that it will. Meanwhile this Cleveland chap has made the day brighter for us. Apart from this, you will probably like the display, which gains strength from the contrast between the Benday and the line cut. Each helps the other if you will remember that the line cut is stronger and give that to the phase which needs it most. Putting that figure in halftone would have spoiled the display. As it stands, the panel centers interest on the title and star and still gives greater prominence to the figure than would come from its use with straight type. If the Circle can contribute such examples as these, you will see frequent reproductions.

Sells Drusilla With a Hurrah

Evidently the Keith-Albee Hippodrome Theatre, Baltimore, thought very well of Drusilla With a Million. It knew that it had a picture that had pulled a load of business in New York, and figured that it would be worth while getting behind, so it sold off the title with a whoop. It is a 75 by 3, which is a little more than five inches drop, and most of the space is given to the cut work, with a Clyde Cook comedy down in the corner. But the talk is going to sell the story, once the cuts get attention for the space. Probably it will be too small to be read in the three-times reduction, so this is the essential copy: "Here at last is the picture about which an entire nation has been talking. Proclaimed by tne million women as the finest projected by the silver screen since the very dawn of the photoplay as an instrument of real entertainment. This picture is filled with drama as you have never seen it before—sentiment as the screen never revealed before—romance as you have always hoped for yourself and such comedy as you have never dreamed of. See it all in this great picture." Taking it by and large, we think the K-A manager figured that this was a pretty fair play. It may be plan book copy; it sounds like Nat Rothstein, but the house uses it and stands sponsor, and probably it drove the business in. Certainly it should. Such extreme praise is seldom warranted in a newspaper advertisement, but Drusilla seems to be a sort of Abie's Irish Rose when it comes to cleaning up. Drusilla will make good with the public even for this very strong endorsement, but if you tell all that about an average picture you will waste the next two or three space bills. But you can repeat the handling of the cuts and title for any title. This is very well done.

Iron Horse Has a Good Display

We like this five nines from the Terminal Theatre, Newark, on the Iron Horse so well that we are holding it to two columns since the drawing will not stand further reduction. We would like it even better if the small lettering had been done in type instead of pen work, but we presume that the Newark papers do not stock the fancy faces. A Della Robia, such as is used for the main heading of this department, would have ben more legible and just as attractive, but though we do not like hand lettering, we are ready to admit that this makes a prettier display than would the use of straight roman or the usual full face such as they have on newspaper machines. But this is not a matter of type. The layout is doing part of the selling, and perhaps as much as the type argument itself. Precisely the same words could have been crowded into a smaller space or even been crowded with larger letters in this space and the thing would have been a blot. It is not sufficient that you have good copy. You must display your arguments attractively. Talk does not become sales argument until it has been read, and the reading must be made easy. Most of the selling value is in the title, which has been so widely advertised, but backing this up is the value of the cast of players and the large number of extras and animals employed. All of this will help to create a desire to see the play if properly presented. It may win in some, perhaps many, additional patrons, provided that they can be coaxed to read about it. This space is well filled and yet it creates the suggestion of largeness that makes for easy reading. The type is not jammed against the cut, the cut does not detract from the type. It is all like a clean and comfortable sitting room.

FITS THE SUBJECT

cannot sell melodrama on the same lines as a society play any more than you can sell melodrama and farce with the same appeal. Pictures make a fine seller for real melodramas, but the Garden Theatre, Baltimore, gets away with Lorraine of the Lions with just one cut, and from the plan book, at that. No lover of melodrama is going to pas up the appeal of a wild woman guarded by a gorilla with a white hero just appearing in the offing. The idea is repeated in the three lines just below the signature, and then elaborated in the type box. This is not a large space; about a three fives, but it is going to sell about all the tickets that a half page advertisement could dispose of because every feature is developed to the strongest selling point. Even the cut helps to put it over, for instead of a mass of intricate lines in the background this is largely a dark mass to throw the three figures into relief. A cut with greater detail would not be as effective. Here the almost crude design gives strength to the appeal through its suggestion of strength as well as through the situation it plays up. Even the tidy rule panel helps along, and we do not believe that this appeal is susceptible of material improvement. Study the cut a little and let it sink in.

Taking a stunt from the Universal press book, the Randolph Theatre, Chicago, used old tires for its marquise display on California Straight Ahead. Dozens of old shoes were provided with circular cards and hung from the marquise, while the larger truck tires were similarly carded for still frames around the lobby.

It will work as well for any automobile picture as it did for the Denny story.

"Proud Heart"—Universal Pictures Corp.

Noted Stage Actor Makes Screen Debut in Intensely Appealing Story of Family Life

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Rudolph Schildkraut, one of the finest actors of the spoken drama, makes his debut in motion pictures in "Proud Heart" an intensely appealing story of the family life of an aged couple with two sons, which is being released under the Universal-Jewel brand as an Edward Sloman production.

Mr. Schildkraut is cast as a learned Hebrew who has to eke out his living as a pushcart peddler. He worships knowledge and skimps to make his son Morris a successful lawyer. Even Sammie, the other son, helps selling papers. Sammie becomes a prize fighter and his father is so enraged he casts him out. Morris, ashamed of his parentage, refuses to even acknowledge his old father before his wealthy fiancé and friends. Meanwhile, Sammy wins a prize fight and gets money to send his sick father away. Sammy then faces his brother, denounces him, and drags him back home. Morris realizes his sin and pleads for his forgiveness, which is granted. The old man realizes how he has wronged Sammy and takes him back and Sammy finds additional happiness with his little Irish sweetheart Mamie.

Rudolph Schildkraut gives a magnificent performance as the elderly father. Despite the handicap of a big beard such as is worn by the old orthodox Hebrews his facial expressions are wonderful, whether in the lighter moments or the more dramatic ones. As his wife, Rose Rosanova, both as to type and acting is excellent. George Lewis is fine as Sammy and Blanche Mehaffy is pretty and appealing as the little Irish girl. In the thankless role of Morris, Arthur Lubin gives a splendid performance. In fact the entire cast are not only exceptionally fine types but give unusually realistic performances.

The story is intensely sympathetic and a striking point in the production is the intense note of sincerity in evidence throughout accentuating an abundance of heart interest and pathos. The trials of this aged couple with their two children are like a page from real life and a lot of the situations will strike home to the average patron. In a word, the story that is unfolded is a very very human one, in which family love is played up by means of warm-hearted little touches that strike close to the heart. The chacter of the father is exceedingly real, he has his faults as his error in judging his two sons shows, but you bear with him because of his sincerity and in fact love him all the more because of his weakness.

There is a crackerjack ring fight which goes over with a bang despite the fact that it gets a bit theatric where his mother's pleading causes him to rally, as he is about to take the count and defeat his opponent. The atmosphere of the Jewish home, and the quaint ceremonials of the devout couple are interesting and appealing. Intense drama and pathos mark several of the old man's scenes. There comes a tug at the heart when believing he is about to die he calls for Morris and blesses Sammy who takes his place when Morris does not come. There will be a lot of moist eyes here and also when the old man goes out in a snowstorm, and pawns his overcoat to get a dress suit for Morris who throws it in an ashcan. Possibly some of these scenes are a bit overdrawn for dramatic effect, but they register with a bang. And there is a pretty little romance and a generous sprinkling of comedy relief.

Altogether, "Proud Heart" is an intensely pleasing and satisfying picture with fine moral tone that appeals to the heart and should find favor with the great mass of picturegoers. The picture will satisfy patrons and they will thoroughly enjoy Mr. Schildkraut's wonderful performance.

"Bobbed Hair"—Warner Brothers

Comedy-Melodrama Based on Novel by Twenty Famous Authors, Both Exciting and Amusing

Review by C. S. Sewell

Of especial interest in connection with the Warner Brother's production "Bobbed Hair," and of value to the showman from an exploitation angle is the fact that this picture is an adaptation of a novel written by twenty popular authors. As we understand it, the book was in the nature of a satire on the modern action novel and each author in writing his chapter endeavored to place the characters in such a predicament as to tax the ingenuity of the next one to extricate them.

As transferred to the screen, the story is fast-moving melodrama combined with farce comedy. A girl has two suitors, one likes bobbed hair, the other doesn't. In escaping from both she enters the car of a stranger which proves to have been stolen from bootleggers and is swept into a succession of exciting situations including an attack by hi-jackers, a fight on a private yacht, and rescue by the stranger who takes her to his beautiful home to which her own party is brought. Eventually it turns out that the hero was looking for adventure and found romance as well and that the girl has become enmeshed in a trap set by revenue officers. When the time for the show-down comes she has only one side of her hair bobbed and this means that the handsome stranger has won.

As might be expected under the circumstances, the continuity is somewhat choppy and events follow each other with such swiftness and there are such sudden twists that it is sometimes confusing. It is apparent that the story was not intended to be taken seriously but to provide speedy exciting and amusing entertainment, and this it certainly does. There is plenty of "punch" and good comedy furnished principally by Louise Fazenda and the clever dog Pal in farcical situations involving her attempts to recover a roll of bills that is passed from one character to another and eventually lands in the dog's custody. Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan are excellent in the leading roles.

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete, in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Pitcure World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts after the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Clarke Discusses Programs

Eric Clarke, managing director of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., has written us an interesting letter which we want to pass on to managers in general. Mr. Clarke discusses de luxe program compilation in a practical manner.

"UNLIKE the Broadway houses in New York, we, at the Eastman Theatre in Rochester must keep on appealing to the same audience week after week, and it does not pay to attract our audience by sensational means.

"To appeal to one-eighth of the population in a city where other forms of entertainment are available calls for a diversification of program that will contain something to appeal to the particular tastes of the various classifications of the patrons. The de luxe program has clearly come to stay, and the tendency is to greater program variety. For this purpose the exhibitor, as will be seen, must have short features.

"Experience has established the two-hour show as a suitable length. Experience also teaches that a well-diversified program with six or seven numbers is far more attractive than a program in which the feature runs the full two hours. Let us prepare an imaginary program.

"Every bill should contain an overture. We have found this an ideal number, if about eight minutes long. Every second more than nine minutes takes away from whatever success with the crowd you may have been achieving up to that point.

"Every bill should contain a weekly film news number. I consider the weekly, if good, next in importance to the feature. We have tried all sorts of lengths and have made up our minds to certain things. First, if less than six minutes in length the weekly leaves the audience dissatisfied. The average subject runs somewhere between one and one half minutes. Five subjects is too little. Second, you can show news up to fourteen or fifteen minutes without tiring your audiences. Feature lengths, however, are such that we usually do not show news above ten minutes.

"Every bill should have a presentation. This can vary all the way from the tableau shown for half a minute or so, which we have to arrange when we get a long feature, to a big act of twenty-five minutes. We rarely exceed ten minutes for a presentation, since, if we have time, we find it better to program two units instead of one.

"Every bill should have comedy or novelty film of some kind. It diversifies the show and it is practical, too, for if placed after the feature and before the overture, it permits the seating of the crowds before the overture starts.

"Now to sum up, we have this time-table:

"Overture ..... 8 minutes
"Weekly ..... 10 minutes
"Presentation ..... 10 minutes
"Comedy or Novelty ..... 10 minutes

"If we take these as our minimum, a feature film that runs longer than an hour and twenty minutes will hurt its own chances of success by its length.

"When pictures are longer, we can do three things: 1, reduce the number of items in the program; 2, cut the picture; 3, run it faster. Of the three, it is clear that we least of all wish to sacrifice variety. As to cutting, we recognize that the producers ought to be more competent to cut than we are; yet I am frank to say that during the past year we have had many features come to us in a condition where the elimination of some hundreds of feet actually improved them."

Demonstration of New Piano

MUSIC circles are discussing seriously and we might add in amazement the instantaneous success which was accorded the New York introduction of a new piano device invented by John Hays Hammond, Jr. The public demonstration was made by Lester Donahue, pianist, with the Philadelphia Orchestra in a concert at Carnegie Hall, last Monday night. Concert No. 2 in C minor by Rachmaninoff was presented for piano and orchestra with Leopold Stokowski, conducting. The introduction of the device under such auspices immediately marked it as one worthy of consideraiton by musicians. The device was programmed as "a piano to which have been added certain improvements in tone and pedal."

We published a brief description of this musical device last August, but to be explicit in our report of the instrument, we are reprinting a description of the operation and construction as outlined by its inventor, Mr. Hammond.

"The instrument aims to overcome the familiar limitations of the piano's tone by a system of reflectors, which should cover the entire top and bottom of a soundproof case. The reflectors are parallel, revolving slats, which can be opened or closed at the will of the player. Since the case is sound-proof, the tone can be built up within the pianoforte and then permitted to escape at will. The action is a sort of acoustic regeneration, maintaining vibrations of the sound board for unusual durations of time."

"The following qualities differentiate the instrument from the standard piano: First, its increased sonority. Second, its capability of maintaining as a straight dynamic line the effect of undying tone. Third, the differentiation of melodic from accompanimental passages.

"Fourth, the advantage is the ability to open the reflectors with the dying of the tone to gain the effect of a level tone. The fifth is its power to change the quality of the upper harmonics after the keys have been struck. In this way remarkable tone-color changes may be obtained."

Finston Becomes General Musical Director

IT is reported that Nathaniel Finston, musical driector of the new Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, and prominently associated with Balaban and Katz as their principal musical head, will be brought to New York to assume the musical direction of all the Famous Players-Lasky-Balaban and Katz houses throughout the country. Mr. Finston is to be put in charge of the musical policies of the merged theatres. The selection of Mr. Finston assures a consistent operation of musical programs as he has been identified with the leading New York and Chicago theatres and is thoroughly conversant with the compilation of correct de luxe programs.

Gambarelli Leaves Capitol

MARIA GAMBARELLI, premiere danseuse and ballet mistress of the Capitol Theatre, New York City, has terminated her contract after a three-year engagement and will be starred in a musical comedy to be produced by a prominent producer. Mlle. Gambarelli is perhaps one of the best known ballet dancers in the first run theatres and the production fraternity wish her success in her new engagement.

"Romance and the Ages"

EPISODE TWO

A Four-Part Offering, Which Should Appeal Because of Its Novelty—Blending of Music, Colors and Lighting Will Aid in Presenting a Popular Prologue

Moving Picture World Presentations—Devised By Colby Harriman

THE second episode in the presentation serial, "Romance and the Ages," is scenically linked with the first subject. In Episode One, the songs and dances of the primitive peoples was emphasized. This episode tells the story of the love songs and rhythmic dances of the early Greeks, with a suggestion of the influence of the Egyptians, and a coloring of the approaching militarism of the Romans. To secure this effect it will be necessary to select numbers which have definite characteristics, such as a dance or song which directly relates to the moods of such periods.

The pantomimic story which can be told may be routined as follows: The dancing girls garbed in diaphanous costumes of the early Greek period open the action with a dance. The singer, a man dressed in the costume of a Roman soldier enters, renders a song number with the dance for a background. The girl, a singer and dancer, dressed in Egyptian garb is brought in captive by two soldiers. She is confronted by the man, she begs to be released from the chains. He finally consents and the girl does an Egyptian dance number. For a finale, the love song theme is introduced and should be sung by the man and the woman.

The set is similar to the one of Episode One. The basic portion, or foreground will remain the same. If the previous issue of the Moving Picture World will be consulted, it will be easy to note how this set as illustrated becomes a part of the last set.

The foreground remains unchanged. The silhouette drop is moved back and is to be used as a back drop. The rock profile which was used back of the silhouette drop is placed in front of it and used as a ground row defining a distant mountain range. The ground row used in front of the silhouette drop is placed in front of the up-stage row and used to give more depth and definition to the background. The platform used back of the silhouette drop can be moved down stage and form the body of the platform and facade. The facade is constructed out of columns or flat pieces painted to give the columnar effect. A circular step should skirt the front of the platform. The columns should be set in a circular formation to give the proper facade effect. The beam and coping can be profile or compo board cut in section and fastened to the columns. It is suggested that the facade be made in sections as the next episode makes use of the facade in a different manner. Vines and other foliage can be used to dress the columns, the background and the foreground right and left. Two set trees, of the box wood type, should be used to dress the spaces below the small arches right and left.

The lighting treatment should be colorful, emphasizing the lighter tones, "the freshness of Spring." The foreground flooded in a blend of orange and light amber. A blue-green sky, with a purple tone on the ground rows, and an orange amber glow along the top of the down stage ground row. The facade should be highlighted with canary and rose from right and a green-light blue from left. The performing area should be flooded with border spots made up in canary and rose, and side spots shafted from right and left in orange amber and canary.

The costumes should be selected to reflect the vivid colors, even the extremes of the periods mentioned. The dancing girls may wear certain metallic units of Roman armor, with a colorful mantella. The female singer and dancer, garbed in a colorful Ekyptian garb with a superabundance of jewels.

Music: Irvin Talbot and his Orchestra present as an overture, "Beautiful Galatea," by Von Suppe. The presentations consist of two units.

1. "A Moscovite Revel"

Mlle. Ella Daganova and her Ballet Ensemble present a spirited Polish dance number in a colorful setting.

2. "In a Monastery Garden"

The musical composition by Kettleby is used as a basis for this atmospheric number which precedes the feature picture. A drop, painted to represent the interior of an old monastery with two Gothic arches cut in center is hung in one. Black returns are used to mask and carry off. Back of the drop, up stage, set trees resplendent in foliage, with pinks, whites and greens predominating, are grouped along a stone wall row. A deep blue sky drop is used to back, the back being toned with a blend of rose light blue and green at the base. Th foreground is subdued with purples and deep blue, and an amber shaft set off right highlighting the singers who are dressed in friars' robes. Two sanctuary lamps are hung in the foreground, and two large cathedral candles are lighted and placed center between the two arches. Paul Dumont, baritone, sings the principal part, and a chorus of eight male voices completes the ensemble.

CAPITOL THEATRE
Chicago

(Week November 2nd)
Featured Picture: "Where Was I?"—Reginald Denny (Universal)

Divertissements:

"THE GARDEN OF FLOWERS," Francis A. Mangan's newest production, is a spectacle of delightful entertainment and color. The set constructed for this presentaiton has for its background a high wall extending from side to side of the stage. It has been painted to represent lattice-work of white strips upon which red roses in great profusion have climbed reaching to the very top. In nine perpendicular rows the canvas has been cut forming ladders with the lattice strips as rungs. In front of this garden wall is a huge basket done in light brown and deep green, giving the appearance of a flower basket of a straw weave. The basket is some fourteen feet high and at its base in the foreground are six brown vases about five feet in height.

The number opens with Orville Rennie, tenor, singing "June Brought the Roses." Two charming farmerettes enter the wings, each carrying a watering-can for the flowers.

The Blushing Rose ballet emerge from behind the vases and execute a flower dance. They are dressed in costumes covered with roses of different colors.

Orville Rennie renders "Climbing the Ladder of Roses," while twelve pretty misses, costumed in gay blooms ascend the ladders in the wall and when near the top, let fall from their waists, streamers of roses. From the top of the basket, four pretty maids dressed as roses, appear.

The lighting treatment is a big factor in making the presentation one of unusual beauty. The predominating colors used are: red, amber, green and purple. At the finish the entire scene is lighted up, making a brilliant flash.

"The Quartette from Rigoletto"

Four sterling artists make this attraction from the opera a complete success. The parts are taken by Miss Lorna Doone Jackson, contralto; Miss Hazel Eden, soprano; Mr. Wm. Mitchell, tenor, and Mr. Lester Spring, basso. The setting includes, in the right corner a porch railing, back of which an arbor is painted on a drop. A dark red drop covers the rest of the stage.

The overture, "A MELANGE OF POPULAR AIRS," arranged and compiled by Albert E. Short, is presented by the Capitol Grand Orchestra.

Leo Terry at the organ offers "THE FINAL EDITION."

Your Equipment

Service for You—Theatre Owner—Builder—Studio, Laboratory, Exchange Executive—From Your Angle

Edited by A. Van Buren Powell

Before It Started

SIX YEARS AGO, Van—as a host of exhibitors know A. Van Buren Powell—asked for any sort of a job with the Chalmers Publishing Company, because in all his, then, six years in film production he had admired the service spirit of this organization—wanted to be a part of it.

While he was handling our book distribution and working under D. J. Shea, our circulation manager, Van kept talking about new ways to serve the exhibitor.

"You better let that boy do some 'serviceing'," said Mr. Shea. "He's got ideas that will help exhibitors."

So Van was told to put up or shut up. And he put up—bringing "Straight From the Shoulder Reports" into being and building it up till the finest crowd of exhibitors in the world got into what he calls "Our Gang."

But all the time he was studying out new service ideas—and eventually he showed us how a broader service than usual could be rendered to the buyer of Equipment through intimate personal contact in a department handled FROM THE BUYER'S ANGLE.

"What do you KNOW about Equipment?" we asked Van: well it turned out that he had been studying theatres, and exchanges—he worked in studios and a laboratory before he came to us—and he knew what was used—and WHY.

So we are backing him to give you of the studio, the laboratory, the exchange, the theatre—big or small—what you want to read about Equipment, to help you buy intelligently, to solve your problems by finding out from you WHAT YOU WANT AND NEED.

Van asked some of his exhibitor friends about it first—that's his way—and they came back at him in the telegrams printed below:

"Very good idea."—Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

"Go to it, just what is needed, will help myself."—C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre, Nazareth, Pa.

"Consider proposed department fine idea that should meet the approval all exhibitors. Will fill long felt want and mark another progressive step . Glad you are doing it."—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, La.

We know Van will make you like YOUR EQUIPMENT. —THE EDITOR.

Your Equipment Works As Hard As You Do

FROM the time the continuity comes out of the typewriter until the last fadeout flickers on the screen, YOUR EQUIPMENT is working hand-in-hand with your brains to make the fellow who has dug down for his dime, his quarter—or his two bucks—stroll out of the lobby with the satisfied feeling that he has got his money's worth and is coming again—real soon.

Those studio lights, the cameras, the switch-boards, the generators or the other electrical equipment that you of the studio have to do with—they all contribute.

The tanks, developer and fixing bath, drying racks, printing machines, the high-quality lights even—all go into the qualitizing of the negative and the resultant prints.

Then, in the exchanges—well, you boys don't have to be told how important a part the equipment that gives—AND KEEPS—good prints for exhibitors, plays in the game of QUALITY PATRON SERVICE.

And, gosh! What a vast aggregation of equipment, and accessories to patronage building, you find boosting the picture in the big theatre—from the marquise and the signs on and in and above it, through the snappy ticket selling machines, the roped stanchions, the lobby frames, the rugs, the decorations and embellishments—in past the ticket chopper, along the aisle runner, the way lighted by softly glowing guide lights, down to a comfortable seat, from which the patron can watch the result of a perfectly appointed projection room, on an eye-restful screen, under the indirect light that illuminates but does not annoy—in ventilated, warm—or cool—comfort. Oh, boy! That doesn't scratch the surface of the things you could name.

And anybody who says there isn't plenty of equipment interest for the smaller theatre owner and manager has got to fight me.

Maybe you have only roll tickets, perhaps your lobby has to get along with only small display frames; maybe a poster in a frame is all you've got room for—and it's possible that you don't light the aisles, that your orchestra pit is only a space for a small organ console or a player or hand played piano—you may have only two somewhat used projectors—but if you're trying to make this equipment work for the patron, keep it up to top type for good service—you'll find plenty of interesting ways to prove that your equipment works for your patron just as hard as you do.

YOUR EQUIPMENT will coin money for you—let's work together to get every bit there is in it—because it means better patronage for the big as well as the little theatre, and that means better business all along the line.

Right now!—tip me off—what can I do to help you profit from YOUR EQUIPMENT?

To Equipment Manufacturers

WHEN you really have something to say to the exhibitor, to the studio executive, to the laboratory manager, to the exchange, to the camera man, the organist—anyone, in fact, who employs or comes into direct contact with your products, please remember this!—

What I am going to give these folks is INTERESTING MATTER—interesting TO THEM!

News of new things in equipment falls into place.

If your sales manager knows of somebody on his staff who can talk about a sale from the standpoint of the buyer—what HE got out of the transaction—instead of blowing about the cleverness of the lad who put over the sale—shoot in the straight dope.

Information of a constructive sort that gives the low-down on better ways of using equipment—that's good stuff!

Rolling Roof Steals Thunder From Nearby Solidtop Houses

THE Brandt boys, Bill and Harry, handle the Parkside Theatre, on Flatbush Avenue, in Brooklyn.

Now it isn't a whopping big house for a city, or a district the size of Flatbush. But the boys are live-wire, and they have one feature in their house that is a whole lot different from anything anybody else in the district can boast.

And that's a rolling roof.

By a clever adjustment of pulleys and guys, the roof of the entire theatre can be made to roll back and leave the theatre without any covering except the starry sky.

"Well," you are thinking, "What about it? Do you think we want to put on a rolling roof and leave it open when the thermometer gets down to nothing and less? Think we want to advertise, 'The audience was frozen to the seats when they saw Tracked in the Snow Country—with realistic temperature thrown in?'"

No, boys—that's not the punch.

The idea is this: Those Brandt boys use that rolling roof as a business getter in summer, and have the bulge on the neighboring houses which, if they are larger, are forced to resort to artificial ventilation—whereas the Parkside management simply rolls off the roof, with an accompaniment of thunderous reverberations that let the audience know what is going on—and if it rains—back rolls the roof over the patrons' heads—and there you are.

But that isn't the end of it. The boys have used the rolling roof to such excellent advantage that many a Flatbusher chooses his summer evening's entertainment by virtue of his preference for the novelty of an airdome's advantages combined with the rain-proofness of a roofed theatre.

And, because the boys have let the roof make itself heard, many there are who remember "The Theatre with the Rolling Roof," even when old man zero has hold of the weather—and I have personally heard one girl say, "I like that theatre with the rolling roof because it is so well ventilated—it must be, because they can change the air in a couple of seconds."

That's what you call getting a feature of your theatre to work for you.

Are you making your house capitalize its differentness from the other houses?

Maybe it's a cozy side room off the lobby where the town folks can meet after shopping. It might be a new installation of projectors, a finer screen, a new set of indirect lighting fixtures, quicker exit facilities—or only a new style of ticket.

If you pick out the right slant you can make folks remember it.

And they go where they recall a feature of the house—as they go to the Brandt boys' "Theatre with the Rolling Roof."

Plan Two Big Theatres For Washington Towns

An interesting report is current in the Northwest to the effect that a group of individuals is now being organized to build two $150,000 theatres. Bellingham and Everett, Wash., are the towns selected. The sites are said to have been selected and the capital raised to finance the projects. Thus far the identity of the operators has been kept secret, although it is known that conferences are being held and the organization practically complete. An announcement may be expected shortly.

Charles W. Harden, Seattle manager of United Artists, met in conference with the interested parties last week, somewhere out of Seattle, but when interviewed, stated that he had no personal interest in the proposed theatres and that an announcement at this time would be premature. Bellingham and Everett are considered the two best openings in the state. It is understood the company contemplates building in other towns in the future.

Have you theatre managers chatted with the projectionist lately to find out if every bit of projection room equipment is right up to the peak for efficiency? Or have you decided to wait till something breaks—maybe during a show?

Have you peppy boys in the exchanges ever stopped by the rewind table to see if the cement your inspectors use is real cement that HOLDS when the film gets a little extra tension straining it?

Lubliner & Trinz's $2,000,000 Harding Commemorates Firm's 16th Anniversary

WHEN men of the astuteness of Lubliner and Trinz throw open the doors of a new theatre, and one costing, as did the new Harding Theatre, $2,000,000—it's "some" theatre.

The Harding was opened on the sixteenth anniversary of the business activities of this pair of brilliant theatre owners. From a start with one theatre, their acumen has placed them in the front rank with the largest chain of first run palaces in Chicago. Twenty are now in operation; eleven more, to cost around $19,000,000, are in course of construction.

Naturally the new theatre is worth your attention. It's an achievement for some of Chicago's best-known builders. The O. H. Gottschalk Company, engineers and builders, were commissioned to draw the plans and supervise the construction: Meyer Fridstein was the architect who actually visualized the splendid structure; under his able direction the dream became the reality.

A glance at the pictures show you what that dream built—magnificence, patron appeal, comfort, delight for the eye, a catering to all the senses that is going to add a money maker to the Lubliner & Trinz success-chain. Among the concerns who co-operated with the Gottschalk Company were the Neslo Wagstad Company, which handled all the excavation and stone masonry; Olson Brothers, plasterers; E. J. Cluffey, heating and ventilating; Bloomer Heating Company, Dearborn Electric Company, Illinois Electric Company and Myland Electric House Lighting Fixture Company and Paine Belting Company.

The interior painting and decorating on the Harding is the work of the W. P. Nelson Company, one of Chicago's foremost interior decorating concerns and dealers in antique furniture. A great deal of the beauty of the interior of the new house has been largely the result of the efforts of the contract department of Marshall Field & Co., who designed the rich and tasteful drapes, and supplied furniture, carpets and other furnishings that greatly enhance the lobby and balcony promenades.

Marble has always been used on a large scale in Lubliner & Trinz houses and two of the city's big marble companies have been called on to do their share in supplying this beautiful stone, the Chicago Art Marble Company and Henry Marble Company.

The great cooling and ventilating system that will make the new Harding so attractive to movie fans next summer is the work of the American Carbonic Machinery Company, and the Chicago Carbonic and Liquid Carbonic companies are concerns from which Lubliner and Trinz secure the gas necessary to freeze the pipes.

The motion picture equipment in L. & T. theatres is of the best and comes from such concerns as Capitol Merchandise Company, Major Equipment and Chicago Cinema Equipment Company. Scenery is from the Robert Carson Studios.

The great organ whose mighty tones will fill the Harding auditorium with joyous sound and harmony bears the name of Wurlitzer. More than $30,000 was expended in building and installing the instrument in the new Harding.

Last but not least in the category of those who have contributed to the success of the Lubliner & Trinz chain of theatres are the sign makers, advertising poster printers and all similar concerns. There is Verb Sign, the A-1 Ad Service, the Theatre Poster Service, Flexlume Sign Company, Theatrical Poster Company, Chicago Show Printing Company, and Wagner Sign Company.

THE MEN WHO MADE THE HARDING A FACT

Harry M. Lubliner, president of Lubliner & Trinz, Inc., is in the center picture: at your right is Joseph Trinz, Chairman of the Board of Directors. At your left is Emil Stern, the vice-president and general manager of the firm which is celebrating its sixteenth anniversary with the Harding opening.

Newest Denver House Plays the Host

The Highlands D. & R. Theatre, Denver's newest theatre, located at 32nd and Lowell Boulevard held a "housewarming" last Sunday night. About 500 people were present as guests of the owners, Dick Dickson and Rick Ricketson. The lobby of the theatre is in out-door colors, orange and black, while the inner lobby is of soft ivory and tiffany. In the foyer there is a blend of colors finished with gold and set off by beautiful tapestries.

Got an Invite

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. McCutcheon have been busier than "repeaters" just before election day—but not in the same way, because these two up-and-doing folks have been getting the work finished up on their new Ritz Theatre, in Blytheville, Arkansas.

They sent in an invitation to the opening. As the grand occasion was to be October 29th and the invitation just landed in the office on that day, it was too late. But from what I've heard of the ability of these folks, the opening was bound to be a great success.

When the patron gets a ticket, his progress is through the beautiful foyer shown at the left: the charming auditorium you see at right is his goal—there he is given an entertainment of which the heart is the projection furnished by a battery of four Motiographs installed in the projectionists' spacious room shown at center. The Harding is truly a patron's delight.

Better Projection

F. H. Richardson

Better Projection Pays

Proof Positive

This department has many times pointed out the fact that it is entirely possible to have a serious fire in a theatre projection room without the audience being any the wiser. I have said that this is possible, provided the ventilation be such that the draft is into the projection room instead of outward from it into the auditorium, and that there is ample means provided for carrying away the smoke. I have emphasized the necessity for closing the ports quickly, so that the audience cannot see the fire, and to make more certain that the smoke cannot get out into the auditorium. Here is a case which reflects great credit upon both the projectionist, Conrad Backer, of Baltimore, Md., and upon the efficiency of the Cluster Theatre projection room ventilation.

A film caught fire, though whether at the aperture or rewinder I am not advised, in the projection room of the Cluster Theatre, South Broadway, Baltimore, Maryland. Five hundred people were in the audience. Projectionist Backer immediately closed all the ports, except the lens port of one projector, and while the fire was in progress and the fire department at work in the room extinguishing the blaze, HE PROJECTED A COMEDY, AT WHICH THE AUDIENCE LAUGHED HEARTILY.

A Record

If that account is correct, and it seems to be, it is, I think, a record, both as to efficiency of the projection room ventilation and the coolness and courage of a projectionist. It was only when a man on the street saw smoke issuing from the front of the building and notified the fire department, that any one except projectionist Backer knew of the battle he was waging against fire, smoke and audience panic.

Little actual damage was done, and certainly this is proof positive that the contention of this department, MADE YEARS AGO, AND MANY TIMES SINCE, that THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO GOOD REASON WHY AUDIENCES SHOULD BE ALARMED BY A PROJECTION ROOM FIRE, OR EVEN KNOW IT IS IN PROGRESS. It is all a matter of carrying the smoke and fumes away outside the building, as fast as they can form, and preventing either smoke or view of the fire from being seen by the audience.

Continuing projection while the fire is in progress—well, that is going us all one better. This department would appreciate a more detailed account of exactly how this was possible. I am advised that "reflection of the fire was hidden from the audience." Presumably this means reflection through the lens port of the working projector. How was it done?

Backer's Account

Later: I wrote Projectionist Backer, asking particulars as to the fire. What I have written was taken from a newspaper, or a local film paper, have forgotten which. It was as close to the facts as such folks usually get.

Here is Backer's account. It speaks volumes for the resourcefulness and courage of the brother, who is a member of Local 181, Baltimore Motion Picture Projectionists, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. OF THE U. S. & C. Backer says:

"With regrad to the fire at the Cluster Theatre, 305 South Broadway, the last reel of the feature picture burned. It was very close to the end of the feature. I was beside the idle projector ready to fade over to the comedy reel when the film ripped at the intermittent sprocket of the working projector, stopping long enough to catch fire, and then proceeded, carrying the fire down into the lower magazine.

By the time I could jump from one projector to the other, the fire was in the lower magazine, which was, of course, tightly closed. I started the comedy going and played the fire extinguisher on the magazine. The heat from the burning film warped the door of the magazine a bit, permitting a little flame to come out, but very soon the fire burned out.

The Reason No Panic

In the projection room there is a four-foot-square ventilator, with a large exhaust fan at its top. This fan pulled out all the smoke and fumes, or at least most of it. Not enough got out into the auditorium to cause the audience to realize that I was fighting a fire while the show ran.

The ventilator was recommended to Mr. Cluster, the proprietor of the theatre, by the Maryland State Board of Fire Underwriters."

Gentlemen, I repeat, Projectionist Backer is justly entitled to praise for his cool-headedness and prompt action. I think his analysis of what happened may be a bit in error, but anyhow he did the right thing, and did it exceedingly well. I don't think the film stopped at all. A piece may have ripped off one side, stuck in the aperture, caught fire and set fire to the running film. Possibly that is what Backer really meant. The words he used did not seem to mean that but I guess he must have really meant the piece which ripped off stopped, not the film itself. That last could hardly be, because the lower loop would have been instantly lost, and the film ripped clear in two there or at least its sprocket holes ripped out, thus precluding any possibility of the fire reaching the lower magazine.

Well, anyhow, I congratulate Backer. Local 181 should encourage that sort of thing by some appropriate action.

San Bernardino Parades

From T. R. Benjamin, Secretary, Motion Picture Projectionists Local Union 577, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O., San Bernardino, California, comes this letter.

"Am sending you a photograph of our Labor Day float. As you seem to be interested in most all the work carried on by the boys throughout the country, (Gosh, brother, how did you discover that, huh?—Ed.) the members of this local thought you would like to see a picture of one of the first Powers projectors of this type brought to the West Coast. Might add that the projector is still in constant use.

"Although we have never had the pleasure of meeting you personally we all feel that we know you, and wish to express our best wishes for your continued success."

Well, brother Benjamin, you tell the manager of that leading theatre that it's time to retire the projector on an old age pension before it gets bald sprockets, spavined joints, wheezes and gets celluloid rheumatism, and put in a husky youngster. The float looks real good, but why didn't you chaps get into the picture along with the projector? How come all this camera shy stuff? I take note that you were enterprising, and had the legend "Projectionists" on the side of the float.

Bluebook School—Answers 378 to 382

Question No. 378—Practical question proposed by the editor: What will be the brilliancy, in foot candles, of a screen surface at fifty feet and at one hundred feet, if its brilliancy at twenty five feet is two foot candles, viewing angle to remain constant?

Some one got that badly balled up by inserting the word "one" between "at" and "fifty."

G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinos, is the only one who sized the matter up rightly. He says:

That depends upon what is meant. Since the question says "a screen surface" we are probably justified in assuming it to be a single surface area at different distances. In other words, a surface of equal area at all distances. If this be the intent of the question, then it would be merely or at least mostly a matter of two items, viz: the clarity of the atmosphere and the relative efficiency of the two lens systems as compared with the one used for the twenty five foot projection distance and these things would or might produce differences it would be impossible to compute.

My own view of the matter is that the editor desired to see if we would "get" these points.

It also is possible that it was intended we should figure on the relative intensity of the surfaces the shorter focal length lens would project, but I think not for in that event the picture at one hundred feet would be very large. However, it would be merely a matter of laying out the angles to scale to get the size of picture at each distance, and then finding out what space or area the light which illuminated one square foot on the twenty-five foot projection distance would be spread over at the other distances, and working out the proportion. I have not done this because I am sure the first conclusion was the right one, for if the other were meant, certainly you would have given the size of the picture at twenty five feet.

Thoreau, Clark and Richards, Vancouver, British Columbia made a good argument on the matter. On the whole, however, while Doe got very close to what I had in mind, but when I saw the question in print as the printer "set" it, I concluded it was hardly a fair one to spring on you in that form. Left too much to guess work and might be interpreted to mean either one of two things.

Harry Dobson, Toronto, Ontario, John Griffith, Ansonia, Connecticut, C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa, Glenn Wallace, Muskegon, Michigan and T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama, all assumed that the question was merely an application of the inverse square law, and worked it out on that basis. Several side-stepped it entirely.

Question No. 379—Describe the pilot wire of a cartridge fuse.

F. H. Moore, Taunton, Massachusetts; H. E. Hurlbutt, Star Theatre, Oshkosk, Wisconsin; Ray Gnaegy, 1130 North Tenth street, Paducah, Kentucky; Thoreau, Clark and Richards, Vancouver, British Columbia; W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, New York; G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois; Harry Dobson, Toronto, Ontario; T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama and Glenn G. Wallace, Muskegon, Michigan all gave satisfactory replies to this one.

Brother Dobson, whom we are glad to have with us again, by the way, perhaps made the most suitable reply for printing. He says:

Some makes of cartridge fuse have what is known as a "pilot wire." This is merely a small fuse wire, rated to carry about one ampere, which is attached to the main fuse terminals just as the main wire is. This small wire is led outward at an angle to the main wire, to a point upon and at the center of the barrel of the fuse, where it passes under some indicating device, such as a small colored paper label, or a spot on the fuse label itself.

Some makes of cartridge fuse have a small coiled spring, with a red top. The spring is held in compression by a pilot wire, so that the red top is even with or below the level of the fuse barrel surface. When the fuse blows the pilot wire also, of course, fuses, and the spring is released, whereupon it shoves its top out beyond the surface of the fuse barrel.

The intent is that when there is too much current flowing, so that the main fuse wire is overloaded, the pilot wire is proportionately overloaded, and so blows when the main fuse blows, thus charring or discoloring the before described paper label and causing the top of a coil spring to protrude, so that it may be determined by a glance that the fuse has "blown."

This, however, is not to be depended upon, because the pilot wire does not always "blow" when the main wire does, or does not char the label, so that a worthless fuse may, under this condition, be mistaken for a good one. The only sure way to know that a fuse which looks all right is really so, is to test it, hence the pilot wire is practically worthless as a dependence.

Werry good, brother Dobson—werry good, and only because you came back with your lessons well learned do you escape the woodshed for your truancy.

Question No. 380—Describe the difference in cartridge fuses for different voltages. By this we mean to ask what the general points of difference are.

Hurlbutt says:

The over-all length of both ferrule and knife blade contact fuses increases with increase of voltage. The ferrule contacts increase in diameter with increased voltage, but knife blade contact remain the same thickness and width. (That last is wrong.—Ed.) The diameter of the fuse barrel increases as the voltage rises. Of course it is understood that we deal with increase in voltage only. Everything about a fuse gets bigger as amperage is increased.

Hanover says:

As voltage is increased the distance between contacts must also be increased, fuse barrel diameter must be a bit larger, and contacts must be wider. All this is set forth, in excellent form, in table 4, pages 112 and 113 of the Bluebook.

An examination of which will disclose the fact that brother Hurlbutt is wrong in one point.

Question No. 381—What is a "plug" fuse? Describe it. May they be used for any amperage?

Hanover replies thusly:

A plug fuse consists of two separate elements, viz: a porcelain base with a central opening in which is a threaded brass contact, and a porcelain plug on the outer surface of which is a brass-covered thread to correspond with the thread in the recepticle. In the center of the porcelain "plug" is an opening, covered with mica cap through which the fuse wire within may (presumably) be observed. In the center of the bottom of the plug is a brass contact attached firmly to the porcelain. This contact and the outer brass screw are joined by a fuse wire.

In the center of the bottom of the receptacle is a second brass contact point which is connected to one binding post of the receptacle. The threaded brass lining of the receptacle connects with the other binding post of the receptacle.

It will thus be seen that, since the central contact and threaded brass lining of the receptacle have no electrical contact with each other, there can be no current flow from terminal to terminal of the receptacle until these two are electrically joined.

When the "plug" is inserted and screwed down, its central brass contact comes into contact with the central brass contact of the receptacle, and, of course, the threaded brass lining which covers the plug, and that other one which lines the receptacle, are in contact, and since these two are joined, in the plug, by a fuse wire—well, there you are.

As good an answer as any I can remember, bar none. Evidently brother Hanover laid a plug fuse down beside him when he wrote, and just told what he saw.

Question No. 382—May plug fuses be used on any sort of service?

Hurlbutt says:

Plug fuses may be used on any sort of service where a fuse of not to exceed 60 amperes capacity is required. In some localities 35 amperes is the limit for plug fuses.

Brother Moore springs a new one on us. He says:

Plug fuses may be used on any incandescent circuit up to and including 30 amperes. Plug fuses are not allowed on any motor circuits except motors not exceeding five amperes or 550 watts.

That last must be a local rule. If there is any such underwriters requirement I did not know it, or have forgotten, and my underwriters' code is packed up. I am closing the summer home and returning to New York City for the winter. I will be at 634 West 158 street, phone Washington Heights 2680. So far as I know plug fuses may be used on any sort of circuit, provided the amperage be not in excess of sixty, though I do know that some local rules limit the amperage used on plug fuses to 35—just why I never heard explained. If any of you happen to know why, I would be interested in hearing it.

Incidentally I would like to remark that the answer of brother Richards, who collaborates with Brothers Thoreau and Clark, shows that he, and therefore they understand the problems involved in projector lens systems very well. Here is one section of the answer:

Second. Is it intended that the same screen area be used at each distance? If so different projection lenses would be required with each addition to projection distance, and they must have a longer E. F. and working distance.

Immediately we install these longer focal length lenses we are up against the item of longer projection lens working distance, with probability of not being able to get the entire light beam into the lens. However, this difficulty may be overcome, or at least partially so, by installing condenser lenses of longer focal length (What about Cinephor parabolic?—Ed.), but this immediately sets up a longer arc distance—distance crater to face of converging lens—since the light source must be retarded in order to obtain the right spot. Longer crater distance of course means less light collected by the collector lens of the condenser. However, if we assume the efficiency of the three lens systems to be the same, ignoring the loss due to divergence of the light beam between aperture and projection lens and the loss due to increased arc distance, then the foot c. p. at all three distances would be essentially the same.

All of which shows a comprehensive knowledge of the projector optical system.

From the Bay State

From James J. Dempsey, Projectionist Dream Theatre, Winthrop, Massachusetts, comes answers to a set of Blueboook questions, and this letter:

Dear Mr. Richardson:—This is my first letter to the department, despite the fact that I have been one of its followers for three years past. At present I am employed as projectionist at the Dream Theatre.

The Why Of It

I call myself a projectionist because I try hard to do the right thing in my work, although the working conditions are none the best. Have been here since last September, and with the aid of the Bluebook and our department have managed to learn heaps more than I knew when I started.

I hand you herewith answers to a set of the Bluebook School questions, hoping that you will not be too critical with this my first attempt. I admit following the Bluebook and Hawkins closely in my answers, but just the same the subjects dealt with are more clearly understood by me since I actually dug out the answers. Now that I've started I expect to continue.

All right, brother Dempsey. See that you do! Don't be a quitter! As to my not being critical, why what earthly good would I be if I were not??? But your answers look fair to good, nevertheless.

You try hard to do the right thing in your work! Well, brother, that is what will eventually make a real motion picture projectionist of you, whether you are one in fact now or not. The very fact that a man doubts his ability is evidence that he is going to progress. IT IS THE KNOW-IT-ALL SQUAREHEAD WHO IS THE POTENTIAL FAILURE.

Question No. 407—Name the various negatives and positives of an Edison 3-wire system and explain the function of each.

Question No. 408—Explain just why it is that the neutral of an Edison 3-wire system is both positive and negative.

Question No. 409—What advantage or advantages does an Edison 3-wire system present?

Question No. 410—Explain what is meant by a "ballanced load" on a 3-wire system and tell us how you would test for load balance.

Question No. 411—Explain the effect, under various possible conditions, of an unbalanced load on an Edison 3-wire system.

But after all, the really BIG JOB in projection, in nine cases out of ten, is the selling of projection to the exhibitor and theatre manager. Your working conditions are none the best. That probably is because your management does not appreciate the dollars-and-cents value of high grade projection. Selling them that is the BIG job, and in most cases it can be done, too, but it is no overnight process. It takes time and persistent effort.

I cannot tell you how to make the approach, because it has to be in some respects different with different men. The main point is, I think, to make friends with the exhibitor or manager, NOT IN ANY SUBSERVIENT WAY, but with proper reserve and dignity.

I can't tell you what to do, as I said, but begin by respecting your own profession and DEMANDING RESPECT FOR IT FROM THE MANAGEMENT—not by a rough-house method, but—oh, hallelujah! I can't make it clear in words, but I think you understand what I'm driving at, and believe you me, it is the ONE BIG PART OF YOUR JOB AS PROJECTIONIST, as matters now stand.

Please Hurry with Those Screen Samples

Some weeks ago I informed you that screen surface tests were being made by the engineering department of the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, New York, under the personal supervision of L. A. Jones, past president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

I also informed you that as soon as these tests were finished they would be published, and this department would, and my Bluebook would advise exhibitors and projectionists to only give consideration to tested screen surfaces. At that time all screen manufacturers were invited to submit samples of their screen surfaces to L. A. Jones, Research Laboratories, Eastman Kodak Company, Rochseter, New York, for test.

Many have responded, but I think not all While screen samples will hereafter be tested, free of charge, at any time they are submitted, and will then be added to the list, I have asked Mr. Jones to close the first test and proceed to make up his summary and report on November 10.

How Much Light?

From a Los Angeles projectionist comes this inquiry, with request that his name be not published. Sorry for the inhibition, for it is a man who wrote for the department many years ago, but from whom I have not heard for a long while. He says:

"Dear Brother Richardson: Well, here I am again, after a long absence. I have, however, been one of your regular readers through all the years the pioneer and peer of all trade paper projection departments has lived. And, "Rich," it has been a tremendously valuable department to every one concerned, too, nor have I, up to this time, seen anything even approaching it in excellence, including that splendid little paper, the American Projectionist.

True, you have your knockers. Some of them are right here in the "Home of the Movie" too, and in Local 150. But for every enemy you have ten friends, so you should worry. And as a whole the membership of 150 believes in Richardson, too.

So more power and long life to you, and to your books and the Deparmtent, which I was mighty well pleased to see increased in size. Four to five pages is, I think, enough though, because it as much as the average man can read and digest—of, such matter I mean.

Wants Advice

But this was not what I started out to say. I want a bit of advice. Here in Los Angeles a little monthly publication runs a "Projection Department," as you doubtless know. In its present issue the statement is made by the editor (Projection department editor) that many really high class projectionists use too much light, and by so doing injure results by washing out much of the photographic shadings.

This seems reasonable, but before making a test by reducing my present rather high screen illumination I would like to have your opinion and advice. I would get an awful squawk from friend manager if I cut down on screen illumination, even for a test, and want to be certain that there really is something in what this editor says.

Another thing: In the same article the editor says that the only way for the projectionist to test lenses is through actual projection. He says a lens may be delivering everything but luminosity, which would be due to one of two things, viz: a too-small diameter, or poor quality of glass. What do you think about that?

Don't Want to Argue

In the first place, brother, I am not keen about commenting upon the statements made by other projection department editors, unless they say things which are distinctly harmful. Their readers have a perfect right to give credence to what they say, and to place dependence upon their statements if they wish to. I very seldom even see what they write, having plenty to do to attend to my own business.

If what you have said is true, however, in this case large damage might be done if the statements be accepted literally, and followed regardless of the conditions prevailing in the individual installation. What is said about the possibility for "washing out" the finer photographic shades is entirely true; also it is true that in a very considerable percentage of modern theatres it is necessary that such "washing" take place, and merely that the illumination is so high that "washing" does take place is no proof that it is too high, or that it is even high enough, as I shall try to show you.

Consider Capitol Theatre

Take the Capitol Theatre, New York City, as an extreme example. I do not remember what the exact extreme viewing distance is—distance screen to back row of seats—but it must be pretty close to a hundred and seventy-five feet to the rear balcony row of seats. At such viewing distance extremely high screen illumination is absolutely imperative, utterly regardless of photographic shade washing or anything else. Unless the screen illumination be very brilliant—and the picture MUST be a large one too—the view from the rear portion of the theatre would not only be highly unsatisfactory, but also the eye strain would be something approaching terrific.

If the illumination were confined within the limits necessary to prevent what amounts to over-illumination, with consequent obliteration of a portion of the finer photographic shades, thus making the condition ideal from the viewpoint of those occupying the close up and middle distance of the auditorium, then eye strain from the rear seats would be nothing short of awful, and the view highly unsatisfactory, while the beauty of the picture would not be in any appreciable degree enhanced, except for those who were comparatively close-up, because of the fact that the eye cannot discern the finer shadings at any considerable distance.

There, that may be a somewhat complicated explanation, but anyhow it is the real fact. Moreover, I might add that, taking one theatre with another, city and village, I believe there are easily five times as many in which the finer shades of photography are lost to the audience (which is, in these usually small theatres, all close enough to discern the added beauty they would impart) by reason of under-illumination, than there are theatres in which serious damage is done through "washing" by over-illumination, BUT this last must be modified by the statement that in color work another, and in some respects a different problem is presented, because color is very succeptible to "washing" through over-illumination, and the injury done by such washing is always clearly discernible to the spectator, no matter what the viewing distance.

Therefore, when color is on, it perhaps is best to conserve the colors by reducing light, even though it is hard on the eyes of the rear-seat spectator.

Theatre Size Increasing

It must be remembered that theatres are gradually increasing in size, and it seems to me that, in view of the foreging situation, it might be well for the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to consider what, if anything, ought to be done with regard to limiting viewing distance.

Doubtless whoever wrote the article you have cited meant well. He, however, very evidently had only considered ONE element of the matter, where there are other elements of as great, or even much greater importance.

If the proposition you have quoted were limited to theatres having a viewing distance not to exceed a certain number of feet, I would be in agreement with it, though I am not at all certain just what the maximum viewing distance limit ought to be. I would suggest somewhere between 75 and 100 feet as probably about the right thing. When applied indiscriminately to all theatres, however, I regard the logic and information of the one who wrote the article as decidedly defective.

As To Lenses

As to lenses, I very much doubt if any glass is used in the construction of projection lenses which will absorb a seriously objectionable percentage of the light. Good crown glass and certainly none but a good quality would be used for such a purpose unless the manufacturer be insane—absorbs (Professor Gage) 0.5 to 1 per cent. of the light per centimeter of thickness. The lighter varieties of flint glass of about 1.61 refractive index will absorb from 1 to 1.5 per cent. per cm. thickness.

In the case of very poor flint glass absorption may rise to as high as three to four per cent. per cm. thickness, but certainly no glass of such terrible quality is used in projection lenses.

In considering this we must remember that the total thickness of all the lenses in a projection lens will probably be well under two centimeters, hence the total absorption loss probably will not exceed three or four per cent., a much less loss than very frequently occurs by unintelligent handling of the projector rotating shutter.

Testing

As to testing lenses by actual projection, what is said is quite true, insofar as concerns the aberrations, barrel distortion, etc., but I venture the assertion that but very few men could make a determining test for many of the faults. Barrel distortion is easy. Most of the other tests would require an optical bench, I think, and very careful work indeed, except chromatic aberration, and this is a fault not found in any appreciable degree in any modern projection lens, except one of such short focal length that the conditions demanding its use are in themselves impossible.

As to testing for a too-small diameter, why the lens charts make any test entirely unnecessary for any competent projectionist, or even a machine operator of ordinary ability and intelligence, can make four simple measurements, viz: The Y distance, the free diameter of the converging condenser lens, the projection lens working distance and diameter, lay the thing out on paper and tell exactly what the condition is as to the light beam all entering the lens.

Reverting, in closing, to the first matter, it is just plain common justice and fairness, or so it seems to me, that so long as a theatre is selling the back rows of seats, it is up to the management to make the persons who rent them as comfortable as may be, and one of the fundamental requirements is that the picture be of a size and brilliancy that it may be viewed from those seats with as much comfort as possible, regardless of some diminution of beauty of the screen image as viewed from further down front.

Wire Size

L. R. Lewis, Montgomery, Missouri, has had an argument. He asks that I settle the matter. He says:

I have had an argument with a man who was down here from Kirksville, Missouri. He tried to tell me that a No. 16 wire could be used in theatres. I held that this was against the rules. He said it could be used, and that hundreds of feet of it were used in every theatre. Who is right?

I don't know, brother Lewis, except that it is permissible to use No. 16 wire, in the form of a flexible cord only. Just what size these cords usually are I cannot say. I persume, however, that some of them at least are No. 16. Probably that was what the Kirksville man had in mind and just wanted to mystify you and "get your goat."

"Should Sailors Marry?"

He was a good sailor but not on matrimonial seas.

He was used to all waves save those which were permanently stormy.

He located a bride through a Matrimonial Agency, and when he had got hitched found that he was supposed to assume the alimony she was paying to her first husband; that the first husband was to be their boarder and proposed to personally see that the alimony was paid.

The fun in this one is side-splitting. The laughs come fast and furious. It is one of those pictures that your audience thank you for showing, even those with ribs fractured from laughing.

It would make a dog laugh.

THE KING ON MAIN STREET

Here is the comedy box office wow of the Famous program thus far this year. It is going to clean up. The women are going to love it and they are going to like Adolphe Menjou all the more for it. This is one that the exhibitor can't possibly go wrong on for it is sure to mop. It is a sophisticated comedy, or rather was as a play, and with Leo Dietrichstein in the title role just about suited the better classes, but with the adaptation has broadened to such an extent that the high, the low and the in between are all bound to fall for it.

But, all in all, it is Menjou. The manner in which he plays the role of the king is going to stir the hearts and pull the laughs. This is a picture bet that shouldn't be overlooked anywhere.

HOW FRANK EDWARDS BOOSTED HIS RECEIPTS

Frank Edwards runs the Winter Garden Theatre.

It's a small house with big ideas in Seattle, Washington.

For years he made a nice profit at ten cents admission.

Then he figured it out this way.

Give 'em more on the screen and get more back at the box-office.

So he booked Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures, raised his admission price and put his house on a bigger money-making basis than ever.

Read his interesting experience in his letter to us.

He says:

"At the time we contracted for the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product, which necessitated increasing admission from ten to fifteen cents, we were sceptical.

"We had enjoyed success at an established ten cent admission.

"Our new policy has been a complete success.

"We are just finishing a four day run on 'The Unholy Three' and it has smashed every existing record.

"We notice that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is proving phenomenally successful all over the country.

"We want to assure you that it has done its bit for us."

This letter tells the story of just one exhibitor.

Our books show that other exhibitors, hundreds of them, are realizing that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product gives more entertainment on the screen and more profits at the box-office.

Consistently, release after release, week in and week out.

Think it over.

Frank Edwards didn't want to run forever on profits that were merely satisfactory.

So he booked Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and is smashing all records.

Why Not "Movie Applause Cards"?

UNDER the "A's" in any dictionary you will find a linguistic hoot owl lying down with a verbal dove, just as the lion and the lamb did of old. Old Man Dictionary never dreamt when he placed APPLAUSE and APPLESAUCE so close together that in the bright and snappy lexicon of HUMAN EMOTION these two words would be so far, far apart.

Back in the days when the WHISKER crop ranked second only to ALFALFA, and a bird was called "a winged denizen of the air" the fruit business GRAFTED such buds of speech as "peach" and "pippin" on our language tree.

In those days "quince" and "lemon" were HARSH TERMS.

But today, the fruit business is making amends. For besides making Santa Clara, Rocky Ford, and the Japanese beetle famous, it has given us such choice language of derision as "Razzberry!" "Banana Oil!" and "Applesauce!"

From the biblical FIG tree we learn one lesson. From the modern APPLE tree quite another.

A producer puts forth a picture and expects—or hopes—that the public will celebrate National Apple Week for the film APPLE OF HIS EYE. Instead, the public puts on National "APPLESAUCE!" Week, at considerable expense to the producer.

We take the liberty of being free with a HARD-BOILED term. Because the ISSUE is hard-boiled. And the final film judge—the PUBLIC—is hard-boiled.

The producer who puts out a picture with a dash of exploitation paprika and a prayer will never attempt to probe into the WHY and WHEREFORE of public reaction to his product. But the producer who is honestly trying to find the highest level of "what the public wants" without making himself a public burden—IN THE POORHOUSE—will try to find why the same money, brains and talent put into two pictures of the same type will produce APPLAUSE for the one and "APPLESAUCE!" for the other.

In many cases public acceptance can be pretty well forecasted. In many others the anticipation of APPLAUSE proves to be all wrong. The tragedy of it is that this happens with pictures taking what are thought to be real strides toward a real camera art.

The only voice the public has today is the voice of the dollar. But WHY is that voice raised or lowered? A doctor cannot treat a patient merely by saying, "You are a sick man." The diagnosis of the public, "This is a sick picture," is not enough. What MADE it a sick picture?

We believe that every time the machinery gets to work on the distribution of a picture, a parallel set of machinery should get into motion to collect and analyze PUBLIC opinion on that PARTICULAR picture.

Here is just a basis from which to work:—MOVIE APPLAUSE CARDS. Postal cards, printed for distribution by the exhibitor at each showing, to be filled out by the patrons at home and mailed to the PRODUCER. Properly laid out these cards could invite and GET opinion, one way or the other, on story, star, direction, titling, continuity.

The public today knows the RANKING directors and continuity writers, and follows their pictures. But the public today cannot ANALYZE a picture from the direction or the continuity angle. When the action in the picture is slow the public does not know whether it is the fault of the star, the director, the continuity, or the cutting.

The public can be made "CONTINUITY CONSCIOUS," just as it is made "teeth conscious," "hair conscious," "collar conscious." AND without taking away the "romance" of the photoplay. The finest little eradicator of "romance" in picture going is a POOR PICTURE.

When Mr. and Mrs. Public LEARN to see the fine hand of good direction or good continuity or good cutting in a picture, the producer will FULLY capitalize on names and brains, for which he well spends a lot of money.

And by the same token, a lot of production faults laid today by the public at the door of the "story" or the star will be deposited where they BELONG.

The infant industry of radio which put on SWADDLING CLOTHES when the picture business was wearing its first long pants, had not even a box-office barometer on BROADCASTING ENTERTAINMENT when it started. And it was not for some time that the stations realized the value of the APPLAUSE cards which they solicited—and received. Today these cards and letters are most carefully ANALYZED. They show, for instance, that contrary to "expert" opinion, the radio public today wants classical and semi-classical music more than it does jazz. "What the public wants" in radio entertainment is not a matter of guess work, but a matter of established FACT.

And the radio audiences are not getting tired of "WRITING IN." Far from it.

One broadcasting studio is now receiving over TWO THOUSAND LETTERS A DAY, more than it received in a WEEK two years ago.

The radio industry had to upset a lot of revered APPLE CARTS before it got the "Applesauce!" OUT of its business system, and the APPLAUSE in.

A good many merchants in a good many businesses are making money under the code: "THE CUSTOMER IS ALWAYS RIGHT." But you cannot do business under that slogan unless the customer has a chance to TALK.

The box-office is not MUTE by any means. And even when it is financially SILENT, it is ELOQUENT about the picture on the screen inside. BUT what MAKES it talk that way?

The PUBLIC is the ultimate consumer in this business. Pathe is giving that ultimate customer a chance to express itself through its BUREAU OF PUBLIC RELATIONS, under Miss Regge Doran. Here is an INVALUABLE service at the disposal of EVERY exhibitor of the country. If your patronage is not growing as you would like, or if it is at a standstill, or if it is dropping, call on Miss Doran. She will make your public talk to YOU, not only in words, but in dollars as well. Her RECORD proves that.

Miss Doran's work is not only of dollars and cents use to the exhibitor, but it will reveal to Pathe WHY people go to certain pictures or certain theatres; AND why they stay away. THAT will help Pathe help the exhibitor with its 1926 and 1936 model PRODUCT, and its 1926 and 1936 model EXPLOITATION.

The national advertising which Carl Laemmle does, inviting public opinion on PARTICULAR Universal pictures, has unquestionably helped shape the production destinies of Universal.

The Movie Applause Card may cost money. But it is not by ANY means as expensive as a picture with the "APPLESAUCE!" tag.

It's hard to see the forest for the trees. And, in this business, with so many chances of going wrong on a production, harder to see the orchard for the apple trees.

Broadcasting "production" is SIMPLE compared with picture production. More flexible Experiments not so costly. But the Picture stakes are BIGGER. All the more reason to find out what the PICTURE public WANTS.

"The public does not know WHAT it wants." "The public wants BETTER pictures." "The PRODUCER is wrong." "The PUBLIC is wrong."

Stop this SHUTTLE TRAIN for a moment and let the public get off and TALK.

Pay Dirt for Showmen all over the Country

J.R. Grainger

John Golden

by Charles Edward Hastings

SELLING the William Fox screen productions of the John Golden stage successes is one of the best things James R. ("Jimmy") Grainger has ever done in his whole life as a high-powered salesman. In addition to signing more than two dozen of the biggest circuits in the United States, and the big first run houses everywhere, "Jimmy" Grainger has interested every theatre owner in "Fox's Golden Nuggets" with the splendid co-operation of the divisions of advertising, publicity and exploitation of the Fox Film Corporation working out of the head office in West Fifty-fifth street, New York City.

The acquisition, production and distribution of the famous John Golden stage hits by William Fox is a chapter in motion picture history not likely to be forgotten by showmen when discussing big coups in story buying. And on the heels of the Golden successes we are informed that Mr. Fox has acquired some of the greatest of the David Belasco stage hits and the comedies of Charles Hoyt.

When Mr. Fox and Mr. Golden signed their contract in August of last year, Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, set in operation the world-wide machinery that distributes the Fox product, and when "Jimmy" Grainger took the helm at sales the Fox-Golden series was awaited by exhibitors through the United States and Canada, as well as in foreign fields.

"Lightnin'" was the first of the series in the John Golden Unit, and with its three years' record for a Broadway run; two years in Chicago and a year in Boston, its release in motion picture form was keenly anticipated. With John Ford directing, and a cast including Jay Hunt as "Lightnin' Bill Jones"; J. Farrell MacDonald, the "Sergeant Casey" of "The Iron Horse"; Madge Bellamy, Ethel Clayton, Wallace McDonald, Richard Travers, Otis Harlan and Edythe Chapman, "Lightnin'" stood right up to its reputation and after coining money for the big first runs and the circuits, goes to the second, third, and subsequent runs with all the power of a strong vehicle.

Mr. Golden's "Howdy Folks," called "Thunder Mountain," under the Fox banner, proved another success from the box-office standpoint, with its cast including ZaSu Pitts, and "Thank You," with George O'Brien and Jacqueline Logan; "Chicken Feed," given the screen title, "Wages for Wives," and "The Wheel" are demonstrating their box-office value to exhibitors everywhere.

With Vivian Moses directing advertising, publicity and exploitation, and with Ned Holmes in charge of exploitation with J. K. Rudolph handling publicity, the sales force obtained unusually strong support from start to finish. "The First Year" and "Seventh Heaven" are now going into work, with Mr. Sheehan at the West Coast studios with Mr. Rudolph, examining the various phases of production for sales and publicity angles.

In a chat with the Moving Picture World representative, "Jimmy" Grainger jotted down a memo, showing some big contracts signed in the United States and Canada, including the following:

The Southern Enterprises, which cover the principal Southern States; the William P. Gray circuit throughout New England; Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y.; the Schine Circuit, New York State; Ike Libson, Minneapolis; the Coston-Cooney-Karzas circuit, Chicago; W. M. James, Columbus, Ohio; the Carl Hoblitzelle houses in Texas; the Stanley Booking Company, Philadelphia; Mike Comerford's circuit in Pennsylvania;

Miss Doran's Double Value to Pathe

Will Aid Exhibitor with Patrons, Can Learn Public's Likes

By Sumner Smith

THE motion picture industry, through the trade magazines, well knows that a young woman by the name of Miss Regge Doran has become director of public relations for Pathe Exchange, Inc. This fact has been broadcasted far and wide. But there remains an angle to her work which doesn't appear on the surface of the Pathe announcements. It is of vital importance. Miss Doran is too keen mentally and too conversant with motion picture needs not to recognize its existence. She doesn't discuss it, but it is there and she knows it is there, and eventually Pathe will, through her work, realize in dollars and cents on not one but two angles of her work. And the whole industry will benefit.

What is this mysterious something which Miss Doran will reveal? It is simply this—a true line on what the public really wants in motion pictures.

Some motion picture men profess to be able in advance of release to tell exactly how a picture will go over. The more honest confess that it's a gamble, pure and simple. Some of the best box office bets were the projection room "flops" and the picture that looks like a million dollars on the home office screen may splash red ink all over the box office.

How It Goes

The puzzled production manager gives a trade showing. All of the film critics are there. There are about as many opinions as there are critics, and they cannot even be averaged up. One may praise the story and damn the production. Another may call the story drivel and praise the director. For that matter, the critics may be unanimous in their laudations and yet the picture may bring grief to a majority of its renters.

You can't average up the reviewers. You cannot even classify the public demand. Coal miners in Pennsylvania want westerns, perhaps, while New York audiences want ultra-sophisticated comedies. Country folk like pictures of high society life because they don't know anything about it; city folk may see enough of that stuff to want something different—say, Charlie Ray's small town pictures.

A Potential Authority

But Miss Doran, with her finger on the public pulse all over the country, can sense the general demand, can predict that one type of picture will please this and that section, while another will appeal to other types. From her intimate contact with the public as individuals rather than as a class she can sense the average demand, indicate the types of pictures that will prove most generally acceptable.

We think that Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, made a ten-strike when he engaged Miss Doran. He is said to have let no obstacle stand in the way of her engagement. Pathe and Mr. Pearson have the reputation for going after and getting the best available, whether in pictures or people.

Miss Doran recently returned from Chicago where she appointed the first field representative who will carry on co-operative work with exhibitors in the Mid-west territory. This representative is Miss Lucy Meriwether Calhoun. Her record follows—three years on the Chicago Tribune as feature writer, music critic and women's editor; similar work on the Herald-Examiner in Chicago, the New York American and the New York Herald-Tribune, public relations work for John J. Davis, ex-secretary of labor; last year in Paris writing for the Chicago Tribune Syndicate. She began her new work on November 9. That is the class of worker which Miss Doran will gather around her.

MISS REGGE DORAN

The Director of Public Relations for Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Miss Doran's trip in the Mid-West was otherwise productive. She addressed the Better Films Council in Cincinnati, the Childs Conservation League of America in Columbus, Ohio, the Columbus Women's Club, the Chicago Federation of Women's Clubs. The trip occupied three weeks.

Of course the avowed intention of Miss Doran's work is to establish more neighborly understanding between the exhibitor and his public, to help him to make his theatre a true community center. It is wholly reasonable to assume that the exhibitor needs Miss Doran and the benefits of her experience, of which we tell more later on in this article. He is a busy man with booking pictures, keeping his house spick and span, selecting newspaper advertisements from the press sheets, originating exploitation stunts and one hundred and one other details. Unless his is a rather small community, his only chance to learn the views of his patrons is from chance remarks as they are leaving the theatre and from the receipts.

Through national advertising the motion picture companies are attempting to bring the public closer to the theatre. But these companies are faced with the problem of popularizing their wares in the same advertisement, and often the advertising of trademarks and individual pictures gets the distinct preference. By association particularly with women's organizations will Miss Doran, in her own words, "forge a binding link between the exhibitor and his public; a connection that at present is extremely vague, and lay the foundations for the coming generation of picturegoers by making a direct appeal for family patronage."

Certainly Miss Doran's work will center around the neighborhood house. The owner of such a house can't afford a staff of trained investigators to keep in touch with changing tastes, to guide his bookings. It is here that Pathe's Department of Public Relations will function with great effect. The department will aid in forming a bond of good will between the exhibitor and prospective as well as present patrons. It will show him "how to appeal to picturegoers quite outside the accepted lines of publicity, exploitation and advertising, and yet work in with those three methods so as to obtain the greatest benefit from them." In short, as the Pathe announcement says, it will give him "an exhibitors' service by means of which the showman will, through direct contact with his public, be able to make more money for his theatre than he has ever before."

Her Experience

Let's have a look at the past of Miss Doran. Her job requires indisputed ability and experience. Is she lacking in either respect?

Not long ago Miss Doran was a writer on a Los Angeles newspaper. At a gathering of friends an 11-year-old boy began discussing Mussolini intelligently. His elders knew much less about him than did the boy. They were amazed.

"Where did you learn all that?" they asked.

"Oh, I saw all about him in the movies," said the youngster.

In that conversation Miss Doran saw the theme of an article on the educational value of motion pictures. She wrote it, emphasizing the value of theatre contact with the public.

Harry Arthur Impressed

Harry Arthur, one of the real brains of West Coast Theatres, read the article and 'phoned Miss Doran.

"What do you say," he asked, "about undertaking that work for us?"

Miss Doran accepted. First, she got in close contact with the theatre attaches. Regular meetings were held. The girl ushers—they're still there—were trained to act more as hostesses than as ushers. A prize of one dollar was offered them for suggestions as to how to improve the theatre's service to the public. Many good ideas were forthcoming.

Then Miss Doran began joining civic organizations. She joined them all—except the firemen's. The American Legion planned a meeting, lacked theatrical talent, called on her. She got them the Covey Sisters, afterwards with Pantages and a hit in New York. The boys never forgot the favor, as witness:

Motion Picture Industry Victor in Connecticut Controversy Over Tax

Drop Appeal Pending Against Law on Promise of Governor to Eliminate Censorship Provision in Next Legislature

By Sumner Smith

A CONFERENCE the past week of Connecticut state officials and motion picture men has resulted in what appears to be a complete victory for the latter. A so-called compromise was made whereby the motion picture men promise to drop the appeal now pending against the law. Governor Trumbull, representing the state, promised to work for modification of the law at the 1927 session of the Legislature and to eliminate the censorship section in toto.

This arrangement, or compromise, is heralded as a full victory for the industry. The governor has acknowledged publicly that the law works distinct hardships not intended by those who wrote it. The industry now will pay the film tax without protest until the next session of the Legislature.

The agreement was reached at a conference in the Executive Chambers of Governor Trumbull with Republican State Chairman J. Henry Roraback, Charles C. Pettijohn, representing the motion picture producers; Joseph W. Walsh, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, and Benedict M. Holden, counsel for the movie interests. It was the sequel of a conference at the Hotel Bond at which Will H. Hays and Roraback were present.

Joy pervades employes of the film exchanges, which had been moved out of New Haven. They will be returned at once and will immediately engage in the signing of contracts exactly under the same conditions as heretofore. Some exhibitors have already been seriously embarrassed by the law, if not forced into bankruptcy. To many of them this announcement comes literally in the nick of time. In another two or three months almost every theatre in the state would have been closed, it is said.

Governor Trumbull issued the following statement:

"It seems to be the concensus of opinion generally that this law works hardships upon the Connecticut theatre owners not anticipated and that it should be amended or modified.

"I do not believe there is any necessity for the censorship feature in this bill and I have heretofore expressed myself on that phase of it. I intend to cooperate with the local theatre men in their efforts to modify this law to make it more equitable and to eliminate the censorship feature and I have already so expressed myself to these men."

Charles C. Pettijohn of the Will Hays organization, said:

"In order to remove the disadvantages under which the Connecticut theatre owners are now operating due to the changed methods in the distribution of films, it has been decided to restore the former method of distribution in Connecticut. We are going to operate under this law until the next session of the Connecticut Legislature in the belief that the members of that Legislature will see fit to correct the situation. We intend to dismiss the lawsuits and continue our cooperation with the Tax Commissioner in the meantime."

Joseph W. Walsh, president of the M. P. T. O., of Connecticut, said:

"I attended the conference today with Governor Trumbull and Charles C. Pettijohn and am very much pleased with the results, which I sincerely believe will bring about a solution to the entire situation. Mr. Pettijohn, representing the producers and distributors, at the conclusion of this conference assured me that the producers and distributors would immediately take such steps as are necessary to relieve the situation that exists.

"The revolving fund heretofore created will be continued and through the continuance of that plan the producers, distributors and Connecticut theatre owners will give their continued cooperation to the Tax Commission of Connecticut."

The film tax bill, which was held constitutional last July, provided that a levy of $10 was to be paid by exchange men for every thousand feet of film brought into the state. This would have brought losses in excess of $100,000 a year to the exchange men.

The censorship feature provided that all the films were to be passed on by one man, Deputy Tax Collector John J. Splaine.

MORRIS AND GRIMM MOVE

George Morris, who has been publicity director of Warners' Theatre, New York, since that institution opened, has resigned to take up new duties with the Warner organization. Mr. Morris' future activities will center chiefly around radio program and other affairs concerned with theatre-radio. Mr. Morris is succeeded by Ben H. Grimm, who is well-known in film circles and who has had a varied theatre experience both in this country and in England.

Exchanges Reopen

The moving picture situation in Connecticut is returning to normalcy on November 11. With the picture interests and the Governor declaring a truce, the tension which had existed for several weeks is fast disappearing. Film exchanges which moved out of the state after the enforcement of the state film tax law are returning. Some have already returned to New Haven.

The United Artists and the Pathe offices were reopening, and Universal has trucks on the road bringing material for its exchange.

It is thought by representatives of producers that in a month the Kilfeather Building in Meadow Street, New Haven, will be the center of film exchange trade as it was prior to July 14.

Fitzpatrick-McElroy Buy Three Houses In Indiana

In July Fitzpatrick-McElroy, whose theatre circuit has covered Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, decided to extend into Indiana. Now, inside of three months, they own eight theatres in that state.

The first Indiana purchase of this company was four theatres in Michigan City—the Wallerstein string—including vaudeville and picture houses. Next they took a long-time lease on a theatre to be built in the downtown section of Richmond, Ind., work on which has already begun.

Their latest Indiana project is acquiring three theatres in Muncie. These three—the Columbia, Star and Lyric—comprise the Andrews circuit and were purchased outright from C. Bay Andrews and Forrest E. Andrews. The Andrews Brothers are leaving the picture field to devote all their time to their Florida interests.

J. C. Wodetsky, who has been at Benton Harbor, Mich., has been transferred to Muncie as manager of the three houses.

ANOTHER B. & K. DEAL?

It is reported from Quincy, Ill., that the Balaban & Katz interests have opened negotiations with a view of purchasing three of the local houses. The houses mentioned in connection with the rumors are the Washington Square, Belasco and Orpheum. Confirmation of the report has not been obtainable. It has been known for some time that Quincy was one of the key towns in the Balaban & Katz program for Illinois outside of Chicago.

St. Louis Excited by Rumors Of Big New Theatre Circuit

ST. LOUIS accustomed to big deals in motion picture theatres and the like, has been startled by the report from inner circles that a very big production group has sent a financier and a builder to that city to study the local situation with a view of buying or building a chain of twenty-five or thirty-five theatres.

An air of mystery has surrounded the coming of the gentlemen in question and the exact backers of their project have not been revealed. It is whispered, however, that the interests behind the movement are a big producer and national distribution organization not now represented by a first-run theatre in St. Louis.

The financier and builder arrived in St. Louis a few days ago and are said to have visited a number of the leading neighborhood theatres to get first-hand information as to their desirability from an exhibition and investment standpoint. Other sections of the city have been studied with a view of erecting new houses.

Whether any offers have been made to local theatre owners to sell to the new chain is not known. Men in the know say that the visitors have not yet progressed to the point where they are ready to open negotiations for any of the local houses. The project is preliminary and it may be several weeks before the visitors determine what houses would be desirable for them.

Their plan is said to contemplate a house in each of the key points of St. Louis and St. Louis county. In districts where a desirable house cannot be purchased a new house will be erected. Under this city-wide system no two houses of the chain will be in competition and some one house will be within easy walking distance of every man, woman and juvenile picture fan in the city. Whether a first-run house on Grand avenue or down-town will be obtained has not been revealed.

New York Clergyman Takes Slap at Busy Reformers

PREACHING from the pulpit two nights a week, along with the regular Sunday morning service, and running a picture theatre two other nights of the week, the Rev. H. H. Black of Central Bridge, N. Y., along Film Row during the past few days, declared emphatically that there was nothing quite equal to the motion picture as a means of entertainment, and that when so-called reformers attacked the motion picture nine times out of ten they did not know what they were talking about, basing their arguments, perhaps, on an occasional picture of years past.

Mr. Black has a house that seats 300, running on Tuesday and Saturday nights, with an admission of 15 and 25 cents, the 15-cent admission being for children under 15 years of age. To give a little added zest, Mr. Black runs a "country store" with his pictures once a month. He not only does all the booking but even goes so far as to run the projection machine once in awhile. While in the United States Army, he acquired his knowledge of booking as well as projection.

"I am not running the theatre as a money-making scheme," said the Rev. Mr. Black, just after he had concluded booking several pictures at one of the local exchanges, where he showed himself conversant with every phase of booking. "We run first-class pictures for the residents of our community in order that they may not be forced to go elsewhere for their entertainment. We are not making the mistake that so many theatres in small places make, of thinking that because the community is small, it is folly to buy other than cheap pictures. That our theory of showing good pictures, even though Central Bridge itself has but 200 residents, is the right one is evident from the attendance we have, the profits enabling us to buy excellent pictures as well as to recently enable us to purchase a new projection machine. Even though the community is small, I believe exhibitors in such places should give the best the market affords."

Advertising "Sniping" in Massachusetts Offends

The Massachusetts state department of public works, division of highways, has notified the attorney for Allied Theatres of Massachusetts that owners of theatres and motion picture releasing concerns are violating the rules of the department by so-called "sniping" of advertising matter. It is alleged that both public and private property is being used for this purpose and that as a result there has been a great number of complaints by individual owners and by people interested in the beauty of the highways.

The Allied Theatres has gone on record as urging its members and other interested in amusement enterprises to instruct their agents to discontinue any "sniping" unless same is on premises under a permit of the owners and filed with the state department of public works.

ALBANY AND BUFFALO MEET

Directors of the Albany and Buffalo zones met in Syracuse, N. Y., on Wednesday afternoon, November 4, at the call of President William Dillon, who presided at a session that lasted from 1 to 5 p. m. Among those present were Uly S. Hill of Albany, George Dewore of Schenectady, Rae Candee of Utica, Meyer Schine of Gloversville, Jules Michaels of Buffalo, Charles Heyman of Niagara Falls and Mr. Dillon. A number of matters, including plans to bring about greater activity on the zones and the music tax situation, were discussed but without any definite action being taken. Another meeting will probably be held the forepart of December.

Incorporations

The past week brought the incorporation of the Fox Theatres Corporation, with William Fox, Douglas Tauszig and Jack G. Leo as stockholders and directors. The company has an authorized capitalization of 4,000,000 shares of stock at no par value. Other companies chartered during the week and entering the picture business in New York State were: Brewster Theatre Corporation, Brewster, $20,000, with Benjamin and Rose Marasco; E. F. O'Neil, of Brewster; Tennek Film Corporation, $20,000, K. J. Bishop, John Bernhardt, Paul Huhn, New York City; Romantic Plays, Inc., $10,000, Rhoda Alexander, H. H. Abel, Samuel J. Krinn, New York City; Charles de la Motte, Inc., $100,000, Charles de la Motte, Rudolph Wieber, Philip Mentell, New York City; Film Associates, Inc., $20,000, Montgomery Evans, George Cronyn, Albert Boni, New York City; Gordon Enterprises, Inc., with Charles K. Gordon, A. J. Rubien, Meyer Machlis, New York City; Dallas-Capitol Theatre Corporation, Charles B. Paine, Brooklyn; E. H. Goldstein, H. E. Hughes, New York City; Winkler Pictures, Inc., William E. Slater, Edward M. James, Celia Shakin, New York City.

The Beechmont Amusement Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, has been incorporated with a capital of $50,000, by Charles Weiskopf, H. Hanley, Max Friedman, and others. The Jacobson Picture Screen Manufacturing Co., Cleveland, is also a recent incorporation, with capital of $5,000, by Axel Jacobson, Arthur A. Kent, Carl F. Rich, et al.

Richey to Visit Every Theatre Owner in Michigan

Beginning late in November, Henderson M. Richey, manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, with headquarters in Detroit, proposes to visit every theatre owner in Michigan. More than 300 owners of theatres in state, cities and towns are on Richey's list.

By going into the theatre owner's town himself, Richey believes he can be of assistance in solving many problems that bother the small house owner, especially the ones who have not the time or the money to spend in attending the meetings. In calling on them Richey plans to discuss association activities and to discover whether there is any particular feature of organization work that the association is overlooking.

Richey admits that the job is a big one, but he proposes to complete it if he has to use train, automobile, dog sleds and hard pan shoes. His present schedule calls for visiting ten theatres a day, this of course, being in the larger communities where that number of houses are open for business. From forty-five minutes to an hour will be spent with each exhibitor.

Cards are to be sent out in advance, in true drummer fashion, notifying the exhibitor of the date of visit.

NO MORE TIME CHANGE

A proposal to add an extra hour to daylight saving in Ithaca, N. Y., next summer, was defeated on November 3 by 868 votes. Residents of the city took a keen interest in the issue, there being 4,712 votes cast, of which 2,790 were against the proposition. William Dillon of Ithaca, president of the New York State M. P. T. O., took an active part in the campaign against the adoption of the proposal.

Washington State M. P. T. O. Elects Drinkwine President; Roster Grows

Twenty-four New Members Enlisted During Year—District Meetings and Arbitration Both Prove Highly Successful

WASHINGTON STATE exhibitors gathered in Seattle on November 4 for a one-day convention which provided for a busy session. The convention opened at 10:30 a. m., with H. W. Bruen, first vice-president, in the chair, owing to the absence in New York of President John Hamrick. A letter from Mr. Hamrick, expressing regret at his absence, faith in the organization and in its permanent success and containing a strong plea for 100 per cent membership, was read by Executive Secretary-Treasurer J. M. Hone.

Mr. Bruen then spoke earnestly on the benefits to be derived from the organization, outlining briefly its accomplishments during the past year. Five new members—F. Barcus, Anzier Theatre, Seattle; C. L. Klawitter, Community Theatres, Inc., Seattle; E. A. Prickett, Sequim, Wash.; A. C. Barclay, Grand, Leavenworth, Wash., and F. J. Talabere, Legion, Walla Walla, Wash. —were unanimously welcomed into the organization which, within the brief two years since its founding, has grown to a membership of 150 out of 250 exhibitors of the state. Twenty-four new members were reported as joining during the past year.

Minutes and the treasurer's report were accepted as read. They revealed the fact that the organization is on a sound financial basis and is functioning in a commendable manner. Vice-President Bruen appointed a Credentials Committee composed of J. W. LaVigne, F. Barcus and Si Danz, and an Audit Committee of F. B. Walton, Frank Edwards and L. A. Drinkwine. F. Irving was appointed Sergeant-at-Arms.

H. T. Moore of Tacoma, J. A. McGill of Port Orchard and H. W. Bruen of Seattle, were the retiring one-year trustees. Fred Mercy of Yakima, Walter Graham of Shelton and H. W. Bruen of Seattle were elected three-year trustees. Two-year trustees holding over are John Hamrick and Frank Edwards, both of Seattle, and Fred Walton of Bellingham. One-year trustees are C. E. Swanson of Everett, Ray Grombacher, Spokane, and L. A. Drinkwine, Tacoma.

Interesting reports by the secretary disclosed that six district meetings had been held during the year, in Spokane, Yakima, Walla Walla, Centralia and two in Tacoma. The membership is widely scattered throughout the state, embracing 194 theatres in 94 cities—61 west of the mountains and 34 east of the mountains. This proves the value of the district meetings, which bring the association in personal contact with the exhibitor who cannot get in to Seattle frequently, thus selling him the idea of joining the organization.

A strong plea was made by the chair that each member appoint himself a committee of one to sell the organization to every exhibitor not already enrolled, and some impressive facts concerning the combating of adverse legislation, the support of the or-

Theatre Transfers

When is a theatre sale a legitimate transfer? The answer to that question is worrying the members of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade and a special committee has been appointed to consider the problem.

Throughout the St. Louis film trade territory in recent months there has been an unusually large number of theatre sales. In many instances the film contracts entered into by the old owners were not purchased by the new proprietors. In some cases these transfers were from one member of a family to another. Some film men suspect they were "dummy" sales for the purpose of avoiding the payment of pictures contracted for.

Members of the Film Board of Trade take the position that a contract for film is a legitimate asset of a picture theatre and should be taken over by the new owners when a bona-fide transfer of a picture house takes place. They do not desire to interfere with the legitimate rights of any exhibitor or make it impossible for him to sell his theatre if he so desires, but they do intend to protect the interests of their companies by insisting that contracts signed by exhibitors for pictures are carried out.

ST. LOUIS STOCKS DROP

The stocks of the St. Louis Amusement Company and Skouras A experienced a slight reaction on the St. Louis Stock Exchange during the past week and sold at slightly lower levels. The closing quotations for the week were: Skouras A: $64.50 bid and $65 asked; St. Louis Amusement Company, $59.75 asked with no bid price.

September Negative Exports Drop, Chiefly to Britain

PRELIMINARY figures just released by the Department of Commerce show that while our exports of negatives for September, 1925, have fallen from about 645,000 linear feet in September, 1924, to 500,000 linear feet, with a corresponding decrease in value of from $115,000 to $95,000. American exports of positives have increased from about 16,000,000 feet valued at $525,000 in September, 1924, to about 18,100,000 feet valued at $142,000 in September, 1925.

With respect to individual markets, the most noteworthy feature of these figures is the large drop in our exports of films to the United Kingdom, this drop being from about 3,700,000 linear feet in September of last year to only a little over 600,000 feet in September of this year. France, on the other hand, which took about 750,000 feet of film in September, 1924, boosted this total to over 2,000,000 feet in September, 1925. This places her in second position among individual markets, Canada being first with about 2,300,000 feet in September, 1925. Of our other markets, Argentina ranks third and Australia fourth.

For the first nine months of the calendar year 1925 there has been a substantial increase in our exports both of negatives and positives over the same period last year. The figures for the first nine months of 1925 are approximately 8,000,000 feet of negatives valued at $1,500,000 and 170,000,000 feet of positives valued at a little over $5,000,000, as against about 6,300,000 feet of negatives valued at $1,000,000 and 121,000,000 feet of positives valued at about $4,500,000 for the first nine months of 1924.

Despite the fact that exports of motion pictures to England dropped off during September, she still remains by far our largest market for these as reflected in the figures for the first nine months of this year. Her total for this period of over 33,000,000 feet exceeds her total for the same period last year by about 15,000,000 feet. Australia, with 17,000,000 feet for the first nine months of 1925 as against about 14,000,000 feet for the same period in 1924, comes second. Canada is third with exports for these two periods of about 16,900,000 feet and about 14,000,000 feet respectively. France, finally, stands in fifth place as the only other foreign country which has taken over 10,000,000 feet of film, her total standing at just this amount as against as low as 5,000,000 feet for the first nine months of last year.

Crime News from Four Cities; St. Louis Man Loses $1,129

FOUR young men in a large automomobile crowded Joseph Mogler to the curb as he started to drive away from the Mogler Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., at 9.15 A. M., November 2, and robbed him of the Saturday and Sunday receipts of his three theatres, totalling $1,129. Mogler was on his way to the Bremen Bank, 3600 North Broadway. He is president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors League and a vice-president of the national organization.

Ten minutes after the hold-up of Mogler a lone bandit wearing a mask which came down to his shoulders entered the office of the Washington Theatre, Granite City, Ill., and held up Louis Landau, owner, and his manager, Richard Howard, escaping with two days' receipts totaling $1,694. Landau and Howard were preparing to take the money to a near-by bank for deposit when robbed.

Two armed and masked bandits, who apparently secreted themselves in the Mall Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, after the last show, cracked the theatre safe and escaped with $3,000.

They first asked the night watchman to give them the combination of the safe and when he refused they bound and gagged him and later knocked him unconscious with the butt end of a revolver, after which they proceeded with their job in leisurely fashion. There is no clue.

The Park Theatre at 5960 West Lake Street, Chicago, was robbed of several hundred dollars last week by thieves who jimmied the safe of the house. Manager E. B. Miller is going to get a burglar alarm that will wake up the neighborhood next time the crooks show up.

B. S. Jordan, manager of the Orpheum at Ottawa, Ill., reports that thieves stole $1,000 from the house while he was away from the theatre on other business matters. The tough luck about it is that there was no insurance.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Many things happened at two-thirty o'clock on the morning of Monday, November 9, but to Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harvey all that mattered was the birth of their baby daughter. The marvelous infant weighed in at the bedside at 7½ pounds, and George forgot Locarno, football, Cecil De Mille, and all current topics, and even forgot to worry whether Armistice Day would turn out to be an office holiday. Over at Producers Distributing Corporation, at 469 Fifth Avenue, where George is master of advertising, he was the recipient of congratulations on all sides, and for days thereafter the ringing of the telephone bell indicated friends calling him up to wish him well. Mrs. Harvey and the baby are doing as well as can be expected with a proud father hovering about and bothering everybody.

WOODHULL HONOR GUEST

R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., will be the honor guest at the ceremonies attending the opening of the new Hawthorn Theatre in Newark, N. J., on November 17. The Hawthorn is one of the newest of Murray Bratter's houses.

Drinkwine Elected

ganization in music tax problems, arbitration matters, etc., brought out the fact that the exhibitor has the assurance that while he is home operating his business, his interests are being watched by his organization in a manner that he could not possibly duplicate without its benefits.

Joe Bradt, secretary of the Arbitration Board, was called on for a report of that body's activities of the past year. He stated that 74 cases were filed, 58 of these being by distributors and 16 by exhibitors during the fiscal year ending November 1. Of these ten were settled before coming before the board for action, 42 decisions were rendered in favor of the exchanges and 22 favored the exhibitor. The approximate amount involved in these disputes was $35,887. The M. P. T. O. represented by Secretary Hone, acted before the arbitration board in 18 cases, of which 15 were decided for the exhibitor.

Mr. Bradt called attention of the exhibitors to the fact that the Arbitration Board is at the call of the exhibitor as readily as the exchange, and urged that they use its services and appreciate its benefits. He stated that its records are always open for inspection to those interested, up to the time of the actual taking of a ballot. Mr. Bradt expressed the opinion that every member of the organization should be obliged to serve a year on the board and that he would obtain much that was valuable through the experience.

Following this report, which was roundly applauded and a vote of thanks extended to the exhibitor members of the board for their efforts, particularly Mr. Bradt, who as secretary had borne much of the burden, seven nominations for Arbitration Board members were recorded. Of these Joe Bradt, L. A. Drinkwine and Walter Graham were elected. The meeting was then adjourned until 2 p. m.

The Election

During the recess the trustees met and elected as their officers L. A. Drinkwine of Tacoma, president; Frank Edwards, Seattle, first vice-president; C. E. Swanson, Everett, second vice-president; returning to office as executive secretary-treasurer, J. M. Hone, who has ably served the organization since its inception.

The afternoon session, which was turned over to the new president, was given over to the reading of congratulatory wires and letters and to the open discussion of exhibitor problems. Several specific instances of the benefits of the organization to the individual were cited by exhibitors.

Out-of-town guests, who contributed generously to the interest of the session, entering into the spirit of their brother exhibitors' problems, were Bob White of the Multnomah Theatres Corp., Portland, and W. C. Roach of the Oregon and Selwood Theatres, Portland.

The convention was declared closed at 5 p. m. and adjourned for a big banquet and ball at the Olympic Hotel, where the exchangemen gathered with the exhibitors for delightful evening's entertainment. Carl Reiter acted as toastmaster and delighted with some of his famous stories. Thus the third annual M. P. T. O. convention passed into history with flying colors.

Americans and British Investigating Canada as Strategic Production Zone

When Film Is Lost

Louis A. Buettner of Cohoes, chairman of the Albany Zone, together with Julius Berinstein and Abe Stone, well known exhibitors in Albany, sat with four exchange managers last week in devising a ruling on protecting the exhibitor as well as the exchange in cases where theatres have been forced to remain dark through failure of film shipments to arrive.

In cases where the film rental amounts to $15, and where no facts can be established to rule the amount of the claim, and where such claim is decided as being a meritorious one, the committe has decided that the adjustment shall be four times the cost of the film, with the further provision that the film be again furnished the exhibitor free of charge at a later date, providing that the feature was paid for.

In cases where the film rental is up to and including $25, the award will be three and one-half times the cost of the films, and in instances where the rental runs from $25 to $50 and more, the award shall be three times the cost of the film.

BROOKS WINS, GOLDSMITH LOSES

Harry M. Brooks, president of the Motion Picture Machine Operators Union in Troy, N. Y., was elected to the New York State Assembly last week after one of the stiffest campaigns that has been witnessed in the Collar City in many years. Associates of Mr. Brooks are planning to give him a banquet in the near future.

In Saratoga county, Irving Goldsmith, a well known exhibitor in Saratoga Springs, made a most remarkable run for the Assembly on the Democratic ticket but was deicated by less than 100 votes.

Both See Opportunity to Take Advantage of "Kontingent Plan" If It Is Adopted— See Provincial Trade Boost

VERY considerable interest is being taken by moving picture men in the Dominion of Canada over the probability of the adoption of the "Kontingent Plan" for the cinemas of Great Britain in order to reduce the per centage of foreign moving pictures andto protect the British moving picture industry.

If this plan is adopted by the British authorities, the general opinion on the part of men in the film business in Canada is that it will mean an immediate and tremendous boost for the industry in Canada. One statement has already been made by a Canadian Government official at Ottawa, Ontario, namely, Raymond S. Peck, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, which has been operating very successfully for five years or more. It is that the most natural thing in the world will be the establishment of producing facilities in the Dominion for the making of pictures to secure a British classification for them. This would gain for them preferred entry into Great Britain, the films being shipped direct from Canada to England for consumption.

There have been actual rumblings of late regarding the establishment of producing facilities by large producers of the United States in Canadian territory. In some instances, this has been carried out in order to secure a change in scenery. But other U. S. film representatives have been looking over the ground for business reasons.

Among those who have inspected Canadian possibilities during the current year are Mary Pickford, who was born in Toronto, Ontario; Douglas Fairbanks, Irene Rich, Ernst Lubitsch, Harold Lloyd, Lambert Hillyer, Milton Sills, Norma Shearer, who was born in Montreal; Priscilla Dean, Adolph Zukor, S. R. Kent of Famous Players-Lasky, New York, and Colvin Brown, vice-president of Film Booking Offices, New York.

Technical men from Fox, First National, Warner Bros. and other companies of the United States have also been visiting Northern Ontario and Quebec, Toronto, the Canadian Rocky Mountains, the Canadian National Parks at Banff and Jasper and other sections of the Dominion. All this undoubtedly looks toward the opening up of increased activities in Canada.

The making of pictures on Canadian soil opens up an entirely new angle to the situation for the English cinema situation. Moving pictures made in the Dominion would have to be classed as "British-produced" even though American companies were back of them. How much of a picture would have to be actually made on British Empire soil in order to secure British classification would have to be determined in much the same way as in the automobile industry. In the manufacture of motor cars in the numerous automobile plants of Canada, the cars have to be 65 per cent. Canadian-made in order to take advantage of preferential tariff throughout the British Empire. And a continuous check-up by Canadian Customs officials and others insures that the prescribed amount of Canadian production is put into Canadian-built automobiles to enjoy tariff concessions. This is one of the reasons why Canada stands second on the list of automobile manufacturing countries.

The Government of the Province of Ontario is already taking advantage of the film situation, according to an announcement at Toronto on November 6, by arranging for the production of a five-reel film drama in the Provincial Government's own studio at Trenton, Ontario. Both the Canadian Federal Government and the Ontario Provincial Government have been producing one and two reel educational, scenic and industrial releases for a long time, and now the Ontario Government is sponsoring the making of dramatic features under its direct auspices. The official in direct supervision of this activity in Ontario is the Hon. W. H. Price, K. C., Provincial Treasurer.

Proposed British Plan to Encourage Own Production

THE latest development in the British film situation, as reported by the Department of Commerce at Washington, D. C., follows:

"A committee composed of manufacturers, renters and exhibitors of films propose the following scheme for the adoption of a board of trade to encourage the production of British films. Commencing the first quarter of 1927 all exhibitors will be compelled to run a minimum of 10 per cent. of British films, progressively rising to 25 per cent. during the third quarter of 1929.

"British film is defined as manufactured by a British owned or controlled producing company, made as far as possible in a British studio and three-quarters of the cost, excluding fees to director and one principal actor, paid to persons domiciled in Great Britain.

"But dates on which various percentages come into operation are postponable if the supply of good British films is insufficient, and any British film considered not good enough will be ruled out for quota purposes, and the exhibitor proving unable to pay price demanded for British films may be released from the regulation.

"News, scenic, educational, etc., films are outside the quota. To bust the block booking system it is recommended that the exhibition date for foreign film be not more than six months after the booking date. The whole scheme will be controlled by a committee appointed by the trade board."

Lasky Urges Industry To Aid Red Cross Roll Call

The American Red Cross has issued a statement from Jesse L. Lasky, chairman for the motion picture trade for the ninth annual roll call of the American Red Cross which begins on Armistice Day, November 11. Mr. Lasky, in calling upon the employers and employes of the motion picture industry, urges them to support the peace time program of the American Red Cross. He says in part:

"The motion picture industry has always been at the forefront in every movement for the relief of suffering or the assistance of mankind. Just because we are at peace with the world we must not forget that the Red Cross is going on day by day, giving help to thousands of disabled war veterans, organizing nurses for disaster relief, conducting classes, rolling bandages, and is ready to serve you and aid you in any emergency at a moment's notice.

"As chairman of the motion picture group in the ninth annual roll call of the American Red Cross, I sincerely hope that everybody connected with the motion picture industry will do his best to see that the Red Cross achieves its objective."

NEW WORK FOR KETTERING

One of the most important announcements of the past week in the moving picture field in Chicago came from the Ascher circuit—that Ralph Kettering, one of the best known and most popular publicity and advertising men in Chicago, had joined their organization in charge of publicity and advertising. Ralph has been identified with Jones, Linick & Schaefer for many years in charge of advertising and publicity, and recently when the circuit leased its last exclusive movie theatre, the Orpheum, to the Warner circuit, and decided to close their direct connection with that line of amusements, Kettering was given free rein to make another connection in the industry. His many friends in the film world wish him much success.

DANES AND FRENCH COMBINE

Among the recent developments within the Danish film industry, says Commercial Attache Harry Sorensen of Copenhagen in a report to the Department of Commerce, a recent agreement closed between the Danish Nordisk Films Kompagni A/S., and the French Olivier & Pascel is the most interesting. It provides for the formation of a company under the name of Nordisque-Francaise, which through a combination of the interests and facilities of the two above named companies will endeavor during the coming year to produce a series of films with which it is hoped to conquer the French and Scandinavian markets.

HAL HOWE RECOVERED

Hal Howe, whose friends are legion, has recovered from an illness which has incapacitated him for several weeks. An operation was performed on one cheek bone. This week Hal was busy receiving congratulations in office and restaurant and on the street.

Canadian Picture Men Swat Golf Balls

The course at the Lakeview Golf Club, Toronto, became as dangerous as "No Man's Land" the other afternoon when the first annual golf tournament of the moving picture men of the Ontario Capital was held under auspicious circumstances. About twenty prominent men of the film distributing companies as well as numerous exhibitors were let loose on the links with club and ball, and for two hours there was a barrage of flying pellets and turf in all directions. Clair Hague, general manager for Canadian Universal, secured special mention in despatches for making the round armed only with a midiron and putter and twelve brand new balls, finished the 18th hole at dusk wtih a badly used ball which he had found in the rough.

The prize winners were: Leo Haag, Tom Brady, Tom Chisholm, Charlie Dentelbeck, Tom Bragg, Harvey Williams, Henry Nathanson, Harry Sedgwick, Sam DePass, M. Milligan, J. McInervey, Tom Benson, H. Bullen, Ben Murphy, J. Hunter, J. Quarrington, T. O'Neill, Jack Arthur and Ronald McClelland.

Outlines New Program to Managers at Chicago Meet

A 100 per cent. representation of Paramount district and branch managers attended the annual fall convention, held at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, November 6, 7 and 8, and heard Sidney R. Kent, general manager, outline the sales and production policies on the new season's attractions.

This spring and summer schedule, with the sales policy adopted, will be announced shortly.

George W. Weeks, general sales manager, presided at the sessions which were addressed by Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and other executives from the home office. On Sunday the assembled managers previewed a number of the productions which have been finished.

No previous Paramount program has aroused such unmeasured enthusiasm. Through the medium of a special edition of the Showman's Manual the managers were given a vivid description of each picture along with suggestions on how the picture may be sold to the public.

NATHAN RECUPERATING FROM OPERATION

Carol Nathan, Universal branch manager in San Francisco, has just recovered from a severe illness and operation for appendicitis, word comes to the Universal home office. Nathan, who is a veteran in the Universal organization and who has been at the helm of the San Francisco exchange for a number of years, was suddenly stricken early one morning, several weeks ago.

He was rushed to a hospital and operated upon immediately. This promptness saved his life. He improved rapidly and was able to go to his home about ten days later. After two weeks of recuperation, his physician permitted him to return to work at the Universal Exchange this week.

George Ames Is Head of Pathe Exchange In Albany

George Ames is now branch manager of the Albany, N. Y., office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., having returned to this distributing organization after a short absence in other fields of business. Ames succeeded L. Medem at Albany, who, at his own request, has been appointed special comedy salesman in the Newark territory.

Mr. Ames was formerly manager of the Pathe office in Philadelphia and his administration there won the admiration of the home office executives. He resigned from this position to engage in sales work in New York and later left the motion-picture business for the real estate field.

Another former Patheite to return to the organization is W. J. Fitzpatrick, who has been appointed special feature representative covering the Cleveland, Buffalo and Pittsburgh territory. Fitzpatrick left Pathe in 1917 to join the colors. After the War he became an exhibitor.

NEW FILM BUILDING

With leases already signed by the Universal exchange, Warner Brothers and First National exchanges, a fireproof film building is to be erected at once in North Broadway in Albany, N. Y., several blocks from the present Film Row. All leases will be for ten year periods and will become operative on May first next. According to Fred Elliott, a former exhibitor and now a real estate broker, the building has been endorsed by the Hays organization. It is expected that other exchanges not occupying their own buildings, will take quartres in the new structure.

J. W. COTTER REARRESTED

J. W. Cotter, owner-manager of the Fourth Street Theatre at Moberly, Mo., was arrested on November 5 and charged with operating his theatre on Sunday in violation of a city ordinance. He was recently fined $50 and costs on a similar charge by a police magistrate and this fine was later sustained by the Circuit Court. He has taken an appeal. Cotter contends that he has been operating his theatre on Sundays for charity.

secure entree into England, but the Canadian pictures would be able to obtain special consideration and concessions from other and remote portions of the British Empire. This would also be true in connection with various foreign countries which hold special trade treaties with Canada, such as France and several countries of the West Indies.

It has been pointed out in Government circles at Ottawa that it would be a comparatively simple matter for U. S. film companies to direct their own operations in Canada because of excellent transportation facilities and easy access. When certain pictures were made in Canada recently, such as "The Knockout" and "Lady Windermere's Fan," the producing men in charge were extended every courtesy and assistance by Canadian officials to encourage more film activities in the Dominion.

Seider Ideal Business Manager, Woodhull and Rembusch Proclaim

"Road to Yesterday" Is Road to Success

By William J. Reilly

CECIL B. DE MILLE has roped and thrown a bucking, plunging thought. In the celluloid coils of "The Road to Yesterday" he has firmly caught the idea of RE-INCARNATION. It is one thing to corral an idea with WORDS. Quite another to lasso it with PICTURES.

There is hardly a man or woman in the world who has not, at one time or another, held the thought that in the dim yesterday he or she lived and loved under ANOTHER GARB and under ANOTHER PERSONALITY.

For that reason ALONE "The Road to Yesterday" will make picture audiences talk. It has every quality of GREATNESS:—the real de Mille directing, story, acting, action, a big PUNCH, heart interest, a PORTABLE, TALKABLE idea.

Trains have been wrecked in feature pictures before. In "The Road to Yesterday" a freight train TELESCOPES the Pullman train carrying a highly DRAMATIC passenger cargo. The audience last Friday at the Embassy midnight showing, most of whom had come to the picture from other theatres, SHOUTED its approval when the freight engine in a HEAD-ON shot, wormed in THROUGH the sleeping car. WRECKAGE that BUILDS.

The picture takes a group of people caught in the grip of a powerful set of MODERN circumstances; develops the action to a climax on the terrific train wreck; and then cuts back to the YESTERDAY when the same characters mixed ale and swordplay, lordly arrogance and gypsy love.

Beulah Marie Dix who wrote the ORIGINAL play with E. G. Sutherland collaborated with Jeanie Macpherson on the film adaptation. The story is IDEAL screen material. We understand that it was long de Mille's AIM to make "The Road to Yesterday" into a picture but that litigation tied up the screen rights. HAPPILY, the story was available in time for his FIRST personally supervised production for Producers Distributing Corporation. You will like Joseph Schildkraut, Jetta Goudal, William Boyd, Vera Reynolds, Casson Ferguson and Trixie Friganza. So will your audiences. Even their feet ACT.

And it is "The Road to Success" for P. D. C. and the exhibitors who have allied themselves with this AGGRESSIVE organization.

Both Write in Glowing Terms of His Appointment—Latter Urges Continued Attention to Uniform Contract, Arbitration

By Sumner Smith

THE Dove of Peace, long fluttering above the heads of Motion Picture Theatre Owners, seems at last about to settle down contented. This is the reaction to the appointment of Joseph M. Seider as business manager of the national exhibitor organization, and it comes from many sources. Two of the most significant letters received this week follow. They are from R. F. Woodhull, national president, and Frank J. Rembusch, president of the Indiana organization.

Mr. Woodhull writes as follows to Theatre Owners:

"It has been my duty and pleasure at many and various times to forward statements regarding the activities and usefulness of your organization, The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"As I look backward at the enormous amount of work required in conveying to you this information to which you were justly entitled, I discover that in the compiling and sending I surely derived many a personal thrill of natural happiness over the honor of being the broadcaster of any activity that had for its purpose the relief of any brother theatre-owner.

"Keep on reading this letter because it contains one of the finest messages I have ever forwarded to you! Joseph Seider, the dynamic president of The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, has accepted the position of executive manager of our national organization! I trust you will pardon, or may I say welcome, the personal observation if I say that I have been in close contact with Joe since he followed me two years ago as New Jersey's president and he has surely built up some organization. I like Joe because of his substantial fund of knowledge regarding the troubles of our business, his safe and sane methods of solution, his untiring energy, and last, but most important of all, his honesty and sincerity of purpose.

"Our leaders for years have been urging the need of a business manager. Now we have one! And a real one! Send your troubles to Joe. He will welcome them and so will we all. We are anxious to serve you. Of course we must have your cooperation both moral and financial. If you have a statement in your files for dues that may have been overlooked, there never will be a better time to give it attention than right now."

Mr. Rembusch writes Mr. Seider:

"The election of yourself as general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is a most progressive and intelligent act on the part of the committee. In my opinion it is the most encouraging step made by the national organization since the famous Cleveland convention. It should be the means of bringing every faction and individual into the national organization. You have the capacity, the experience, the ability and the sincerity of purpose to make for success.

"May Joseph Seider, like the Joseph of old, be the means of organizing all the brethren to enjoy the years of plenty and keep away years of famine.

"We trust that the Uniform Contract and arbitration courts will continue to receive your attention. The Uniform Contract serves no good purpose, but is just a means of creating a lot of red tape and routine to keep the Hays machine organization buzzing. A contract of 100 words can be written that is sufficient to buy all the pictures in this industry. The present contract must have about 10,000 words, which is 9,900 too many. My contention has been proven by the results since we took over the office of president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, about three months ago.

"At that time film companies and exhibitors were spending most of the time in the arbitration court. Today we have but one case on docket, we have not been in Chicago for over two months, and I have a wire saying they will have no more hearings until further notice. Our secretary, Mr. Doody, and myself have worked out a plan whereby differences between a theatre owner and a film company are adjusted without going before arbitration courts.

"I will always be against the clause in any film contract whereby an exhibitor gives up the right to his day in court. That alone condemns the present contract. The kind of arbitration whereby three film men and three exhibitors act and exercise the functions of a duly organized court of justice is wrong. That is not arbitration. That's going back 1,000 years to the days of might is right.

"A year ago, when they fined me $60,000 because I refused to play pictures of a group of six because the first three were in terrible condition, I said, 'Hay's arbitration is the most unnecessary and most stupid contract that was ever proposed in any business transaction.'

"Let me cite you a recent case: About two months ago an exhibitor appeared be-

New Sales Directorate Is Now Functioning at "U" Home Office

A NEW sales directorate has been installed by Universal. The new group of sales heads will function along lines similar to the sales directorate established a year ago, the members of which recently resigned.

The new sales directorate is composed of Earl Kramer, Lou B. Metzger and Ralph B. Williams, all veteran film executives and well known in the industry. Kramer is the new sales director for the Eastern Division, including Canada; Metzger is the sales director for the Western Division, and Williams is the new director for the Southern Division. These three men replace Jules Levy, Ned Marin and Ned E. Depinet respectively.

The sales directorate idea of film sales control was inaugurated a year ago by Universal as a new move in the co-ordination of the selling forces of that company. It was established as an experiment and replaced the old system of divisional grouping, under which the country was divided into six or eight groups, with division managers in each group, moving from exchange to exchange.

Under the Universal sales directorate plan, the exchanges of the country are divided into three grand divisions, and the supervisors or directors of those divisions have their headquarters in the Universal home office in New York. From time to time these directors swing around the circuit of their divisions. This system assures frequent contact between the sales director and his exchange managers, as well as between the sales director and the leading exhibitors of his territory, and also makes for constant liaison between the sales directors and the home office.

Under the Universal plan, at least one sales director is always in New York, with power to pass on important emergency questions as they come up from day to day, whatever territory they may concern. He also is on hand to present the sales department point of view to the Universal officials at any time on any question.

the Rowland and Clark circuit, Pittsburgh; the Butterfield circuit in Detroit; the Spyros Skouras circuit in St. Louis; the Pantages theatres; the Poli circuit in New England; the Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C.; The Wells Amusement Company, Washington, D. C.; the Universal Film Company's Liberty Theatre, Kansas City; the West Coast Theatres, Inc., booked solid through the San Francisco and Los Angeles Fox exchanges; the Finkelstein and Rubin houses in the Middle West; the Jensen and von Herberg circuit on the Pacific Coast; the Mark Strand Theatre in New York City; the Rialto Theatre, New York City (Paramount) and the houses booked by N. L. Nathanson in Canada.

Some of the most valuable pressbooks issued on any series of pictures are the pressbooks issued by the Fox Film Corporation on the Fox-Golden seven. Coupled with the publicity matter contained in these pressbooks will be found many exploitation aids that have actually been worked out successfully. In the production division, Frank Borzage, Victor Schertzinger and Emmett Flynn, with John Ford, are included among the directors of the John Golden pictures, and Frances Marion prepared several of the scenarios, while distinguished authors, including Montague Glass, author of the "Potash and Perlmutter' stories, were assigned the task of titling these pictures.

SCHROCK TO REMAIN AT "U" CITY

Word has been received at the Universal home office that Raymond L. Schrock, general manager at Universal City, the studio plant of Universal, has renewed his contract with Universal for one year. His resignation, handed in several weeks ago, has been withdrawn.

He will have as his first assistant, Harry H. Zehner, who for the past several years has been the personal secretary and aid to Carl Laemmle, the Universal president. Zehner is one of the best liked men in the organization.

Indianapolis Exhibitors Plan Big Theatre

Owners of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, Indiana's largest picture theatre, plan the erection of a new picture house in the downtown district, seating as much or more than the Circle. Two sites are under consideration and architects are at work on plans covering both, the choice to depend largely on which one will afford the largest capacity.

The board of directors of the Circle Theatre Company is composed of A. L. Block, Robert Lieber, Fred C. Gardner, Herman P. Lieber, Leo M. Rappaport, Edgar O. Hunter and Theodore Stempfel. The Circle was erected in 1916, and was one of the first modern picture theatres in the United States. Exhibitors from all over the country visited it after its erection.

COAL SHORTAGE SERIOUS

Unless there is some relief from the present coal shortage in Albany, Troy and Schenectady, N. Y., many of the picture theatres in these cities will find themselves in a serious situation a few weeks hence, or as soon as winter weather sets in. Very few theatres placed orders for coal last summer and have their bins full. The Rose Theatre, in Troy, N. Y., is using cord wood bought from farmers in the surrounding territory, and is practically without any coal.

The Berinstein houses in both Albany and Troy have installed oil heaters during the last few weeks, and Julius Berinstein, the owner, is not worried over the present strike. Coal is reported as being very scarce in Schenectady, while Albany is resorting to soft coal in many places in meeting the emergency.

CLEVELAND SUSPECTS HELD

Two men are being held by the police at Cleveland, Ohio, in connection with the recent safe robbery at the Mall Theatre, in which some $3,000 was taken. One of the suspects is said to be a former employe of the theatre.

Seider Is Ideal

fore the Chicago board. He had bought fifty pictures from a small, practically unknown film company. He knew nothing about the picture business. He lived in a small town near Chicago. He started to run these pictures; the people started to run him out of town. They said, 'We want standard product and stars, such as we see in Chicago. We do not want to see this blood and thunder.'

"But the little company carried him before the Film Board and there sat the representatives of Adolph Zukor, Carl Laemmle, Robert Lieber, Marcus Loew, and using the Uniform Contract and Hays' rules they said, 'This man must first play those fifty pictures and no others.' He is only open two nights a week; that meant twenty-six weeks of blood. He was ruined if he played the pictures, and if he does not play the pictures he cannot get any other pictures.

"Here in a little community, where they are much more particular about the motion pictures and about everything else and where we generally have our most trouble from cranks, a theatre owner is forced to play fifty pictures unsuitable and undesirable, or go out of business.

"I have the privilege of knowing Messrs. Zukor, Lieber, Loew and Laemmle; have met them many a time. They are fine, wonderful men. If they had any idea how stupid this arbitration thing works out they would not be a part to it.

"Another thing we found out in these days of independent talk: that the independent producers bring in the most cases before the Film Boards—at least this has been our experience in Indiana. None of the big producers seem to find it necessary to use the Film Board of Trade. Well, it's a strangely contradictory industry.

"Again I want to wish you the greatest success and trust that every theatre owner in America will rally round your selection as general manager. I believe that if the Detroit meeting was repeated tomorrow, under yourself, we would have the Theatre Owners of America united at once.

"Let's all get back of Seider."

Mr. Seider already has begun strengthening his personnel by adding Tom Waller. Because of the special training Mr. Waller acquired during his eleven years in the metropolitan newspaper field and on Moving Picture World he was drafted from the Associated Exhibitors, which he recently joined, through the courtesy of Oscar Price, its president.

MR. AND MRS. SAWYER RETURN

Arthur H. Sawyer, who is associated with S. L. Rothafel and Herbert Lubin in the new Roxy Theatre now in the process of construction in New York City, arrived on November 10 from Europe accompanied by Mrs. Sawyer. Sawyer and "Roxy" went abroad some months ago to search Europe for some new ideas to be incorporated into their own $8,000,000 enterprise. Europe proved barren of innovations both as to lighting and construction and Roxy sailed for home to put his own into practice. Mr. Sawyer remained to make some business settlements and is now at his desk at the Roxy Theatres Corporation, 383 Madison avenue, New York City.

First National's New Sales Policy Divides Country Into 3 Territories

UNDER the new sales plan adopted by First National Pictures, providing for a sales cabinet of three executives, the country has been divided into three territories, Eastern, Southern and Western, with one of the sales council directly in charge of each, and all subject to the supervision of General Manager Richard A. Rowland and Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer.

According to a statement from Mr. Rowland, the districts will be managed as follows: Ned Marin, sales manager Western territory. A. W. Smith, Jr., sales manager Eastern territory. Ned Depinet, sales manager Southern territory.

All matters pertaining to the branches in each of the territories will be referred to the sales manager. It is pointed out that the new selling policy will keep each territory in closer contact with the home office than was possible under the former plan.

Following are the First National branches under the present territorial division:

Western territory: Chicago, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle, Calgary, Montreal, St. John, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Southern territory: Atlanta, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Louisville, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Eastern territory: Albany, Boston, Buffalo, New Haven, New Jersey, New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Two Open Sunday Fights On in Illinois

While the citizens of Glen Ellyn, a West Side suburb, voted against Sunday movies recently, the backers of the new theatre have decided to go ahead with the project and build a movie house that will seat at least 1,000.

G. T. Freeman and E. E. Alger, Urbana, Ill., exhibitors, are fighting for Sunday movies in that live little city. Students attending the Illinois University there and merchants are backing them in their fight.

MLLE. GAMBARELLI JOINS "ROXY"

"Roxy" has a new addition to his "gang" which appears weekly before the microphone at WEAF. It is Mlle. Gambarelli, the dainty danseuse, who has pirouetted gracefully before the delighted audiences of the Capitol Theatre for many seasons past.

Miss Gambarelli has a quaint personality which never fails to get over with "Mike." Her association with the genial "Roxy" has been one of many years' standing, interrupted only during the brief interim in which Roxy left the Capitol to devote his energies to the huge "Roxy" Theatre project now in progress.

FRED HAMLIN RESIGNS

Fred Hamlin, the popular director of publicity for the Mark Strand Theatre in New York City, has resigned and will announce his future connection in the near future.

Miss Doran's Value

Later the theatre flopped badly the first Monday of Holy Week. The other six days didn't loom up as at all prosperous.

Miss Doran looked up the Legionnaires.

"Do you want to do me a favor?" she asked.

"You bet," they said.

Miss Doran and the boys got their heads together. She allowed them a 30 per cent. cut on the business for their co-operation. They sold tickets and jammed the theatre for her.

That carried the theatre over Tuesday and Wednesday. For Thursday Miss Doran had another trick up her sleeve. The Lyric Club had a double quartet of which it was very proud. It wanted a hearing in public. Miss Doran booked it for Thursday evening. Again the house was jammed, this time by members of the Lyric Club.

Then there was a tie-up with Mills College girls. They sold tickets and sang college songs while one of their number played the theatre organ. Another jammed theatre. Then came a tie-up with the Kiwanis, who were listed at the theatre as non-patrons of motion pictures. They swelled box office receipts and they became regular patrons.

The value of this public relations work was immediately apparent. Letters of appreciation flooded—that's a good movie word but it's merited here—the theatre. People said that they had enjoyed themselves and that they thought the theatre staff was a marvel of courtesy and efficiency.

With full knowledge of success Miss Doran went ahead with her work. She joined the California Federation of Women's Clubs and enlisted them in aiding the theatres. Groups of women paid their admissions at the different houses of the West Coast chain and as they did so announced themselves as members of the organization and friends of Miss Doran. Harry Arthur hadn't had any doubt of Miss Doran's ability, but if he had had, these announcements would have changed his mind.

Personality, personal contact and knowledge of the business probably are Miss Doran's greatest assets. The second and third are indisputably necessary, but to the writer it seems that Miss Doran's personality is worth the two of them put together. She is the personification of that which is genuine, that which rings true. She loves her work and has the capacity for making other people interested in it. She understands the other person's viewpoint and will listen to it.

Miss Doran ought to go far in the motion picture business. Her public relations work unquestionably will be a great success, and later, we think, she will be accumulating for Pathe an immense knowledge of just what the fickle public wants in motion pictures.

NEW RICHWOOD, W. VA., HOUSE

Work is progressing on the new Star Theatre at Richwood, W. Va., to replace the house burned in 1921. A modern house is being erected, fireproof throughout. It will seat 750 and be ready about February 1, weather permitting.

A change in the selling line-up of First National Pictures, Inc., brings prominently to the fore several high tension celebrities in the field of distribution. At the left is Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National; at the right, Sam Spring, chairman of the Sales Cabinet; A. W. Smith, Jr., sales manager in the Eastern territory, center; Ned Marin, sales manager in the Western territory, left of center; Ned Depinet, sales manager in the Southern territory, right of center.

Skouras Reports Complete Details Of Deal with Famous Players-Lasky

Missouri and Grand Central to be Paramount Houses—St. Louis Amusement Co. May Seat More Than All Competitors

SPYROS SKOURAS, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, owners of the Grand Central Theatre, the West End Lyric, Lyric Skydome and Downtown Lyric and the Ambassador, now under construction, upon his return from New York City announced officially the consummation of the deal with the new theatre department of Famous Players and Balaban & Katz whereby the Missouri Theatre becomes a Paramount first-run house under the supervision of a new Skouras Brothers corporation to be formed.

Under the agreement the Missouri and the Grand Central, which are on opposite corners of Lucas avenue at Grand boulevard, will be operated by Skouras Brothers as Paramount houses. When the new Ambassador is completed it will be substituted for the Grand Central.

Skouras announced also that the deal with Universal Pictures Corporation involving the Grand Central has been called off. Negotiations had been under way for Universal to take over the Grand Central when the Ambassador was completed.

The new arrangement is of decided advantage to both Skouras Brothers and Famous Players-Lasky. It assures the Paramount pictures of complete protection in the first-run field in St. Louis and places the Mound City in the first rank as an exhibition center.

Skouras Brothers through their new connection should benefit greatly because of the big buying power of the Balaban & Katz group of theatres, including those recently taken over from Famous Players. The Skouras houses will benefit especially through being able to obtain high-class musical and novelty acts to be run in conjunction with their first-run pictures.

The Missouri-Grand Central-Ambassador deal will not affect adversely Skouras Brothers' affiliation with First National, for which they hold the franchise in the St. Louis territory. The Skouras houses will continue to show First National first-runs.

The new corporation will be formed immediately and plans call for an expenditure of $250,000 to improve the Missouri Theatre.

The St. Louis Amusement Company, controlled by Harry Koplar and Skouras Brothers, has completed a deal whereby eight more of the leading neighborhood houses of St. Louis pass under control of the organization. The deal also includes the new Columbus Theatre now under construction at Columbia and Southwest avenues.

Two of the houses, the Webster and Montgomery, formerly were operated independently as the individual property of Harry Koplar and associates. The Montgomery, 2701 North Fifteenth street, seats 1,424 and has an adjoining 1,381-seat airdome. The Webster, 2119 North Twelfth street, has 935 seats and also has a 1,750-seat airdome.

The other houses taken over were operated by George Skouras, who has been made a vice-president and director of the St. Louis Amusement Company. Sol Koplar, brother of Harry Koplar, also is now an executive officer of the dominant neighborhood exhibition company and holds a place on its directorate.

The George Skouras houses that have passed under control of the St. Louis Amusement Company are: Powhattan, Manchester avenue, Maplewood, 1,200 seats, and a 1,500-seat airdome; Maplewood, Manchester avenue, Maplewood, 1,200 seats; Aubert, 4949 Easton avenue, 1,599 seats and 2,200-seat airdome; Chippewa, 3807 South Broadway, 575 seats; Congress, 4021 Olive street, 1,096 seats; King Bee, 1710 North Jefferson, 1,291 seats, and 1,299-seat airdome, the 2,000-seat Columbus under construction on Southwest avenue.

Announcement of the deal for the houses named was made by Spyros Skouras, president, and Harry Koplar, first vice-president of the St. Louis Amusement Company. They stated that the company was considering the purchase of other houses and it is probable that other deals will be completed within the next few days.

Rapp & Rapp of Chicago have been retained by the St. Louis Amusement Company to design the new $1,000,000 theatre and apartment building at Hamilton and Easton avenues and it is probable that construction of that 3,000-seat house will get underway in early spring. This structure will have a most advantageous position on the principal trans-continental highway as soon as the St. Louis-Kansas City concrete highway is completed. This will be early in 1926, according to present plans of the Missouri Highway Department.

A check of the St. Louis situation reveals the following line-up of houses:

St. Louis Amusement Company	Seats
20 theatres operating	30,140
3 theatres closed	3,954
2 theatres projected certain	4,500
15 airdomes	25,613
Total seating capacity	64,207
Skouras Brothers Enterprises
5 theatres operating	7,922
1 theatre projected	4,000
1 airdome	3,500
Total seating capacity	15,422
William Goldman houses (Have a booking arrangement with Skouras Brothers.)
3 theatres operating	2,660
2 airdomes	2,171
Total seating capacity	4,831
Grand total of seats with which St. Louis Amusement Company has a direct or indirect connection.	84,460
Other houses in St. Louis and St. Louis county are:
76 theatres operating	62,959
4 theatres projected	7,400
12 theatres closed	5,498
32 airdomes	32,120
3 combination houses	7,983
Grand total seating capacity	115,960

With the deals now under negotiation and contemplated, it is almost certain that before another year the St. Louis Amusement Company will hold theatres with a greater seating capacity than all other houses in St. Louis. The average seating capacity of its houses is far above that of other houses in the city. With few exceptions the company now owns all of the leading neighborhood or outlying houses in St. Louis.

Mass. Declares War on Daylight Saving

War again has been declared upon daylight saving in Massachusetts by the Allied Theatres of Massachusetts, an organization of exhibitors and other theatre owners. At a recent meeting it was voted that a notice be sent to the members and to all others interested in the theatrical business in the Bay State with a request that aid be given the Standard Time League in its campaign to wipe out the statute calling for daylight time. It was recommended that $25 be contributed to the league.

In a letter to theatre owners, Robert G. Larsen, general manager of the Keith-Albee interests in Boston and president of Allied Theatres, says that "we have every reason to feel confident that, starting in ample time and with proper financial support, victory can be won at the state election next year."

RED SEAL FEATURETTE ARRIVES

The very newest little featurette in the Red Seal aggregation was born to Mrs. Edwin Miles Fadman, Jr., in the Lying-In Hospital, New York City, on Election Day. Dr. Asa B. Davis, chief of staff at the hospital, afterwards weighed the baby boy, named after his daddy, which tipped the scales at four and a half pounds. Mrs. Fadman and the baby are doing nicely, while the proud papa is busy receiving congratulations on all sides. He cabled his representative in Havana to acquire a wing of a cigar factory, explaining he could have done better by his pals had it not been for certain amendments in our dignified Constitution.

F. P.-L. DECLARES DIVIDEND

At a meeting held today the Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the common stock, payable January 2nd, 1926, to stockholders of record at the close of business on December 15, 1925. The books will not close.

Grainger Pleased Over Coming Fox Pictures As He Starts on Big Tour

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general sales manager of Fox Films, sailed Saturday, November 7, for New Orleans. From the southern seaport he will start on a final swing around the country in behalf of the current season's product in the South and Southwest.

An important stopover will be made by the Fox sales chief in Los Angeles, where he will join Vice-president and General Manager Winfield R. Sheehan, who is now lining up the production forces preparatory to starting work on the big schedule of releases the Fox organization is contemplating for the 1926-27 season. Mr. Grainger will remain with Mr. Sheehan for three or four weeks, after which he will start back for New York, stopping off at a number of big cities on the way.

Mr. Grainger's latest trip to the West Coast is the fifth he has made since he became associated with Fox last May.

Before leaving Saturday Mr. Grainger expressed his enthusiasm over the strengthening changes effected by Mr. Sheehan in the Fox release schedule for the latter part of December and January.

"These releases," the Fox sales chief emphatically declared, "will be the company's best. They are from great stories and plays by popular authors and the casts assembled to work in them have unequalled box-office value.

" 'The Ancient Mariner,' our special Christmas release, has names the neighbor's children know for its modern sequence. The cast includes Clara Bow, Earle Williams, Leslie Fenton, Nigel de Brullier and Hallam Cooley. We have just started an exploitation campaign on this one that will have the country standing on its head waiting to see it by the time it is released.

"We close the year with this box-office knockout: Peter B. Kyne's 'The Golden Strain.' Cast in this production are Kenneth Harlan, Madge Bellamy, Ann Pennington, Hobart Bosworth and others.

"Our January releases defy adequate description. Their box-office titles and subjects just send me up in the air when I think about them. We start with 'The Gilded Butterfly, which John Griffith Wray is directing with Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell as leads and Frank Keenan, Herbert Rawlinson and Vera Lewis as the principal support. It's a story of a father who attempts to capitalize his daughter's beauty.

"Following that we have 'Palace of Pleasure,' directed by Emmett Flynn, with Betty Compson, Edmund Lowe, Henry Kolker,Harvey Clark, Jacques Rollens and Nina Romano in his cast. This is taken from the great European stage success, 'Lola Montez.'

"A co-release of the Flynn production is Tom Mix in 'My Own Pal,' from the story by no less a favorite than Gerald Beaumont. That's all any salesman will have to tell about this one.

"Then we have a Rowland V. Lee production with the intriguing title, 'Daybreak,' which is based on the successful play, 'The Outsider.' Cast here are Jacqueline Logan, Lou Tellegen, Walter Pidgeon, Charles Lane, Gustave von Seyferitz and Roy Atwill. Some cast and story, we'll say.

" 'The First Year,' another Golden directed by Frank Borzage, follows 'Daybreak.' Matt Moore and Kathryn Perry are the leads in this one. Character support is up to the same high standard of all the others. A Golden directed by Borzage with those leads should be enough to convince the most skeptical buyer that this will be worth booking.

"And we don't stop there. Following that lineup we have the sensational 'Johnstown Flood,' based on that most appalling of American catastrophies and directed by Irving Cummings with George O'Brien and Florence Gilbert cast in the leading roles. If anyone wants a thriller they should book this one. There's going to be an audience kick here that will spell S. R. O. wherever it's shown.

"Reliable Buck Jones in 'The Cowboy and the Countess' winds up the January bunch of Fox releases. Buck's pictures are so consistently good that exhibitors know what to expect."

From the January releases Mr. Grainger launched into a talk about next season's productions which Mr. Sheehan has been wiring him about. When he got on this subject, his enthusiasm knew no bounds. He said:

"Can you imagine any exhibitor turning down the Belasco-Warfield plays such as 'The Music Master' and 'The Auctioneer,' 'The Return of Peter Grimm' and 'The Grand Army Man?' And then there's 'What Price Glory. I hate to think of paying salesmen to sell this one. Why, any exhibitor would be willing to stand in line to book this sure-fire box-office bonanza. You know the rest of them. The boys in the publicity department have been doing nothing else for the past month but telling of the wonderful material William Fox has bought for the coming season.

"Wait until you see the pictures we are going to make from those Hoyt plays Mr. Fox has just announced he has purchased. Ask dad, he knows the kind of business these plays did at the box-office. Were going to release one of them this year just as a sort of sample. 'A Trip to Chinatown' is its title. Watch for it. Margaret Livingston, that girl everyone liked so much in 'Havoc' and a number of our other earlier releases, is going to play the leading 'femme' in this one, with a little comedy support from such dubs at getting laughs as J. Farrell MacDonald and Earle Foxe.

"And get this about the role Margaret is going to enact. Among stage folks it is considered the greatest comedy role ever written for a woman, and don't be at all surprised if as a result of this picture the great missing link of the picture industry, a woman comedy star, is developed. This girl Margaret can act, and I advise you to watch her smoke after she makes her 'Trip to Chinatown.' I just got through reading the scenario and it's a 'wow' in more ways than a yellow hound has fleas. George Marshall will supervise the making of this one. He's the boy who made the Van Bibber comedies the outstanding two-reelers of last season and this. Robert Kerr, who has been making the Richard Harding Davis stories into pictures since Marshall's promotion to the post of comedy chief, will take time off from the two-reelers to direct 'A Trip to Chinatown.' That's a combination you will have to go a long way to beat.

"Anyone who plays 'A Trip to Chinatown' should remember we are making nine more of these Hoyt plays into pictures for 1926-27.

"I've been in the picture business a long time, but I've never seen a lineup like we got for next season. With what I've mentioned before we have such titles as 'The Lily' and 'The Comedian,' two more Belasco plays; 'A Temperance Town,' one of the Hoyt group; 'Cradle Snatchers,' that's the big one on Broadway now; 'One Increasing Purpose,' by the same author who wrote 'If Winter Comes'; 'Pigs,' another John Golden, which he calls his litter of laughs; 'The Family Upstairs,' a Sam H. Harris hit; 'Going Crooked,' a stage success which is coming to Broadway as soon as its producers can rent a theatre big enough to hold the crowds; 'The Way Things Happen,' still another stage play which in my opinion should be one of the greatest dramatic picture triumphs; 'Frozen Justice,' that novel which created such a stir a few years back; 'Married Alive,' which title alone would be enough to say for it if it wasn't from that sensational best seller by Ralph Strauss, and 'Down to Earth' from the book by Julius Perutz."

Mrs. Valentino Starts Work on "Do Clothes Make the Woman?"

MRS. RUDOLPH VALENTINO (Natacha Rambova) who arived in New York on the SS. Leviathan on November 10, expects to start work this week on "Do Clothes Make the Woman?" the gorgeously gowned and superbly mounted society story in which she will star for F. B. O.

Mrs. Valentino was tendered a gala reception when the Leviathan docked. She was met at the pier by Harry J. Cohen, her manager; Nat. G. Rothstein, F. B. O.'s director of publicity, advertising and exploitation, and several personal friends. A luncheon was served in the main dining salon of the ship and later Mrs. Valentino went directly to her apartment. She was in conference with J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O., in charge of production; Daniel Carson Goodman, under whose personal supervision the picture will be made, and Harry O. Hoyt. She is most enthusiastic about the story which has been written especially to suit her personality and talents, and is eager to start work immediately.

Mrs. Valentino purchased her entire wardrobe for the production in Paris and returned with forty trunks, containing the latest fashions in gowns, hats, wraps and shoes from the smartest Parisian contouriers. She made a special trip to Madrid and while there purchased thirty-two gorgeous Spanish shawls which she promises to wear in the picture.

Clive Brook, who has been cast as leading man for Mrs. Valentino, arrives in New York today on the Century.

Interiors will be shot at the Tec-Art Studio in West 44th Street, New York. Henry Cronjager will stand behind the camera.

ZASU PITTS in a scene in "Thunder Mountain," the William Fox film version of John Golden's stage success, "Howdy Folks," produced by Victor Schertzinger, and with a cast including Madge Bellamy and Paul Panzer.

"Don Juan" Gets Under Way; John Barrymore is Starred

FIVE production companies are now at work at the Warner Bros. West Coast Studios.

"Don Juan," John Barrymore's second big special is in production with Alan Crosland directing. Mary Astor has the leading feminine role. Willard Louis plays the faithful servant, Padrillo, and Phillipe De Lacy enacts as a child the character that, when grown, is assumed by the star. Others in the cast are John Roche, June Marlowe, Helene Costello, Myrna Loy, Helene Dalgy, Warner Oland and Montague Love.

Although it will not be released until next season, it is expected that "Don Juan" will be completed soon after the first of the year. The production will be on a lavish scale, the most pretentious spectacle, it is believed, which the Warners have made to date.

Work on "The Night Cry," the next starring vehicle for Rin-Tin-Tin, the Warner wonder dog, is in full blast, with Herman Raymaker directing. June Marlowe has the leading human role.

"The Cave Man," second picture on the present schedule featuring Marie Prevost and Matt Moore, is well under way, with Lewis Milestone handling the megaphone. In the cast also are John Patrick, Myrna Loy, Phyllis Haver and Hedda Hopper.

Roy Del Ruth is directing Monte Blue's fourth starring vehicle, "The Man Upstairs," from Earl Derr Biggers' magazine story, Dorothy Devore has the leading woman's role and the cast includes also Helen Dunbar, Heinie Conklin, John Roche, Eve Southern, and Stanley Taylor.

Syd Chaplin is about half finished with "Nightie Night Nurse," his second big comedy feature for Warner Bros. Patsy Ruth Miller is playing the feminine lead and the supporting cast comprises Gayne Whitman, Matthew Betz, David Torrence, Edith York, Raymond Wells and Ed Kennedy. Charles Reisner is directing.

Metropolitan Signs Dixon

Metropolitan Pictures have signed Ralph Dixon to head their film editorial staff. Dixon is one of the best known film editors in the industry, having been associated with the late Thomas H. Ince for six years, and more recently with Hunt Stromberg

"Gold Rush" Goes Big at the Capitol, Vancouver

"I know you will be interested in learning that Charlie Chaplin in 'The Gold Rush' has established a new high record for the Vancouver Capitol theatre, having drawn more people and more money than any other attraction in nearly five years of operation, and is the first picture ever to be held over for a second week," telegraphed Ralph Ruffner, the Capitol manager to United Artists Corporation. "The newspapers, billboards, window cards and heralds were the only exploitation material used. Knowing what this picture has done elsewhere I am sure Chaplin and the United Artists Corporation deserve congratulations.

"After Six Days" Gets Big First Run Date

Louis Weiss has just received word from the Enterprise Distributing Corporation that they have booked "After Six Days" the Bible feature which has played to record audiences wherever shown.

This booking is in the Jefferson Theatre, Birmingham, Alabama. The feature will open on November 6 for an extended engagement and will play at $1.50 top price which is somewhat unusual in this territory. The Jefferson Theatre is considered the best first run in that section of the country and the theatre is going into a heavy exploitation campaign to put the picture over in the proper way.

Von Eltz to Play Opposite Evelyn Brent in New Film

Theodore Von Eltz will play the male lead opposite Evelyn Brent in her new production, "A Broadway Lady," it was announced by General Manager B. P. Fineman at the F. B. O. Studios recently. With the completion of casting, work has just been started on the picture.

Marjorie Bonner, Joyce Compton, Ernest Hilliard, Johnny Gough, and Clarissa Selwyn have also been added to the cast. The production, first of the new series being made by F. B. O. with Miss Brent as its star, will be directed by Wesley Ruggles.

Fox Finishes Two Comedies

"Cupid a La Carte" and "The Flying Fool" Have Been Completed

Fox Films announces the completion of "Cupid a la Carte," the fourth O. Henry comedy this season, and "The Flying Fool," an Imperial comedy.

Another Imperial comedy, "The Fighting Tailor," second of the Irish-Jewish series, has just got under way. It is being directed by Benjamin Stoloff under George Marshall's supervision. The cast includes Georgie Harris, who was the comical jockey in "The Wheel." The feminine lead is played by Barbara Luddy. Others in the cast are Frankie Adams, Sidney Franklin, Walter Perry and Anna Hernandez.

All the actors, directors and writers of the Fox comedy division were presented to the audience of the Criterion Theatre, Los Angeles, recently. The representatives of the Van Bibber, O. Henry, Helen and Warren and Imperial comedies proved that they were just as funny on the stage as on the screen. The players present were Earle Foxe, Sid Smith, Hallam Cooley, Lynn Cowan, Florence Gilbert, Marion Harlan, Judy King, Kathryn Perry and Barbara Luddy. The directors: George Marshall, Pen Stoloff, Lou Seiler, Tom Buckingham, Robert Kerr, Daniel Keefe and Albert Ray. The writers: Bryan Foy, Murray Roth, Beatrice Van, Louis Bennison and Katherine Carr.

"Rustling for Cupid" Is Second Kyne for Fox

All preliminary preparations have been completed for the picturizing of the second of the Peter P. Kyne stories on this current season's Fox schedule. Its title has been settled upon as "Rustling for Cupid" and it will be made by John Ford a soon as he finishes work on his latest giant epic, "Three Bad Men."

"Rustling for Cupid" will be not only a typical Kyne narrative of that peculiarly virile variety for which this famous author is noted, but it is predicted it will develop into one of the most actionful heart-interest pictures of the year.

THE DAINTY COLLEEN MOORE just simply can't resist the urge to do some "spouting," in "We Moderns," the Israel Zangwill story in which the great First National star will shortly be seen. Jack Mulhall, who plays opposite Colleen in this offering, is taking it all good naturedly, and if he is on the point of "falling" for her "modernisms" he doesn't seem to show it.

Lloyd Executive Senses Big Production Boom on West Coast

CONFIDENT that the West Coast is shortly to see one of its greatest motion picture production booms, William R. Fraser, general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, has returned to his desk at the Metropolitan Studio, following a 10 weeks stay in the East. While in New York Mr. Fraser had conferences with Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Elmer Pearson, general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Mr. Fraser bases his prediction on the forthcoming studio activities on the fact that motion picture theatres throughout the country are once more swinging into their normal business stride, following on the heels of one of the greatest industrial booms the country has experienced.

Mr. Fraser laid at rest a report that has been persistent for months that Harold Lloyd would move his producing unit to New York. "There is only one place to produce motion pictures, and that is right in Los Angeles," declared Mr. Fraser.

"Throughout the East there is in progress a great commercial boom, which is almost certain to be felt in Southern California this coming winter," asserted Mr. Fraser. "Wall Street is now reflecting this activity with a tremendous total of sales. Motion picture exhibitors are profiting greatly by this industrial movement, but it really is the better grade of pictures being turned out by Hollywood producers that is directly responsible for the improved conditions in the exhibition field.

"Southern California is to get the bulk of the tourist trade this winter, judging by my few talks with men in a position to know in the East. The one serious retarding factor in increased tourist trade, however, is the train time between New York and Los Angeles. A concerted move should be made to have all the transcontinental lines reduce their running time by at least 12 hours."

Mr. Fraser superintended the New York opening of Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman" at the Colony Theatre.

DOLORES COSTELLO looks more like a child at play than leading woman for John Barrymore, but she has advanced so rapidly since joining Warner Bros. that she is in constant demand by other companies when not busy on the Warner lot. Miss Costello will be seen in "The Sea Beast," the forthcoming feature special starring John Barrymore.

London Requests Premiere of "Lady Windermere's Fan"

DISPATCHES from London state that with the arrival of Irene Rich in that city on a few weeks' vacation, English exhibitors have awakened to the fact that Oscar Wilde's great classic, "Lady Windermere's Fan," is actually about ready for the screen after years of effort during which the Wilde estate refused to permit it to be used for cinema purposes.

This has led to an effort on the part of London theatre owners to induce Warner Bros. to hold the world premiere of the Lubitsch production in that city before Miss Rich, who plays the leading role, returns to this country.

If success crowns their efforts, the dispatches state, Miss Rich will be invited to a gala opening in her honor to which royalty will be invited.

At the Warner office in this city it was stated that such overtures have been made, but they did not know whether the film would be cut and edited before Miss Rich returns home, late in December. Lubitsch has just returned to the West Coast and is personally cutting the film. A wire from Hollywood this week stated it would be ready in about three weeks.

Harry M. Warner said that if London exhibitors are really anxious to have the world premiere held there, he thought, as an act of courtesy, work on the editing of the film might be speeded in an effort made to grant their request.

"However," he added, "nothing could induce us to release this production anywhere until Lubitsch puts his okay on the negative."

Completes "Three Faces East"

"Three Faces East" from Anthony Paul Kelly's highly successful war-time secret service play was completed at the Cecil De Mille studio this week and Director Rupert Julian is now at work cutting and editing the subject for early release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

"The Phantom of the Opera," Universal's current big feature, will be shown over the entire Famous Players Canadian circuit, as the result of arrangements just completed between N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the Canadian chain, and Jules Levy, one of the Universal sales directors. This deal involves ninety-five theatres. The starting dates begin on November 16 when the picture will open in Toronto.

Important Canadian showings to follow the Toronto engagement are Montreal, November 23; Ottawa, November 30; Calgary, November 31, and Edmonton. The other towns represented in the Famous Players chain will follow the key city runs closely.

Forrest Stanley in Columbia Picture Cast

Forrest Stanley who has played opposite Dorothy Revier in several of her recent Columbia vehicles is again to be seen opposite this popular star in the latest Columbia production to be released, "When Husbands Flirt." This feature is one of the best comedies to be produced by this organization and will without doubt receive the same enthusiastic approbation from the public as was accorded the successful Columbia comedy "Steppin' Out." In addition to Miss Revier and Forrest Stanley, an all star cast was assembled for this production including Ethel Wales, Tom Ricketts, Maude Wayne, Irwin Connelly and Frank Weed.

Schine Circuit Contracts

Warner Bros. added another to the long list of exhibitors signing for their 1925-26 output, a few days ago, when the Schine Circuit closed a contract to show this product in all its fifty-one theatres in central New York State. The ideal was arranged by E. J. Smith, eastern sales manager for Warner Bros., assisted by Harry L. Hollander and Jacob N. Klein, branch sales manager at Buffalo and Albany, respectively.

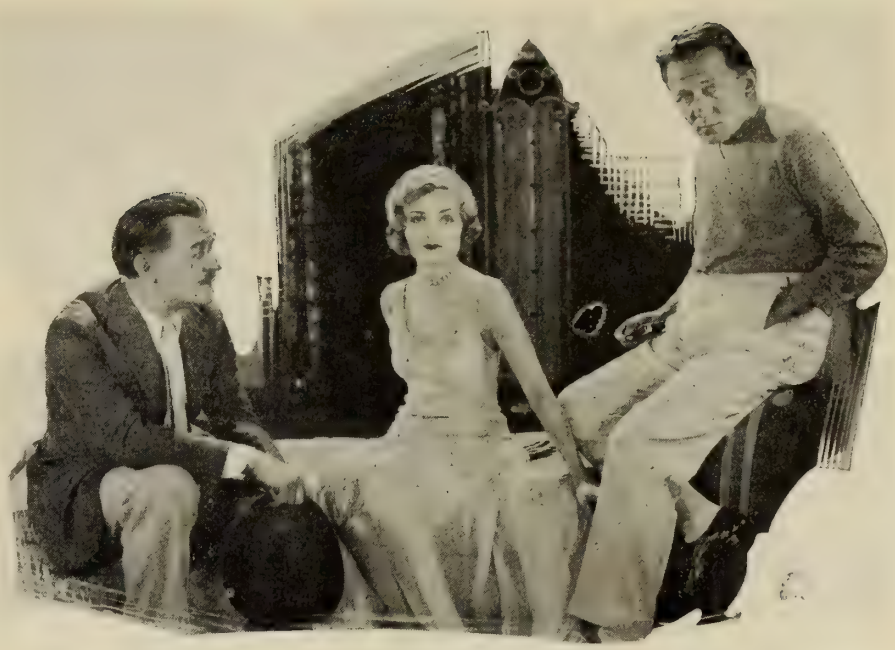
FOLLOWING "ROMOLA" and "The White Sister" comes a definite pledge from Metro-Goldywn-Mayer of another exquisite bit of portraiture from the gossamer Lady of the Screen, Lillian Gish. Here is the premiere star in "LaBoheme," now in production with King Vidor directing.

Famous European Picture To Have Screening in N. Y.

Following Albert Warner's return from Europe last summer it was announced that next year Warner Bros. would release the foreign-made spectacle, "Le Bossu" ("The Duke's Motto"). This announcement was made upon Mr. Warner's statement that of all the features he had viewed in Europe, "Le Bossu" unquestionably was the finest.

Recently it was stated in print that Warner Bros. would not be the agent through which this feature is released, a statement that Albert Warner today hotly denied. The statement, according to Mr. Warner, was not authorized by himself nor any other official of the Warner organization.

Le Bossu now is on its way from Europe and is expected here next week. Promptly upon its arrival the print will be viewed by the officials of Warner Bros. and members of the trade press.



SCREEN BEAUTY'S DADDY VISITS HER AT STUDIO. Richard Bennett, the distinguished stage actor, dropped in at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City, Cal., where his charming daughter, Constance, was playing "Sally" in the screen production which Director Edmund Goulding (right) made for M.-G.-M., from the musical comedy success, "Sally, Irene and Mary," in which Eddie Dowling scored a tremendous success. In private life Miss Bennett is Mrs. Philip Plant, having been married last week in Greenwich, Conn., following a speedy trip from Los Angeles.

Rupert Hughes Will Write Titles for "Sea Beast"

In an endeavor to make "The Sea Beast" starring John Barrymore a perfect picture in every respect, Warner Bros. have engaged Rupert Hughes, famous as a novelist, short story writer and director, to title the production. This is the first time Mr. Hughes has taken assignment of this sort outside of his own productions, but after seeing "The Sea Breast" in its rough state, the bigness of it appealed to him and he consented to write the titles.

Millard Webb is engaged at present on the editing and cutting. The picture on completion was in fourteen reels and even at that length has been hailed by all who saw it in the projection room as one of the big pictures of the year. It is to be cut down to feature length and is scheduled for early January release.

Heath and Katterjohn Signed by Metropolitan

Percy Heath and Monte Katterjohn have been added to the scenario staff of Metropolitan Pictures. Both spent years in newspaper work as young men. Percy Heath wrote for Baltimore, Washington and New York dailies before becoming press representative for the Follies, and later for David Belasco and Henry Savage. Besides his original stories and scenarios, he has written many vaudeville sketches and one comic opera.

Monte Katterjohn wrote the story and scenario of "The Flame of the Yukon," and "The Sheik" was made into a screen play at his instigation. He wrote the scenario for Gloria Swanson's first starring picture, and did several for Bebe Daniels. Beside writing, he also did cartooning for newspapers before going into the field of motion pictures.

"Danger Girl" Selected for Priscilla Dean

"The Danger Girl" is the new title of Priscilla Dean's first starring picture for Metropolitan Pictures, originally announced as "The Bride." This is a picturization of the play of the latter title by Stewart Olivier and George Middleton. Finis Fox has completed the scenario and production will begin next week under the direction of Edward Dillon.

New Chadwick Film

Chadwick Pictures Corporation has embarked on another big production, this time the story of the "Transcontinental Limited." The railroad drama offers the glamor of thrills and courage. The cast includes Johnnie Walker, Mary Carr, Eugenia Gilbert, Alec Francis and Bruce Gordon. Nat Ross will direct.

MAURINE POWERS HAS A BIG FOLLOWING AMONG THE FANS
The screen "discovery," brought out by Will Nye, and starred in a number of specials, is seen here with Fred Parke in a scene in "Wanton Kisses," a J. Ray Friedgen production for independent release. Director Friedgen used an original story by Lewis Allen Browne.

"Peter Pan" Xmas Film Fixture; Merchants Welcome Trade Tie-ups

"PETER PAN," Paramount's production of Sir James M. Barrie's story of the boy who sought eternal youth, which lends itself so readily to the Holiday spirit of the Yuletide program, is being booked by exhibitors throughout the country for presentation this Christmas.

The success of this picture in more than 200 theatres playing it day and date last Christmas stamped it as a picture with eternal life as a holiday offering.

The spirit of youth permeates every household at Christmas time, and it is this message of youth around which Barrie has woven his story that makes "Peter Pan" fit so admirably into the holiday program.

That both old and young are imbued with this spirit of youth after viewing Betty Bronson's great vehicle is attested to by exhibitors themselves, one theatre owner having written: "It is wonderful the way the children respond to it and the grownups are the biggest children of all."

Many successful tieups have been offered on "Peter Pan" by Leon J. Bamberger, assistant exploitation manager of Paramount, to enable exhibitors to conduct a comprehensive Christmas campaign on the picture.

There are Peter Pan Kids Clothes, Peter Pan Dresses, Peter Pan Cravats, Peter Pan Fountain Pens, the book "Peter Pan" and the tieup with the Oldsmobile automobile. Paramount exploiters will advise exhibitors desiring information of the manner in which these tieups may be used advantageously to the box-office.

In exploiting the picture theatre owners may conduct essay contests, resemblance contests, children's writing contests, drawing contests and jingle contests. Peter Pan whistles may be given away by dealers. Effective window displays should be arranged. Cooperating advertising may be effected with dealers handling Peter Pan merchandise.

Among the valuable catchlines which may be used in advertising are:

"The story of every child's dream and every mother's love."

"'Peter Pan' will stir golden memories and bring back your youth."

"'Peter Pan' takes you on a delightful flight of fantasy to a land of boundless joy."

"Come, let Peter Pan take you from the workaday world to a fairyland of dreams."

"The boy who wouldn't grow up is here in the story that never grows old."

Many of the contracts for presentation of the picture this Christmas are repeat bookings, prompted by the earlier success of Herbert Brenon's masterpiece.

New Lobby Photos

Beautiful New Process Used for Cecil B. De Mille's Drama

Something especially beautiful in lobby displays will be seen with the release of Cecil B. De Mille's prsonally directed production, "The Road to Yesterday."

The lobby photos for this production have been made under a newly developed photographic and color process that makes each still a real work of art in the most brilliant, yet softly and delicately blended colors. The sets, mounted in frames, form the most attractive and the richest looking lobby display yet devised for motion picture exploitation.

Samples of these remarkably effective stills were on display in the lobby of the Embassy Theatre last week in connection with the premiere trade presentation of the production.

Goldbeck Made Director

The elevation of Willis Goldbeck to the position of director, marking the newest phase of the rocketlike rise of this twenty-seven year old scenarist was announced by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players Lasky Corporation in charge of production. Mr. Goldbeck will direct Michael Arlen's "The Ace of Cads" which will be Adolphe Menjou's starring vehicle. Mr. Arlen is now at the Paramount studio engaged in adapting this story for screen use, aided by Mr. Goldbeck.

Walter Nieland With Warner

Walter Neiland joined Warner Bros. this week to take charge of exploitation in the Middle West with headquarters in Chicago. Mr. Neiland is an exploitation man of many attainments, having for three years been in charge of Goldwyn's work in Chicago, and for the last two years has handled the advance work for Rubin and Cherry's Circus. He takes charge of his field at once. Warner Bros. are slowly shaping their exploitation force with the right men and expect to have a full and competent crew in the field before long.

Fields Signs Contract to Star for Paramount

Following his sensational success in two D. W. Griffith pictures, "Sally of the Sawdust" and "That Royle Girl," W. C. Fields, comic star of Ziegfeld's "Follies," has been signed to a five-year contract as a star in Paramount pictures, it was announced yesterday by Jesse L. Lasky.

Unusual efforts will be made by Paramount, Mr. Lasky said, to give Fields vehicles that will permit full scope to his ability as a screen comedian. Tom Geraghty, now supervisor of the Thomas Meighan productions, is at work on a story which has been written for Fields by a nationally known humorist, and when this story is ready to go into production Fields will be given a complete comedy unit of gag men and technical men that will make his pictures unique among comedies. Mr. Geraghty will supervise these productions.

Dave Kirkland, who has just completed "All Around Frying Pan," Fred Thomson's latest production for F. B. O., has been engaged to handle the megaphone for "The Tough Guy," the next Thomson story, according to announcement made by Milton Gardner, production manager of the unit, at the F. B. O. studios yesterday.

"The Tough Guy" has just been purchased from Frank M. Clifton, the author, and a continuity is being whipped into shape by Buckley Fritz Oxford. Casting will be begun as soon as the script is completed.

Having completed and shipped to the F. B. O. home office the master print of "The Last Edition," his "tribute to the profession of journalism," Emory Johnson, F. B. O. producer-director and Emily Johnson, his mother, have left for the High Sierras where they will prepare the scenario for their second special for the F. B. O. 1925-26 program now under way.

"King on Main Street" Carries Main Street in N. Y. and Boston

NEW YORK and Boston have joined in acclaiming Paramount's "The King On Main Street," a picture which is "a joy to behold" and one which inspires "waves of laughter and genuine outbursts of applause." Audiences at the Rivoli on Broadway and at the new Metropolitan in Boston were carried away with its subtle, clever fun, and the portrayals of Adolphe Menjou, Bessie Love and Greta Nissen. All newspaper reviews praised highly the direction of Monta Bell.

Seventy thousand persons saw the picture the first four days of its presentation in Boston, according to George J. Schaefer, district manager for Paramount in New England. In a telegram to Sidney R. Kent, general manager, he said:

"Premiere showing of 'King On Main Street' at new Metropolitan this week most enthusiastically received. Has been put to severe test on account of opening of newest and most luxurious theatre. Attendance over 70,000 first four days and picture received great reception."

New York newspaper reviewers were extremely laudatory in their comments.

Mordaunt Hall in the Times wrote that the picture was a joy to behold with now and then a touch of O. Henry. "A sparkling light comedy entitled 'The King On Main Street' inspired waves of laughter and genuine outbursts of applause from the audience that filled the Rivoli yesterday afternoon. This new production is singularly refreshing because Mr. Bell has scorned to employ conventional methods in the handling of his players."

Quinn Martin of the World, although disappointed in the ending, wrote that he would "lose no time in advising people up and down the land, in every walk of life, to go to see 'The King On Main Street.' For herein a jaunty, intelligent and finely tuned performance by Adolphe Menjou has been woven and spread upon the screen."

Mildred Spain of the Daily News views the picture as the work of "our local Ernst Lubitsch." Make no mistake about it, Monta Bell, our local Ernst Lubitsch, has produced one of the significant pictures of the year. The picture was made for Adolphe Menjou, and Menjou nearly makes the picture with his highly imaginative performance as King Serge. He is thoroughly understandable. But what is more, he actually tugs at your heart strings. This picture has our unbounded admiration. It fairly glitters."

Harriette Underhill of the Herald-Tribune wrote: "Adolphe Menjou is the star, and the cast includes Geta Nissen, Bessie Love, Carlotta Monterey and Oscar Shaw. It is because of these charming people, not forgetting Monta Bell, who directed, that 'The King On Main Street' is the delightful bit of fooling that it is. Because Mr. Menjou is now a star he is not changed in the least and, as a matter of fact, it wouldn't be possible for him to be any better than he has been. The titles are as fine as the rest of the picture."

Aileen St. John-Brenon in the Morning Telegraph said: "'The King On Main Street' provides a delightful bit of fun at the Rivoli, subtle, clever fun, heightened by the magic touch of this welcome newcomer, Monta Bell. Bell seems to have thrown away the good old rubber stamp before he entered a motion picture studio, that is if he possessed one. He doesn't deal in commonplace, and gets his effects by the simplest methods."

WHEN ARTHUR BRISBANE, BRILLIANT EDITOR OF "THE NEW YORK AMERICAN," visited Hollywood recently, he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks (Mary Pickford) at the Pickford-Fairbanks studio. Large Western Circuits Give Prominence to Gotham Pictures

EACH week shows a remarkable increase in the popularity of Gotham Productions among Independent exhibitors and several of the larger circuits in the West are featuring "Gothams" over their vaudeville bills.

One of the largest is the Pantages Circuit which reports that the plan is working out to the tune of greatly increased box-office receipts. The success of Gotham's "The Overland Limited" at the Pantages Theatre in Los Angeles prompted the management of this house to exert extra effort on behalf of the next picture which was "His Master's Voice" featuring Thunder, The Marvel Dog.

A special edition of "Pantages Pickings" the theatre house organ was devoted almost entirely to this picture. Additional extra exploitation attracted the attention of the Gotham West Coast production unit and the dog was sent to the theatre for a "personal appearance." A new house record resulted.

Similar reports have been received from the Frank Circuit operating in the Middle West. A three-quarter page newspaper ad. was the opening shot for "The Overland Limited" at the Isis Theatre, Cedar Rapids, Ia., and this city as well as Waterloo and others on the circuit report capacity business.

Further East, the big Hippodrome Theatre in Baltimore reports $11,500 on the week with "The Overland Limited," the highest gross receipts in the city in the face of the strongest kind of opposition. The Hippodrome has recently adopted a "box-office building" policy and states that "The Overland Limited" turned the tide for them.

Von Stroheim to Produce and Act in Series for Paramount

JESSE L. LASKY announced that, through arrangement with P. A. Powers, he had signed Eric Von Stroheim to produce and act in a series of Paramount pictures.

"I have looked upon Mr. Von Stroheim as one of the outstanding figures of the screen, not only as a producer, but also as a character actor of subtlety and intelligence," said Mr. Lasky. "As the man who produced 'The Merry Widow' I think he has established himself as a director who brought a great deal to the motion picture art, so I am particularly happy that he will start his first Paramount picture early in February. We are now considering several well known theatrical properties as Mr. Von Stroheim's first picture for Paramount.

"Everyone of the Von Stroheim-Paramount productions will have not only the active cooperation of the producing executives of the Lasky studio, but in making these pictures Mr. Von Stroheim will have back of him all of the resources of the Famous Player-Lasky organization. Thus in stories, casting and all the other multitudinous details of production Mr. Von Stroheim will have the very best available."

Mal St. Clair has been chosen to direct the filming of "Glorifying the American Girl," which will go into production at the Paramount Long Island studio the last of this month. St. Clair arrived in New York yesterday from the West Coast for preliminary conferences.

The picture is from an original story by Rex Beach. The production will be made under the personal supervision of Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., producer of the Follies. The cast has not been chosen.

St. Clair has just completed "A Woman of the World," in which Pola Negri is starred.

Elite of Industry Acclaim "The Road to Yesterday"

IF THE unanimous opinion of over six hundred people, representing the elite of the industry, means anything, De Mille's "The Road to Yesterday" is a gigantic success; artistically, dramatically, commercially and in every other way.

Over six hundred people; filling to capacity the aristocratic Little Embassy Theatre on Broadway, New York, witnessed the premiere presentation of Cecil De Mille's first personally directed independent production last Friday, November 6. And by the spontaneity of their applause, "The Road to Yesterday" is a proclaimed and acclaimed monument of entertainment.

For the purpose of showing "The Road to Yesterday" to the big exhibitors and the newspaper and trade paper critics in the New York territory, Producers Distributing Corporation presented the production last Friday evening. The showing was set for 11:30 p. m., a most inconvenient time, and an hour that meant all those attending would be held until early morning. Yet they came, the biggest personages in the industry—the mightiest of the critics—and they filled the theatre to overflowing and set the walls vibrating with their applause.

They not only came and applauded and stayed until the early hours of the morning, but they lingered in the lobby long after the showing and exchanged enthusiastic comments on the multitudinous episodes that had thrilled and delighted them in the picture's magnificence and artistry.

As a presentation for the picture, a foreword was added to the film in which Producers Distributing Corporation speaking from the screen welcomed the audience and took "pleasure in presenting Cecil B. De Mille." This title was followed by a close-up of De Mille, and his appearance on the screen evoked a mighty round of applause.

From then on the applause was almost continuous; rising and falling as the emotions of the audience were played upon by the dramatic action in the story until, like a tidal wave, it broke into a tremendous roar as the train wreck swept onto the screen in all its vivid, powerful, and ponderous realism.

The medieval scenes were greeted with audible expressions of delighted amazement and the audience swayed in physical sympathy as the duel raged to the death between Schildkraut and Boyd in the old castle. And they gasped at Jetta Goudal's marvelous acting in the witch-burning sequences. And little Vera Reynolds carried them from irresistible laughter to sub-conscious tears as she displayed her rare skill in comedy and pathos.

And then as the last scene faded out, De Mille again appeared on the screen and in a sub-title "thanked" the audience and signed his name in an animated title, while the applause rose to a deafening volume.

Viewed from every angle, the premiere trade presentation of "The Road to Yesterday" was a marvelous tribute to the genius of Cecil B. De Mille. It stamped the production as a magnificent achievement and the showing will undoubtedly go down in film history as one of the greatest demonstrations ever witnessed by the industry.

Made Studio Superintendent

Wesley Gillmore, formerly West Coast manager of the New York Motion Picture Company and later assistant to E. H. Allen, then manager of the Ince Studios, has been appointed Studio Superintendent at the new Educational Studios at Los Angeles.

PREVIEWING A PICTURE IN AN AIRPLANE. This is the party of special writers before and during the flight of the giant Sikorsky airplane over Long Island. It was planned by Warner Bros. to show "Bobbed Hair" but at the eleventh hour no prints were available, and the Rin-Tin-Tin feature, "The Clash of the Wolves," was substituted. The musical accompaniment by Herman Heller's orchestra from the Warners Theatre was broadcast from radio station WGBS, Gimbel Bros. store in New York City, and synchronized perfectly with the movement of the film, showing that these three inventions—the motion picture, the airplane and the radio—may be made to work together. In the group standing near the huge plane are: George H. Morris, of the Warners Theatre publicity staff; Arthur W. Eddy, of The Film Daily; Ward Morehouse, New York Herald-Tribune; Warren Nolan, The Evening Telegram; Mrs. William J. Reilly, Richard Watts, Jr., New York Herald-Tribune; Courtney Parrett, New York Evening Post, and William J. Reilly, editor of Moving Picture World. At the left, grouped in the cabin, are these guests of Warner Bros., with the addition of J. Harrison Edwards in the background, operating the motion picture projector.

Associated Exhibitors to Handle "White Mice"

OSCAR PRICE, president of the Associated Exhibitors, announces that his company will distribute "White Mice," a Pinellas Film, Inc. production featuring Jacqueline Logan and William Powell. The picture will be added to the second group of sixteen productions to be released next month.

"White Mice" is a screen adaptation of the famous Richard Harding Davis story of the same title which enjoyed an unusual success in book form reaching a sale of almost a million copies. It was produced in Cuba under the direction of Edward H. Griffith.

The story itself is laid in Havana and Matanzas and for that reason a large company of players were sent to Cuba for the filming.

John S. Woody, general manager of the Associated Exhibitors, looks upon the picture as one of the biggest to be released by his organization. The actual filming cost of the production ran over two hundred thousand dollars and represents one of the spectacle productions on Associated Exhibitors' list of releases.

An unusually large advertising campaign has been planned by Robert E. Welsh, director of advertising and publicity, which includes a de luxe press book in colors.

Elinor Fair Selected for Lead In De Mille's "Volga Boatman"

CECIL B. DE MILLE after searching the entire movie colony for a suitable feminine lead for his second personally directed production, "The Volga Boatman," has selected Elinor Fair after screening several pictures in which she recently appeared.

Miss Fair is barely twenty but despite her youth her work has won her parts in "Kismet," "Through the Back Door" with Mary Pickford, and "Driven." In 1924 she was honored by being selected as a Wampas Baby Star for the season. Now, through her affiliation with De Mille, it is freely predicted that she will undoubtedly step to stardom through the same portal by which Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Leatrice Joy, Rod La Rocque, Thomas Meighan and others scaled the heights of motion picture fame.

"Ability, beauty and youth are the three qualities for which I selected Miss Fair," said De Mille. "The part she is to play in 'The Volga Boatman' demands the first two in large measure, and it is not one for an old campaigner of the screen. She must portray a Russian aristocrat, patrician in ideas and appearance, yet possessed of a keen sympathy for the peasants she has been educated to ignore. She must mix with her portrayal of aristocratic reserve, something of the fiery temperament of the East, and her emotional potentialities must be deep.

"Obviously, this is no role for an actress with stereotyped ideas on drama; it is one for a girl of versatility, capable of intense emotional response. I predict an unusual success for Miss Fair in this part."

"The Volga Boatman," an original story by Konrad Bercovici, has been prepared for the screen by Lenore Coffee.

ELINOR FAIR
Star of many productions, and a featured player of renown, has been selected by Cecil B. DeMille for the lead in his forthcoming production, "The Volga Boatman," in which William Boyd will have the featured male role. Mr. DeMille's productions are released by Producers' Distributing Corporation.

Kathleen Myers Cast

Kathleen Myers has been cast in a role supporting Buck Jones in "The Gentle Cyclone," which has just gone into production at the Fox Films studio under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke. Rose Blossom will play the feminine lead.

"Up and At 'Em" For Tom Tyler

"Up and At 'Em," a western comedy melodrama starring Tom Tyler, has been accepted for production by F. B. O., it was announced yesterday by B. P. Fineman, general manager of production. It is an original story by Buckleigh Fritz Oxford and the adaptation has been made by J. G. Hawks and Percy Heath, of the F. B. O. scenario staff It will be put into production as soon as Tyler completes his present vehicle "The Wyoming Wildcat."

Associated Establishes Own Booking Service; Install New Branch Managers

E. J. SMITH took over the reins of general sales manager of the Associated Exhibitors last week. One of his first official acts was the appointment of bookers to work in all the Pathe Exchanges to handle the bookings on Associated product. In addition to the new bookers, four branch managers were appointed to fill vacated posts.

The establishing of their own booking service marks only one of many radical changes that have been instituted by the Associated Exhibitors since that organization was acquired from Pathe control by a company headed by P. A. Powers and Oscar Price. Pathe will continue to handle the physical distribution of Associated Exhibitors product, but the sales control and sales service will be under the direct supervision of the new organization.

The new bookers and their branches are Dixie Graham, Atlanta; C. D. Touchon, Dallas; Louis Schutt, Chicago; Leslie J. Vreeland, New York; John A. Downing, Boston; Blanche Oviatt, Los Angeles; J. E. He will be remembered for having taken all the honors in the "Famous Million More Drive." Prior to his entering the film business, Mr. Eskin was a practicing attorney. Mr. Boyd has not severed his connections, but will be appointed branch manager of another Associated exchange branch office.

W. G. Minder, appointed branch manager of the Associated Exhibitors Dallas branch, has been many years on the Southwest territory, resigning the post of special representative for F. B. O. to undertake his new duties.

Harry Eskin, for years an independent exchange manager in New England, has been appointed to the New Haven post of branch manager to succeed H. C. Spratly, resigned. For a number of years Mr. Eskin was city salesman for F. B. O. in Boston.

John M. Sitterly, for the past twelve years a prominent film man in the Buffalo territory, will manage the Buffalo offices of the Associated Exhibitors. He recently resigned a managerial post with the United Artists.

Frank J. Shepard has resigned the post of special representative for Warner Brothers to enter the sales force of the Associated Exhibitors in the New York exchange under the management of Phil Meyers.

A new member of the home office staff has been added in the person of Carl J. Goe, who resigned as contract manager of F. B. O. to take up a similar post with Associated. Mr. Goe has been connected with First National and Universal in similar capacities.

The present line-up of branch managers and special representatives for Associated Exhibitors consists of Claude C. Ezell, Dallas; Floyd Lewis, St. Louis; Harry E. Lotz, Buffalo; Melville E. Colby, Cleveland; Jack Withers, Pittsburgh; John M. Sitterly, Buffalo; F. W. Beiersdorf, Washington; Abe Eskin, Albany; Walter R. Scates, Boston; Harry Eskin, Hartford; E. T. Carroll, New York City; Phil E. Meyer, New York.

E. J. SMITH
Has been appointed to succeed Jay Gove as general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors.

Balboni Joins First National

Increasing the number of names on the directorial roster of First National Pictures Corporation by one, John E. McCormick, general manager of West Coast activities of the organization, announces that Sylvano Balboni, eminent Italian artist and cameraman, motion picture counsel and advisor, has been promoted to a directorship with his company.

The production which is to be Balboni's first First National effort, is the film version of Arthur Richmond's unusual stage play, "The Far Cry," which made such a tremendous hit in New York last season. Blanche Sweet is to play the leading feminine role.

"Caesar's Wife" Completed

Corinne Griffith has completed "Caesar's Wife."

This picture, directed by Irving Cummings, is regarded as one of the finest Miss Griffith has yet offered for First National release.

Ethel Shannon Plays Lead

"The Phantom Express" Next Royal Picture for Henry Ginsberg

In accordance with his announcement that only players of proven box-office worth would appear in Banner and Royal pictures released through the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation, Mr. Ginsberg announced this week that Ethel Shannon has been engaged to play the leading role in "The Phantom Express," the third picture in the Royal series on which production has now begun.

Miss Shannon, it will be remembered, is the vivacious little actress who scored such a hit in the Christie farces, "Charlie's Aunt" and "Stop Flirting." This picture is described as a railroad story with a great dramatic idea leading up to a smashing climax with plenty of unusual thrills sprinkled along the way.

David Butler will appear opposite Miss Shannon and Frankie Darrow, the little chap who has built up a screen reputation that is the envy of many grown-ups will also have an important role. John Adolfi will direct.

"Westerns" at F. B. O. List.

Strong Program Outlined With Fred Thomson, Tom Tyler and Custer Starred

F. B. O. boasts one of the most formidable programs of Western feature productions in the industry, judging from the recent schedules announced by executives of that organization.

Fred Thomson, crack Western star of F. B. O., has launched still another feature in "The Tough Guy" (tentative) having recently completed "All Around Frying Pan," from a Frank Richardson Pierce story. Thomson occupies the niche of honor in the Western section of the F. B. O. program, his popularity increasing at leaps and bounds the world over. His future plans call for the production of several elaborate Western specials based on epic themes.

Tom Tyler is at work on "The Wyoming Wildcat" under the direction of Bob de Lacy. It is a story by Percy Heath. Tyler made his debut as an F. B. O. star several weeks ago in "Let's Go Gallagher," which scored a resounding hit, it is stated. Tyler will film eight features this season and is under a long term contract to F. B. O.

Bob Custer is making a fine running mate for Tyler. He has already appeared in eight productions for F. B. O. He is now at work on "No Man's Law" by Walter F. Coburn and Del Andrews is directing.

Thomson will make at least twelve more Westerns for F. B. O. and next season's schedule calls for at least eight from each of the other stars. Action and comedy will be the twin keynotes of all these productions, it is said.

To Make "The Agony Column"

"The Agony Column," from Earl Derr Biggers' Saturday Evening Post story, is to be Monte Blue's next starring vehicle for Warner Bros. E. T. Lowe, Jr., is now writing the scenario and Erle Kenton has been selected to direct the production.

"The Agony Column" is a fast mystery story, full of action, just the type of tale in which Blue excels, and the star himself, as well as the production chiefs, is said to be immensely pleased with the choice made.

MARY PICKFORD

The charm of Miss Pickford's personality is again magnetizing the nation in her current feature, "Little Annie Rooney," which is a United Artists release.

Warner Bros. Prediction

Irene Rich is the star. Clive Brook, Louise Fazenda, Pauline Garon, Helen Dunbar, Winter Hall, Lynn Cowan, Muriel Frances Dana, Raymond McKee, Edward Martindel and Frank Butler are in the cast.

Mrs. Jay Gelzer's novel is followed closely in the picturization. Alan Crosland directed from the scenario by Edward T. Lowe, Jr.

"The Splendid Crime"

GEORGE K. ARTHUR

Who plays an important role in "Lady of the Night," Monta Bell's production for Metro-Goldwyn-

Buck Jones Goes to Work on "The Gentle Cyclone" for Fox

WITH the season just getting well under way, Buck Jones has already completed five starring vehicles out of the seven in which Fox Films has scheduled him, and he has just started filming the sixth, "The Gentle Cyclone." In addition to his starring vehicles, he also played the title role in "Lazybones," based on Owen Davis' successful stage play of the same name.

In "The Gentle Cyclone" Buck is a cowboy whose chivalry gets him into all kinds of trouble, but he finally comes out on top of the heap. The story, which is by F. W. Buckley, is teeming with action. There will be plenty of opportunity for the athletic ace of western stars to do some wild riding. Thomas Dixon, Jr., wrote the scenario. W. S. Van Dyke is directing.

Rose Blossom has been cast as the heroine. Jay Hunt, the screen "Lightnin'," is playing the role of a dignified judge. Marion Harlan has an important character part. The supporting cast contains such well known names as Will Walling, Reed House, Stanton Heck, Grant Withers, Kathleen Meyers, and Oilver Hardy. "The Gentle Cyclone" will be released on May 9.

Two of the Buck Jones starring vehicles have been released. Buck made his bow in "The Timber Wolf," based on the novel by Jackson Gregory, on September 20.

His second picture of the season is "Durand of the Bad Lands," based on the novel by Maibelle Heikes Justice, which was released on November 1. In this Buck plays the part of a rancher who has been charged with all the crimes committed by a crooked sheriff and his gang.

His third Fox picture of the season is "Lazybones," released on November 8.

Following the dramatic interlude of "Lazybones," which does not count as one of the seven Buck Jones starring vehicles, Buck appeared as the hero of "The Desert's Price," based on the thrilling western novel by William MacLeod Raine. This will be released on December 13. Florence Gilbert, the "Van Bibber girl," is the heroine. Important character roles are taken by Montague Love, Ernest Butterworth and Edna Marion. W. S. Van Dyke directed.

Buck's next picture, to be released on March 21, is the picturization of another Raine novel, "A Man Four Square." Florence Gilbert made such a charming Raine heroine in "The Desert's Price" that she was retained as the heroine of "A Man Four Square." Harry Wood is the villain. William Lawrence and Jay Hunt have important character parts. R. William Neill directed.

In "The Cowboy and the Countess," the picture he has just completed, Buck and his band of cowboys go adventuring in Europe. This is taken from the story by Maxine Alton and Adele Duffington. Helena D'Algy is the heroine and Diana Miller has the second lead.

Henry Kolker, Ray Howard, Douglas Gilmore, Kate Price, Aggie Herring, Sam de Grasse, Edna Mae Cooper and Lillian Elliott are featured in the supporting cast of this elaborate picturizaiton of the Edward Dowling musical stage success, adapted to the screen by Hope Loring and Louis Leighton.

N. Y. Critics Hit Laugh Trail On Keaton's Newest "Go West"

BUSTER KEATON'S newest, "Go West," has received a hilarous welcome from the Manhattan critics on opening at the Capitol Theatre. Keaton himself wrote, adapted and directed this Joseph M. Schenck for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"It 's a bully 'Go West' that features the lavish sixth anniversary program at the Capitol this week," remarks the New York Daily Mirror. "Stern-faced as ever, Buster takes his disreputably clothed self to a ranch, where he tries to play nursemaid to a herd of cattle. In taking the herd to the stockyards of a nearby town, the train is attacked by bandits and singlehandedly our hero gets the cattle to the yards. These concluding scenes are a yell. The Capitol audiences simply doubled up and screamed."

"The choice of the Capitol Theatre for the stellar feature in its sixth anniversary program," states the New York Telegram, "has fallen upon the tragic-eyed Buster Keaton, and judging by the hilarity of yesterday's audiences the selection will be amply justified. Keaton's latest comedy, 'Go West,' is a riotous affair of the big open spaces, and thousands of cattle and numerous bona fide cowboys have been enlisted to give greater realism to the production."

"When the fun starts popping in Buster Keaton's new film, 'Go West,'" observes the New York Times, "it is rich and uproarious, with countless novel comedy twists. The chapters in which the herds of cattle are beheld roaming through the town created no end of mirth in the Capitol last evening, as did also Buster's hapless ideas of milking a cow."

"The appearance of the comedian's name on the screen elicited a burst of applause from yesterday's audience," reports the New York Evening Post, "and everybody, as far as we could see, appeared to enjoy the picture. Mr. Keaton's comedy matter is new and excellent; his pantomime, as ever, is very, very eloquent. Mr. Keaton is his old, appealing self."

"'Go West' has its amusing moments," confesses Louella O. Parsons in the New York American. "'When Buster lands his car full of cattle in Los Angeles, and tries to march them down the thoroughfare the stampede is very funny. The futile effort of the policemen to stop them in their march down the street made the Capitol audience rock with laughter yesterday. It was, I might say, the high point of merriment in the entire film."

WHEN TIFFANY PRODUCTIONS ANNOUNCED "BORROWED FINERY" this company also gave a list of the stars in the cast, including Lou Tellegen, Louise Lorraine, Ward Crane and Gertrude Astor. The preview of the picture disclosed a photoplay of wide appeal, based on the story by the late George Bronson Howard, and one that will live up to every promise made by Tiffany Productions. From the showman's angle, "Borrowed Finery" possesses many selling points that can be utilized successfully.

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

A "Star Spangled" Joke from Albany

A FEW days ago, the freshmen class from the State College of Teachers in Albany, N. Y., marched to the Mark Strand Theatre to witness "The Freshman." Arrangements had been made with Floyd H. Walters, the organist, to play the Alma Mater shortly after the freshmen were seated. With the opening bars the entire class arose in their seats. In the rear of the theatre a rather old man was sitting. Noticing what appeared to be the entire audience standing, the man with considerable difficulty struggled to his feet, apparently wondering what it was all about.

Tony Veiller, manager of the house, happened to be standing a few feet away, leaning over the railing.

Turning to him, the man remarked: "What in the name of the Good Lord are they playing the National Anthem for at this time?"

Louis Buettner of Cohoes, chairman of the Albany Zone and champion woodchuck hunter of Northern New York, is now out to bag bigger game. In other words, Mr. Buettner left a few days ago with a party of friends on a deer hunting expedition.

Teams in the Troy theatrical bowling league appear to be most evenly matched this fall, as the Griswold and Troy are now tied for first honors. Louis Rinn of the American Theatre has high average with 180. The other day Ben Stern of the Lincoln and Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy, took on all comers and came out on top of the heap. Mr. Stern had a high of 244 and Mr. Roberts of 228.

N. S. Feck, who has been running the Rex in Middleburgh, has notified exchanges in Albany that financial troubles have forced him to close his house.

Last week was a red-letter one for Jack Matthews, exhibitor-par-excellence of Plattsburg. For the time being Mr. Matthews forgot all about the theatre. His daughter, Lucy, became a bride and Ray Smith, salesman for Universal out of Albany, was best man.

Herman Vineberg, handling the Albany and Regent Theatres in Albany, might easily secure a position as a pen and ink artist. Without any training Mr. Vineberg has picked up sketching and has shown rare ability, as is evident from sketches on the walls of his office. Mr. Vineberg is doing exceptionally well with the Albany Theatre and his lobby displays have become the talk of the town.

John Mattice of Middleburgh, who has promised a nice fat turkey to C. R. Halligan of the Universal exchange for Thanksgiving, has apparently aroused the jealousy of Mathew Moran, an exhibitor of Coxsackie, who has now notified Mr. Halligan that he may expect a couple of chickens from him. Up to the present time, Mr. Halligan has not extended any invitations to his Thanksgiving feast.

Uhy S. Hill came out this week with a special two-page advertisement in the Albany newspapers, in connection with the fifth anniversary of the Mark Strand Theatre. The advertisement was the largest ever used by a picture theatre in this part of the state. Included were several articles relative to the theatre and its heads, while photographs were carried of the founders and executives of the Mark Strand organization.

It was a lucky thing that Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, went to the polls early on election morning. On account of the schools being closed for the day, Mr. Roberts had decided to put on a Junior Movie for Tuesday rather than the previous Saturday morning, using "The Pony Express." As Mr. Roberts came to the theatre from the polls, the boys and girls were already beginning to collect, the jam that came later being one that taxed every bit of ingenuity to handle.

F. E. Colburn, who is reconstructing the Rialto in Glens Falls, practically destroyed by fire last spring, is enlarging the structure and making it absolutely fireproof. Mr. Colburn will install a large organ. The theatre will open sometime this month.

There was a time when Alex Sayles, manager of the Leland in Albany, looked forward to election night in a far different way than he now does. In days past Mr. Sayles was city editor of an Albany newspaper and election nights were always grinds. With his experience in picking out exactly what the people want to know about election, no wonder the returns given at the Leland on election night were about the best ever.

Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold in Troy, is being accused by friends of taking a course in oratory at some correspondence school. Jake certainly polished off matters in great shape the other night when he made the speech of presentation at the close of the Charleston dance contest, awarding Frank Vacarilli a silver loving cup as well as $50 in cash. Now Jake is putting on a song contest each Monday night to run ten weeks, the winner of which will get an engagement at both the Albany and the Troy Proctor Theatres at $150 per.

Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose Theatre in Troy, N. Y., has owned a regulation safe for the last three years or so, but found it too much trouble to work the combination each day before he did his banking. The safe occupies a place in Mr. Rosenthal's private office, off the lobby of the theatre. So does a regulation letter file that Mr. Rosenthal has been using as a depository for his day's receipts, the drawer locking with a key.

"Handier," soliloquized Mr. Rosenthal, but the other night someone else, as yet unknown to Mr. Rosenthal and the police authorities, did a like soliloquy as they made off with $186 in bills, leaving the silver.

Entrance to the theatre was secured through the rear and to the private office by simply pulling the pins of the door. Mr. Rosenthal is now using his safe and remarking meanwhile something about "locking the barn door."

With mounting receipts, Edward Trembley, of the American in Troy is grinning these days as the house returns to its old time crowds. "The Ten Commandments," second run in Troy, played to capacity last week.

If chance hadn't played a hand, C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square Theatres in Albnay, might not today be booking super-specials. Mr. Buckley is a graduate nurse and in his younger days had planned to study for a doctor. He was living in Bridgeport at the time, and accompanied a wealthy man who had temporarily lost his mind to Saratoga Springs. While in this section he met friends in Albany and decided to embark in the real estate business. Although but 34 years of age Mr. Buckley is an outstanding success and the owner of the best paying houses in the Capital City. He now occupies his new offices on two floors of the Leland Theatre building.

Matthew Moran of Coxsackie is one exhibitor who can sit a horse the equal of any motion picture star. Mr. Moran picks up quite a bit of additional change from renting out horses to the young people of his village.

A new policy of handling the crowds at the Lincoln in Troy has been devised by Ben Stern. Those in line are asked to buy their tickets and move over to the other side of the entrance, a scheme that does away with the former practice of holding everyone up until after the first show pours out, to be followed by a wild scramble and much lost time by those seeking tickets.

Efforts on the part of politicians to induce some of the exhibitors in Albany and Troy to run slides of candidates fell flat. Exhibitors took the stand that they did not care to antagonize patrons through showing slides of candidates of opposite parties.

Missing—a Theatre

Believe it or not, there is a place of 5,000 inhabitants in New York State that is absolutely without a motion picture theatre. The place is Green Island, just across the river from the city of Troy and adjoining the city of Watervliet.

The only theatre that ever ran for any length of time in Green Island was the "Daisy," which was operated for eight years by Halligan and Van Bergen, and which had a seating capacity of 120 persons. . Residents of Green Island seek their motion picture entertainment in either Troy or Watervliet.

Maine Theatre News

A son was born October 14 to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Levine of Portland. The proud daddy is assistant manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre.

Abraham Goodside has installed an orchestra of fifteen women musicians in his Strand Theatre at Portland.

Take Your Choice

Mike Freedman of the Rialto in Schenectady, N. Y., was christened "Meyer," is known as "Mike" and signs his letters "Micque." Mr. Freedman much prefers to be called Mike, saying that he was born in a section 99 per cent. of which was Irish and his companions would have none of the Meyer stuff. So from then on, and up through the years, it has been "Mike."

Incidentally, Mr. Freedman has inaugurated a policy of making each Monday night an amateur night, Tuesday night, a prize night with $20 in prizes, and Thursday night a surprise night, when he gives them a dollar's worth for a dime.

J. R. Thurston Leaves Lockport, N. Y.

J. RAYMOND THURSTON, identified with Lockport, N. Y., picture circles for many years, has resigned as manager of the Temple and Rialto Theatres and will leave soon to spend the winter in Florida. He has been succeeded by Clarence Trembley, who comes from Gloversville, where he managed the Glove Theatre. Both the Temple and Rialto are operated by the Schine Theatrical Corporation. Mr. Thurston is well known in Western New York exhibitor ranks, he having been associated with his father, Henry Thurston, in the management of the old Palace Theatre and in the Temple. Since the taking over of the Thurston interests by the Schine company, he has managed the local houses for Schine. The new manager, Mr. Trembley, has had a wide experience in theatrical affairs and has expressed himself as well pleased with the Lock City.

As another step in the aim to have the Eastman, Rochester, presentations establish a high standard of originality and excellence in its acts and special offerings, Manager Eric T. Clark has announced the appointment of Rouben Mamoulian as stage director to have complete charge of all stage numbers for the de luxe programs.

William J. McFarlane won out again for mayor of Canandaigua, but Bill, who also is an exhibitor, had a close call. His majority was only 117. Bill formerly was vice-president of the old Associated Theatres, Inc., which was absorbed by the Schine Theatrical Corporation.

Elmer C. Winegar, general manager of Winegar Pictures, is releasing rental free a number of local films which he himself shot the past summer. Among the pictures available at the studio, 408 Pearl street, are: the Motion Picture Theatre picnic at Crystal Beach, Buffalo's Municipal Bathing Beach at Angola, the Elks' Picnic for Crippled Children, Building Buffalo's Tallest Skyscraper and Water, a film story of the new filtration plant. Mr. Winegar also has a number of other local films, all of which are tieups with local manufacturers or other organizations.

The new Shea Buffalo theatre in Main street, north of Chippewa, will open about January 1, according to an announcement by Michael Shea on his return from New York, where he has completed final negotiations in the deal consolidating the Shea houses in Buffalo with the Famous Players-Lasky-B. & K. interests. Productions, Mr. Shea says, will be the finest New York bookings and screen plays only a detail. Shea's Hippodrome is to be renovated and redecorated. The Court street theatre will be continued as the Keith vaudeville house.

Richard Wilhelm has purchased a $25,000 orchestral organ to install in the new 1,500-seat picture theatre which he is building in Gowanda, N. Y., and which is expected to be ready for the public on January 15.

Weber & Fields drew capacity houses the past week during the personal appearance at the Lafayette Square, Buffalo, where their screen vehicle, "Friendly Enemies," was also on the bill. Julian Eltinge is coming to Shea's Hippodrome the week of November 15 for a personal appearance.

Farewell to Beaudoin In Pittsfield, Mass.

A farewell party was given Romeo Beaudoin upon his resignation as manager of the Goldstein Brothers' Union Square Theatre in Pittsfield. A public entertainment was given in the theatre and the receipts were presented to Mr. Beaudoin. Ill health compelled him to resign and he will pass the winter at Miami, Fla.

Well, well, if here isn't another woman exhibitor—and right under our very nose in Boston all the time. The Exeter Theatre is owned and managed by Mrs. Harriet Ayers. Mrs. Ayers has displayed marked acumen in the selection of her programs and has succeeded in building up a clientele that is composed of a large majority of Boston society folks.

Gruber Brothers have purchased the Rialto Theatre Building in Maynard. The sale price is reported to have been $46,500. Samuel Lerer sold the property. Messrs. Gruber are proprietors of a department store in the Rialto block.

A structure containing a theatre, stores and offices is to be erected in New Bedford for Zool Ray.

"The Eagle"—United Artists

Valentino's First for This Company Is a Whale of a Picture—Colorful, Dashing and Romantic

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

A NEW Rudolph Valentino picture! An event that always causes a stir in film and fan circles because of the phenomenal popularity of this youthful star. However, there is added interest this time for "The Eagle" marks his debut in the company of Pickford, Fairbanks and Chaplin as a United Artists star.

A classic of Russian literature supplies the theme and provides Valentino with one of his most congenial and effective roles as a handsome, dashing cavalry lieutenant who refuses to succumb to the blandishments of the Czarina. He insists that he enlisted for the battlefield not the boudoir. Learning that his father's estates have been seized by a false friend, he vows vengeance on the interloper. Rallying a faithful handful of peasants he organizes a band and is known as "The Eagle." Romance enters in the person of the beautiful daughter of the man he seeks to overcome. The double opportunity of carrying out his plan and being with the girl is brought about by his posing as a teacher of French. Love and vengeance clash. Finally to save one of his men he admits his identity, is arrested by the Czarina's soldiers and sentenced to death. The girl marries him in prison. The Czarina repents in the form of a dummy execution and allows him to leave the country with his bride.

The story starts out with a snappy sequence in which the hero with impertinent daring seizes the Czarina's horse as she is about to mount it and rushes madly to stop a runaway carriage. This establishes a dashing, pleasing tempo that characterizes the whole production and sweeps aside the implausibilities of the story in the speed and snap of the action. A distinctly pleasing note in this production is the delightful clean-cut comedy touches which have been injected. No buffonry or clowning but legitimate humor that grows out of clever handling of the situations.

There is no dearth of drama and there are even touches of melodrama in the scene where the star with stoic heroism stands unflinchingly before a bear in a wine cellar, but kills it when it starts for the girl, and in the manner in which threatening notes are placed where the villain can find them.

We doubt if Valentino has ever had a more likable role or given a better performance, his handling of the light comedy will prove a revelation to many of his fans. Next in importance to Valentino is the appearance of Vilma Banky in the opposite role. She proved a revelation in "The Dark Angel" both because of her beauty and ability. In "The Eagle" she again scores and should prove a hit with the fans. Louise Dresser gives a magnificent performance as the Czarina.

Clarence Brown deserves praise for the admirable manner in which he has directed this production. While there is a lavish set with all of the trapping of royalty at the opening the mounting of the picture is never ostentatious, for he has concentrated on the action and atmosphere. You can bank on Valentino getting them in and on "The Eagle" satisfying them. It has everything to make it a delight for any audience and a box office success.

Jackie Coogan in Sequel to "The Rag Man" Has Picture That Should Please Audiences

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

PROBABLY you have surmised from the title that "Old Clothes," Jackie Coogan's newest picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is similar to "The Rag Man" which immediately preceded it. Not only is this the case, but it is really a sequel to the former picture.

"The Rag Man" ended with the firm of Kelly and Ginsberg possessed of great wealth. "Old Clothes" starts off by having them lose their money in copper stock in Wall Street and we see them again in the junk business. Heart interest and romance which form the basis of the story are supplied by introducing a poor girl who comes to room with the partners. They become attached to her and "father" her. She falls in love with a young broker whose mother opposes the match until it develops that she too was once a poor girl and the sweetheart of Jackie's partner. Finally the young broker is saved from disaster and Kelly and Ginsberg become wealthy once more when their "worthless" copper stock again proves valuable.

With Jackie in the kind of character and costume that made him popular and Max Davidson again cast as Ginsberg, and with Eddie Cline also directing and the experienced showman and dramatist Willard Mack supplying the story, this picture has the same points of appeal as "The Rag Man." There is the strong human interest and sympathy in the picturesque partnership of the uncouth but kindly old Hebrew and the little Irish lad. Heart interest is supplied in their "adoption" of the girl and their renewed struggles against poverty.

There are a lot of sure-fire bits of the kind that have proved their entertainment value and are bound to register with the average patron. The real story interest is slight and the picture is made up largely of such material with a generous use of gags and situations that have been worked up for audience effect and appeal either to the heart or by their humorous angle. The comedy, which is effective and good for a number of laughs and smiles is built up largely on the Irish and Hebrew angles.

Jackie again gives an excellent performance. With each succeeding picture he of course grows a little older, but he still retains his wonderfully pleasing personality even if he has lost some of his baby winsomeness, and has developed as an actor. He puts over his points with the best of the profession and never fails to score. Max Davidson gives an exceptionally fine portrayal of Ginsberg and with almost anyone else but Jackie would probably walk away with the picture.

Curwood Story Under Irvin Willat's Direction Makes Unusually Exciting and Thrilling Film

Reviewed by Epes W. Sargent

STARTING with a sequence in which Jack Holt mops the floor and polishes the furniture with Montagu Love, it looks as though Director Willat had set too strong a pace in Paramount's "The Ancient Highway." But the interests holds and continues to mount right to the end. It's the sort of story the highbrow reviewer affects to despise, but Mr. Willat has given genuine and sustained interest to the trite plot. It is largely a triumph of direction, for it takes real skill to hold the spectator absorbed in a plot which he has seen many times before. You like the picture and confess to yourself that you have been thrilled. Your interest may be more in the people than in the story, but the result is the same.

Judge Holman Day exhausted the possibilities of the rival lumber kings long before James Oliver Curwood moved the locale from Maine to Canada and endeavored to prove that in the Province, too, the man who controls the lower reaches of a river is a villainous lumber king, while the upstream owner is friend. Its direction and the outdoor settings, plus a good cast, give this version of the plot a virile appeal. The punch does not come from the lumber drive but from your desire to see Jack Holt and Billie Dove win to shore, and the sequence is handled to get the fullest possible thrill.

Most of the work lies between the players named above and Montagu Love, though the minor parts are all well played. But these three carry the bulk of the burden and very ably. The opening fight is a tremendous struggle; the sort of thing that usually is reserved for the end of the picture, but the director knew he could get even more out of the logging stuff. Even if you have had other logging pictures lately you can follow in with this and top the rest, thanks to the excellent production.

"Rose of the World"—Warner Brothers

Patsy Ruth Miller Featured in Human-Interest Film Adapted From a Novel by Kathleen Norris

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

A NOVEL by Kathleen Norris, which has been transferred to the screen by Harry Beaumont with Patsy Ruth Miller in the featured role furnishes the basis for the Warner Brothers' production, "Rose of the World."

This picture in its earlier reels is a sentimental romance between a poor girl and a rich fellow. Situations introduced as the story deveops make the plot more improbable and it finally develops into heart interest melodrama. The weakwilled hero breaks his engagement with the heroine and marries a catty baby vamp in his own social set, while the heroine marries a scheming cad who knows of a secret contract that will make her wealthy. Both marriages turn out unhappily. The spectator will easily guess that there will be a happy ending in which this pair will be again brought together, but this is accomplished in a none too convincing manner by the death of the butterfly wife in childbirth and the killing of the villain by the heroine's demented grandfather.

For practically the entire footage, except in the opening and closing scenes, the pathetic note is strongly played up and strong sympathy developed for the heroine whose two love affairs prove so unhappy. Patsy Ruth Miller handles this role well and does especially good work in the emotional moments. Alan Forrest as the hero and Pauline Garon as his wife capably handle rather thankless roles and Rockliffe Fellowes gives a good performance as the villain. Alec Francis scores as the grandfather who has lost his memory.

This picture will have its greatest appeal to those who like sentimental heart-interest melodrama.

Chinatown and Arizona Furnish the Locales For Good, Peppy Story, Starring Hoot Gibson

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

SAN FRANCISCO'S Chinatown and the Arizona ranch country furnish the locales for the Universal-Hoot Gibson special, "The Arizona Sweepstakes," directed by Clifford Smith.

There is a peppy opening with a good element of humor, in which Hoot as a rube in Chinatown stops a framed-up fight between two gangsters and makes such a hit that he is engaged to pull the job regularly for the benefit of tourists. Another good bit combining punch and comedy is where rival gangs stage a shooting affair in the street and Hoot believes this too is a frame-up for the sightseers until he is accused of a murder. He escapes and returns to Arizona in time to win the sweepstakes race and the girl despite the schemes of the gentleman villain who owns the next ranch to prevent him from riding.

Pleasing human interest is provided by three little tough kiddies that Hoot adopts and brings to the ranch, and additional comedy is provided by Kate Price and George Ovey in character roles. After the snappy start the pace slackens somewhat but this is overbalanced by the fast finish. The Arizona Sweepstakes is a combination of a steeplechase and a cross-country race and there is excellent horsemanship displayed by Hoot and the other riders in jumping fences and riding madly up and down steep hills and over rough ground.

Hoot has a congenial role and Helen Lynch is attractive as the girl. Philo McCullough is capable as the villain and the remainder of the cast is entirely satisfactory.

This picture should prove thoroughly satisfactory for Hoot Gibson fans, for while not his best picture it is up to his usual high standard.

Strong Cast Performs Excellently in Real Box Office Picture of Forced Marriage to a Baron

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

FIRST NATIONAL'S "The Scarlet Saint," directed by George Archainbaud and featuring Mary Astor, Lloyd Hughes and strong support, shows all the evidences of being a strong box office attraction. It has a strikingly dramatic story and is well acted. The continuity is generally smooth. The picture does not prove the characterization hinted at by the title. The girl is neither scarlet nor a saint; rather is she a weak creature in th grip of circumstances that might have been overcome. That is, very sophisticated audiences studying the relation of the title to the story will make this point; the average audience won't bother to give it a thought.

The story is good box office stuff, as may be seen from a synopsis. Fidele Tridon wants to marry Philip Collett, a youth. Her father persuaded her when young to become engaged to Baron Badeau. He won't release her. She determines to elope, but the Baron tricks Collett into a duel and is shot in the arm. Collett faces imprisonment. Fidele marries the Baron to save her true love. Through a sudden shock he has become paralyzed in the legs. He recovers but conceals the fact. Fidele makes the discovery and plans to run away with Philip. Similar costumes at a ball lead her to disclose her plan to the Baron instead of Philip. Fidele then gathering the supposed Baron in his wheel chair—in reality his man servant—and with the Baron posing as attendant, drops poison in one of two glasses of wine and demands the supposed Baron to choose one and drink with her. He flees. The Baron, realizing the girl's determination, surrenders and the way is cleared for her happy marriage to Philip.

Stunts, Good Suspense and Plenty of Action for "Western" Fans in Bob Custer's Newest

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

THERE is certainly no dearth of action in "No Man's Law," the newest in the series of Independent Corporation Productions starring Bob Custer, which are being distributed by F. B. O.

Bob has a sympathetic and congenial role involving romance, heroism and vengeance. As Dave Carson he succeeds in recovering from Moore, a gambler, the ranch that has been stolen from his dead father and in also saving the ranch belonging to Marion Moore and her brother Donald, which weak-willed Donald has gambled away. In the course of the story he rescues Marion after she is kidnapped by one of Moore's henchmen and wins her love.

Director Del Andrews has directed this picture at a snappy pace and while there is an unusual number of melodramatic situations, including villainy, fighting, kidnapping, hard riding and stunt stuff, it has been smoothly worked into the plot. A sequence in which there is exceptionally well sustained dramatic tension is where a greatly feared bandit has promised to visit the gambling hall at midnight. With the aid of a few cowboys who have been tipped to do a little shooting outside, Bob take advantage of this situation to accomplish his revenge against Moore. There is excellent suspense in the scene where the villainous gang are shown wating for the real bandit to appear, and a good punch when Bob leaps from the balcony and lines them up.

Bob does a number of effective athletic stunts in making his escape, and there is a kidnapping, rescue, and more action and fighting before matters are finally cleared up and the villain is gotten rid of. While the situations are not entirely plausible, the action moves forward with such rapidity that the average patron will not have time to reason as to its logic. For western fans and those who demand snap and fast movement, this should satisfactorily fill the bill.

Story of Marital Troubles of Mismated Pair with Margaret Livingston in Role of a Vamp

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

AMONG the productions that Madoc Sales Company is distributing on the independent market is "After Marriage," directed by Norman Dawn, with Margaret Livingston, George Fisher and Helen Lynch in the leading roles.

As its title implies, most of the action centers around a young couple after marriage. David, a wealthy chap, marries Lucille, a poor girl, and is disinherited by his father who is carrying on an affair with Alma, an actress. Tiring of domestic life and urged by his friends he once again gets in the social whirl and falls in love with Alma. When he learns the truth it precipitates a quarrel with his father who is killed. David is accused but it developed that Alma is guilty and David and Lucile become reconciled.

Margaret Livingston does good work in the vamp role and Herschell Mayal is forceful and dominating as the father. Helen Lynch is satisfactory as the wife, but George Fisher is far from an ideal selection for the role of the young husband.

"After Marriage" is a fair program offering for the smaller theatre or for use on double feature days.

Dynamite, the "firms" horse again figures in the story, but the remainder of the supporting cast is new. Alan Forrest makes the broker a clean-cut agreeable chap and Joan Crawford is effective as Mary. James Mason gives a good performance as a villain.

The pleasing human interest angles, good gags, amusing situations and excellent work of Jackie and his partner make this picture pleasing entertainment that should register with the majority. All who liked "The Rag Man" will find "Old Clothes" just as entertaining.

"The Scarlet Streak"

Jack Daugherty and Lola Todd Featured in Exceptionally Exciting Serial Released by Universal

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

CONTAINING in great abundance and variety all of the elements which experience has shown to enter into the make-up of a box office serial, Universal's latest "The Scarlet Streak" should certainly prove a ten-strike with the fans and satisfy the most exacting admirer of this type of entertainment. There is action, intrigue, mystery, plots, counterplots, villainy, romance, heroism and stunts galore.

This serial starts off with a bang with a snappy reporter being sent out to work night and day to "get a story" of a mysterious death-dealing invention that its sponsor hopes will prove so terrible in its effect that it will end all wars. Seeking control of this marvel is a band of unscrupulous international crooks headed by a man who believes that with it in his possession he will be able to rule the world, and who will stop at nothing to gain control of the plans. Jack Daugherty is cast as the reporter, Lola Todd as the inventor's daughter, and the romance is furnished by this pair. Albert Prisco heads the crooks and the familiar serial villain Albert J. Smith is his gentleman accomplice who also poses as the inventor's friend.

Like the usual serial the action is exceedingly melodramatic and logic has been sacrificed in order to provide situations that thrill. Isadore Bernstein supplied the script and under Henry McRae's direction the action moves at a terrific pace and the punches pile up right on top of each other. There is a fascination and a thrill in the death ray and its possibilities which lend additional pep to the development of the story.

Structurally, this serial follows the usual formula with a stunt at the end and carried over suspense. A notable improvement along this line is an extremely abbreviated repeat at the beginning of the next episode, before the new action begins. The take-up is largely covered by subtitles as the story develops. The opening episode ends with an express train crashing into an auto, the next with a fight on a balcony that breaks. The third closes with a small child directly in the path of a runaway train.

As indicated by the three first episodes the action is continually mounting and the third is the most exciting of the lot, for in addition to an extra good fight and escape the hero has an excellent and, we believe, an entirely new stunt where he throws a rope from an auto to a moving train and boards the train by climbing across the rope with both train and auto in action. This is a stunt that will get the fans.

The entire cast is excellent. "The Scarlet Streak" should prove a whale of an attraction for all theatres where serials are popular. It contains everything that goes to make up a box office serial, and is one of the very best that Universal has ever made.

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS is Glenn Tryon's latest short subject for Hal Roach and he shows pleasing improvement over his previous efforts. He is a bear for the girls though embellished with a wife. Many of the opening scenes center around the semi-spectacular exploit of climbing across a plank to the apartment of a neighboring beauty, to rescue the comb she has dropped. Then comes the usual complication of husband's return. The final scenes are especially good, dealing with an appearance in court and the silencing of the judge, about to sentence Tryon, by farcial blackmail. Marjorie Whiteis and Katharine Grant have good parts and Tyler Brooke does well as a wandering husband. Fred L. Guoil directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.—Sumner Smith.

"On Edge"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

OF THE thrill comedy type is this a Jack White production writeen and directed by Norman Taurog. The title is appropriate for considerable of the comedy takes place on the edge of a building high above the street. This comedy goes the usual film of this type one better, however, for a lot of the action takes place on top of a safe that is being hoisted into one of the upper floors. Lige Conley has the leading role and is cast as a clerk in a sporting goods store. The opening sequences contain some clever and amusing stuff with a trained dog that swats a fly on Conley's nose, and goes through a lot of gymnastic exercises with him. Then there is a section where the fire chief's hat lands on Lige's head and the fire department follows him, thinking he is going to a fire. The big punch comes, however, when Lige, blindfolded, walks off the narrow ledge and lands on the swinging safe. The negro porter tries to aid him with a rope and also lands on the safe. Their capers include swinging around through the air on rope ends, slipping off the safe, and hanging on the darkey's suspenders. Finally a drunk, played by Eddie Boland, gets a cannon to help them and they are blown on the roof. These stunts are amusing and at the same time are more thrilling and nerve-tingling than usual. The best stuff of its kind that we have seen. Even better than the usual high standard of Jack White productions as audience entertainment.—C. S. Sewell.

"Eats Are West"

(Educational—Cartoon—One Reel)

IN THIS cartoon, Felix the Cat is hungry and endeavors to obtain food, but is chased. He escapes with the aid of the cartoonist who cleverly devises an aeroplane for him out of a board and three exclamation points for a propeller. Felix soon finds himself in the West and gets plenty of food by eating grub intended for the cowboys. He finally lands in an Indian camp and is about to be made into a stew, but escapes this fate. Up to the standard of this series of Pat Sullivan cartoons.— C. S. Sewell.

(F. B. O.—Series—Two Reels)

MAZIE continues her go-getting methods in this issue of the "Adventures of Mazie." To aid a fellow stenographer who was swindled by a socalled motion picture acting school, Mazie, aided by her two eccentric pals, write a letter on the bosses stationery and get a good call down. To prove they are right they enroll at the school and discover the whole thing to be a fake, as the camera is empty and so are the cans supposed to contain film tests. The chief crook is careless with a match and the place catches on fire. Mazie's boss comes to her rescue and her pals jump into a life net. The crooks are captured. The title only figures in a retort of All Cooke to Kit Guard right at the finish. There is the usual pep to this number with Cooke and Guard supplying the comedy. Cooke as a heavy villain and Kit as a cowboy in a studio scene are good for laughs. Alberta Vaughan is as snappy as ever as Mazie. There is quite a lot of melodrama in the fire scene and fight while the blaze is raging.— C. S. Sewell.

"The Soapsuds Lady"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

THE chief feature of this Mack Sennett subject is the presence of charming Alice Day in the starring role. Her work is splendid, her beauty and freshness indisputed and her future seems thoroughly assured. The cast is excellent, consisting of William McCall as the stingy husband, Billy Gilbert as an old man with memories of nickel cigars, Barney Hellum as a youth whom girls forget, Danny O'Shea as a wealthy bird, and Eugenia Gilbert as fiancee of the last named. The story is the familiar one of a romance between the wealthy youth and the laundress, with family and friends interposing objections. It has many humorous moments and Miss Day is at all times good to look upon. —Sumner Smith.

"The Great Open Spaces"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

THIS one of Paul Terry's Aesop's Film Fables, like its predecessors, is replete with laughs. The farmer and the familiar animals go back to nature.—Sumner Smith.

"Fair But Foolish"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

BASED on an idea that runs all the way through the two reels with no situations just dragged in, this Christie comedy starring Jimmie Adams should prove good entertainment for the majority of fans. Jimmie as a wideawake chap is hurrying home to his sweetheart who is to sail just after his boat docks. A couple of smugglers impose on Jimmie and he is held by the customs officers and put in a pen with immigrants. He changes clothes with one of them and the customs men chase him everywhere. Finally, they capture him and he is in despair until he learns he is to be deported as a dangerous anarchist on the very ship he has been trying to catch. A wedding occurs in the steerage and the girl's father is dumbfounded when he finds Jimmie is the groom and the bride is his own daughter. It is all fast-moving comedy with plenty of action and a good number of laughs.— C. S. Sewell.

"The Uneasy Three"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS subject may be called more or less of a cuckoo, both because of its funny situations and its attractiveness from the box office viewpoint. It is a satire on feature pictures about crooks who reform, and it's a lot of laughs strung together. Hal Roach produced it, Leo McCarey directed. Charlie Chase, Katherine Grant and Bull Montana are the crooks. They pose as musicians in order to steal a brooch, elude the private detective at the wealthy woman's party but reform quite along accepted standards before the final fade-out. Some of the best scenes are where the three try to play unfamiliar instruments with the detective much on the guard. Chase gets out of the predicament quite neatly by finding that the grand piano has an electrical attachment, but Montana has a terrible time with the harp.— Sumner Smith.

"Take Your Time"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS Ralph Graves subject was produced by Mack Sennett and the cast includes Thelma Parr, Vernon Dent and William McCall. The story is one of a traffic cop who turns out sheik when Thelma happens along. Dent is the sergeant who resents this inattention to duty and McCall is Thelma's dad. Well, Ralph has to summons Thelma for traffic violation because of the presence of the sergeant but he concocts a scheme to save her a fine. The subject is above the average in comedies and should please audiences. All of the principals take their parts extremely well.—Sumner Smith.

Pathe Review No. 46

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

THE three features of this issue are "Walking on Water," a "Magic Eye" study by microscope produced by L. H. Tolhurst; "Belles of the Black Forest," presenting a fourteenth century fashion show, and "Brown-Eyed Susan," another in the series of American wild flowers in Pathecolor.— Sumner Smith.

"Failure"

(Fox—Comedy Drama—Two Reels)

ONE more of the series produced by William Fox based on the popular and prolific writer O. Henry. A divorce lawyer has the wife and both men in a divorce tangle call on him, the men of course wish opposite things to transpire. The lawyer stands to win either way it goes and decides to try and patch up the quarrel. All goes well for a time until it turns out that the man he took for the husband is really the other fellow. Both are enraged and he loses out all around. This last minute twist, characteristic of O. Henry, is amusing and adds to the interest. There are some good comedy touches in connection with the efforts of the clerks to collect their salaries and the schemes of the lawyer to circumvent them. Altogether it is an entertaining offering, although it is not the best of the series. C. S. Sewell.

"More Mice Than Brains"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

THIS issue of Paul Terry's Aesop's Film Fables features the activities of the mice and the difficulties of the farmer in getting rid of them. They take a satirical joy in tormenting him and the screen result is an abundance of humor.—Sumner Smith.

New Andy Gump Comedies for Bi-Weekly Release

The new Andy Gump Comedies, two-reelers based on the famous Andy Gump cartoons, and produced by Sam Von Ronkel for Universal release, are to be put out every other week, it is announced by Fred J. McConnell, Short Subjects Manager for Universal.

The new series, which is a distinct advance over the twelve successful two-reelers in the first series, is being widely booked and promises to be one of the outstanding comedy offerings on the screen this fall.

The schedule of releases for the new series commenced October 26. The first picture of the series is "Andy's Lion Tale," in which the ludicrous screen character is seen in a hilarious story set in the jungle. Joe Murphy, the popular vaudeville comedian, known as the only exact counterpart of Andy Gump, plays the leading role. Fay Tincher is still seen as Min, and Jackie Morgan is Little Chester.

Number Two of the current series is "Chester's Donkey Party." It was released last week, on November 2. The third will be "Dynamited," to be released November 16. Number four will be "Andy Takes a Flyer," to be released November 30, and the fifth will be released December 14. It probably will go out under the title "The Smash-up."

Herbel Gets Pittsburgh Office

H. M. Herbel, who has been sales manager for the Century Film Corporation during the past year, has given up that post in order to return to Pittsburgh, where he will manage the Universal Exchange in that territory. He will replace M. Epstein, who, after an especially successful term of office in that exchange, is being shifted to another territory.

Coliseum Plays Up Comedy In Big Adv.

Billing the two-reel comedy as one of the top-notch features of a remarkable bill and giving it advertising space equal to that devoted to the feature, is the way in which the Coliseum of Seattle, Washington, exploited "The Iron Mule," an Educational-Tuxedo comedy featuring Al St. John, in the Seattle Daily Times of November 1, 1925.

The space devoted to the comedy included a large cut three columns by six inches, similar to those supplied with all Educational two-reel subjects. The display on "The Iron Mule" occupied one-third of a page length by four column "ad" space, on the front page of the amusement section. The remaining two-thirds of the "ad" was used to call attention to the feature, orchestra and a specially engaged company of "Charleston" dancers.

This is only one of the many extraordinary bits of short-subject exploitation that has been used on "The Iron Mule" throughout the country. This comedy is considered one of the most humerous ever produced, never failing to register and worthy of extra exploitation effort whenever shown.

Short Feature Producers Plan Comedy Month Drive

THE association formed by film men interested in short subjects will be known as the Short Feature Advertisers Association, according to a decision arrived at in a meeting of this group held on Wednesday, November 11, at a luncheon meeting in the Hofbrau Haus, No. 1680 Broadway, New York City.

The purpose of the organization is "to increase interest in Short Features on the part of the public, exhibitors, trade papers, magazines and newspapers."

P. A. Parsons, of Pathe, temporary chairman, presided at the meeting, at which plans for a nation-wide comedy exploitation month to be held in the near future received the most favorable consideration.

A special campaign committee to handle the details of the nation-wide short feature exploitation campaign was appointed, and will begin work immediately. This committee consists of Mr. Parsons, Gordon White, of Educational Pictures; Julian Solomon, of Davis Distributing Division; Nat Rothstein, of Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.; Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, of Arrow Pictures; Paul Gulick, of Universal Pictures Company, and W. C. Hill, of the Fox Film Corporation.

Jerome Beatty, who handled the Greater Movie Season for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president, will consult with and advise the committee.

The S. F. A. A. at its meeting on Wednesday adopted a constitution and bylaws, prepared by a special committee of its members.

Complete details of plans for Comedy Month are expected to be available for announcement next week.

Mr. White is the temporary vice-chairman of the S. F. A. A., and Mr. Solomon the temporary secretary.

Brooks Back From Tour

E. Oswald Brooks, serial sales manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., who has returned from an extended tour of the organization's branches, reports that everybody is very enthusiastic over the forthcoming serial "The Green Archer."

Mr. Brooks' trip took him to Washington, Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, St. Louis, Memphis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

How Web Theatre Put Over "Balto" Film

Taking advantage of man's inherent fondness for dumb animals, particularly dogs, the manager of the Web Theatre, Niagara Falls, Ontario, Canada, displayed a keen insight into human (or humane) psychology in his arrangement of "ad" copy for the two-reel Educational Special, "Balto's Race to Nome," in the columns of the Evening Review.

Use was made of three columns by four and one-half inches of display copy to emphasize the extraordinary heroism of the renowned canine hero, "Balto." It was done in a way that would appeal to every true lover of dogs and make him or her want to witness the film itself, so stirring was the word message put across on this wonder-dog of the northlands.

Incidentally, the space used to advertise this short feature was more than four times that devoted to the longer film on the program—a policy so many showmen follow today, when the short reel has superior patronage building value.

Art Poster Broadside Proclaims 15th Anniversary of Pathe News

A HUGE art-poster broadside proclaiming the 15th anniversary of Pathe News and the big advertising campaign being conducted in the newspapers to aid exhibitors in selling the newsfilm to the public, has been mailed to every theatre in the country.

The center spread of this big broadside is a graphic art depiction reproduced in full color from the original painting by William de Leftwich Dodge, the famous artist whose murals adorn the walls of some of America's greatest public buildings. This painting illustrates the importance of Pathe News and in its symbolism pictures the progress of the news bearer from the days of the ancient Greek, whose fleet-feet bore the tidings of distant lands to his king. The pony express, the express train, the airplane and the radio are all shown as disseminators of news. Grouped below the painting by Mr. Dodge are sixteen still pictures showing progressively the greatest news highlight of each year from 1910 to 1925.

On the reverse side of the broadside, one half of the space is devoted to the national newspaper campaign instituted in behalf of Pathe News to aid exhibitors in telling their public of their prestige in the presentation of newsfilms.

THE WEB THEATRE, NIAGARA FALLS, ONTARIO, CANADA, played up the human element in advertising the Educational Special, "Balto's Race to Nome." Every man and woman loves dogs, and in this "copy" the two-reel special is given full play over the feature picture.

BALTO, hero of the famous dash to save Nome IN "BALTO'S RACE TO NOME"
Balto is a pure blooded Siberian who until after the present exploit, never had seen any world except the limited sphere bounded by the scraggly growth about Nome.
He is six years old—the prime of a canine dog's life—is a brownish black and was endowed by nature with white stockings.
Unlike the malamute, which is half wolf, the Siberian has an unswerving affection for his master and turns a friendly eye toward all human kind. Only when his master, or the land he is crossing, is threatened with attack will he uncover his sabre-like fangs and emit the ominous snarl that usually is sufficient to drive away any enemy.
Balto was the "shaft dog" of the team—the dog nearest the sled. When the blinding blizzard stopped the lead dog, Kasson substituted three other dogs but each refused to break trail or face the killing storm. Kasson then took Balto from his position, harnessed him at the head of the line—and Balto, the smallest dog in the outfit—bored into the storm, found and held the trail and literally dragged the exhausted team into Nome.

Small Town Hustler Makes Business By Adapting Stunts to His Location

TORRINGTON, Conn., may object to being called a small town. It's a lot larger than scores of smaller places, but then it is smaller than some other places, and with a smaller population to draw from, there is less money with which to work stunts.

In this situation there are a lot of managers who look at the big town stunts, sigh regretfully and decide that they can't afford to do them. They will cost too much money. Then the manager and some one else takes over the house, and if he is the same type, he goes through the same experience.

But the Alhambra Theatre, Torington, has an exploitation man by the name of John Scanlon, and he knows that if he can't do what the big time house does, he can at least essay a colorable imitation, and he goes to it.

He figures out that he can whittle most stunts down to the size of his advertising allowance.

THE CANDY THREE FIVES

He had Chaplin in The Gold Rush recently. He liked an idea recently exploited in this department. A Seattle manager provided all the news boys with huge printed badges for The Iron Horse. They wore them for a week and were given a free ticket.

Printed badges would have taken more money than Scanlon had to spend, but that didn't even make him hesitate. He got the point of the idea. It was not the printed badge, but the publicity, so he told the local boys that if they would come around with old derbies he would fix them out.

The blank sides of insert cards and a marking brush replaced the printed badge. This did not look as well, but it was perhaps even more conspicuous.

There were not many newsboys, but in a couple of days most of the local boys were flourishing derbies and demanding a cardboard. He hired some, but could not take in the whole town, so some of the kids made their own signs and wore the hats just to be in fashion.

The effect was precisely the same as in Seattle. Everyone in town knew that Chaplin was coming. That was the important part. The printed badge was merely a detail.

The photograph is a bit vague, but you can get the idea. You also can see Mr. Scanlon's first attempt at art work. It might be a better likeness, but it could be no better publicity.

Looking around for something else, Scanlon picked on a local candy store. He gave them 20 single tickets and sold them more at a reduced price.

The store made up a "Gold Rush Mixture" and sold it for 49 cents with a free ticket to the show. He loaned them a couple of mats and they got out a throwaway and took a three fives in the newspaper. The latter supplemented the Alhambra announcement and the former saved the cost of a house throwaway.

Got the Business

Both the house and the store profited by the advertising. The store sold its candies and the theatre sold its tickets. Both were pleased, both made money. The store spent no more than usual, and the theatre spent less.

Every stunt in this department every week can be cut down or built up to fit your particular house.

Mr. Scanlon used the Cinderella stunt on Romola, using a 1½ AA slipper, a pair of which were donated by the cooperating shoe store, in return for a large painted sign.

There is nothing to connect Romola with shoes, but there is nothing to prevent the Cinderella contest, and Mr. Scanlon figures on a merchant tie-up of some sort every week. He appreciates the extra advertising he gets.

Tunnel Tickets for Iron Horse

Here's a clever idea for a box office stunt on The Iron Horse from the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, Alta. The front was partly a painting and the tickets were sold through the mouths of the two tunnels, there being two cashiers.

THE TICKET BOOTH

There have been hundreds of engineer perambulators and model locomotives used on this picture, but they are pretty much alike. It's a relief to get something really new, and we do not recall having seen this idea used before.

The two men on either side of the box office are ballyhoos, dressed like two of the Three Musketeers in the play.

Charles S. Sewell, our editor of reviews, makes the suggestion that the "seven keys" stunt generally being used on Seven Keys to Baldpate be made even more typical by setting the keyhole in which the keys are to be tried into the back of a picture of a bald-headed man. This will give both the seven keys and the bald plate. Also it will greatly enhance the value of the stunt.

THE NEWSBOY BADGE IDEA ADAPTED TO A SMALL TOWN

John Scanlon, of the Alhambra Theatre, Torrington, Conn., could not afford printed badges, so he painted his own, and while the brush was wet he did a picture of Chaplin, which is seen in the background. It brought him in the coin.

Personally we think that it is worth more than five dollars to draw Lon Chaney in his make-up as Death in the masque scenes in The Phantom of the Opera, but out in Sioux City this latest drawing contest went over with a smash. It was the opening gun of the Plaza Theatre and was working in a two column ad donated by the Journal in return for the idea and $10 for prizes. This is the display; a two sixes.

THE PHANTOM CONTEST

It was a comparatively simple matter to get the details of the face. There were pictures all over town, in the movie magazines and in the papers, and entries were received from Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska. About 175 artists competed; which is no gauge of the interest excited. Ten ticket prizes backed the cash awards.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

"Little Annie Rooney," Mary Pickford's latest, was put on with the Mark Strand Topical Review and three stage presentations, the biggest of which was the atmospheric prologue to the feature. Altogether, the performance ran two hours and two minutes, of which time "Little Annie Rooney" required one hour and thirty-one minutes. The Review took an accustomed eight minutes, and the presentations twenty-three minutes altogether.

Each deluxe show opened with the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" (Liszt) by the famed Mark Strand Orchestra, with an original piano cadenza by Lilly Kovacs. Overture took eight minutes with following lights: Purple spangled draw curtains closed across small production stage and lighted by four orange arch spots; blue foots, red borders; medium blue Mestrum flood on musicians from projection room and amber flood from the dome. Straw spot on soloist from overhead as she played from her place in the orchestra.

Harry Breuer, xylophonist, from his place in the orchestra, played "Kitten on the Keys." Lights: Overture lights remained, with amber flood taken off orchestra and spotted on the soloist. Three minutes.

After the Topical Review came the prologue, programmed as "Little Annie Rooney's Gang," and running twelve minutes. The set had a leg drop of tenement houses backed up by the Brooklyn Bridge transparency drop. A wooden fence ran across the stage, and a dozen kids scrambled up over this as a boy tenor sang "My Old Lady," the opening number. Then came dance specialties by members of the "gang," and then an Italian folk song by baritone hurdy-gurdy man with monkey. Then came the Charleston danced by Virginia Bacon, made up as Mary Pickford. The number closed with an ensemble Charleston.

This elaborate campaign was planned by Jack Edwards of the Universal office in Omaha. He was hitting on all six.

To stimulate matinee business a ticket good only in the afternoon, was given each woman who purchased a copy of the book or a Phantom lipstick from a department store; which more than paid for the tickets in the newspaper advertising it gave.

The New York office aided in procuring a display of Phantom Red gowns and other wearing apparel, and a showing was made that won a special newspaper story on the new color.

The "Showing the Making of a Motion Picture" layout, first used in Scribner's window in New York, was laid off to a kodak shop on the grounds that a graflex was used to make the pictures, and fifteen tickets were given a bookseller to be placed in copies of the popular edition.

Book markers were used by the library, rotos were placed in the Chicago Sunday newspapers, and there was a wireless hook to the Faust music by soloists supplied by the theatre.

Edwards gave them everything the big cities had, and the picture did a circus business.

Newest Brooms

Because he uses a certain type of vacuum cleaner, George T. Cruzen, of the Palace Theatre, Lockport, N. Y., got the company to make a display of its cleaning device with allusions to New Brooms at the Palace, adding that the Palace was cleaned by its make of cleaners. The window was a good one, so it sold tickets.

TWO STUNTS ON THE HUNCHBACK FROM THE PALACE THEATRE, GUATEMALA CITY

J. Carter Searcy, who is both a distributor and manager of the finest theatre in the Republic, writes that these displays are comparatively inexpensive, and that he had two packed houses, with more in prospect on The Hunchback of Notre Dame. Mr. Searcy writes that with sugar prices up and coffee still higher, it looks like a good theatrical season for the Palace.

Clown Makes Good Business for The Freshman Run

"Deaf" Soldiers to Exploit Lightnin'

Taking an old stunt out of the camphor balls, the Strand Theatre, Seattle, used two old men, dressed in makeshift uniforms, not too much like the G. A. R., to exploit Lightnin' at that house.

Getting two old men, 75 and 88, the exploitation man coached them carefully for a couple of days before he put them before the public. Even then he followed them, unobtrusively, to stage manage their stunts.

They boarded street cars, walked down the streets or parked on corners. Feigning deafness, they would shout to each other their anticipations of seeing their old comrade, Bill Jones, at the Strand Theatre.

And as it always happened that they were going away from the Strand, scores of people undertook to set them right. If they were on a car they would thank their informant and get off, presumably to take a car in the other direction, but really to board another "wrong" car. On the street they would face in the proper direction for a block or two before turning.

Only once did the stunt fail to work. That was when a mildly intoxicated man insisted upon bundling them into a taxi and paying their fare to the Strand.

They never asked anyone the way to the Strand, but waited until some kind hearted person volunteered the directions, which made the stunt look even less like a plant. Care was taken not to give offense to the G. A. R.

Finds Lobbies Pay if Plays Are Good

Sending in a couple of lobby photographs, S. C. McGregor, of Smalley's Theatre, Walton, N. Y., writes that he finds them a good investment since a display costing around $15 wil bring in anywhere from $50 to $150 additional receipts.

His samples are the ones shown on Street of Forgotten Men and on the Freiburg Passion Play. The latter is the more artistic, but the photography is rather weak.

In the example shown the brick wall which appears back of the cutout figures is a part of the decoration, apparently done on heavy paper. The compoboard base is thrown at an angle from the entrance door to the inner corner of the lobby, but in the Passion Play design the base is straight from the outer to the inner door. Apparently Mr. McGregor likes this base for the display of the title.

He usually runs a display about ten days in advance of the picture and finds the chief value of the showing to lie in the business it gets from those who are not regular patrons. The regulars form the steady business. The floaters can add as much as $150 or even a little more to the receipts if they are pulled in. If he can reach them with $15 investment, he figures it good business.

THESE LOBBIES SHOW A REAL PROFIT IN BETTER SALES

S. C. McGregor, of Smalley's Theatre, Walton, N. Y., finds that a good lobby on the right sort of picture will draw an additional $50 to $150 and he can put them up for around $15 each. It does not pay him to try and slide over the indifferent feature.

Put Clowning Lloyd on Football Field

M. Rosenthal, of Poli's Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., writes that there are so many available on Lloyd in The Freshman that the main problem is not what to use, but what to leave out.

His best bet was worked the Saturday before the opening. There was a football game, the opening of the local season, and he put a Harold Lloyd out on the field, with a water bucket. He was a good comedian and in the intervals he filled in with comedy stunts which reacted in favor of the Freshman.

For a week in advance he made a heavy drive on the Freshie song, and tied a store to the book and song for practically an entire display. Radio stores hooked to a Freshman radio set and florists were tied to a Freshman Corsage.

Five hundred Lloyd caps were given out and 1,000 megaphones were distributed, mostly at the football game, to build up on the clown, which by the way was the first exploitation stunt ever worked on a local athletic field.

The "How many Lloyds?" cut from the press book was worked up for a newspaper contest, and the sporting writers all supplemented the work of the photoplay editors. With the ushers in football suits and goggles the previous week—when dressed up ushers do the most good—and all other employees in goggles, the picture was put over for a whale of a business.

Got Fine Position for Commandments on a Score

A Paramount Release

GETTING THE BIG PLAY ON A WORLD SERIES SCOREBOARD

John W. Creamer, of the Strand Theatre, Chillicothe, Mo., put his announcement of The Ten Commandments directly in the centre of an electric score board during the recent games. You could not ask for a better position than this anywhere.

Free Lemonade for College Students

Because Texas University was opening about the time he was to show Don Q, E. B. Roberts, of the Majestic theatre, Austin, Texas, sent lemonade to be served the students on registration day with the compliments of Don Q.

So they would know who Don Q was, he sent along a pack of the house close-ups overprinted in red with the telegraphic announcement that the picture would be shown at regular and not at increased prices, the announcement being made in the name of the District Manager.

The lemonade on a hot day made such a hit that Mr. Roberts sent up enough for 5,500 persons on the occasion of the first college rally, and this time the kicker was a telegram from Douglas Fairbanks conveying his compliments and best wishes to the student body.

Of course in a college town all this was real news, and even those who did not get the lemonade appreciated the attitude of the theatre toward the college boys.

Good will was built up that will last all season.

Scared the Workers

The employees of the Franklin Auto Works, Syracuse, N. Y., were surprised lately to receive pay envelopes printed in red with "To all employees." Inside was a slip with one red line reading "One day's notice," but the remainder of the copy, in black, explained that it was notice of the arrival of The Lost World at the Strand Theatre.

It's a variant of an old idea, but Cliff Lewis writes it was new in Syracuse and decidedly effective.

Put Commandments on Baseball Field

John W. Creamer, of the Strand theatre, Chillicothe, Mo., comes out of his long silence to tell of his success with The Ten Commandments. He lists 27 various points of attack, the most picturesque being a connection with the newspaper score board on the World Series games.

This was an electrical device to indicate the plays by means of lights, and Mr. Creamer plastered a card directly over the diamond, as shown in the cut. Getting a preferred position such as this gave him a direct appeal to practically every male inhabitant, and many of the women. Anywheres on the scoreboard is regarded as a strong stunt, but Creamer made it a bullseye.

His first stunt was worked a month ahead. He had a packed house for The Thundering Herd and he stopped in the middle of the picture to flash a slide announcing that he had just received telephonic confirmation of the booking of The Commandments. Eight hundred persons went out to tell the rest of the town.

The following night he started with eight slides, changing copy weekly. As soon as he could get it painted, he put out a 35 foot banner at the rear of the auditorium, which was illuminated as the crowd passed out.

His posting and window work was started twenty days ahead, and at the same time he painted the lobby mirrors. Mail pieces went to all local R. F. D. routes as well as some out of adjacent towns and 24-sheet stands were used in the same outside territory for two weeks ahead.

A preview two weeks in advance, with opinion cards, gave him much of his newspaper ad copy as well as lobby display material and also brought a sermon. He got 200 column inches of free publicity in the newspapers, with a number of display ads, the best of which was an appeal to those who do not usually attend the theatre.

Canadian Records Cleaned Up by The Gold Rush

Canadian Records Fall to Chaplin

Although offered at regular and not advanced prices, the engagement of The Gold Rush at the Capitol theatre, Montreal, not only broke the house records, but is believed to have broken all Canadian records, according to reports from Montreal.

Harry Dahn realized that he would have to hustle some for The Pilgrim was not a record breaker. He broke into the papers with advance work about three weeks ahead of the opening, and started his regular advertising campaign a week later, or fourteen days ahead of the show. He took large spaces and stressed the human appeal of the story as well as the New York success of the play. He made an appeal to every man, woman and child to see the production, with an especial appeal not to wait until the second week of the engagement.

Chaplin moustaches were distributed to the schools, and the C. P. R. Telegraph offices, of which there are some fifty, including hotel lobby offices, made a display of special advertising.

A real novelty was the creation of a Charlie Chaplin derby by a local manufacturer. There was a full window display of the hard-baked tiles that caught the attention of all on the busy shopping street.

The phonograph companies were tied to Chaplin music and six large ice cream parlors were persuaded to stock the Charlie Chaplin Sundae.

An even better hook-up was with a local taxi service, with each cab carrying small window signs, with a supply of heralds in a rack inside the car. Naturally the passenger picked out one as he sped toward his destination.

But the biggest noise of all was the tie-up with a local race meet for a Gold Rush purse. This got advance front page publicity in all of the newspapers.

Planned for the Rowland & Clark Theatres, Pittsburgh, this was framed with sheet metal, with a railroad bell and old fashioned headlight from the Pennsylvania Railroad. It could make three and a half miles an hour, but it smoked like the limited.

The inside page answered "Nothing but added information as to the starters in the Gold Rush purse, with the 1-2-3 choice of a local newspaper handicapper. There was a line referring to the back page for past performances, but these referred to the success of the play and not the racing form of the runners.

At the track motion pictures of the grandstands were made, with the announcement that these would be shown at the Capitol, and most everyone came to see if he was in the picture.

Another valuable stunt was a window projection of a trailer by means of a new advertising projector, which was used for the first time for this picture. It was located at the chief transfer point and generally had traffic blocked.

Another Gazer

Dressing a man as a Hindu and sending him around town with a crystal ball on a small tray was the way the Haines Theatre, Waterville, Maine, put over The Mystic, while a dry goods store announced that there was no mystery about their bargain prices—they left mystery to the Haines.

Digging back into the past, it is well to remember that a small goldfish globe, upside down, makes a very good crystal ball in a pinch.

Green Eyed

Little was done on the Unholy Three by H. L. Williamson, of the Superba Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., but he got the best Saturday business the house has ever enjoyed.

The big appeal was a lobby cutout from the 24-sheet. Chaney's eyes were cut out and faced with paper backed by green lamps on a flasher. This doesn't sound very strong, but it surely got attention. Try it for yourself.

Think up some stunts to win the Christmas shopper. Don't let the slump hit you too hard. How about afternoon tea?

A Movie Ball Will Clean Up Coast of Folly

A Warner Bros. Release.

THE CHARLES CHAPLIN TELEGRAM ON WARNER'S THEATRE

A telegram from Charles to Syd Chaplin on the opening of The Man on the Box was reproduced in two-story size on the front of Warner's Theatre, New York. The line reads: "From one great Chaplin to another." The cabs were part of the street bally.

Varied His Stunts on The Lucky Devil

Several stunts, all tied to the automobile, enabled George Rea to draw plenty of extra sales to the Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ga., on The Lucky Devil.

His best bet was a race for pedal autos driven by boys and girls under eight. This was run off in front of the theatre, a couple of blocks being roped off by the police that no harm might come to the kiddies. Music was supplied by the Boy Scouts, and the Scouts and racers later were guests of the management at a special showing. The prizes ranged from 20 to 5 tickets to the Grand. The stunt drew the largest crowd ever gathered on the street.

Automobile races on Labor Day were advertised by the presence of the racing cars in the Labor Day parade, and two of these were bannered for the attraction, as well as the speediest car on the track.

A local agency put out a sealed bonnet car with the offer of a pass prize if it was found going faster than ten miles an hour between stated times, or if it went dead. It did not hurt any when a policeman pinched the driver for making eleven miles.

A balloon was sent up, carrying the offer of $10 in trade at a local garage and ten tickets for The Lucky Devil. It sailed all over the city before it finally drifted out of town.

It not only made big business, but Mr. Rea has motion pictures of the kiddie race to run with some future attraction.

Alternating

Romola and Lillian and Dorothy Gish are the selling points in that Metro offering. At the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas, a sixteen foot shadow box was used to exploit these two points. But the flasher arrangement showed first the name and then the players. Alternating gave much greater display value than would the combination. These little points are what really help business.

Inflated Ferals

If you do cross word puzzles you know that ferals are wild animals. Wild animals, of the sort you blow up and use for bath toys for the kiddie, were one of the stunts used by W. A. and W. H. Popham, of the Elite Theatre, Kamsack, Sask., for The Great Circus Mystery.

In a drug store window a display of these rubber lions and tigers made a big flash and backed up a cage full of wild animals in the lobby. But the cage was lath and the animals' cutouts.

For the first chapter the local stores were sold the admission tickets at a reduced rate, and gave them as trade premiums. This is getting to be a favorite stunt.

Movie Ball Was Good and Cheap

Getting a big stunt for very little put over The Coast of Folly to a very nice business at the Majestic theatre, Austin, Tex.

E. B. Roberts laid off the idea of the movie ball to a well-known dance orchestra leader. He showed him stills of the ball and gave him the general idea, offering to pay for the advertising if the leader would take the rental risk. He figured that it was the same thing whether he advertised the Movie Ball or The Coast of Folly so far as cost went, but that a movie ball would be a better advertisement for the picture than straight display ads.

The roof garden of a leading hotel was engaged, a number of prizes for the best impersonations of stars were offered, and the event was such a novelty that the town flocked in. Since he was doing the advertising, Mr. Roberts could hold the publicity close to the picture, and he got all there was to be had. The newspapers gave large space in advance and larger to the story of the ball itself.

A midnight matinee preceding the regular opening was another good box office feeder.

Liked It

The Citizen's Bank, of Tampa, Fla., where the real estate comes from, not only used the "Ten Commandments of Thrift" on its illuminated sign when the picture played at the Victory, but it took a five eights, with the house, for the opening day, sharing the cost with Manager John B. Carroll.

One church passed a resolution commending the theatre for the presentation of the story, and the play served as a theme for several sermons.

But if additional argument should be needed, Mr. Malaney has a lot of brisk talk that should sell even an unknown star and title from a flat start. Just because he has one of the outstanding pictures of the year Mr. Malaney is not content merely to announce the title. He sells it just as hard and just as cleverly as though Fairbanks were an unknown. He has the space. He might as well say something, so he says something worth while; something that will sell to the man who possibly is not yet convinced. The use of the Circle (in itself a strong display factor), gives a certain amount of white space to lighten the area, the type is mostly held to one corner, where it can be read as a whole, and there is plenty of character to the sketch to back up the argument. A poor sketch would have flopped the display, but this carries out the suggestion of the talk.

Light Halftone Hurt by Reverse

This three nines from Loew's Valentine Thetre, Toledo, shows a fault that is far more common than it should be. It is seldom possible to work a halftone against a reverse strip and get the value out of the halftone cut. When the halftone is lighter than usual—and good newspaper halftones come up light—the result is a very poor contrast in which there is not even the value of contrast, such as would come from the use of a line cut. You cannot beat a bass drum through a piano solo and expect the latter to be appreciated, and you cannot get the value out of a halftone if you club it to death with a reverse strip. In the reproduction this looks better than in the original newspaper display, because the cut will come up better on good paper. As originally shown, the strong character make-up of Lon Chaney in The Tower of Lies is lost because it is made washy through the heavier mass of black to the left. With a black letter on a white ground this would have come through better. Reverse should not be used alongside halftones of any sort if the best result is to be attained. It is worse where the halftone lacks full color, and you will get a light color if you use the proper size screen. There is little value, too, in the sales lines, which read merely "The story of a man who awakens to the beauties of life through his daughter and who loses his reason when she goes astray." That is not going to pull in the man who is not sold on seeing everything Chaney does. It gives no hint of the forceful play, and carries not the slightest appeal.

Sells Pony Express on Panel of Talk

Loew's Columbia Theatre, Washington, D. C., uses a characteristic design on The Pony Express, but does most of the selling with the well displayed panel. If you have followed the Washington advertisements you will recall that they follow a general style in which the cut is mostly centered. The sales talk is generally tucked away in one of the lower corners. Here the regular form is departed from and the sales talk is centered to get the interest, with its allusion to The Covered Wagon. Here, again, there is no talk of "Greater than." Rather this is "as good as" which is plenty good enough. Most persons would regard "Greater than the Covered Wagon" as so palpable a lie that they would not believe any part of the appeal. Those same persons will buy another production along the same lines by the same director, and the Columbia sells from this better angle. Some managers will regard a 90 by 3 (six and a half inches), as a wasteful extravagance to put over a column less than two inches wide. It is not, for that six inch width ensures the reading of the two inch appeal that would not be gained in so full a measure with a single column layout. More, there is appeal to the cut as such. It may not sell many tickets without the aid of the reader, but it is a powerful second to the type talk, and the panel is cleverly set into the cut and not to either side. It is one of the most useful layouts to come from the Loew houses in Washington in some months, and this means much, for they seldom use poor layouts.

A Buried Title Lacks Display

In a full page it is probable that this cut for The Phantom of the Opera would get over very nicely, but in the three fives used by the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C., the title is buried, or practically killed by the details of the cut. We do not believe that this is a plan book cut unless it is a reduction from a larger size. Sometimes a cut is taken to form the basis of a display and then reduced, and this may be a reduction. That would explain the loss of display, for a larger cut of the same design would let the title come through. The panel is given to the supporting show, mostly to the orchestral accompaniment. Porbably the title was put over in other ways but just as an advertisement this is a poor example. Not only is the title lost, but the use of too large a letter for the top lines of the panel destroy some of that display. The Rialto generally does very much better than this. It's a good plan to lay off any cut in which the title is largely superimposed on the design. No matter how good it may look in the press book, it won't come through in newspaper work—and your patron does not see the press book. Just write that down in your little book of rules and play safe.

A BURIED TITLE

Merry Widow Has a Personal Guarantee

Here is the opening display on The Merry Widow from the Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago. There is a minimum of cut in this 100 by 3 because space costs a lot of money in the big cities and the title will get over better than any cut. You could sell The Merry Widow on type alone. The very small lines below the "tomorrow" run: "You can make a rendezvous with romance! It lives again in this glorious love story of gay Vienna." That gets it off to a good start, but the real punch is the personal guarantee of Balaban and Katz in the panel on the right. They refer to the pleasure The Freshman has just given and assure the reader that The Merry Widow will be as acceptable. The personal guarantee usually is regarded as small town stuff, but it works just as well in Chicago, and would work as well in New York. Naturally Balaban and Katz were first assured that the play would live up to their praise, but The Merry Widow is one of the most charming productions of the season, and quite apart from the favor in which the opera is still held, it should make good in its own right as a picture.

Rather Muddy Cut Carries Strength

This is not a particularly good cut, judged by First National standards, and the printing does not seem to have helped much. The paper is soft and the ink has spread to kill whatever sharpness of line there may have been, and even the type is a little smeary. But even on good paper this cut would not have come up very well. And yet the pose has a certain strength in spite of the crude drawing, and conveys the suggestion of a regular play, in spite of the weakness of the man's face. It was used in a three tens by the Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, and serves to give a good display to the star and title, while the selling is well taken care of by the chat at the bottom. Up at the top we think that the single phrase "The picture with the mighty wallop" would have been better alone in the space. It is better than the non-committal top line. "Here it is" does not mean much of anything. The other phrase does, and so is the better. Most of the spare space is given the vaudeville feature, the short subjects not being mentioned at all. Probably there would have been more value to the shorts than to the specialty, because people come to know and look for the short features, and these carry a real appeal each week.

Newark Display Carries Shorts

space cut, notched to let in the talk on the main title in the upper left and with a panel for the remainder of the program in the lower right. The space is a little more than seven inches deep, for most of the selling in Newark is done in the Saturday-Sunday papers. The cut admirably carries out the main theme of the story, but it is merely an attractor to the space. The sales work is accomplished through the type talk. No very large letters are used, even for the title, which is only a 30 point, but double the space and letters twice as large would have given no more display. Holding all of the lines down gives the same relative value, the same sales value and a much lower space bill.

Lloyd Accessories a Help in Houston

Making large use of the accessories supplied on Harold Lloyd in The Freshman got Harry Vandemark a pretty business for the Queen Theatre, Houston, Texas.

He got a thousand megaphones and laid some off to the Rotary Club luncheon, one being put at each cover. The president used his to announce the picture and to remind the members that they would need theirs at the coming football games. The stunt was also used at a similar luncheon the following day.

Newsboys were given megaphones through which to cry their papers and others were sent to various football squads, and to the rooters for the school teams.

The newsies and the football players were all provided with Lloyd caps and about 1,000 cutout goggles were given schoolchildren, many of whom wore them on the street with good advertising effect.

A special front, with many pennants was put on the house and a florist was induced to offer the Freshman Corsage for the consideration of students.

No broken records, but an excellent business.

GALLOPING VENGEANCE. Star, Bob Custer. A good action western. Custer is becoming more popular each time shown. Plenty of thrills. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST. (6,500). Star cast. Went over big, due to popularity of book. Boys, you can buy this one right, and if you'll do your part she'll make you money. Tone good. HUMAN TORNADO. Star, Yakima Canutt. Here's a real picture of thrills, action and an actor who is F. B. O.'s new western star. Goes good. Good tone. Appeal 95 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw farm class in town 150. Admission 10-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre, Loyalton, South Dakota.

IF MARRIAGE FAILS. (6,000 feet). Star, Jacqueline Logan. A fine cast wasted on a lot of drivel. Was rather surprised that a playwright such as C. Gardner Sullivan would put out anything quite as inconsistent as this. Faults galore in the construction, and improbabilities that even this excellent cast couldn't make look plausible. Stay off, or be ready to apologize for taking money under false pretences. Weather good. Attendance not so good. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

IN FAST COMPANY. Star, Richard Talmadge. Fine program picture. Full of action. A good Saturday night picture. F. B. O. service is 100 per cent. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre, La Belle, Missouri.

JIMMIE'S MILLIONS. (5,167 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. This is a good program picture. This picture was not as good as "American Manners." I had a very good comedy with it and that's what the children like. I had some very good comments on this picture. Tone O. K. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

TEARING THRU. Star, Richard Talmadge. The usual Talmadge picture, which means plenty of action and entertainment. Wish they would give him better stories, however, O. K. tone. Appeal 85 per cent. O. K. for Sunday. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

THAT DEVIL QUEMADO. (4,720). Star, Fred Thomson. This boy never fails to make me money. The mere mention of his name packs them in. We have a large Mexican population during the beet topping season and I played up the Mexican atmosphere to this one and filled one entire side of the house with "hombres." Tone good. No Sunday or special. 100 per cent. appeal. Draw farmers and laboring class, town of about 375. Admissions 10-25. Ed. F. Cox, Princess Theatre (450 seats), Bristol, Colorado.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (10 reels). Star, George Billings. A great picture and should please theatre patrons most anywhere. It did not draw very well here for some reason, but no fault of the picture. We advertised at all the school houses in the country, but failed to get them interested. Receipts as box office were not very satisfactory. Tone, excellent. Yes for Sunday and special. One hundred per cent. appeal. Draw general class, town of about 600. Admissions 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (9,759 feet). Star, George Billings. An excellent picture, true to history. Drew the old people out, but no appeal for the kids. However, every house should play it. Rental reasonable. Excellent tone. Appeal, 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farmers, town 400. Admission 10 on program, 10-25 on specials. Ross S. King, Opera House (225 seats), Barnes City, Iowa.

BORN RICH. (7,511 feet). Stars, Bert Lytell, Claire Windsor. One of those slow moving, draggy domestic dramas that is hurting the business so much these days. Nothing to it! Why will producers stretch a little five-reel subject into an eight-reeler? Had the smallest attendance on a First National picture in several weeks. People want action these days. Tone, dunno. Appeal weak. Sunday, dunno, but no as special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

BRAWN OF THE NORTH. (8 reels). Star, Irene Rich. Another one of those good program pictures of the Northwest. Had very good crowds both days considering bad weather and opposition on Saturday night. This is a fine picture and don't be afraid to boost it, as it should please most any audience. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, no. One hundred per cent. appeal. Draw general class, town of about 600. Admissions 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

DECLASSE. (7,889 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. A hundred per cent. entertainment for lovers of socalled society pictures. Corinne is more beautiful than ever; even if the plot is a little weak, she'll make up for it, with her splendid acting. Everyone praised it very highly. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

HURRICANE'S GAL. (8 reels). Star, Dorothy Phillips. A good program picture that took well and went over in fine shape. The weather was bad, so didn't have much of a crowd, but pleased all who were here. Tone good. Sunday yes, special no. Appeal 90 per cent. Draw general class, town of about 600. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). Star, Lloyd Hughes Is consistent throughout, and should be a money getter for any exhibitor, provided he uses the right plugging. It has had so much publicity that we merely say that it is one of the biggest pictures yet released, and our box office statement proves it agreeably. Tone, O.K. Appeal, 99 per cent. Yes for Sunday and as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

NOMADS OF THE NORTH. (6 reels). Star, Betty Blythe. Another one of those good program pictures from First National. Had a big Saturday night crowd and made a little money. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

SHORE LEAVE. (6,856 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Speaking strictly from an audience standpoint, they enjoyed this a lot. Personally I considered it a good picture, but my patrons went better than that. Play it, boost it. It's thrills and comedy, and if bought at a normal rental there's profit in the box office and general satisfaction from your audiences. Weather and attendance fine. Health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

THIEF IN PARADISE. (7,251 feet). Star, Ronald Coleman. Very good picture with some beautiful settings and good direction. Pleased all who saw it; therefore let's rate it over 95 per cent. in audience value. Well worth playing in little towns and ought to go over BIG in the cities. Fair tone, strong appeal. Sunday, here yes, special, yes. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Fox

DANCERS. (6,656 feet). Star cast. One of Fox's super specials and charged a super special price—and nothing but a very poor program picture. No good for a small town out in the country. Might be good in a big city, but not here. Poor tone. Appeal depends on size of place shown. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

THE FOOL. (10 reels). Star, Earle Foxe. From the famous stage play—but I regret to say I could not put this production over, as it is a wonderful picture. This is the best picture at present for church tie-ups. Lost me money, as rental was sky high for my town. An excellent picture for Christmas. Tone, good. Appeal—flopped here. Yes for Sunday and special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

GREAT DIAMOND MYSTERY. (6,056 feet.) Star, Shirley Mason. One of the best mystery pictures we have ever run. Full of interest and action from the first reel to the end. You can't go wrong on this one if you want a mystery picture. Print first class. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre, La Belle, Missouri.

GOLD AND THE GIRL. (4,512 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Just a good western picture, and where Jones is liked will go over big, especially Saturday nights. Good tone, appeal 90 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

IRON HORSE. Star cast, features George O'Brien. The best picture I ever ran from Fox. Two days run. Both days failed to break even. Special, yes—big!—advertise it to the limit. Joseph H. Delisi, Liberty Theatre, drawing from residential class, town of 1,090. Saltsburg, Pennsylvania.

IT IS THE LAW. (6,000 feet). Star cast. An all star cast which is great. The leading man was very good in his double role. A very clever picture Fair tone, appeal, 90 per cent. No for Sunday, yes as special. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

LAST OF THE DUANES. (6,842). Star, Tom Mix. This was great. We class this as one of Mix's very best. Did big business in 100 per cent. weather. Good tone. Sunday, no, special, yes. One hundred per cent. appeal. Draw town of about 175 and also rural. Admissions 10-25, specials 15-30 and 25-50. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

LAST OF THE DUANES. (6,842 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Considered here one of the best pictures Mix ever made, and it went over satisfactorily. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

LIGHTNIN'. (8,050 feet). The first of the John Golden clean plays. It certainly was one of those good clean pictures that don't mean a nickel to the box office. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre, Easton, Pennsylvania.

LIGHTNIN'. Stars, Jay Hunt, Madge Bellamy. A great picture. Eight reels. Everyone spoke highly of picture; pleased a hundred per cent. Fischer & LaPointe, Orpheum Theatre, Chatham, New York.

MAN WHO CAME BACK. (8,272 feet). Star, George O'Brien. Do you want a really good picture? Then get this one. It will not make you any money unless you can get the people to come in the first day, as somehow the title doesn't draw. Conditions of film good. Tone doubtful. Appeal, 95 per cent. No for Sunday, yes as special regard to above. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

TEETH. (6,190 feet). Star, Tom Mix, with Tony and Duke (dog). Tom has a dog in this; very good; every one well satisfied. Good tone. Appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

WINGS OF YOUTH. (5,340 feet). Star cast. The only picture we had anyone walk out on in the past four years. So slow that the people who did stay fell asleep. Tone and appeal, none. Sunday and special, no. L. R. Marlum, Dream Theatre, Indianapolis, Indiana.

WINNER TAKE ALL. (5,949 feet). Star, Buck Jones. This is a boxing picture with Buck Jones; very good; will hold any Buck Jones crowd. Good tone, appeal 90 per cent. No for Sunday or special. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

Between Ourselves

A get together place where we can talk things over

Hallalujah!

Sure I'm shouting!

The old-timers are coming back!

Got a letter from that best of old-timers, Thos. L. Haynes—Haynes Amusement Company, Old Lyme, Massachusetts—AND HE SENT TIPS!

Boys, Tom Haynes said something in his letter that I want to contradict in front of all of you because maybe there are others who feel the way he says he felt.

HE STOPPED SENDING TIPS, he says, TO SEE IF WE COULD GET ALONG WITHOUT HIM — AND FINDING THAT WE COULD, HE LAID OFF.

We didn't get along without him. The dependable tip department kept running—yes—but it missed him — MISSED HIS GENEROUS HELP.

Abraham Lincoln is gone—we see the world turning every day, the people elect a president, things seem to go on just the same—but we miss the fine, upstanding statesmanship of a man like Lincoln.

Same way, when a man who started out with the dependable tip department drops out—it has to keep going—BUT—there's a place that only THAT MAN could FILL.

Tom was wrong. We went on but we didn't get along without him. I kept after him till he wrote once that he was too busy to send tips—then I laid off pestering him.

But—we all missed him—just as we miss YOU if you are thinking we're getting along without you!

VAN.

Metro-Goldwyn

BANDOLERO. (7,000 feet). Star, Pedro de Cordoba. This is a wonderful picture and if you can get the public in they will advertise it for you. Try it. Good tone, appeal 98 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

EXCUSE ME. (5,084 feet). Star, Conrad Nagel. Run this one sure. It's good. The best of Hughes' pictures. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

GREAT DIVIDE. (7,811 feet). Star cast. A very good picture, plenty of action. Tone and appeal O. K. no Sunday or special. Drawing general class, town 3,500. Admission 10-25. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

PRETTY LADIES. All star cast. It is all the title says it is. Lots of color and pretty ladies in picture. Puts it over all right. Above the average. Tone, O. K. Sunday, yes, special, no. Very good appeal. Draw college town of about 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

SEVEN CHANCES. (5,112 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Fine comedy from Buster. Every bit as good as the "Navigator." The kids yelled and screamed. The grown ups enjoyed it too. Tone O. K. Appeal a hundred per cent. O. K. for Sunday. R. L .Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

SPORTING VENUS. Star, Blanche Sweet. Not much, and that about explains all that I can say about this, played it to poor business and the business was better than the picture. Get away from this if you can. Weather fair. Attendance, nil. Health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

SPORTING VENUS. (5,958 feet). Star, Blanche Sweet. A very good picture for the high class; not a drawing card for a small town. Reel one is the best reel in the whole picture. Fair tone. Poor appeal. Maybe for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SUN UP. Star, Lucille LeVerne. It was reviewed rather badly, but on close inspection at the matineè I saw lots of merit in it and think this a fair picture at reasonable rental. You have the New York stage run of the piece to talk about and would say that if you can get 'em in—they'll be satisfied, but remember at regular prices, you can exploit this bigger than it really is and if you do you'll have a backwash of squawks. Weather good. Attendance pretty fair. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

SUN UP. Star cast. A fairly good picture of the illiterate mountaineer with a dash of the World War in its theme. Will appeal to some classes of your audience. Tone O. K. Fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw general class, town 3,500. Admission 10-25. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES. Star, Blanche Sweet, Conrad Nagel. A wonderful picture; everyone more than pleased, even the kids; so we can ask nothing better. Run it if you haven't already. Don't be afraid of it. Good tone, appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

TRUE AS STEEL. (7 reels). All star cast. A domestic drama that rings true and is high class. A big cast and every one a star. If this one doesn't fill your house, then goodbye. A production that is the last word in entertainment value and they all hated to see the end. Draw tourist city of 3,000. Admissions 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre,, (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

UNHOLY THREE. (7,000 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Voted a master picture and I agree with the verdict of my clientele. Metro thinks the same, you'll find out when you sign on the w. k. dotted line. This won't get 'em in by just putting out a one sheet, get busy on this and use all the exchange supplies on this and you'll profit thereby; I did. Weather fine. Attendance just the same. Health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

ZANDER THE GREAT. (6,844 feet). Star, Marion Davies. Truly a great picture. Genuine entertainment for any audience. No profit for me on account of high rental. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

Paramount

A MAN MUST LIVE. (6,116 feet) Star, Richard Dix. Very good picture. I would say "run it." Draw small town and farmers, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. D. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS. (6,650 feet). Like all other Zane Grey's. It got by very well. Tone, O. K. Good appeal. Sunday yes, special, no. Draw general class, town about five thousand. Admission 15-30. C. A. Anderson, Liberty Theatre, (600 seats), Kalispell, Montana.

MADAME SANS GENE. (9,904 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Played two days to poorest business of this month. Gloria is not a drawing card, and this costume showstuff is the bunk in the small towns. No more for me. Tone O. K. Poor appeal and not a special here. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A good Gloria Swanson; holds interest all the way through. Tone O. K. Appeal 70 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer-small town class, town 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Somehow Miss Swanson has lost favor here, so this good program picture did not draw well. She used to be one of my best bets—but "times have changed." This one pleased those who came (bless their few hearts), but I had rather have the ticket office a little busier. All right for Sunday but not a special. Print good. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF. (7,298 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. My patrons said "good"; my organist said "better than 'Old Home Week," so I guess it's a good one. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF. (7,298 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Poor. Each of his pictures worse than the previous one. Draw general class, city 10,000. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. H. V. Smooths, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mount Vernon, Ohio.

MAN WHO FOUND HIMSELF. (7,298 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Just another Meighan epic that requires music to put it over. His stories of late are very weak, and if, as we are told, he selects his own, then he has exceedingly poor judgment. You will notice, too, that he counts every step he takes and employs the same hand gestures in every picture he does; however, the women like him regardless, so what's the diff? Tone O. K. Appeal 65 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Viola Dana. Had a street carnival as opposition so do not know as to its drawing power. But not much of a picture. Sunday, yes. Special, No. All classes town of 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

MISS BLUEBEARD. (6,453 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. A-1 comedy romantic picture, only should have a new title. Raymond sure is a knockout. Better play this one boys. Tone, good, Sunday, yes. One hundred per cent appeal. Draw farmers, town of about 150. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats) Royalton, South Dakota.

MISS BLUEBEARD. (6,453 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. I believe this satisfied my folks, but more due to Raymond Griffith's comedy work than to Bebe, although Bebe is great in this. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Good appeal, Rural and village class town of 400. Admission, 15-30. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (240 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. His worst picture yet. Had good attendance on his past act. He does not have a chance in this picture. Tone O. K. Appeal, pretty fair. Sunday, yes, special, no. Draw college town of about 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

NOT SO LONG AGO. (7 reels). Star, Betty Bronson. A splendid picture and will please the majority. Betty Bronson does some fine work, as does Ricardo Cortez. A good picture to tie up with some organization. Tone and appeal O. K. Sunday O. K. Draw general class, town 3,500. Admission 10-25, Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

OLD HOME WEEK. (6,780 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Played two days to poor business. A fair Meighan vehicle but his shows have too much sameness. We can't play him two nights any more; not much drag to him. Fine tone. Sunday, yes, special no. Fair appeal. Draw better class, town about 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre, Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

PATHS TO PARADISE. (6,741 feet). Star, R. Griffith, Betty Compson. Everybody here considered this picture a comedy knockout, and everybody was right. It was an exceptional box office attraction. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

PATHS TO PARADISE. (6,741 feet). Stars, Ray Griffith, Betty Compson. Raymond Griffith is becoming quite a favorite, and any picture in which he stars is sure to please all. Good tone and appeal. Draw mixed class, town 1,800. Admission 25. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

PETER PAN. (9,593 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. Played it as a local benefit show, tying up with the Woman's Club, so did a good business, but would not want many of this type. It is a cute thing, but "too much would be superfluous." Had lots of children I was not aware were in existence, so it must have drawn some non-picture fans. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good print. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

PONY EXPRESS. (7,979 feet). Star cast. Broke all house records for opening and held

Old-Timer Tom Breezes In

Tom Haynes shot in dependable tips—made that expression mean what it says—when we started Straight From the Shoulder.

A lot of you folks remember him. You'll be glad to hear him chat for a few lines—here.

"Dear Van, and 'Gang'—This shows I read the World (there was a call for Tom in one of these boxes). Yes, I am 'it.' I have started several times to say something and had to jump up and quit.

"You can see from the heading of this—Lyme Garage—I have something else doing besides running pictures and with our new tax law in this State, guess we will have to quit the picture game. I am booked to December 12th and after that—well, guess we will go to Florida or some hotter place—not on what we have made on pictures!—to sojourn with some of the rest of the boys who are now out of a job account of the tax law and making a lot of kale on Florida Real Estate WHAT IS REAL!" Thomas L. Haynes, Old Lyme Amusement Co., Old Lyme, Connecticut.

MR. HAYNES' tips will be in next week.

up splendidly. Held them out every night in the face of extra heavy opposition including two days of the first circus of the year. A great many reports that I heard were to the effect that they considered it as good as "The Covered Wagon." Will draw in any theatre. Ricardo Cortez establishes himself more firmly than he already is in the minds of all by his splendid work in this one. Fine tone. Very good appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, city 100,000. Admission 40-50. Guy O. Kinemer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

PONY EXPRESS. Star cast, includes Ricardo Cortez. A real box office picture. Opened fifteen minutes early and house was filled quicker than on any other picture. Less advertising than on any special I have ever run. Rained all day second day and knocked my crowd but still I had comfortably filled house. Am sure crowd would have been bigger than first, if it had not rained. Made plenty anyway. The picture is there. Strand Theatre, Granbury, Texas.

PONY EXPRESS. Star cast. This is a wonderfully pleasing picture and the name draws the kind of people that the picture pleases most. It was very satisfactory at the box office and in its after effects, as it is good enough to cause people to remember it for some time. Fine tone. Universal appeal. Yes for Sunday and as special. Draw all classes, town 3,200. Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

PURPLE HIGHWAY. Star, Madge Kennedy. The title does not mean anything in advertising this picture. The story is out of the ordinary. The audience seemed pleased. Some took the pains to say they liked the show and there were no kicks. Tone, good. Special, no. Mill and farming class. Admission 25 cents. L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

RUGGED WATER. (6,015 feet). Stars, Wilson, Baxter, Wallace Beery. Too slow and draggy. People who like Joseph C. Lincoln's works were bored with the picture. Wallace Beery miscast. Tone and Sunday O. K. Appeal not so good. Not a special. Draw general class, town 3,500. Admission 10-25. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

SINNERS IN HEAVEN. (6,621 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. The acting and direction in this is good, but was a little strong and in some parts suggestive. Won't do for small towns. This may do for large cities but my people give me h—l when I show this kind. T. C. Simmons, Auditorium Theatre, Welsh, Louisiana.

THUNDERING HERD. (7,187 feet). Considered a very good picture here but somehow business was not what it ought to be. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

Pathe

BLACK CYCLONE. (5,038 feet). Star, Rex. A wonderful picture with magnificent scenery and animal acting. Pleased all who like horses. Exploited it heavily and had good attendance but rental was too high. Pathe got the money. Fine tone. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farmer class, town 400. Admission 10 on program, 10-25 on specials. Ross S. King, Opera House (225 seats), Barnes City, Iowa.

BLACK CYCLONE. (5,038 feet). Star, Rex, horse. This picture will please all who see it. That's your problem—getting them in! Tone, appeal and for Sunday O. K. Semi-special. Draw general class, town 3,500. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre, Rochester, Indiana.

FRESHMAN. (6,083 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Good as any of his. "Maybe" Will Hays complimented Lloyd on making clean pictures: Lloyd not only makes "clean" pictures but rental on this "cleans" the man who plays them. Criterion Theatre, Frederick, Oklahoma.

FRESHMAN. (6,083 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. A great picture. The best one Lloyd has made. Played three weeks to capacity houses. Broke all records of previous business. J. D. Kennedy, Apollo Theatre (1,150 seats), Indianapolis, Indiana.

Ladies Welcome

Mrs. Bessie Rutledge, Orpheum Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, sent in a report.

We of "Our Gang" are mighty grateful and hope to get more reports from this kind lady.

Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California, has been sending dependable reports with unremitting generosity for years.

We will welcome more of the gentler sex among our good scouts—the ladies can help a lot.

CHARLEY'S AUNT. (7,245 feet). Star, Syd Chaplin. When a picture opens to bad business and pulls through big, it is good—that's Charley's Aunt. Tone, good. Yes for Sunday and as special. One hundred per cent appeal. Draw town about 22,000, conservative. Admission 50 cents. D. J. Adams, Auditorium (1,000 seats), Concord, New Hampshire.

CHARLEY'S AUNT. (7,245 feet). Star, Syd Chaplin. Excellent picture for a comedy. Anyone could have taken the lead and made good. Better than usual business. Pleased everybody. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday and special, yes. L. R. Marlum, Dream Theatre, Indianapolis, Indiana.

LET WOMEN ALONE. Star, Wanda Hawley. Fine program picture; some comedy. Fine action and a fast moving story. Good tone. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farm class, town 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

SIMON THE JESTER. Star cast. Excellent, amusing, entertaining, big. Disappoints none, satisfies all. Will satisfy any audience. J. B. Russell, Washington Theatre Co., Maysville, Kentucky.

SIREN OF SEVILLE. (6,724 feet). Star, Priscilla Dean. A right good program picture; nothing big but will please the most of them. Fair tone, appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

STOP FLIRTING. (5,161 feet). Very good. A real picture entertainment and P. D. C. treats you white. L. V. French, Fotoplay Theatre, Watertown, South Dakota.

WELCOME STRANGER. (6,618 feet). Star cast. Just a good program picture; nothing big, but a clean, sociable heart-interest picture. Fine tone. Appeal 85 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

WHAT SHALL I DO? (8,000 feet). Star, Dorothy MacKaill. Good audience appeal here—farm class. Poor print though. Good tone. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Town 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

Schulberg

APRIL SHOWERS. Star, Colleen Moore. A play that should appeal to all audiences. It is a story of every day life, with plenty of the Irish life. The audience enjoyed every bit of it. Six reels. Strong tone. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday. Draw working class, city 200,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (245 seats), Jamaica, New York.

United Artists

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY. (8,500 feet). Star, Mary Pickford. Good. Back in the kind of pictures her followers like. Good tone. Fine appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw general class, city 10,000. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mount Vernon, Ohio.

WILD JUSTICE. (6,000 feet). Star, Peter the Great (dog). Here is one that sure registered with my fans; the acting of this dog is extra good. Lots of good comments on this as it satisfied all. Tone yes. Appeal—you bet. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

WILD JUSTICE. (6,000 feet). Star, Peter the Great (dog). A dog picture that has surpassed anything of its kind thus far. It has scenery, good actors, plot, action; and the work of the dog is little short of marvelous. The paper on this is the best we have had for years. Tone O. K. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

Universal

DARING CHANCES. Star, Jack Hoxie. Very good little western. Hoxie is well liked here. Tone, fair. No Sunday and as special. Appeal 60 per cent. Draw farming and lumber class, town of about 425. Admission 10-20-25. C. E. Dellinger, Doric Theatre, (250 seats), Wardensville, West Virginia.

HEADWINDS. Star, House Peters. A poor example of what House Peters can do and another one like this will finish him. Story without any sense and paper made from part of picture that is a dream. Tone and appeal, none. Sunday and special, no. L. R. Marlum, Dream Theatre, Indianapolis, Indiana.

HURRICANE KID. Star, Hoot Gibson. Hoot sure is a Hurricane Kid in this one. While riding and knocking out the heavies, Hoot always brings them in. Tone, good. Sunday, no special, no. Appeal 60 per cent. Draw farming and lumber class, town of about 425. Admissions 10-20-25. C. E. Dellinger, Doric Theatre (250 seats), Wardensville, West Virginia.

I'LL SHOW YOU THE TOWN. Star, Reginald Denny. One of the best I ever ran. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Appeal, one hundred per cent. College and resort class town of 650. Admission 15-25. J. J. Parker, Cozy Theatre (200 seats), Merom, Indiana.

OH, DOCTOR! (6,507 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. A good comedy but absolutely no drawing power here. I advertise Denny's pictures but somehow they won't come out. This one is worth playing. Tone O. K. Appeal 90 per cent. O. K. for Sunday. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

OH, DOCTOR. (6,507 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. A good picture for any type of audience. The story is excellent. Many funny situations. Will keep your audience laughing all the time. Good tone and appeal. Draw working class, city 200,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (245 seats), Jamaica, New York.

Short Subjects are still being reported and you probably know by now they're in the LITTLE PICTURE WITH THE BIG PUNCH pages.

That's why I changed the blank in each issue to include the short subjects you use.

Don't forget to use the blank if you don't get the regular blank from me each week.

Be a booster.

PROVE IT WITH TIPS.

SIGNAL TOWER. (6,714 feet). Star cast. An excellent railroad drama. Book it—you can't go wrong on it. Excellent tone, appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennslyvania.

PIONEER TRAILS. All star cast. Advertised heavy and stood them up. Pioneer Trails hold record this year for box office receipts at my theatre. Pleased everybody and half of them would come back if I'd show it again. Tone, good. Sunday, no, special, yes. 100 per cent appeal. Draw farmers and laboring class, town of about 375. Admission 10-25. Ed. F. Cox, Princess Theatre, (450 seats), Bristol, Colorado.

WILDFIRE. (6,550 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. It's a racing drama, played it on a Saturday and just "got by" fairly well, produced and gowned, it's one of those that won't create any great comment either way, the horse race is good enough, and the cast not bad. Just a picture, and use that treatment when you exploit it. Weather fine. Attendance considering the day no so much. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

Warner Brothers

BEING RESPECTABLE. Had any number of favorable comments on this picture and it went over very well. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

BROADWAY AFTER DARK. (6,300 feet). Star cast. A new kind of picture; not great, but will pass. Print—took out a few splices which, if they had gotten into the projector would have torn or caused a fire. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

FIND YOUR MAN. (7,300 feet). Star, Rin-Tin-Tin. Exhibitors, have you run this one yet? If not, get busy and you will make money if you advertise it strong. But don't pay too much. Print splices rotten. Good tone, appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

KISS ME AGAIN. (6,722 feet). Star, Monte Blue. Just a nice little picture that will please those who come in to see it. Did average business with it. Fair tone and appeal. Possibly for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, city 100,000. Admission 40-50. Guy O. Kinemer, Arcade Theatre (1,151 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

Independents

BROKEN HEARTS OF BROADWAY. (7 reels). Star, Colleen Moore. A good program picture. Had a very good crowd considering the bad weather. Colleen Moore is well liked here and sure brings them out. Tone, fine. No Sunday and no as special. Appeal 90 per cent. Draw general class, town of about 600. Admissions 10-25 and 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

CACTUS CURE. Star, Dick Hatton. A fair western and pleased majority of audience. Horses made hit by their clever acting. Tone, fair. No Sunday or special. Appeal 90 per cent. Draw farmers and laboring class, town of about 375. Admissions 10-25. Ed. F. Cox, Princess Theatre, (450 seats), Bristol, Colorado.

COAST PATROL. Star, Kenneth McDonald. A fairly well acted picture; nothing wonderful: a little action of the part the airplane plays in the coast patrol. Fair tone. Appeal 70 per cent. Wouldn't hurt on Sunday, no as special. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

If you don't see your tips in the columns of your dependable tip department as quick as you think you ought to, boys, bear with me—remember, they have to be typewritten, sorted into proper alphabetical and company groups, set on a linotype, sent back from the press—all that before I can clip them into the spot where they help a host of readers.

Don't stop sending. It's getting near the mail-rush season and your envelopes may come through slowly.

KEEP THE TIPS COMING!

CYCLONE BUDDY. (Artclass). Star, Buddy Roosevelt. Very cyclonic; all action from beginning to end; no semblance of love till the last minute, then it is over. A good Saturday night picture. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

LIMITED MAIL. (7,144 feet). The best railroad story to date. Pleased better than average crowd. Tone fine, good appeal. Sunday, yes, special, no. Draw general class, town about five thousand. Admission 15-30. C. A. Anderson, Liberty Theatre (600 seats), Kalispell, Montana.

MIDNIGHT EXPRESS. Star cast. It is a real good thrill picture. It did excellent for us at the box office. Tone, good, Sunday, no. Almost special. Very good appeal. Draw town and rural, town about 1,000. Admissions 10-25, specials 15-30 and 25-50. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

RECKLESS COURAGE. (Artclass). Star, Buddy Roosevelt. This was a good picture; pleased all the western fans who saw it. The trouble was, we could not get them in to look at it; this star does not draw for me. Yes as to tone and appeal. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

RENEGADE HOLMES M. D. (State Right). star, Ben Wilson. Poison. I get kicks on every Ben Wilson and this one was the worst. Picture dreary and title a joke. A. M. Rosenbloom, Home Theatre, Rochester, Pennsylvania.

SILENT PAL. (Lumas). (6,000 feet). Star, Thunder (dog). A good dog picture. What this dog needs is real actors, not "hams," as he is a smart one. Price right and print good. Paper good. Tone O. K. Good appeal. No for Sunday or special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

TROUBLE BUSTER. (State Rights). Star, Leo Maloney. This is a whole lot better than some this star has been putting out lately; lots of pep and suspense. Yes as to tone and appeal. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

$1 for Your Time

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete, in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Pitcure World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts after the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

Important—Film Executives!

This Quick Reference Picture Chart is your servant in an effort of Moving Picture World to give Exhibitors ALL THE FACTS about the pictures they are going to run.

You can do a heap to make this service more complete!

Jazz up the fellow who takes care of this sort of information in your organization!

Say to him—or to her if that's the way it stands—"Send Moving Picture World's QUICK REFERENCE PICTURE CHART all the dope—ALL THE DOPE, understand!—on the pictures." Emphasize this by adding, "Be sure to notify them of change in titles, of change in footage on pictures. Send the style of story and the star. AND BE SURE YOU SEND IT!"

Do this, won't you? It will help us help you help exhibitors.

The Theatre of To-Day

Equipment—Presentations—Prologues—Music

Edited by Colby Harriman

What Is the Big Issue?

THIS question means nothing unless it has a direct application to something. The production field is filled with issues and counter-issues. There are problems galore, but the universal issue, the one which confronts the producer, the manager-exhibitors everywhere, is, the problem of selling program matter that satisfies. If it satisfies, it has value, and 90 per cent. of that value is entertainment. When we analyze entertainment values we first ascertain what pleases the majority of our patrons. What may get over in one city or in one house, may not "click" in another. Too often we find managers who try to repeat former successes and find that they are up against a stone wall of audience opposition, when the same thing is attempted. It is true that there are certain personalities, certain types of acts, certain tricks of the trade which have a universal appeal, especially to American audiences, but in the presentation production business it depends greatly and almost in its entirety upon the particular locale. To overcome this it is necessary to make a keen analysis, even take an entertainment census of the audiences. To give the people what they want insures a box office benefit. To give programs of a similar vein week in and week out is bound to have a reaction, which is one of depression rather than an increase in business. Jazz becomes monotonous even to the jazz musician; opera must be given sparingly, but when presented it should be in keeping with the high standard of the best in opera. To secure entertainment values in your presentations it requires a thoughtful preparation. Anything worth while cannot be accomplished in a moment or a week; it requires a definite program, and when the routine has been decided upon stick to it and develop it consistently. This will result in a better type of presentations, which will team with entertainment value.

Mangan Presentations in Milwaukee

HOWARD WAUGH, managing director of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., has inaugurated a presentation program and arrangements have been made with Cooney Brothers, managers of the Capitol Theatre, Chicago, to present all super-productions offered at that theatre in the Milwaukee house. The presentation productions produced by Francis A. Mangan have created much comment and have aided business at the Chicago Theatre. It is believed that the success will be repeated at the Alhambra. A production expert will be sent from the Capitol with each unit to properly stage it.

New Air Brush for Drapery Work

A NEW air brush is on the market which can be used for costume and drapery work and also for the dyeing of slippers and props. It is an adaptable tankless air compressor, smaller than a typewriter and weighs about 20 pounds. It is worked by an electric motor which is contained in the apparatus and is noiseless and non-vibrating. It delivers an even flow of air and is adaptable for any kind of air brush or spray. The device may be operated from a light socket and completely does away with the former necessary bulky and explosive tanks.

Shauer Turns Composer

"LOVELY LADY TO LOVE," a beautiful new ballad used as the theme for Hugo Riesenfeld's stage presentation at the Rivoli this week, was Mel Shauer, General Manager of the Ad Sales Department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Shauer, who is an accomplished musician, wrote the lyrics as well as the melody and assisted Hugo Riesenfeld in arranging the syncopated, symphonic score for the stage presentation.

F. P.-B. and K. Presentation Policy

A CURRENT report relative to the presentation policy of the new Famous Players-Balaban and Katz Circuit lays particular emphasis on the fact that leading vaudeville acts and well known artists will form the nucleus of all the features used on the bills. This will not be in the nature of an experiment as both of the original theatre systems prior to the merger successfully introduced artists with names and struck a responsive note at the box-office. Elaborate plans are being made by the new organization to offer the most consistent routine of sure-fire presentations ever introduced.

Rapee with Rothafel

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that Erno Rapee, formerly conductor of the Capitol Theatre Orchestra, New York City, will act in a similar capacity at the new Roxy Theatre when it is opened. Mr. Rapee has just returned from Berlin, where he successfully inaugurated the de luxe program idea in the new UFA theatres. Mr. Rapee is well known in motion picture musical circles and his popularity at the Fox, Philadelphia, plus his recent European success, will mark his New York home coming as an auspicious occasion.

Turin Now on Broadway

THE success which accompanied Joseph Turin, tenor, on the Fabian Circuit in New Jersey has been duplicated at the Warners Theatre, New York City. Mr. Turin has been booked for an indefinite period by Herman Heller, musical director for Warner Brothers, and is winning the plaudits of every audience.

"Romance and the Ages"

EPISODE THREE

A Four-Part Offering, Which Should Appeal Because of Its Novelty—Blending of Music, Colors and Lighting Will Aid in Presenting a Popular Prologue

Moving Picture World Presentations—Devised By Colby Harriman

THE third episode of the presentation serial, "Romance and the Ages," introduces us to the period when Knights and Ladyes Faire were all the rage. This period seems to be the logical one to select as a connecting link between the second episide and the next and final subject of this serial.

Producers and musical directors will experience no difficulty in securing suitable songs or dance numbers as the musical library teems with compositions typical and appropriate.

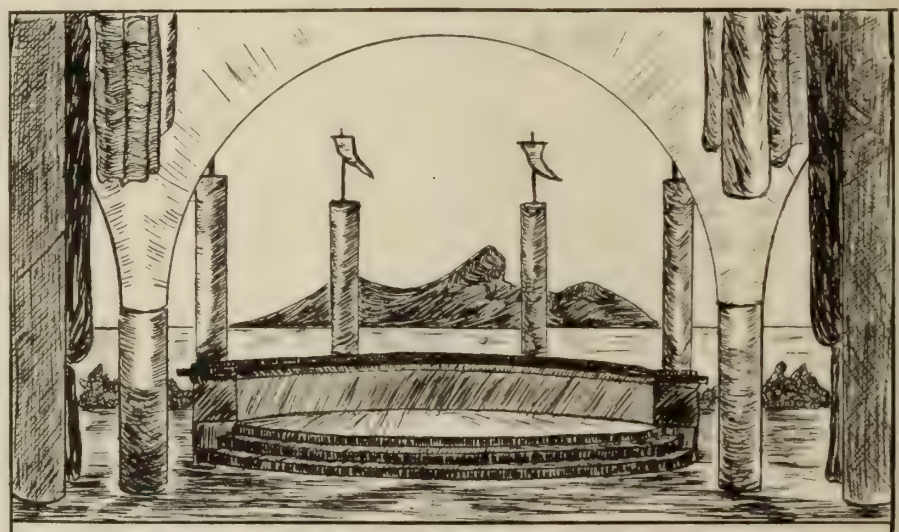
The pantomime story which carries on, concerns itself with a Knight who is favored of the King. On the day of the favorite's departure for the wars, a gala party is given in his honor by the court. Ladies and Knights, costumed in the colorful, flowing garb of the medieval period open the action with a stately dance. The "fairest in the realm," the woman, is brought in and feted by the merrymakers. She meets the Knight, a love song ensues, as they are seen on the parapet at center. A distant trumpet summons the Knight to be on his way. Martial music of drums and trumpets is heard. The revellers join in the number speeding the warriors on their way.

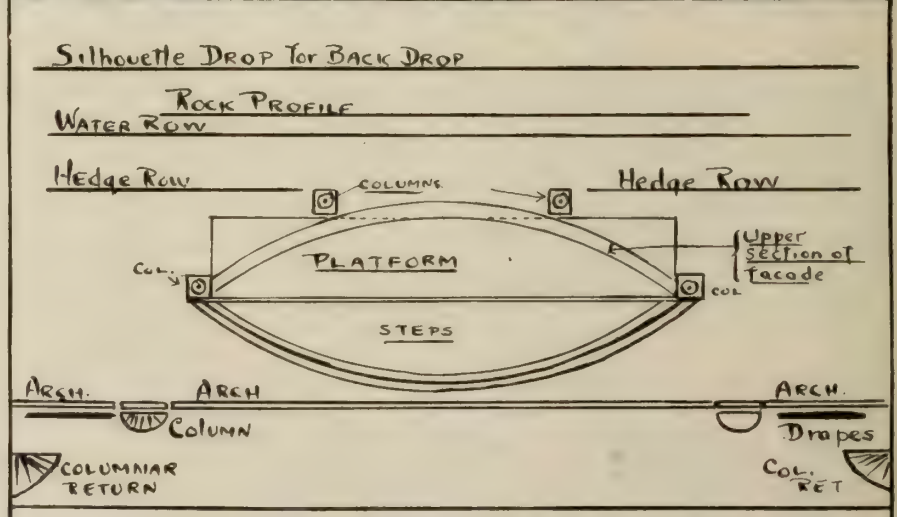
The set is a composite one, employing units of the last two episodes. The basic portion, or foreground of the set, remains the same. If the last two issues of the Moving Picture World will be consulted, it will be easy to note how this set as illustrated becomes a part of the other sets.

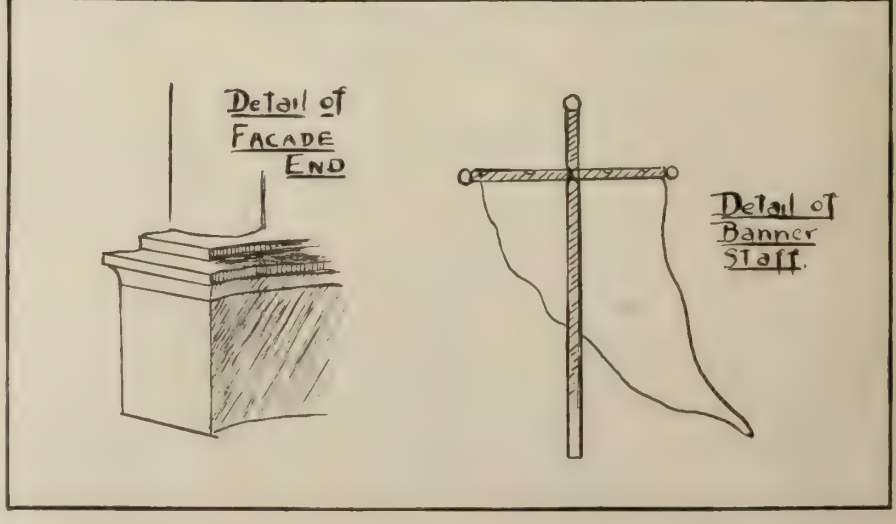
The arched foreground including the columnar returns remains the same. The platform with the circular steps remains at center. The facade should be removed. The upper section taken from the columns comprising the facade can be placed on the back part of the platform and used to form the wall of the parapet. Four of the columns can be used to dress the parapet wall and also serve as a base upon which the banner standards are mounted. A hedge row is used right and left back of the platform to mask the opening between the small arches. A new section is introduced with this episode—a water row. The water row can be a flat piece, painted, and set on an angle to lend a better water effect treatment. Back of the water row, the rock profile should be set to be visible and give the effect of a distant mountain across the water—an island, for instance. The silhouette drop can be used again as the back drop.

Very colorful drapes should be hung in front of the arched foreground, the sides caught up and draped in the small arch ways. Color is the keynote of the set. The fabrics, the costumes, the lighting treatment, even the action, must speak of a vividness, of an intensity, which will be in marked contrast to the sombre and drab base of the set, the dull stones, the gray-blue sea, the bleak mountains in the background.

The lighting treatment should emphasize a colorful foreground and vividly toned background.







MOSQUE THEATRE
Newark, N. J.

(Week Nov. 10th)
Featured Picture: "The Phantom of the Opera"

Overture feature, Irvin Talbot introduces a special orchestral feature using selections from "Faust" (Gounod) followed by Trio Finale—The Prison Scene from "Faust." Marguerite White, soprano, as "Marguerite"; Tommasini, tenor, as "Faust"; Robert Johns, baritone, as "Mephistopheles." The cameo setting is introduced for the Trio number. A tab drop painted to represent a prison interior in two with black drapes to mask and carry off. A cut arch drop is hung at the curtain line. The customary bed of straw, prison block and accompanying properties are used to dress. Red and canary predominate in the lighting treatment.

JOHN DOVE

This exceptionally clever skater and dancer is introduced as a Cossack Classic of Speed and Motion. He works in one making his introduction before a drop with a silver mettaline center masked on either side with blue silk curtains upon which a design is painted in gold. Dressed in a colorful Russian costume he executes several unusual acrobatic stunts finishing with a Russian dance done on roller skates.

BALLET d'OPERA

A ballet arrangement used as a prelude to the picture. Set consists of a nest of drapes occupying full stage. A staircase covered with red plush is placed up center with palm banks to dress at right and left. The lighting treatment graduates from a purplish blue through grades of green, purple, orange, rose, amber and canary. The ballet of ten wore pink ballet costumes with Mlle. Daganova clad in a white rhinestone ballet costume. At the finale of the number Harry Kenneth appears dressed in the masquerade costume of the Phantom. The girls scream and in confused formations exit as the Phantom comes to the center of the stairway. There is a blackout, red spots highlight the character as the gauze curtains close and the main title of the picture is flashed on.

At finale of scene the fence (working on hinges) swings down and across stage in gate form, meeting across last, the girls in the number, standing on foot platform along fence, swing down with gate. The action of the prolog, is one of festive singing and dancing, to the Russian melodies.

From dark house lights the close in curtains slowly part revealing a haze of Steel Blue from top, foots and sides—high lighted with bunch lights, on dimmers, R. & L. Better Projection

This Department was Founded in 1910 by its Present Editor,

F. H. Richardson

Better Projection Pays

Got His Goat

Roy Saxon, Chief Projectionist for the Lufkin Amusement Company, Lufkin, Texas, says:

Dear Friend Richardson:—On August 11 I received the August 15 issue (The Moving Picture World is up to date, you see.—Ed.) exchanged fifteen cents for a smoke roll, and proped my feet up on a chair with intention of enjoying our department. The article "Got A Razzing" was the first thing that met my eye, and when I got through reading it you might have thought me the inventor of profanity had you heard me. I think that if pure unadulterated swearing endangers a man's soul then I was then and there in danger, and my old Dad was a Methodist minister too.

Honest, though, Richardson, it gets a man's goat to think there are dumbbells in the profession so stupid that they will believe such tommyrot as the Chicago genius seems to have sprung on that brilliant Akron bunch. Surely not all the men of Akron are in that class. If they are, then I most sincerely hope they stay in Akron.

At that, I'll bet there isn't a man jack of them all, either in Chicago or Akron, who has not, one time or another, directly or indirectly, benefited by and through your work. Also it is not at all improbable that, one time or another, they have each and every one of them made more or less foolish blunders in their work, and have had to ask about things they did not know about.

How Far and Who Won?

And anyhow if you did "run a spot" as Chicago said, I'd like to know how far you ran it, and did you finally catch it? I project light with a spotlamp sometimes, and —well, enough of such foolishness, except to say that if I were dense enough to believe such twaddle as the Chicago yarn I would at least keep that fact to myself, and not expose my IGNORANCE!

When I had finished Brother Hile's letter I removed my brand new fifteen center to light it, but found I'd chewed it all to pieces in my wrath, so I heaved it overboard, turned a page of the Department, read the article under the caption "Horray," and soon a smile replaced the frown. I would have given a great deal (what to me is a great deal, for I have little) to have been with Gray and Griffith and yourself.

I also noticed the letter asking information as to where to go to study projection, and your answer that it can't be done. You are right, but if our only desire is to be a machine operator—well, the classified ad I hand you is at least amusing.

We would have been delighted to have had you with us, Brother Saxon. At least I would have been and I am sure I speak for Gray and Griffith too, for we all like progressive men.

The ad spoken of appeared in the classified section. The man speaks of being a graduate of a certain "Movie Operator's School." Yep, that's just about what all those "schools" really are—just "Operator's" schools. They teach one to "Operate a machine," after a fashion, and that's ALL they do teach, except learn-em-by-heart answers to a lot of examination questions, usually without any real understanding of what any of the answers mean.

As to the other matter, comment is hardly worth while. Akron is no doubt like other cities.

To Join the Union

Odes Glass, Slagle, Louisiana, says:

Will you kindly tell me what it is necessary that an operator know to join the union. How much experience does he have to have and with what kinds of projectors? What does it cost to join the union?

It all depends on what sort of an operator's union you have in mind, friend Glass. If you mean the telegraph operator's union, or the operators on button holes union, or the straw hat operator's union, or the union of silk underwear operators, or any one of same twenty different sorts of operator's unions, I am unable to give you the desired information.

Presumably, however, you mean to ask about the union of motion picture projectionists, the official name of which is the "Moving Picture Machine Operator's" union. But even so your questions cannot be answered, because in every case the thing you have asked varies more or less widely in different places.

In some large cities, for instance, the initiation fee runs into the hundreds of dollars. In some smaller places it also is well over a hundred dollars, while in other places it is relatively low. What the fee of the union which has charge of the territory you are in may be I don't know. Probably, it is relatively low.

What you would have to know in order to gain admission, also varies from a lot to just about nothing at all—dependent upon the views of the local and the ability of its examining board. The local union has absolute control of such matters. The rule is that you must work six months in the territory of a local before you can join. Some locals, however, have absolute control over their territory, and absolutely prohibit any one from working who is not a member of the union, so—well, figure it out for yourself, if you can.

I have printed this information many times, and probably will print it many times again, since new men are continually "joining the ranks," and want to know that particular thing. The only thing to do is find out just what union controls the territory you work in, or wish to work in, and then find out, as nearly as may be, just what is what from the officers thereof. Any city, town or village is within the official jurisdiction of the local of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada it lies closest to in the matter of distance. For instance. If Jimtown is ten miles from Sober City and twelve miles from Oxville, and there is a union of the I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. of the U. S. & C. in both places, then a man working in Jimtown would be eligible to the union in Sober City, BUT that union might or might not admit him, no matter whether he be competent or not and —there you are! I am NOT seeking to discourage you. I am simply giving you the cold FACTS as they are.

DUPLEX MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRIES, Inc.
Dept. W LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.

Amusing—or Pitiful?

From a certain capital city in the middle west comes this letter:

Dear Mr. Richardson:—I am a beginner in the field of projection and want to learn the particulars of the Bluebook School which is in the Moving Picture World. Have been interested in the projection of motion pictures for the past two and one half years. Have read all the books I could get hold of on the subject, including your Third Edition Handbook.

About four months ago I started learning in the booth of the ——— Theatre. Eight weeks later the operator was fired, and I started operating alone for the first time. I am only seventeen years of age, and only know the outsides of operating, so I suppose I am lucky that the projectors (Simplex) have just been overhauled, and are in good condition. I would like to know the insides of projection, so please let me know about the School.

Now what do you know about that! This man thinks himself "lucky," and perhaps he is too, but how lucky is the motion picture industry to have exhibitors (?) so dumb that they will place a greenhorn who has had just EIGHT WEEKS' experience in full charge of the ONE THING THEIR THEATRE HAS TO SELL TO THE PUBLIC.

True, this man at least has one saving grace. He realizes that after eight weeks of actual work and two and a half years of study he still has things to learn. I have met more than one who, after two months' work in a projection room, and NO STUDY AT ALL, just plain knew every dad burned thing there was to know about motion picture projection and a few things besides. That particular animal used to be found something very much in excess of semi-frequently.

I have written this man—this "operator" in a "booth"—and advised him to study hard. I am not in the least blaming him for "jumping in." He has no sort of realization of the wrong he does to the industry by tackling such a job as projection without adequate knowledge and practical experience. It is the exhibitor who is to blame, though I should perhaps not dignify the man who pulls such a silly stunt as that.

Rotten Work

The heading seems crude, but what called it forth is more than crude.

A man who signs himself a "Projectionist and a Booster for the Bluebook School," but who hides even his location, sends in some samples of film butchery in the form of "change-over" signals that I think I have not seen quite equaled up to this time, and I've seen some pretty awful examples too.

In my opinion the man who did this ought to be just plain—um, well I'll leave it to all decent men who respect the motion picture industry, from which they get their daily bread, and who respect their profession, to select the punishment which at least partly fits a CRIME such as this. As a limit, I started to say horsewhipped.

From Michigan

C. H. Watkins, Projectionist Delft Theatre, Escanaba, Michigan, orders a Bluebook sent to F. Norman, Strand Theatre, Escanaba, Michigan, and says:

Dear Friend Richardson:—As to the cue sheet, there is only one best way, and that is to make your own. Have been following the various suggestions made in your department. There have been some very good ones, but that is all I can say for them. When it comes to putting them into use—well, I think they would be found to be impracticable.

For instance, the suggestion that a cue sheet be attached to each reel band is all right, provided that when the old worn-out band is replaced, the exchange will re-write the cue for that reel on the new band.

But what are we to do with the SAP who is too lazy to even scrape off the emulsion when he makes a splice, and who instead of making a one-hole splice, makes a two or three hole one, or whatever he happens to cut off. And believe me this does NOT always happen in the small town either, but in some real cute little cities of five to eight thousand.

Big Town Stuff

I chanced to be in a very nice projection room out in Kansas last winter. It was equipped with two Powers projectors. The machine OPERATOR was splicing a new print, and he did NOT remove the emulsion. When I asked why he did not do so, his reply was to the effect that it would hang together till he got through with it. Let the next fellow fix it!

This was in a town of 3,500 to 4,000, and the machine operator received $22.50 per week, I was told. What use for cues on the reel band if such DUBS as that handle the prints and cut where it pleases them in doubling up?

I have been projecting motion pictures since 1912 and have worked in many states and towns. There never seems to be any trouble finding DUBS in projection rooms.

Projectionist F. Norman, of the Strand Theatre, this city, and myself, had a nice visit with Walter Munn, Projectionist at the Braumart Theatre, Iron Mountain, Michigan, a short while ago. He certainly has some considerable equipment. It would make some of the city chaps sit up and take notice to see it and his room.

Yes, Brother Watkins, there are objections to every pass-it-along cue sheet scheme presented to date, but just the same I think the objections would probably smooth themselves out a lot if one or two of them—the one you named is one—were faithfully tried.

As to dubs—sure. And that will be the situation so long as exhibitors place subserviency and cheapness ahead of real ability and expert knowledge, and so long as the men, or a large percentage of them at least, continue to have little respect for their job, and sneer when some one even suggests that projection is in the nature of a profession.

Might I suggest to Brother Munn of Iron City, that he forward a photograph and description of his layout to this department for publication?

Bluebook School

Question No. 412—Practical question by the editor, re-submitted in better form: Assuming the light sent forward by the projection lens to be the same in both instances, if your ten foot wide, undistorted picture space on the screen has an illumination equal to two (2) lumins per unit area, what will the illumination be, screen surfaces identical, if the picture size be increased to sixteen (16) feet wide?

Question No. 413—Tell us exactly what the effect of the neutral fuse blowing will be when the load is balanced and when it is unbalanced, and why it is thus.

Question No. 414—Suppose a wire of good size which was attached to a waterpipe at one end came into contact with the neutral of your Edison 3-wire system just ahead of (on theatre side) of the main theatre fuse block. What would happen? Explain.

Question No. 415—You connect a 2-wire circuit to each side of a 3-wire circuit, and to each circuit so connected you connect one 60 watt incandescent lamp. Explain the resultant electrical action. How much current will flow in the neutral?

Question No. 416—If you connect a ten ampere motor to one side of a 3-wire circuit, and incandescent lamps using seven amperes to the other side, tell us what amount of current the neutral will carry, and why it is that amount.

As to License Laws

Comes a hurry-up request that I draft a license law, or supply information from which one may be drafted. This is from a local in the south. They offer to pay me if I will do it.

This sort of request has reached me several times, from various localities. For the benefit of all concerned, permit me to say that I cannot spare either time or energy to do this sort of work, much as I would like to. Those desiring to draft license laws will find ALL the data necessary to the drafting of such laws in the Bluebook, beginning on page 883. Given that data, and an attorney who knows how to draft ordinances, the task is merely one of gettting the thing into legal phraseology, and covering as much as you think the law makers will stand for, but particularly so drafting the ordinance, or law, that something resembling a competent examining board will be provided for, and specifying that the examination shall cover the optics as well as other phases of projection.

Bluebook School Answers 383 to 386

Question No. 383—Practical question submitted by Messrs. Thoreau and Clark, Vancouver, British Columbia. "If you take charge of a projection room and find that one of the projectors gives a better screen illumination than the other, though the light sources are the same, how would you proceed to find the reason or reasons for the difference, assuming that tests show no shorts or grounds, and that you have no lens tables or charts?"

W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; Thomas McDade, Star Theatre, Pawtucket, Rhode Island; S. F. Cooley, Manchester, New Hampshire; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; Glenn G. Wallace, Muskegon, Michigan; Harry Dobson, Toronto. Ontario and G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois, all made answers which were "fair to middlin'," but I think Doe put it into best form. He says:

First, I would make sure that all lenses in both optical trains were clean, and that neither optical train contained discolored glass at any point, and that our collector lens was not pitted and the other clear. Next, I would examine my light sources, and see if the craters in both (I am assuming an arc light source) have the same horizontal diameter, and are at the same angle to the face of the collector lens—35 degrees, or 55 degrees angle to optical axis of the system. Next I would see if both light sources were the same distance from face of collector lens. Next I would see if the collector and converging lenses in both projectors were spaced the same distance apart, viz. 1/16 of an inch, approximately, and that the distance Y—distance face of converging lens to aperture—is the same for both projectors, and that the "spots" were both of equal diameter; also if one projector has slide carrier and the other none.

I would then see if the free diameters of both projection lenses and their working distance were the same. Next I would see if both rotating shutters have the same number of blades and if the blades of each of them have the same aggregate width. Last of all I would see if both shutters were located at the aerial image, or at the same distance therefrom.

So much for optics: The question says "light sources the same," which might be read to mean merely that they are both arcs or both Mazda, etc., or that each gives off the same number of lumins of light. I don't think you play quite fair with us there, Brother Richardson. You ought to watch those points more closely, and not permit questions to be sprung on us which may very easily be read to mean two very different things. (There, darn ye, accept that bang on the bean from a Chicago man and look pleasant!) ('Lright, dagnab y'! I'll accept a slam on the beezer at any time when it is deserved, and the fact that it comes from the Windy City makes me no never minds. But it is not so easy as you may think to watch these things closely enough to aways stop 'em. That would require a close study of some questions from all possible angles, and I have to study them amply and sufficiently when answer time comes.—Editor).

On the electrical side there are many things which might affect results, such as difference in arc amperage. Difference in light when current is taken from two different dynamos—not likely to be the case, but still possible—burned wires, poor contacts, too small wiring on one projector etc, etc., which really comes under the head of difference in amperage at arc stated above. Different makes of carbon in the projector might also set up such an effect, though such a difference would be unlikely.

I think that is a very complete answer. Dobson, Wallace, Cooley and Budge also did very well indeed. In fact all those named did "not so bad."

Question No. 384—What is meant by "boosting a fuse," and is it dangerous?

Every one named, plus J. C. Anderson, Mexico City, Missouri, agree that fuse boosting is dangerous, and that it consists, in practice, of eliminating the fuse as a protective device. Anderson says:

Boosting a fuse consists of bridging across its terminals, or contacts with current carrying material other than its fuse wire, so that current will flow through the said material, either entirely, if the fuse conductor itself be blown, or in addition to what the fuse conductor carries if the fuse be not blown.

The practical effect is to increase the carrying capacity of the fuse, and thus to a greater or less extent defeat the purpose of the fuse, and destroy the protection it is presumed to afford to the wires and appliances attached to the circuit.

Fuse boosting is always dangerous, and may be very dangerous, since it may be so done that the circuit has, in effect, no protection at all, and the wires might, under some conditions, become red hot, utterly destroying all insulation and setting fire to the building. In any event it may well be that, under such a condition, a sudden rise in voltage would burn out all incandescent lamps and motors.

Which is an excellent answer, in the 'umble opinion of this editor. I trust brother Anderson will continue with us, but up to now he only has answers to the last end of this series.

Hanover replies briefly and to the point, thus:

Fuse boosting consists in joining the terminals or contacts of a fuse with some electrical conductor other than the one it is presumed to have. This may be done in many ways. Dropping a copper cent into a plug fuse so that it will make contact with both the fuse plug center and the brass screw lining of the receptacle, and screwing the plug down on it, is most common with that type of fuse. Slipping a copper wire into the contacts beside the fuse, or drilling a hole through the fuse and driving an iron nail or short length of heavy copper wire is most common with cartridge fuses. Open fuses, such as link fuses, are seldom "boosted," as any device used for that purpose is immediately apparent.

On page 114 of the Bluebook you have dealt with the matter adequately and well. I would earnestly commend the matter on that page which is in black face type to the perusal of every projectionist.

Question No. 385—Is it practical to refill old fuses?

Every one agrees that it is not, except in the case of fuses made to be refilled. Messrs Thoreau and Clark remark:

No! Throw them in the trash can, so you will not mistake them for good fuses sometime when every second counts.

Question No. 386—Why is it unnecessary to fuse projector circuits closely? How would you determine the necessary size of fuses for projector arc circuit (ordinary arc) when using motor generator, rotary converter, or mercury arc rectifier?

Hanover replies thus:

Where the arc lamp is hand fed there is a very considerable variation in arc voltage, hence in total resistance, hence in amperage at the arc; also when the arc is struck the resistance of the arc is, for an instant, entirely eliminated, which, especially with fresh carbons, causes a comparatively heavy rush of current.

Projector arc lamps and their connections are always amply able to stand a very heavy overload for a short time, and, regardless of whither a rheostat or motor generator be used, it is good practice to fuse the projector arc circuit 25 per cent. above maximum amperage used, provided this does not exceed twenty five per cent. over and above the capacity of the motor generator. I am not well acquainted with all the peculiarities of the mercury arc rectifier, but from what I do know, I think it would not be well to fuse much in excess of the rated capacity of the rectifier tube.

The reason why it is well to fuse at the maximum of safety is that when a fuse blows on a projection circuit things happen to the "show," and it is very bad indeed to have the screen go dark, even for an instant. What I have said concerning circuits handled by a motor generator applies equally to circuits supplied by a rotary converter.

Good Work

Through the courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn the editor and daughter attended a performance of "The Merry Widow," at the Embassy Theatre, which is a late addition to Broadway picture palaces.

"Palaces" don't seem to quite fit here, however. The Embassy rather is a theatre gem. It seats only 598 people, but those are seated in what might well serve as the throne room of a European palace.

And who do you suppose is its Managing Director, or Directoress? Why none other than Gloria Gould. Miss Gould sits upon the throne, but Mr. Crookshank is the theatre manager, and if what I saw may be taken as evidence, an able one he is, too.

Projection is in charge of Messrs. Herman Kelban and Louis Weinberger and when I say the editorial mind was not once distracted from the story of the play by any fault in its projection, that is all there is to say, so far as the editor be concerned. Congratulations, Messrs. Weinberger and Kelban. If your work is constantly in keeping with the beauty of its surroundings—well, you are both real motion picture projectionists, which is as high commendation as it is possible to give.

The projection room is, rather necessarily, I think, a bit difficult of access, but once in it it is, considering the enormous value of space, excellent.

Three Simplex projectors and the usual modern projection accessories comprise the "plant." There was a spot but it was taken out. Seems to me one of the Brinkert projectors might be used with excellent effect, but I am not sure as to that. And, by the way, believe me that "Merry Widow" is a real show from start to finish.

I Don't Know

John Warthy and Henry Miner, who operate the Star Theatre, or at least sign themselves "Operators Star Theatre," ask:

Dear Mr. Richardson:—In the Bluebook, formula No. 5, page 75, concerning voltage drop, reads $\frac{2100 \times 1 \times L}{E \times P}$ = area of cross section in circular mils. Where does the 2100 come from? Also at top of page 74 there is a formula in which a No. 5 wire is supposed to have a cross section of 33,088 C. M., but in the formula 31,000 C M is used. Is this right?

As to the first named formula, I don't know. It was taken from a standard high grade text book on electrical action, and was checked up and approved by engineers of both the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Company, so I think it certainly must be correct.

The other seems to be purely a blunder, either by the typist or the typesetter, which same got past me in proofreading. The cross section of a No. 5 wire is as per table 1, page 70, 33,100 c. b. and this is the figure which should appear in both the line above the formula and in the formula itself. Several have spoken of this matter before. It will be corrected in the next printing.

I shall again submit the No. 5 formula to competent electrical engineers for an opinion. I am obliged to you gentlemen for having directed my attention to the matter.

Your Equipment

Service for You—Theatre Owner—Builder—Studio, Laboratory, Exchange Executive—From Your Angle

Edited by A. Van Buren Powell

Give Your Equipment the Spotlight

DAVE SEYMOUR, Managing Director of Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York, whacked his typewriter to mighty good purpose when he wrote this:

"Business not such-a-much, and in consequence I am after my patrons with all the 'lure' I can possibly stick in my copy.

"When all is considered, think I have been doing my share (of business) for I hear rather gruesome reports in some localities."

Dave knows the game and he knows the times.

Used to be easy to run a show—stick a picture machine up in some odd corner, dust off some chairs and line 'em up, hang out a sign "Show now going on" and sit tight.

But not these days!

There's no use kidding ourselves.

Does Pop grab the old Fedora, yank Ma's hand through his crooked arm—big sister trailing with the youngest and the twins—and hike down to your theatre, not caring where they go or what they see?

You answered. He does—not!

He and his family shops for entertainment.

All right. What do you do when YOU go shopping?

You hunt around to see what's what and finally give your trade to the man who gives you the most—and the best—of what you want—for what you feel you can spend.

"Yeah?"—(you say)—"And I give old Pa Fan a six-reel feature, a news, a comedy—holler my head off about them!—and he walks in and planks down his dough at the opposition house."

Go into reverse and roll back to the start of this—Dave's letter.

"Go after patrons by using ALL THE LURE—"

Then let this sink in—

Down the side of the letterhead on which Dave writes, the letterhead of the theatre, the letterhead that goes out to patrons—Dave has seen fit to have printed:

"Superb Mushroom Ventilation" —

And—

"Vacuum Cleaning Exclusively."

Yes, sirree! Dave, who has been in the show business more years than there are names in a "credit" title, sees fit to call attention to the superb ventilation and the care that he takes to keep the theatre clean.

That's the man who says "all the lure."

Then intimates that he is getting his share of business—considering the times and conditions!

Did you ever quit worrying how you were going to get back the rental on that super-special, long enough to wonder if you were using "ALL the lure?"

You sing out about the star.

You hurrah about the popular book or stage play.

You brag about the scenery, the photography, the lavish settings, the gorgeous costuming, the noted director, the tense drama or thrilling stunts or uproarious laugh-making comedy.

And you're right. You've got to do it.

Brainy men are putting every ounce of gray matter into the making of the picture, into the popularizing of the star, the assembling of the things you crow about.

But—

Maybe they send you a substitute picture!

You've got to find something to beat even that!

You've got to let people know that no matter what the picture is, they're getting it in the most comfortable theatre, with the best light source and projection mechanism obtainable.

You've got to use ALL THE LURE.

How about those projectors, up there in hiding—as far as the audience is concerned!—working away, day after day, no matter whether you feed them a substitute or not?

How about that organ—soothing or sonorous as the mood of the picture demands—backing you up in your yodle that "it will make you laugh! It will make you weep!"

How about that new lighting system you installed last fall—stopping the eternal battle between the house lights and the screen!

Brainy men put every ounce of gray matter behind them—making them not adjuncts, but A PART of your program.

Ever give 'em any of the limelight?

If not, then you're not using "all the lure."

You're selling entertainment—and entertainment these days means a picture, projected perfectly on an eye-restful screen, in a house so light as to prevent the possibilities of "necking" and yet with lights that won't detract from the picture—showing to an audience comfortably seated in a space that is clean, ventilated, warmed (or cooled) to a pleasant temperature—with accompanying music that is equal to the demands made upon it by the tempo and mood of the scene.

And when you sell that sort of entertainment and forget to let the people know about those day-after-day standbys that make the picture possible—you're losing that old lady who doesn't know about the good music, that stout gentleman who isn't wise to the comfortable seats, that chap with the weak eyes who "never goes to a picture because the lights hurt my eyes." And others!

When you buy a new projector do you invite the audiences to come early and see what an instrument of precision the modern projector has come to be—or have your projectionist get a little publicity with his projector down in the lobby showing "how" and "why" the heart of the theatre beats?

Does your audience know that you buy new condensers for the quality and amount of light they concentrate—and how many know about quartz condensers? Don't you think they'd be interested? Try—some time.

You know it's a fact that you can create and "make" a star by talking enough about the new star—and if the star has personality and gets good stories, the public stands by and applauds your boosting.

Ever realize that you can apply the same logic to your equipment?

You know there are bread-and-butter stars that drag 'em out, rain or starlight, winter or summer.

You've got that sort of bread-and-butter equipment working for you all the time.

Give it a little of the spotlight.

Use ALL the lure.

W. C. Geer Gives Low-Down on Better-Print Exchange Service

W. C. GEER is the up-and-going manager of the Princess Theatre, Vermont, Illinois. In that capacity he has shot in a heap of reports in the Straight From the Shoulder department.

Now he writes a letter that will do the hearts of the exchange boys good. Those exchanges whose executives see that inspectors use equipment to keep prints in the best condition are worth mentioning. In Mr. Geer's territory they are certainly going to get their due.

"Dear Van," writes Mr. Geer, in the friendly way that helps to get into the real spirit of co-operation, "you no doubt have noticed the absence (in reports) of the 'condition of film' used by me.

"It is so seldom that we get a bad print that it is hardly worth while; but when we do, the exchange is notified by placing a data strip on the reel or reels that have given trouble, telling what the trouble is and where to find it. In this manner we are sure the matter will be given attention and remedied.

"We believe it is as much our duty to tell the world, through The World, when exchanges keep equipment and inspection at top notch and furnish us good prints as it is, in reports, to tell when they do not.

"Following are exchanges that serve us: Fox, St. Louis, George E. McKean, manager; Paramount, Peoria, M. M. Hirsch, manager; Universal, Chicago, LeRoy Alexander, manager; First National, Chicago, R. C. Seery, manager; Film Booking Offices, Chicago, J. J. Sampson, manager; United Artists, Chicago, Clifford Smith, manager; Pathe, Chicago, J. S. Gillick, manager; Warner Brothers, Chicago, Edwin Silverman, manager; Renown and Progress exchanges of Chicago also.

"With very few exceptions the above exchange boys have furnished us good film service, even if it is old when we play it.

"This, I think, will explain why you have seen no bad-print report from us."

Fabian's 14th

Jacob Fabian, well known theatrical magnate, has announced the completion and forthcoming opening of his newest theatre, The Fabian, in Paterson, for some time late in November.

There has been much speculation and no little interest in the disposition of this great Fabian building, in the course of construction, on Church street, near Market, for the past few months. Adjoining the handsome Alexander Hamilton Hotel, and located in one of the city's most valuable spots, its quickening into activity is a matter of some moment in Paterson's civic life.

The theatre will be dedicated to the proper presentation of the finest films of the cinema world. Charles L. Dooley, general-manager of the Fabian interests in Paterson, will be manager-director of the theatre, and in direct charge of its policy.

Number fourteen of a dignified purposeful chain of houses, the Fabian represents an investment of a million and a half dollars. It will have a seating capacity of 4,000, a symphony orchestra, and a Wurlitzer organ, said to be the largest in America.

Busily Building in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD will have new theatres valued at more than $8,000,000 within the next year. Theatres planned or actually under construction include practically every type of house. The estimated costs of the projected theatres are as follows:

Hollywood Theatres, Vine street and La Mirada avenue, $110,000.

Hollywood Theatres, Maplewood and Western avenue, $150,000.

Bard Theatres, $200,000.

Hollywood Box Theatre, Hollywood boulevard and El Centro, $300,000.

Calhoun, Curl, Hansen Theatres, 6025 Hollywood boulevard, $500,000.

Moorish Theatre, Vine street, $600,000.

El Capitan Theatre, Hollywood boulevard, $800,000.

Warner Bros Theatre, Hollywood boulevard, $1,250,000.

Sid Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood boulevard and Orchid avenue, $5,000,000.

Another new theatre will be built by Reginald Barker, the film director, at Highland avenue and Melrose.

A new theatre costing in excess of $3,000,000 will be built at Seventh street and Vermont in the immediate future. When completed the house will seat 2,100 and will be leased by Bill Wyatt, a well known figure in California theatrical circles,

A new theatre to cost $1,000,000 and seating 1,200 persons will be built at Hawthorne and Ballona avenue by W. M. Shumway.

Iverson and Teslow will build a new theatre costing $30,000 and seating 800 persons at Glasswell avenue and Avenue 35.

A new theatre costing $200,000 will be built at Ontario by C. L. Emmons.

Big House Organ

The world's largest house organ has been issued by Lubliner & Trine in the form of a twelve page tabloid newspaper with a circulation of 100,000. It will be known as the "L & T Illustrated News," and will be published once a week.

Within two weeks time the size of the paper will be increased from twelve to sixteen pages and a little later to twenty-four pages.

The paper is devoted entirely to motion pictures. It carries interesting stories of various stars on location, activities at the studios, has a fashion page and a cartoon strip.

The L & T Illustrated News met with instant public approval. It is edited by Louis P. Kramer, J. J. Ross, William Adler, with Roy Willis contributing the cartoon strip.

Brandt Active

Christian W. Brandt, well known architect and theatrical specialist, has been mighty busy of late.

Since completing The Roosevelt, a two thousand seat house, for James N. Robertson Enterprises, a firm which demands the best for its patrons, Mr. Brandt's offices have been busy with a thousand seat house under construction in Albion, Michigan, and plans under way for a thousand house in Detroit.

Roxy Contract Award Marks Start on $8,000,000 House

ROXY, of screen and radio fame, launches "Roxy," the world's largest theatre, when the building contract for the construction of the 6,000 seat house bearing his name was awarded by Walter W. Ahlschlager of Chicago, architect for the Roxy Theatres Corporation, to the Chanin Construction Company, responsible for the building of several new theatres during the past year in New York City, including the Chanin Theatre on 46th Street.

In making this announcement, Roxy also stated that the plans and specifications are ready and the Chanin Construction Company will proceed with the building immediately. From present indications, it is expected that the Roxy Theatres Corporation will throw its doors open to the public some time in October, 1926.

In commenting upon the concrete realization of a life-long ambition to head a theatre of his own, filled with the best in equipment, Roxy had the following statement to make.

"Due to the untiring efforts of Herbert Lubin of Sawyer and Lubin, well-known for their many years of production activities in the film field, the Roxy Theatres is a reality. Convinced that New York City should have the world's greatest motion picture theatre, Mr. Lubin conceived the idea of building the "Roxy," and in rapid succession secured under great difficulties land of proper location and sufficient size to make this project possible, accomplished successfully the necessary financing amounting to the enormous sum of $8,000,000, secured my signature to a long term contract to control the destiny of the world's largest theatre and placed W. E. Atkinson, former vice-president and general manager of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation in the office of vice-president and general manager. I am entirely happy in the knowledge that the Roxy Theatre assures me of a long-awaited opportunity to put into effect innumerable novelties and originalities concerning motion picture presentation, on a plane never before attempted, backed by facilities and equipment commensurate with the enormity of this project. The Roxy Theatre will be the first of the Roxy circuit of de luxe houses to be built in Greater New York."

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. H. C. Stickelmaier held the fifth anniversary of his Madison Theatre, Peoria, Ill., November 11 to 14.

Bettering Things in Grand Gorge

Charles W. Lewis, an exhibitor who realizes the importance of making his I. O. O. F. Hall, in Grand Gorge, New York, the very best amusement enterprise in the vicinity, is closing down for a time in order to put over some mighty useful improvements.

"A word as to our contemplated alterations," writes this live wire exhibitor, "may interest exhibitors. We propose to construct a new floor, raise the building about five feet, increase the seating capacity from about 225 to probably 300 and construct two small stores in front, with an open lobby between.

"We will install another projector, and do other things, incidentally, that will give Grand Gorge a building for shows and dances that will add prestige to the community.

"It is estimated that the cost of this work will be in the neighborhood of $6,000 and while there is no assurance of exceptional financial gain, the I. O. O. F. Lodge, which owns and conducts this hall, feels that it is interested in the welfare of the community and that they are willing to dedicate their work to that end, even if the revenue does not exceed the carrying charges."

And that spirit will bring in the revenue. Equipment and remodeling done in the interest of better community picture conditions will find the community backing it up and showing its appreciation—and that means dollars!

Jack Up Voltage at F. B. O. Studio

Enlargement of the electrical equipment of the F. B. O. Studios from a capacity of 15,000 volts to 30,000 was announced yesterday by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the studios.

The expansion of equipment for the electrical department was directed by Lee Rauch, for several years superintendent of electricity at F. B. O.

In order to place underground the pipes for the new wiring system, it was necessary to dig up a long section of the studio "street." This work, however, has been completed and now everything is ship-shape and F. B. O. has one of the most powerful electrical systems of any West coast studio.

Grauman to Build on Unique Plans

Grauman's Chinese Theatre, which Sid Grauman, internationally famed showman, plans to make the finest palace of entertainment on earth, is certainly based on a novel design.

Grauman startled the amusement universe with his Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood, using an entirely new and distinct motif in architecture and design, which is now being widely copied by less pretentious playhouses.

Now he plans to make a reality of the dream he has had ever since he saw the Egyptian Theatre go over with a bang, by the erection of a bizarre, colorful Oriental amusement palace, to be known as Grauman's Chinese Theatre.

Meyer and Holler, architectural and structural engineers were chosen by Mr. Grauman to build the new Temple of the cinema in the film capital of the world, cost to be $5,000,000—seat capacity about 2,500.

A. Weiss Heads Agfa Corporation

The personnel of the Agfa Raw Film Corporation has undergone a change. J. T. Cosman, former selling agent, is no longer connected with that corporation and Alfred Weiss is now its president and general manager in full charge.

Mr. Weiss has long been identified with important developments in the motion picture industry. He was instrumental in organizing the Triangle Film Corp. When the Goldwyn Pictures Corp. was formed he was called upon to open up its branches and started the selling end of the Goldwyn Pictures Corp. For many years he was identified with the Goldwyn concern as their Vice President and General Manager in charge of sales; he later on sold his interest in the New York and Buffalo exchanges.

He is again actively in the motion picture field, identified with one of the largest manufacturers of raw film, the Agfa (which is the abbreviation for Aktien Gesellschaft fuer Anilinfarben.) The Agfa Raw Film Corporation has been well introduced in this country and under the new management has service that is necessary for good results.

"There Goes the Bride"

A honeymoon with a toothache!

What bridegroom could be romantic and spoony with a swollen jaw and a yelling tooth?

Two crooks, one of them handsome and romantic; a sheriff who is a tough guy; a baby on which a $50,000.00 reward has been offered; a susceptible bride who wants to be petted, and can't see a toothache as an alibi; these are the conspirators who connive to drag from your audiences as much laughter as the law allows.

Hal Roach knows comedy like Ford knows flivvers. He has put into this picture Lucien Littlefield, Martha Sleeper, 'Husky Hanes"—the marvelous baby, Noah Young and others.

THROW AWAY THE DICTIONARY, BOYS!

Blooie goes the dictionary.

Fewer words and more facts is what exhibitors want anyhow.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer salesmen are saving their tonsils.

The pictures do the talking.

We release a new argument every week.

And that's been going on since we gave you Lon Chaney in "The Unholy Three" back in August.

And followed it with the most marvelous line-up of self-selling product ever put on spools.

Norma Shearer in "A Slave of Fashion," "Pretty Ladies," "Sun-Up," "The Mystic" speak for themselves.

From coast to coast you hear "Never The Twain Shall Meet."

"Exchange of Wives," "The Tower of Lies," Ramon Novarro in "The Midshipman," Buster Keaton in "Go West."

They talk in figures.

And now get ready for "The Merry Widow."

It has been talking for itself for three months on Broadway at $2 a talk.

No wonder there are a lot more Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exhibitors today than ever before in history.

And more signing for The Quality Fifty-Two every day.

If you're wondering how long this record-breaking pace can keep up.

Listen.

In the coming weeks we're going to release a line-up of babies that have even our past performance stopped.

The pictures talk for us.

Keeper of Bees tops all attendance records here also broke all records for long run. Never in history of Jackson theatres has any production turned them away four days every performance. Keeper, great audience picture will go down in film history as one of greatest ever produced. Regards.

Keeper of the Bees opened yesterday at the Princess. One of the few great box office attractions. Had to cut program to accommodate crowds who stood in pouring rain clamoring for admission. This is our first telegram in our fourteen years of operation of this nature but Keeper of Bees deserves all the praise we can give it.

G. S. VICK, Manager,
Princess Theatre,
Charlotte, N. Carolina.

Stood them up all day with Gene Stratton Porter's Keeper of the Bees. Had 2,400 house capacity in and hundred foot lobby filled three times during evening. Had to establish extra box office to handle crowd. Everybody tickled to death with picture. Warmest congratulations.

CARSON DANKEN,
American Theatre,
Salt Lake City.

Keeper of the Bees beyond a doubt best box office attraction I have had in long time. Obliged to stop selling tickets at seven o'clock each evening a five day showing. Hundreds turned away at each performance. Must show return engagement. F. B. O. attractions always prove a winner.

SAM CARLTON,
Strand Theatre,
Frankfort, Ind.

Congratulations Keeper of Bees shattered all house records here. Sign up all day against such competition "Pony Express," "California Straight Ahead" and "Marriage Whirl." Weather conditions unfavorable, snow and cold. Patrons commend picture highly. Will add prestige any theatre. Regards.

H. E. REHFIELD,
Royal Theatre,
Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Keeper of Bees opened tonight to capacity. Everyone enthusiastic about it and boy, what an audience picture, what a women's picture it is. Don't let any exhibitor with a sick box office miss this one. Regards.

W. WALLACE,
Orpheum Theatre,
Kansas City.

Just finished engagement Keeper of Bees to phenomenal business. Business built each day could have easily played extended engagement but other attractions interfered. Accept my congratulations on this one. Keep up the good work.

JACK GROSS, Manager,
Wareham Theatre,
Kansas City, Mo.

Keeper of the Bees opened as big as Lloyd's "Freshman." Crowds stood in line all afternoon. From seven p. m. until we stopped selling tickets the sidewalk was blocked at each performance. It's a ready made box office attraction. All you have to do is to let your patrons know you have it and hire more ushers.

J. P. CALLA, Manager,
Strand Theatre,
Canton, Ohio.

Opened with Gene Stratton Porter's Keeper of the Bees. Record business for Monday at Ideal Theatre. Packed house two p. m. until nine thirty, in spite first cold spell of winter. Every one my patrons and new ones that have never been in house before loud in their praise. Warmest congratulations.

FRANCES MARION—Box-Office!

MOVING PICTURE WORLD November 7, 1925

Something That Is Const

Frances Marion—Sales TNT

THE women of this country form a considerable percentage of all picture theatre goers. Sixty per cent would not be far from wrong. To enlist their support—ACTIVE support—is one of the fundamental principles of selling the picture to the public.

In a two-page announcement to our readers last week, Producers Distributing Corporation justly recognized the work of one of the great feminine brains in the country—the brains of Frances Marion. They told HER story in THEIR story on "Simon the Jester," which Frances Marion adapted for them from the novel by William J. Locke—her first for P.D.C.

The term, "scenarist," or "scenario writer," is a little cold. It is not a word that plunges into the imagination and comes up saturated in color.

Producers Distributing Corporation have brought the word up where the sunlight of sales can play it up—sales to the exhibitor of this Metropolitan Pictures production—sales by the exhibitor to his public.

"Adapted by Frances Marion." That line is sales TNT for P.D.C. and for the exhibitor.

Help Them Sell Her

THE exhibitor who has played such Frances Marion adaptations as "Humoresque," "Pollyanna," "Secrets," "Potash and Perlmutter," "The Eternal Flame," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "The Dark Angel," knows that he can put his money on the same horse—to win. It's a "future" bet, but a pretty safe one.

Here's a bet for you, Messrs. Flinn, Harvey, and Giegerich over at P.D.C.:

HELP THE EXHIBITOR TO SELL FRANCES MARION TO HIS PUBLIC.

Give him some of your portable, readable copy so that he can, in turn, tell HIS public that they are seeing a product of the brain that created the adaptations of "Humoresque" and the rest.

The Woman Angle

WOMEN are vitally interested in what other women are doing. They go to pictures to see not only the Novarros, the Valentinos, the Dixes, but the Talmadges, the Pringles, the Philbins. For many reasons. Besides, they cannot find enough "Exhibit A's" of women who do big things in ANY form of creative endeavor.

If Frances Marion could tour this country she would do a big job for you and for Frances Marion.

Failing this, provide the exhibitor who books "Simon the Jester" with copy for his advertising, for press notices, for his advance program, for circular letters to the women of his community, telling them what "adaptation" is all about, who Frances Marion is, what she has done, and what they may expect to see.

Frances Marion is a sales instrument for the exhibitor. Help him to USE it.

P. D. C. Service

YOU may be 'way ahead of us on this idea, gentlemen. We know that you are getting out letters to exhibitors, pointing out to them PARTICULAR ways of pointing public feet toward their box-offices on PARTICULAR P.D.C. pictures. You don't give a college yell on your products in these letters. You plainly and calmly ANALYZE its ticket selling possibilities. This aside from the regular channels of service to the exhibitor. That's something CONSTRUCTIVE.

It is right to recognize Frances Marion as you did. She deserves it. NOW help the exhibitor to use Frances Marion as his BOX OFFICE deserves.

Yes Sir—CONSTRUCTIVE

WE ARE offering these pages as SOMETHING THAT IS CONSTRUCTIVE. We hope that varied elements in this business will find in them something that IS constructive.

The above, on Frances Marion, may be of use to individuals other than Frances Marion and to organizations other than P.D.C.

The whole idea brings up the subject: What is a contract with an exhibitor? When does the contract begin, and when does it end?

A contract does not end when the salesman walks out of a theatre with the dotted line tucked in his pocket, either for the exhibitor or for the salesman, or the organization he represents.

Making Money Makes a Contract

THE contract does not end until both sides have lived up to obligations other than those of credit and finance, and the picture or series of pictures has made MONEY.

When the exhibitor WORKS, and when the picture WORKS—that's when a contract is terminated. When a contract is terminated in that manner a NEW contract is already being written.

'Time spent, by both sides, in arg better be spent in COLD TURKEY THE PICTURE OVER.

RPRISE STAR A FIND FOR THOUSANDS THROUGHOUT THE LAND WILDFIRE -- EVERYWHERE !!

OUT of oblivion and into national prominence in three months is an unheard of procedure. But none can deny that Tom Tyler with little Frankie Darrow and Napoleon, the mutt, have justified the tremendous advance ballyhoo accorded them.

Exhibitors are writing into this office in the manner that screen struck fans usually do, congratulating and fecilitating both this company and Tom Tyler for the uncanny hold which he has taken on the public in those few brief months.

Yesterday we screened "Wyoming Wildcat," Number 2 of the Tom Tyler series, and it is even a better picture than "Let's Go Gallagher," Number 1. If Tom Tyler keeps up this record breaking pace that his initial releases have set, nothing in the whole world can stop him from being in the Gold Bond group.

Lucky F.B.O. has again struck pay dirt!

"'The Eagle' is by far the best and pleasantest thing Valentino has ever done. It is finished, dramatic and continuously entertaining. It was interesting to find at the four o'clock showing Monday a filled theatre, with aisles, foyers, lobby and sidewalks packed. Sunday the theatre was surrounded by throngs, with lines leading a full block away in each direction. These things indicate the tremendous hold this young and much misunderstood Italian had and still has on the public fancy. A few years ago he, too, paid his gallery fee and sat in that same Strand. The
WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

If King Tut Had a News Reel—

KING TUT, the present day Boy Wonder, never did much for home or country except dig himself an EXPENSIVE hole in the ground. True, it was as much the style in those days for a Pharoah to carve himself out a magnificent MONUMENT as it is for the 1925 champion of the Tonawanda Country Club to have a set of PLUS FOURS carved out.

Yet, if it had not been for the picks and shovels swung under the direction of an American archaeologist Tut would STILL be sleeping in OBSCURITY in the Valley of Kings. The PITY of it is that there was no Royal Egyptian News Reel back in those days. A battery of news cameras would not have set the royal bankroll back much, and the WEALTH Tut sunk into the GROUND could have been neatly devoted to the First Near East Relief.

The News Reel would have made the Boy King LIVE across what has been for him two thousand years of OBLIVION. He slept in the Valley by request. But the CAMERA would have picked up the Valley of Kings as if it were swansdown and CARRIED it around the world on the Magic Carpet of Celluloid.

Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News, could have done MORE for King Tut than his entire Royal Council, including the TREASURER.

Last Saturday at the banquet celebrating the FIFTEENTH anniversary of Pathe News, Mr. Cohen showed "Flashes of the Past", three reels of historical HIGHLIGHTS taken from the news service, the major portion of whose life he has directed. Many kind words had been said about the news reel in general and of Pathe News in particular by men in high places. It remained for "Flashes of the Past" to be the best SPOKESMAN of all.

Here was a celluloid pen, dipping itself into all the inks of the RAINBOW, writing a MOVING PICTURE history of mankind! Here were the great figures and the great events moving across LIVING pages in one of the greatest chapters of WORLD history! Twenty-five years from now the historians will fold up their typewriters and silently steal away—to the nearest PICTURE THEATRE classroom. Pathe's "Outline of History" will be more CIRCULATED, more ENLIGHTENING than H. G. Wells!

We understand that "Flashes of the Past" was originally assembled and edited for showing at the Pathe anniversary banquet only. But no sooner had it flashed on the screen there than Pathe knew that this film CHILD of Emanuel Cohen's had grown into a GIANT.

"Flashes of the Past" not only DESERVES general distribution. It DEMANDS it. It is a tonic. It will get under the shell of the hardest MOVIE CRAB in the world. Some one asked a distinguished man of letters—we believe it was Charles Lamb—if he collected rare first editions. Lamb answered, "No. I collect TWENTY-FIRST editions. They are much rarer."

"Flashes of the Past" is at present a rare "FIRST EDITION." We are certain that nothing in EXHIBITOR or PUBLIC acceptance will stop it from running immediately into a RARER twenty-first edition.

Don't tear a leaf from King Tut's book, Mr. Showman. He had the wrong idea on MONUMENTS. Celluloid is better BUILDING material than granite. Tear a leaf from Pathe's book and you will see "Flashes of the Past" rear a REAL monument in your theatre.

How Hettesheimer Brought "Hubby" to the Show

By
Elmer H. Mayer

WHEN Friend Husband is approached by the party of the first part to spend an evening at the movies, he can no longer gracefully refuse by resorting to the stock excuses usually accredited to the proverbial tired business man. At least, not in Cincinnati, as far as the Orpheum Auditorium and Sky Theatre is concerned. One Andrew G. Hettesheimer, who is the managerial head of this house, has attended to that little thing, much to the delight of the fair sex and to the material increase of the box office exchequer.

Like most of the old-timers now before the public, who have achieved success in their chosen field of endeavor, the genial "Andy" felt the urge of the theatre when a mere slip of a boy, his "big moment" coming when, at the age of 12, he was made assistant to James Hennessy, then treasurer of the once-famous Heuck's Opera House. When Hennessey was later appointed manager, Hettesheimer became treasurer and enjoyed the distinction of being one of the youngest incumbents of that important office. He retained this post for an even dozen years.

Then the Pike Opera House sprang into existence and Hettesheimer's name appeared on each treasurer's statement at that theatre. The Pike was a legitimate house, playing only the regular winter season, and Hettesheimer spent his summer "vacations" by acting as treasurer for the Cincinnati Reds, whenever the team played the local diamond. When the Pike Opera was destroyed by fire, Hettesheimer moved to the Walnut Street Theatre, where he was again in his natural element as treasurer, serving in that capacity for a number of years before going to the Americus Theatre (now the Strand, one of the Libson chain of houses), where he was not only treasurer but assistant manager as well. He at the same time looked after the Star (pictures) and the Havlin (pictures and vaudeville), which in those days were under the same executive head.

Meanwhile, in 1909, the Loew interests, wishing to compete with the Keith and other downtown houses, erected an elaborate theatre, store and office building at Walnut Hills, a thriving and fashionable suburb of Cincinnati, and only about fifteen minutes from the downtown business district. The house, the Orpheum, was handsomely equipped and decorated. The stage, which was amply large, was provided with every contrivance and apparatus necessary for the proper presentation of the biggest vaudeville acts, one of the appurtenances being a huge tank occupying the entire width of the stage, and measuring 90 feet from the stage to the gridiron. The lower floor has a seating capacity of 950, the first balcony, 600, and the second balcony, 550, a total of 2,100.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Orpheum played such acts as Annette Kellerman, Harry Lauder, Julian Eltinge and other celebrities of equal prominence, the venture was unsuccessful and the house went into stock. Here Hettesheimer appeared on the scene, again proving his unusual ability as treasurer. However, the stock company, after two years, was compelled to give up the ghost, whereupon the Orpheum became a straight picture house, with none other than "Andy" as manager, at the age of 46, with thirty-four years' experience to his credit in the theatrical field.

When Hettesheimer assumed the managerial reins twelve years ago he began to devise ways and means of improving the house, and it did not take long to prove that what he didn't know about theatres wasn't in the book. First, he noticed that many women attended the evening shows unaccompanied, and upon investigation found that the men preferred in many instances to remain at home to enjoy their evening smoke. During the summer the alibi was that a stroll in the open was preferable to sitting in a hot stuffy picture house.

With Hettesheimer to think is to act. The result was that atop of the theatre building, eight stories above the street level, the Sky Theatre was erected. Here, with 1,000 seats, the same pictures are shown as in the Auditorium, with tickets good at both houses. The Sky Theatre is accessible by means of excellent elevator service. All sides are provided with casement windows, swinging outwardly, thus converting the theatre into a veritable roof garden in summer. Steam heat is provided for winter temperatures. In fact, the Sky Theatre can be made as comfortable in winter as the Auditorium on the ground floor.

Huge palms and other accessories lend an Oriental atmosphere to the place, and at any time during the presentations, men (and women too, if they wish), may indulge in their favorite smoke, with no questions asked.

Equaling the cooling summer breezes of the Sky Theatre, the Auditorium down on the street level undergoes a constant change of pure, washed air. In fact, the perfect ventilation and air-cooling system is one of the many features of the theatre. The latest addition to the Auditorium is a $50,000 organ, just installed, and said to be one of the finest instruments of its kind in Cincinnati.

When the writer interviewed "Andy" recently, he found him seated in a wheel chair on the first balcony looking over a picture. During March of this year Hettesheimer was taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital for a major operation. He recovered but suffered a relapse. Five times his physicians pronounced him out of danger, and as many times were there relapses, during two of which his life hung in the balance. His complete recovery, however, now is assured, although it will probably be some few months before Hettesheimer will be able to navigate by means of his pedal extremities. Meanwhile, he has fitted up a complete bed room and kitchenette in the rooms immediately adjoining his offices on the second floor, where he and Mrs. Hettesheimer are "camping out" until such time as they again occupy their home a few squares distant.

"It's been a tough break," Hettesheimer said, "but I'm glad to be able to be back on the job, and it won't be long until I'll be able to do a good, long foot race. Meanwhile, I am having all the comforts of Atlantic City as far as the wheel chair is concerned, but I'll have to depend on the pictures to supply the other 'atmosphere.'"

Hettesheimer was smiling when the writer said good-bye.

WHAT makes any publication or any commodity FIRST in its field? A Trade Paper is no different from any other commercial product when it comes to testing the PREFERENCE of the buyer.

Given two commodities to be sold in the same field, at the same price, the only basis for the claim—FIRST IN THE FIELD—by EITHER one is the number of people who walk up and PAY for it.

MONEY talks—and speaks most eloquently in the publication field where so much printed matter is distributed FREE. These facts are accepted:—that the publication MOST VALUED and MOST READ is the one that is PAID FOR; that the paper MOST PREFERRED is the one with the highest percentage of YEAR AFTER YEAR SUBSCRIPTION RENEWALS.

The Board of Directors of the Audit Bureau of Circulations is largely composed of advertising men—canny buyers of advertising white space and the best in circulation values. These men long ago BARRED all publications with FREE CIRCULATION from membership in the Bureau. Because free circulation DOESN'T MEAN ANYTHING in the advertising field.

The test which establishes READER PREFERENCE in this field is: TO BE PROVEN HIGHEST IN NET PAID EXHIBITOR CIRCULATION. TO BE PROVEN HIGHEST IN PERCENTAGE OF RENEWALS OF EXPIRING SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Fox "Shoots the Works" on "The Ancient Mariner," Bull's-Eye Hit for Xmas

By Charles Edward Hastings

THE Fox Film Corporation has "shot the works" on "The Ancient Mariner," the Christmas special on the Fox list, and showmen who book this dramatic fantasy, based on the famous poem by Samuel Taylor Coleridge, will find themselves ably supported at every showmanship turn by exceptional exploitation and publicity.

When "The Ancient Mariner" shot the albatross he made literary history. Fox is now "shooting the works" in a way to make film history and a box-office bulls-eye for the exhibitor.

The exploitation highlights of this sweeping campaign follow:

1. Upwards of 30,000 schools and Academies, including prominent educators, have been informed of the screen production of "The Ancient Mariner" in three ways: (a) by means of a special sales letter; (b) a pamphlet detailing the history of the poem and the poet, and the dramatic values of the poem for screen use; (c) by means of an artistic poster designed for display on school bulletin boards.

2. A special sales letter, pamphlet and poster are being sent to a complete list of libraries and literary associations and clubs, in a Christmas tie-up tending to stimulate interest in the great literary classic on which the picture is based.

3. Through the courtesy of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., a half-sheet lithograph, painted by Luis Usabal, and reproduced in seven colors, is being forwarded to societies which have agreed to post them in reading rooms, meeting places, clubs and in other conspicuous places.

4. Essays written by students in elementary, primary, public and parochial and high schools, for newspaper contests, have been started, and are meeting with wide enthusiasm. Arleady 100 newspaper tie-ups have been completed. Substantial cash prizes are being offered for the best essay on "The Ancient Mariner" and its lesson to the world. In addition to the children engaged in the contests, the teachers and parents also are interested.

The art work throughout the fantasy, in "The Ancient Mariner," follows the tone of the Doré illustration, reproduced at the top of the page. Clara Bow has the leading femine role in the modern story. Nigel de Brulier (circle at top), Leslie Fenton (at right), and Earle Williams (circle at bottom) are the principal players. Paul Panzer, after slaying the albatross, and Gladys Brockwell with "Life," in the fantasy, are also shown.

5. More than 100,000 attractive bookmarks will be distributed by the public libraries throughout the country, these bookmarks carrying the message regarding Coleridge's poem as a Christmas attraction for the public.

6. The campaign through advertising in the trade papers is thoroughly in keeping with the magnitude and value of the picture to showmen. No advertising angle has been overlooked by the Fox experts in advertising.

7. The number of exploitation experts in the field, devoting all their time and every effort to this special campaign is sufficient to cover intensively every section of the country. With years of training and experience

Kansas Membership Increased; "Doc" Cook Criticizes Eisner

THE roster of the M. P. T. O. A. Kansas-Missouri was increased by seven as the result of a trip taken by its business manager, C. E. ("Doc") Cook, through the territory. The majority of exhibitors necountered by "Doc" evinced little dissatisfaction over business conditions, although there were possibly a few who refused too optimistic an outlook.

"I probably would have succeeded better," complains "Doc," "had there not been so many football games. All the theatre owners were out to the games."

The remarks made by Adolph M. Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas City, and now manager of the Circle Theatre, regarding the producer-owned theatre question and the "inertness" of the M. P. T. O. A., have gained no small comment along Movie Row. Cook wonders why.

"I can't see Mr. Eisner's stand at all," says he. "In the first place his criticisms are destructive. If he is bent on helping the association, let him tell us some way in which to better it. Constructive criticism is what we want.

"I agree with Mr. Hays that we should talk about what is good in the industry and not about what is bad. We are trying to correct our faults and we welcome suggestions from exhibitors, but we don't take kindly to the knocks when they are meant to be nothing but knocks.

"There is no question, but that the theatre-owner is better within the organization than without. As an individual he means nothing. He is helpless against legislation, powerless against the exchanges. As a member of the M. P. T. O. A. he is a unit and is looked upon as such. His voice carries weight. He has the full strength of the organization behind him. There is where he benefits chiefly. 'In union there is strength.'

"As regards the producer-owned theatre question it is not so acute as many would have us believe. It may become so in time. Then it will be up to the association whether or not these men can be an asset to the association. That is not for me to say."

Newly appointed Controller for the Associated Exhibitors.

SIR JAMES LOUGHEED DIES

One of Canada's statesmen passed away at Ottawa, Ontario, in the person of Sim James Lougheed, leader of the Conservative Party in the Canadian Senate, after a lengthy illness. Sir James, aside from his brilliant political life, was personally interested in the business in Canada, being the owner of the Grand Theatre at Calgary, Alberta, the manager of which is Maynard Joiner. Sir James was also one of the backers of Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd., a company which was formed to encourage the showing of British attractions in Canada. This company collapsed a few years ago and considerable of the assets in Ontario have recently been acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corp. Sir James was buried in Calgary November 10.

Charles A. Bird Passes On; Once Studio Manager for Fox

SIMPLE services marked the funeral of Charles A. Bird, a native of Lockport, N. Y., who died in Hornell last week. The funeral was conducted from the Robertson undertaking room in Hornell and attendance consisted of residents and members of the Elks. None of the stage and screen celebrities with whom he came in contact during his many years in the show business attended, although scores of them sent telegrams and flowers. Among those who sent tributes were Sam Shubert, Jules Murray, Moses Reis, Morris Gest and other New York producers. The acting profession also remembered him, messages and tributes coming from Chauncey Olcott, Buck Jones, Tom Mix, Estelle Taylor, De Wolf Hopper and others.

The will of Mr. Bird offered for probate gave the value of his estate as "in excess of $10,000," but attorneys estimated that it would reach $250,000. Most of it is left to Mrs. Clara Masterman, widow of William G. Masterman, former publisher of the Hornell Tribune and Mrs. Bird's lifelong friend.

Mr. Bird, for many years general manager of the Sam and Lee Shubert theatrical forces, was born in Lockport. Shortly after he left school he took a position in the local post-office, where he continued for some time, during which period he became interested in local theatricals. Later he went to Elmira, where be became manager of a Southern New York and Northern Pennsylvania theatre circuit. Then he went with the Shuberts in New York and later became general manager of Comstock & Gest. He left New York to accept a position as general manager of the Fox West Coast studios, where he remained for several years. He is credited with developing such stars as Tom Mix, Estelle Taylor and Buck Jones. Returning to Hornell for a long vacation, he was stricken ill and has been in sanitariums most of the time since. He was about 70 years old.

PRO-DIS-CO DINNER AND THEATRE PARTY

The Pro-Dis-Co Club composed of the executives, department heads, and employes of Producers Distributing Corporation, will assemble at the Hotel Empire next Tuesday evening, November 24th, for a dinner and theatre party.

Dinner will be served at 7 p. m. Afterward the party will attend the performance of "Kosher Kitty Kelly" at Daly's Theatre.

Who Wants This Fat Plum? Censor Job Worth $7,500

WHO will succeed George H. Cobb of Watertown, N. Y., on the New York State Motion Picture Commission on January 1? With Mr. Cobb's retirement from the commission who will be named as chairman? With the commission made up entirely of Democratic heads, will Governor Alfred E. Smith continue to advocate the abolishment of the commission, as in the past?

These questions are being asked these days in official circles in Albany. While there is no intimation as yet as to who will succeed Mr. Cobb, or who will serve as chairman, or just what Governor Smith will do, it is a well known fact that there will be many a person looking for the $7,500 plum which fell to Mr. Cobb back in 1921 when the motion picture commission was organized and started to function.

It is understood that Mr. Cobb plans to return to Watertown where he will resume his law practice. As chairman of the commission Mr. Cobb has acted fairly and squarely and his friends among the producers as well as exhibitors are legion. Mr. Cobb has long been prominent in Republican circles, having served as state senator as well as lientenant-governor.

M. P. T. O. A. Gives $15,000 Check To Independents, Cancels $25,000

Begins Rehabilitation of the Organization— Music Tax to Be Vigorously Fought— Testimonial Laemmle Dinner

CONCRETE plans evolved at sessions of the Administrative Committee lasting over eight hours this week will be put into immediate execution for the rehabilitating of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America into one of the most powerful membership organizations in the country.

As one of the first planks in the new platform of strength the exhibitor leaders that day, November 18, wrote out and delivered a check of $15,000 to the Independent Motion Picture Association of America. At the same time they cancelled an additional and written obligation of the independent association to the national organization totaling $25,000.

That the I. M. P. A. A. may continue the maintenance of their association and that independence may be furthered is the basis upon which the Administrative Committee, at the request of the Play Date Bureau, took this action. The details are incorporated in the resolution and contract appended to this statement.

The committee, as a token of the appreciation of the national organization for the steadfastness of Carl Laemmle in his pledge of $50,000 for the cause of independence, made in the name of the Universal Film Corporation at Milwaukee, was unanimous in its endorsement of a resolution providing for the tendering of a testimonial dinner to Mr. Laemmle in January.

In the music tax situation the committee authorized the negagement of Fulton Brylawski, copyright attorney of Washington, as the first step in the forthcoming fight against the exactions of the American Society of Composers and Authors. Kindred theatrical organizations and associations will be invited to join the national association of theatre owners in this movement.

The fullest co-operation will be afforded Joseph M. Seider in his capacity as business manager. Upon this official the executive committee rests much of the hope for the establishing of the national organization on a rock-bound basis. The building up of a massive campaign against all copyright legislation adverse to the industry will be one of Mr. Seider's many earlier tasks.

The Administrative Committee heartily sanctioned the issuance by the business manager of an organization bulletin which will chronicle all matters of a technical and intimate interest to members of the national organization. Details concerning the nature of this bulletin will shortly be announced in a statement to the entire industry by Mr. Seider.

In regard to the report concerning the possible merging of the United Artists interests with those of Metro-Goldwyn, the Administrative Committee went on record as opposed. A telegram in this respect was dispatched to Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks adjuring them to consider independence before making any move of this nature.

Every member of the Administrative Committee, with the exception of Nathan Yamins of Fall River, Mass., was present at the meetings. They were all of the opinion that never before have they had such a constructive session as the one which they have just completed.

The agreement and resolution in full in connection with the return of the Play Date Bureau pledge money to the Independent Motion Picture Association follows:

Another Merger

ANOTHER merger is imminent in the motion picture industry. This time it is a releasing arrangement between Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the United Artists Corporation. There is every indication that the merger will be consummated shortly, though the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City has wired pleas to Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin that they decline to permit it. Rumor on Broadway had it that only Chaplin is inclined to view the move with disfavor.

This merger is reported to be the outcome of long efforts on the part of Joseph M. Schenck to cut down distribution expenses. Those of United Artists pictures are said to have gone as high as 25 per cent.

The Associated Press quotes Fairbanks as saying in Los Angeles: "An amalgamation of the releasing systems of United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer probably will be agreed upon here within a few days, and a conference of interested parties has been called for Sunday."

In Hollywood at the present time are Schenck, Louis B. Mayer, J. Robert Rubin, Hiram Abrams and Dennis O'Brien.

Marcus Loew in New York said: "Nothing has been done in the matter yet."

Independents' Annual Meeting Set For December 11

THE second annual meeting of the Independent Motion Picture Association of America will be held at the headquarters, 1650 Broadway, New York, on Friday, December 11. This date was determined at a meeting of the Executive Committee, presided over by Chairman W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow Pictures Corporation, with the following members in attendance:

President I. E. Chadwick, Chadwick Pictures Corporation; Nathan Hirsh, Aywon Film; William Steiner, William Steiner Productions; W. Ray Johnston, Rayart Pictures; M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany Productions, Inc.; Jack Cohn, representing Joe Brandt, Columbia Pictures. Also present were Abe Carlos of Carlos Productions, Inc.; Sam Sax of Lumas Film, and Frederick H. Elliott, general manager. Various routine matters were considered and plans for the annual meeting, at which time reports of officers and committees will be presented and officers elected for the ensuing year.

M.-G.-M. Still Seeks Youths With Imagination, Says Rapf

By Sumner Smith

THE opportunity for young writers to make good with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer still exists. Harry Rapf, associate executive at the West Coast studios, said so this week in New York City, just prior to his departure for a vacation in Europe with Mrs. Rapf and son Maurice.

About a year ago Moving Picture World quoted Mr. Rapf as extending an invitation to young writers with imagination. The motion pictures needed them badly, he said. Now Mr. Rapf reports that ten were chosen for trial. What happened to them? It's sad to relate. Eight showed no promise—that is, no imagination—at all. Two showed that under instruction for a length of time they might develop. But Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg and Mr. Rapf and the different directors and scenario writers are far too busy to devote any length of time to training those whose light shines only dimly. So the two went the way of the eight.

Dearth of New Ideas

Nevertheless Mr. Rapf knows that the experiment, oft-repeated, will prove worth while. Something immensely valuable will finally grow out of it. Foreign directors of standing, he realizes, bring new viewpoints to the screen in this country—Lubitsch and Seastrom aren't exceptions—and there is no reason why the youth of America can't come forward with bright and shining ideas. So Mr. Rapf will try again and again. New manpower is badly needed in the industry.

Undoubtedly, Mr. Rapf would be happy to turn over some of his work to a budding genius. He has worked on thirty-three pictures in a year and a half and he is just a bit fatigued. That's why he is going abroad for a two months' rest. The trip doesn't involve any matter of business, he said. One detail was attended before he left—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer signed him to a new three-year contract.

Mr. Rapf had a lot to say about Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. He reviewed productions which already have found their way to the theatres, and those which are soon forthcoming. Though the M.-G.-M. average is a high one as regards values, he declares that the best pictures are on their way. That also is true of several of the other companies, he asserts.

In discussing pictures Mr. Rapf divided the M.-G.-M. product into two classes—those generally damned by the name of program pictures and those on which are lavished great sums of money and months of time. In the latter class come "Ben Hur," which Mr. Rapf has seen, and which he hails as without question the greatest picture ever produced, and "The Big Parade," King Vidor's drama. "These two pictures will open the eyes of the world, he believes. "The Big Parade" firmly established King Vidor in the very front rank of directors.

Mr. Rapf talked interestingly on the casting of players. He spoke of Norma Shearer as an ideal actress with whom to work and how she readily consented to play the part of an ugly duckling, realizing that it was her opportunity to prove versatility. Limiting some artists strictly to one type of role cramps their development and injures their prestige with the public, he asserts.

Smith Appoints H. O. Martin As Associated Representative

ON his return from Chicago this week, E. J. Smith, general sales manager of the Associated Exhibitors, announced the appointment of H. O. Martin as a special representative in the Middle West.

Mr. Martin joins the Associated Exhibitors after a long and successful career in the film industry. He came to the motion picture industry from the legitimate. His first connection was with Colonel William M. Selig in the capacity of selling state rights and exploiting the first "Spoilers." Later he entered the state right field in the territory of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska, and became the lessee of the Empress and Willis-Wood Theatres.

After disposing of his interest there he became connected with William H. Clune and disposed of the state rights on "Eyes of the World" and "Romona." After these sales were completed he became associated with Sol Lesser and was instrumental in disposing of the Mack Sennett bathing beauties and "Yankee Doodle in Berlin."

In 1920 he affiliated himself with Pathe as special representative, later becoming manager of the Pittsburgh office and then transferred to Chicago where he remained for a period of two years. After having resigned from Pathe he joined Hiram Abrams with the United Artists as a country sales manager and was later placed in charge of the Chicago district. Upon Cresson Smith's return to the United Artists, Mr. Martin retired from the business for a few months and now comes back as special representative for Associated Exhibitors.

FRED TALMADGE DIES

Fred Talmadge, father of the famous trio of screen sisters, Norma, Constance and Natalie, and husband of Margaret L. Talmadge, died suddenly at Hollywood from a third stroke of paralysis. Constance Talmadge and her mother, who have been spending a few weeks in New York to secure costumes for Constance's next picture, left immediately for the West Coast when the news reached them, and will arrive in time for the funeral which will be held on November 20. Mr. Talmadge was only 54 years old. He was a graduate of Wesleyan University and spent his early married life in Brooklyn, where he was in the advertising business. Later he became affiliated with the Loew theatres and of recent years has been with the Joseph M. Schenck Productions. About two years ago he went to the West Coast to become associated with the United studios, where his daughters' pictures are produced.

This is signed by A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the Administrative Committee.

European Market Will Eventually Be World's Most Important Picture Outlet

Pawley Says Conditions Abroad Are Not to Be Ignored—Find That English Exhibitors Like American Productions, Despite Opposition

RAYMOND PAWLEY

RAYMOND PAWLEY, first vice-president and treasurer of Producers Distributing Corporation, returned to America this week, after an absence of almost two months in Europe.

Mr. Pawley made an extensive tour of the continental countries as well as Great Britain, and while the trip was really a pleasure tour, he took time to study the foreign film market and make a general inspection of the new distributing machinery recently set up to handle the Producers Distributing releases in England and on the Continent.

As a motion picture executive, versed in the problems of distribution, and a veteran film man of practical experience in the exhibition field, Mr. Pawley's observations are of interest to every one in the industry. In summarizing his tour he says:

"For anyone interested in the development of the motion picture industry, European conditions should not be ignored; it is a subject well worthy of careful study. One can hardly make an exhaustive survey of European conditions in a few weeks, but the time I spent abroad has been ample to confirm the opinion expressed by some observers, to the effect that this market will eventually be the most important world outlet for motion pictures.

"My itinerary included a visit to London and our seven new branch offices in the United Kingdom; Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Budapest. In England, Scotland and Wales, with Mr. Vogel and Managing Director A. George Smith of the Producers Distributing Company, Ltd., I met the branch managers and staff, talked with prominent exhibitors and inspected the first-run theatres in all branch cities. In Berlin I had several conferences with the Directors of National Film Company, our contracting distributor in Germany, and others of the industry; inspected the new offices in Berlin of our Central European representative, Mr. Kofeldt, and a number of the important theatres of the city. In Vienna I had conversations with a number of those interested in the motion picture business and inspected the theatres. In Budapest the time was largely employed in an inspection of the field in Hungary, Austria and Roumania, and conferences on proposed plans for distribution of our product in these countries.

Climbed 8 Flights to See "Charley's Aunt"

"Everywhere, one finds popular interest in the motion picture of entertainment; it is the amusement of the so-called 'masses' in Europe as well as in America. In Berlin, they crowded the big Ufa Palace to see 'Charley's Aunt' just as they did in New York and in small neighborhood theatres. I saw a thousand people climb eight flights of stairs, pay admission prices ranging from two marks (48c) to five ($1.20); crowd into a small, illy ventilated hall and laugh at the same scenes and generally enjoy the picture quite as our American audiences do.

"In London, Paris, Budapest—in big cities and little towns they are all doing good business but, generally, with comparatively primitive theatre equipment.

"In both the United Kingdom and the Continent the motion picture theatre is a pretty poor affair, and to a very large extent can be likened to those of the United States of some ten or twelve years ago. In the entire United Kingdom one finds only about four theatres comparable in size to the Strand in New York—one each in London, Cardiff, Liverpool and Glasgow. Excluding the Gaumont Palace in Paris, now operated by Metro-Goldwyn, I believe the only house on the Continent that approximates this class of theatre is the Ufa Palace in Berlin!

Backwardness Retards Business

"The modern form of presentation of pictures, as we see it in America's best first-run houses, is practically unknown in Europe. This would seem to be due to the fact that the average European exhibitor is unenterprising. He seems satisfied to give his audiences just as little as possible for their money. This, in a way, is a repetition of our history in the United States, and the European exhibitor has yet to learn, as those of America did some years ago, that the development of their business depends largely upon a well-balanced program, with appropriate music; better and bigger houses comfortably equipped and well managed.

"Of course there is excuse for lack of European progress in these respects. While we in America were developing these branches of the business, Europe was busy with the War, but I see nothing in present conditions to preclude her now making progress along the same lines we followed.

"We must not overlook the fact that this backwardness is retarding the business in Europe. At present there is a decided 'hands off' attitude—a feeling that they know just as well as we do, if not a little better, what their public wants in the way of entertainment. There are exceptions, of course; Reginald Ford is trying to put over American theatre methods in Paris, Rachmann in Berlin, and Somlyo in Budapest, and it appears that European progress will come only through such as these, or through direct American enterprise.

The Anti-American Feeling

"In England a great deal of publicity is being given, both in the trade and public press, to the subject of British production, with considerable opposition feeling against

Exports in Accessories for 1925 Lead Over Previous Year

FIGURES compiled by the Department of Commerce show for September, 1925, 169 picture machines valued at $31,274 exported against 122 machines valued at $27,956 for the same month last year. Exports of stereopticon magic lanterns and other projection apparatus for September, 1925, amounted to 15,884 pounds valued at $31,996 as against 7,308 pounds valued at $13,204 in September, 1924.

For the first nine months of the present calendar year 1,108 motion picture machines valued at $259,000 were exported as against 995 valued at $299,581 for the same period last year, and 96,047 pounds of stereopticon magic lanterns and other projection apparatus valued at $175,000 and 80,762 pounds valued at $148,563 were exported during the two periods under consideration.

APPEAL IS DROPPED

According to the promise of the motion picture industry made to the State of Connecticut, the appeal of the American Feature Film Company to test the constitutionality of the Connecticut tax law was dismissed November 17 by the Supreme Court at Washington, D. C., on motion of the parties to the suit. The promise of the industry was made after the Connecticut authorities guaranteed to amend the law at the next session of the Legislature.

foreign productions, American pictures and methods in particular. This agitation, started I believe, by a few disgruntled British producers, has now been seriously taken up by the organization of British Trades which feels that British prestige is menaced by the dominance of American pictures. But while they like English pictures—if they are good, at no point did I find important exhibitors particularly interested in this Anti-American movement. English exhibitors like American pictures: First, because they are relatively inexpensive, and secondly, because they are generally of better quality than they can get elsewhere. Moreover, they are making money with them.

"In the United Kingdom good progress has been made in the organization of our subsidiary, the Producers Distributing Company, Ltd., and in the sale of its first program of fourteen pictures, Mr. Vogel made a wise choice in his selection of A. George Smith as managing director of this enterprise."

Former Ohio Censor Seeks to Become Governor

MRS. EVELYN FRANCES SNOW, former chief censor of motion pictures in Ohio, is reported as seeking the Republican nomination for governor. While censoring she attracted considerable attention by reason of her wielding of the shears and her explanations of her eliminations. Governor Harry L. Davis appointed her and she resigned early in the administration of Governor A. V. Donahey after several stormy sessions with Director of Education, Vernon M. Riegel.

This is the first official trip Mr. Smith has made in the interests of the Associated Exhibitors and is done principally to pep up the sales force on the "Triumphant Thirty" and the Peggy Hopkins Joyce starring vehicle, "The Skyrocket." According to sales plans, "The Skyrocket" will open in Chicago for a run at the same time that Broadway sees the picture. It is hinted that a booking has already been made with one of the biggest theatres in Chicago's Loop.

Wabash Ministers Have Dicksons Fined For Sunday Opening

W. H. AND P. H. DICKSON, brothers, owners of the Eagles' theatre at Wabash, Ind., were arrested last week for operating their theatre on Sunday and a few days later were convicted and fined.

Last Sunday Wabash had Sunday shows for the first time since three years ago, when an attempt was made to open the theatres and several ministers and their followers had the theatre owners arrested and stopped the show. The show last Sunday went off quietly and large crowds attended every performance.

A few days later the ministers filed an affidavit and the Dicksons and their organist were arrested and fined $10 and costs each, making the total fine $45. The Dicksons say they intend to continue to operate on Sundays because the crowds that attended was evidence enough that most people favor Sunday shows.

Arbitration Question Now Nearing Adjustment, He Declares—Woodhull and Cohen Both Are Loud in Praise of Him

STRICT business devoid of politics is the policy which will guide Joseph M. Seider as business manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers were the first in the industry to hear from Mr. Seider since he became the exhibitor general. At their meeting at the New Hofbrau on Thursday afternoon of last week exhibitor chieftains were the honor guests. Insights into the industry were also disclosed by the constructive talks of R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., and Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the national directors and former president.

In his address, which is the first official announcement by Mr. Seider in his capacity as business manager, he stated:

"As business manager it will be our policy to conduct the affairs of the organization along strictly business lines. The important subject of the moment, contract and arbitration, is nearing adjustment. Legislative problems will be worked out and the mass of detail necessary will be properly handled.

"And although there naturally must result from this undertaking a certain measure of hope and confidence to the theatre owner, yet he wants to know that he will be permitted to remain in business and enjoy the opportunity to carry on in his chosen field of endeavor. He wants to be sure of his future in this industry.

"It is argued that the building of theatres cannot be stopped because the 'wheels of progress cannot be blocked.'

"Is it progress to overbuild and over seat? Especially where the purpose is to eliminate the smaller competitor by the weight of larger financial resources? Is it progress to threaten a small operator with opposition unless he purchases a certain product?

"Shall it continue impossible for a small operator to purchase quality-product when he has for a competitor a large influential purchaser? Should a theatre owner who has purchased for a number of years the product of a particular distributor lose that particular product without opportunity with the arrival of a more influential purchaser? Or will the product be allocated so that he with 'clean hands' may live?

"These are the problems confronting and disheartening the theatre owner and these are the problems we have presented to Mr. Hays, and these are the problems received most sympathetically by Mr. Hays."

President Woodhull and Sydney S. Cohen, who acted as toastmaster, prefaced their remarks with laudations for Mr. Seider.

"Joe Seider is more than an exhibitor, the president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, a director in the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and now the business manager of that organization," President Woodhull declared. He emphasized: "Nothing has given me greater pleasure or confidence since my induction in the office of president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America than the appointment of Joseph M. Seider as business manager. Joe took hold of the New Jersey organization and through his tireless effort has made it the most efficient of its kind in the country. Now I am glad that he will have a latitude which includes the entire United States and it was no easy job to get him to accept the post."

Mr. Cohen paid the following tribute to Seider: "Joseph M. Seider knows practical service and public service. He has the most complete knowledge of the complex contractual relations between the exhibitors and the distributors of any man in this country. In my opinion, and I know that it is the opinion of my associates as well, Joseph M. Seider has made more progress during the past year than any other man in the field. The national organization has been fortunate in prevailing upon Mr. Seider to accept this very distinguished post of business manager."

Both Mr. Cohen and Mr. Woodhull urged members of the A. M. P. A. to cooperate with the business manager in the efforts that are being made to bring about a perfect mutuality in the entire industry.

In his speech, which was interspersed with bits of clever humor, President Woodhull took issue with an observation made by Adolph Zukor at a previous meeting of the A. M. P. A.

"I think perhaps it is right to say that Zukor is the outstanding figure in the progress of the film industry," Mr. Woodhull said, "but I cannot agree with him in saying to you that the success of the film industry is prcatically a fifty-fifty proposition—the producers and the exploiteers. In fact I think it might be made a trio when you consider that the pictures have to be projected and that the exhibitor is the man who does that. But—when you come right down to it there is the public carrying the air, so after all a quartette describes, or apportions, it better to my way of thinking.

"You advertisers and exploiteers are the lifting and driving power of the motion picture industry. You have all seen poor pictures that you fellows have absolutely put over. But you get your material from

British Imports of Films Show Extensive Increase

THE following special report to the Department of Commerce by Alfred Nutting, clerk in the American Consulate General in London, gives an analysis of British exports and imports of motion picture films for the first nine months of 1925.

For the nine months to September, 1925, the aggregate quantity of British imports of cinema films reached 170,587,388 linear feet, contrasted with 79,191,467 linear feet in the same period of 1924 and 90,459,407 linear feet in 1923. This extensive rise, however, was not accompanied by a corresponding advance in value, which increased this year to £1,114,953 against £887,500 a year ago.

Of the above aggregate for the current were imported in the first six months (comperiod, no less than 154,742,426 linear feet pared with 48,898,631 linear feet in 1924) and 87,849,206 linear fet thereof were received in the month of June last (only 6,961,309 linear feet being imported in June, 1924), in consequence of the two months' notice which was given of the intention to subject cinema films to customs duty on imports arriving on and after July 1, 1925. It has to be remembered, however, that in the budget statement of 1924 it was announced that there was no intention of continuing the McKenna duties on cinema films and certain other goods, and consequently shipments were held back until the duties expired in August, 1924, and a comparison of the figures is vitiated by these changes of fiscal policy.

For the three months, July-September, 1925, the quantity imported was only 15,844,962 linear feet, contrasted with 31,518,439 linear feet during the same three months of 1923, when the duties operated.

Of imports during the current nine months, blank film comprised 122,316,370 linear feet, against 53,994,350 linear feet last year, and 69,787,117 linear feet in 1923; while for the three months, July-September, the respective totals were 10,245,402 linear feet, 17,278,994 linear feet and 24,789,339 lineare feet. Positive films totaled 40,329,532 linear feet in the current nine months, against 20,257,269 linear feet in 1924 and 15,085,248 linear feet in 1923, the latest three months figures being 4,278,431 linear feet, 11,295,590 linear feet and 5,065,078 linear feet, respectively; and negative films 7,941,486 linear feet in the nine months of 1925, contrasted with 4,939,848 linear feet in 1924, and 5,586,982 linear feet in 1923, the final three months recording imports of 1,321,129 linear feet this year, against 1,718,252 linear feet in 1924, and 1,664,022 linear feet two years ago. It is thus apparent that blank film has decreased the most heavily since June 30 last. It may be added that the total re-exports for the nine months in each of the years 1923-1925 show comparatively little change, averaging about 11,000,000 linear feet.

First National's Sales Cabinet Starts on Tour of Country

IN accord with its policy of establishing direct personal contact with branch managers, salesmen and exhibitors, the members of the new Sales Cabinet of First National Pictures, Samuel Spring chairman; Ned Marin, A. W. Smith, Jr., and Ned Depinet will leave New York, Sunday, November 22, for a whirlwind tour of First National exchanges.

The trip will keep the sales executives jumping from city to city for the next three weeks, during which it is the plan of the sales cabinet to confer with all of the important exhibitors in the localities visited, in addition to holding meetings at the exchanges.

Following is the itinerary for the trip: Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Toronto and then back to New York.

It is the belief of the new sales heads that one of the greatest needs of a distribution organization that aims to function to its fullest capacity is closer contact with the actual problems confronting exchange managers and exhibitors. Instead of wiring or writing instructions, the sales executives plan to keep in such intimate touch with the men in the field, that, with all the facts before them, they will be able to reach conclusions through personal conferences.

It is figured that with more than 20,000 theatres in the United States, with the release of approximately 800 feature pictures a year, and with the rapid growth of theatre circuits and the pooling of buying power, distribution problems have become bigger and more involved and therefore require greater concentration of effort.

It is believed that this concentration can be best achieved through a division of territory under three sales managers, who will spend about half of their time in the field. The three recently appointed sales executives are now functioning under the chairmanship of Mr. Spring. Ned Marin is in charge of the Western territory; A. W. Smith, Jr., of the Eastern territory, and Ned Depinet of the Southern territory.

The trip that starts Sunday will give the home office officials an opportunity to meet the members of sales force operating in the cities visited, also the leading exhibitors with whom they are dealing. It is planned to spend one day in each city during which First National's coming product will be discussed from every angle. Sales policies will be outlined by Mr. Spring and his associates and local conditions will be considered with a view to giving exhibitors the best possible service.

VETERAN PASSES ON

Great sorrow is felt at the passing of John J. Huss, 65, treasurer of the Royal Theatre, Cincinnati, who died recently. Russ, who had been connected with picture theatres for fifteen years, was well known in trade circles. He is survived by his widow and one son.

Strict Business

the producer and you work in the exhibitors box office and the public eye is caught by your work. Therefore, how can it be a fifty-fifty proposition? When you come right down to it I do not think that anyone will ever be able to tell which of the four of us is the most responsible for the success and progress of the industry. It will always be the four of us and therefore the four of us will always have to stick together and work together.

"I am in absolute accord with Mr. Hays' suggestion, made when he first entered the industry, that the industry needs a strong exhibitor organization and that representatives of that organization and of the producers should all sit down at the same table and decide matters as they present themselves.

"Most of the so-called trouble in this industry is founded on nothing but the whisperings of busy-bodies. It is up to us to recognize this fact and the sooner we do the sooner there will be real harmony and a perfect machine which will work for the mutual benefit of all of us.

"When you come right down to it, friendship is the sunshine of life. I would not sacrifice the friends I made while traveling throughout the country for all the money in the world. Let us develop a code of ethics based on: 'The greatest motive in life is the public good.'"

That the geography of the industry is constantly changing and that one company may be a power today and a total loss tomorrow was the theme which Mr. Cohen struck home to his audience. Due to such power menacing theatre holdings and harassing exhibitors, other units are springing up and fortifying themselves, Cohen said. With this angle in mind he declared: "It looks to me as if the battle of the giants will be fought in 1928."

In connection with the "battle," Cohen referred to the inception of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"I firmly believe that if our organization had not been formed then that now one or two companies instead of owning 500 or 600 theatres would own 5,000 or 6,000 theatres—meaning that a lot of us who are now in would be out."

He made known that he is preparing a series of stories under the title of "What Is Entertainment in the Motion Picture Theatre; Showmanship; Advertising; Benefits of Reviewing Your Own Pictures; Proper Advertising in Trade Press Is News to the Theatre Owner; Overshowing and Overseating; Great Help and Assistance of Smaller Theatre Owners."

In his closing remarks Mr. Cohen said that the industry might be benefited if its advertisers and exploiteers had more latitude.

ANOTHER CHICAGO CIRCUIT

Edward Trinz, Harry A. Gourfain and George Webster have organized the Gourfain and Trinz Amusement Company, with offices at 69 west Randolph street, Chicago, and a capital of $25,000, to operate theatres and amusements. Eddie Trinz is managing director of the Pantheon Theatre and Harry Gourfain formerly had charge of the presentations at the Senate Theatre of Lubliner & Trinz. This adds another circuit to the list of amusement companies in this territory.

Film Men Speculating Walker's Successor at State Capitol

THE State Capitol at Albany, with knowledge of important picture measures that will be introduced in the New York State Legislature in January, is already speculating as to the successor of James J. Walker in the State Senate, minority leader the past year and long champion of the industry. There is some talk that Senator Bernard Downing of New York City may become minority leader in the Upper House, while others declare that the long friendship between Mr. Downing and Mr. Walker will result in the latter offering Senator Downing a handsome berth in New York City politics when he becomes mayor.

It was Jimmy Walker's office on the third floor of the Capitol that was always headquarters for the exhibitor and the producer whenever they came to Albany. In years past it was Senator Walker who worked with Sydney S. Cohen, Charles L. O'Reilly, Samuel Berman and others in devising the means that brought about the defeat year after year of censorship, and many other obnoxious bills. When the censorship measure finally did pass, it was only after one of the greatest fights in Senator Walker's career and at a time when he was leading the minority forces.

behind them, these men are inspired with the high enthusiasm for this feature that fills the entire organization.

James R. Grainger, General Sales Manager of Fox Film Corporation, announced the plan and scope of the campaign prior to his departure last week for Los Angeles, by boat via New Orleans, when he stated that for two months every department in Fox Films has been extended to its utmost, working day and night to give showmen everything possible in the way of selling "The Ancient Mariner" to the public.

Bookings Heavy

"The Fox branch managers are being deluged with bookings," Mr. Grainger said, "and although this is a situation that calls for the highest kind of organization, all exhibitors who wish to date in the picture will be able to do so. The number of prints has been increased, so that we can take care of everybody. "It seldom happens that any organization concentrates all of its energy on a production as Fox Films have in this instance. We have got the goods. We believe that every theatre owner and every patron will want to see 'The Ancient Mariner.' And we are reaching out for a public that seldom, if ever, sees pictures.

"We've shot the whole works and we are confident of the results."

Eve Unsell prepared the scenario for Director Henry Otto and his production associate, Chester Bennett. The cast includes Leslie Fenton, Clara Bow, Earle Williams, Nigel DeBrulier, Paul Panzer, Gladys Brockwell and Vivian Oakland. Everything about the picture, down to the minutest detail, is in thorough keeping with all that has been claimed for it in the way of a magnificently lavish production.

Board Gives Showman Right to New Swanson for One Cancelled

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey scored this week one of their greatest victories in the court of arbitration when the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade on Tuesday decided for them in a test on exhibitor contractural rights regarding the Famous Players-Lasky picture "Conquered."

The Philadelphia board's ruling establishes a precedent upon which exhibitors can obtain the release and delivery to them of the next Swanson picture produced or released by Famous Players-Lasky without paying an increased price, according to the M. P. T. O. A.

The decision establishes that it was not the picture "Conquered" which induced the exhibiter in this test case, I. M. Hirschblond, of the Tracco Theatre, Toms River, N. J., to buy the Paramount output. On the contrary, it specifically relates that it was the magnitude of the star, Gloria Swanson, which was chiefly instrumental in getting Hirschblond's signature to the contract.

The decision thus substantiates the contention of Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the M. P. T. O. A., who vigorously prosecuted the action after procuring and making a thorough study of the evidence.

Under the terms of the Philadelphia board's verdict, Famous Players-Lasky must deliver the next picture which Miss Swanson makes for that company. This does not mean any picture which the star has already made and which has not been generally released, but any feature which may be made with Miss Swanson in the starring role in lieu of "Conquered," production plans for which were recently abandoned and the release from delivery sought by Famous Players.

Mr. Seider could not personally attend the hearing because of an urgent meeting of the administrative committee of the M. P. T. O. A., attended by men who had traveled great distances. He assigned his personal representative, Leon Rosenblatt, and Norman Samuelson, counsel for the M. P. T. O., New Jersey, to appear before the Philadelphia board.

Commenting upon the decision, Mr. Seider declared: "The entire procedure and the verdict is the greatest emulation of the principle of arbitration when fairly conducted. It will be recalled that the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade offered to us the right to select our own exhibitor arbitrators. Because of this offer we were convinced of the sincerity of the Philadelphia board, and instead presented the case before their usual board. This vouches for the fairness of the verdict, and as business manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, it is my hope that this will settle the matter for the country and that Famous Players will release the next Gloria Swanson picture that they produce, or release, to contract holders of the picture 'Conquered' at the present contract price, and further, that they will release all those present contract holders who so desire it, from the playing of the picture 'Conquered' if produced with another star."

St. Louis Second-Run Chain Organized by Wm. Goldman

FORMATION of a new company to operate a chain of second-run motion picture houses has been announced by William Goldman, owner of the Kings, Queens and Rivoli theatres of St. Louis, Mo. At the same time Goldman made public the closing of leases on Freund Brothers' Woodland and Kingsland theatres on Gravois avenue and a large airdome adjoining the Woodland. These leases become effective on November 21.

Goldman also stated that he will spend approximately $50,000 for a 1,500-seat airdome next to the Kingsland Theatre, that he has asquired a lot on Hodiamont avenue just south of Easton avenue on which he will erect a 2,000-seat theatre and he also contemplates the immediate construction of a 1,500-seat house on Union boulevard near St. Louis. He purchased the latter site many months ago.

As was revealed earlier in the year, Goldman has secured a lease on the Union Theatre property at Union boulevard and Easton avenue which becomes effective in 1927. He also lists a half interest in the Congress Theatre on Olive street as among his assets. He is now negotiating for several other houses in St. Louis and vicinity, and stated that he plans to build in neighborhood centers in which he cannot purchase a desirable house.

The name of his new corporation and its capitalization has not been decided. Goldman stated that his acquisition of second-run houses will not disturb his first-run booking arrangements with Skouras Brothers.

As is known, a large national producer-distributor is negotiating with St. Louis financial interests with a view of securing a suitable first-run outlet for his pictures in St. Louis. This deal is said to involve the acquisition or erection of some twenty-five to thirty-five theatres in St. Louis and vicinity.

During the past week the St. Louis Amusement Company closed a deal whereby the Ozark Theatre of Webster Groves, Mo., will secure pictures through the Koplar-Skouras chain. Previously the St. Louis Amusement Company had added eight leading neighborhood and suburban theatres to its string.

The Embassy Amusement Company, which now controls six leading houses and contemplates the erection of two others, has negotiations underway which will add two or three more houses to its holdings within the next few weeks.

These mergers of exhibition interests in the Mound City indicates that the day of the strictly independent house locally is passing. For many years St. Louis has been known as a chain-booking city, but this phase of picturedom was not so marked heretofore as now.

A survey of the local theatres reveals that a few operating companies control all of the desirable houses. Loew's State, the Delmonte and Wellston are the only large theatres here that are not now held by some chain.

Charles Eyton to Head Paramount Production Department Abroad

TO put into effect ideas which he has developed for European film production, Charles Eyton, for years general manager of the Lasky studio in Hollywood, has been relieved of his duties at his own request and has been appointed general representative of the Paramount production department abroad, it was announced by Jesse L. Lasky.

"Mr. Eyton will sail for Europe shortly," said Mr. Lasky, "to make arrangements for the filming of certain big pictures and to put into operation certain ideas which he has regarding the making of American pictures abroad. He has been in charge of our studio in Hollywood practically since its beginning, and during that time he has shown himself to be the possessor of one of the best producing brains in the picture business. Through a period of many years the intricate problems of production in the Lasky studio have come before him for solution, and it is only after many conferences that he has persuaded us to relieve him of his duties in Hollywood to work in Europe.

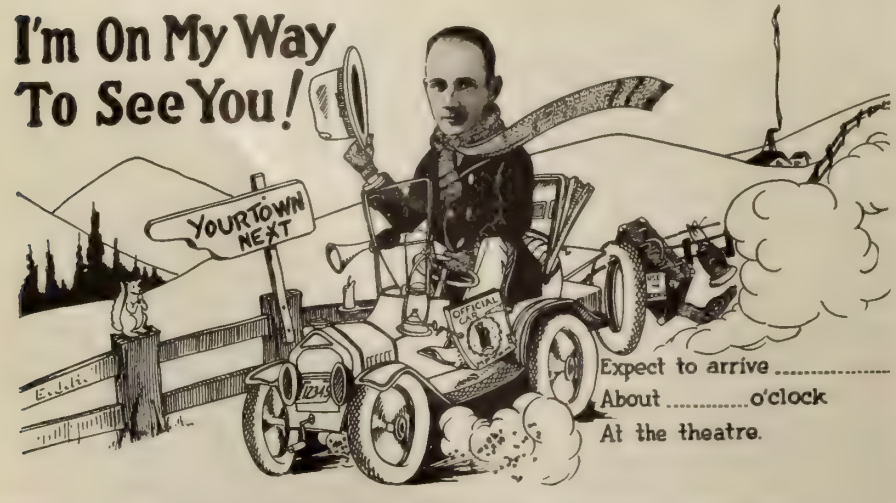
"As part of a trip around the world last summer, Mr. Eyton spent considerable time in Europe and made a study of picture producing conditions in England, France and Germany. Although several American pictures have been made abroad, Mr. Eyton was struck with the success which attended the production of Gloria Swanson's picture, 'Madame Sans Gene' in France and Thomas Meighan's picture, 'Irish Luck,' in Ireland. The handling of these pictures increased his desire to go abroad, and following conferences here in New York with Mr. Zukor and myself, Mr. Eyton has developed plans for the production of pictures in Europe which next season we expect will bring a new note to the American screen."

Although Mr. Eyton will study producing conditions throughout Europe he will devote particular attention to England, France and Germany. One of the first things he will do is to confer with Sir James M. Barrie on the production of an original story which Barrie is about to write for Betty Bronson and which will be produced in London next summer. The success of "Peter Pan" and the undoubted success which will greet the second Paramount-Barrie Christmas picture, "A Kiss for Cinderella" have determined Mr. Lasky upon a policy of having a Barrie-Bronson picture each Christmas for several years to come.

"The production of pictures in Europe" said Mr. Eyton, "has been a pet idea of mine for a long time, but my eyes were really opened to the possibilities last summer when I spent several weeks in England and on the Continent. I have been producing pictures in Hollywood for many years, and during that time have struggled repeatedly in an attempt to make European settings in California and make them right. It is true that on certain occasions the production of American pictures in Europe has been attended with worry and inadequate facilities. After looking the ground over and studying the problems from the standpoint of my experience in the Lasky studio, however, I feel that the problem can be solved and solved in a way that will give the American motion picture something that it has never had before. Anyway, that is what I am going to try to do, and I am deeply grateful to Mr. Lasky for giving me this opportunity to put my ideas into execution."

INCREASING CAPITAL STOCK

The Roxy Theatres Corporation, recently incorporated in New York state, has filed papers with the secretary of state at Albany seeking authorization to increase its shares of capital stock. The company at the time of its incorporation was authorized to issue 350,000 shares of stock having no par value. The papers filed this week, by Attorney H. G. Kosch of New York City, authorize the company to issue 475,000 shares of stock at par value.



THIS IS THE POSTCARD which informs Michigan theatre owners that H. M. Richey, General Manager of the State Organization, is going to drop in for a friendly visit. Mr. Richey has laid out a whirlwind schedule.

Salesmen Will Disport In N. Y. December 5

The Motion Picture Salesmen Club, Inc., the organization made up of film salesmen in the New York and Northern New Jersey zones, will give its annual dinner and dance at the Hotel Commodore on Saturday, December 5.

This year the affair will be run solely as a salesman function will not be held in conjunction with the F. I. L. M. Club, as it has been run heretofore.

The Entertainment Committee promises entertainment and music to surpass anything ever done by this organization. Some of the acts will be the Ben Miroff Band, Irene Ricardo, Eva Puck and Sammy White, and Herman Timberg. There will be the usual motion picture stars present to light up the occasion, as well as motion picture executives and theatre owners.

DUTCH TO CENSOR FILMS

A bill, states Philip E. McKenney, assistant trade commissioner at The Hague, has recently been passed by the Second Chamber of the Dutch Parliament providing that henceforth no picture shows will be permitted in the Netherlands unless the films have previously been approved by a central commission to be instituted by the government. The municipal authorities, moreover, may prohibit the showing of any film within their jurisdiction even if such film has been approved by the government commission. The expense connected with the examination of the films will be covered by a tax on picture theatres. The bill was passed with the denominational parties voting for it and the Liberal and Socialist parties against it. The Left did not oppose censorship on films for juveniles, but deprecated that on films for adults.

NEW CORPORATION NAME

At a meeting of the stockholders of Wilson-Wetherald, Inc., a resolution was passed to change the name of the corporaiton to Pinellas Films, Inc. The officers of the corporation are: Harry P. Carver, president; James T. Wetherald, vice-president; Royal W. Wetherald, treasurer; James F. Sayles, secretary.

A LARGE and representative gathering of national celebrities, headed by Vice President Charles G. Dawes, paid tribute to Pathe News at the Fifteenth Anniversary Dinner held at the Hotel Plaza in New York City on Saturday evening, November 14, in celebration of the founding of news films.

Never before has such a notable assemblage of the Nation's leaders and distinguished men rendered such tribute to the fifth estate. Such a demonstration is a marked honor to Pathe News and its popular editor, Emanuel Cohen, who has for eleven years commanded the army of cameramen covering the world for this great pictorial disseminator of news. The event further emphasizes the high place the pioneer newsfilm holds in the minds of the people of the United States.

Vice President Dawes paid glowing praise to Pathe News in his talk as did Governor Ritchie of Maryland. Editor Cohen related the history of the pioneer newsfilm.

The Vice-President roused the distinguished gathering with his stirring plea for revision of the Senate rules.

The surprise of the evening was presented on the screen in "Flashes of the Past," a comprehensive newsfilm review of historic events from 1910 to 1925. Musical interpretation for this film was provided by a symphony orchestra under the direction of Doctor Hugo Riesenfeld. As proof of the speed with which Pathe News covers and screens events, scenes of the Yale-Princeton football game played in New Haven Saturday afternoon were shown. Then the guests had the pleasure of seeing themselves actually at the banquet in scenes photographed earlier in the evening. "Flashes of the Past" will be presented serially in the semi-weekly issues of Pathe News so that the public may see this remarkable film.

Frederic R. Coudert, attorney for Pathe, presided at the dinner in the absence of President Paul Fuller, Jr., who is in Europe on business for the firm. Following his introductory remarks, Mr. Coudert introduced Emanuel Cohen, Editor of Pathe News, who spoke as follows:

"On behalf of the Pathe News, I, as its editor, want first to thank you, our distinguished guests, for joining with us this evening in the celebration of the Fifteenth Anniversary of the origin of news presentation by motion pictures. This illustrious audience, representing, as it does, every avenue of life which the newsfilm has trod, Pathe News welcomes not only as an honor to itself but as a tribute to the deeper significance of the occasion—the increasing recognition of the newsfilm as a new institution in the dissemination of world news. I can add nothing to the brief eloquence of our guest of honor, Vice-President Dawes, who, when honoring us by accepting our invitation wrote of the newsfilm:

"'It is the newspaper of film literature. It has become a necessity in our national life, and its accuracy in daily presentation of world news has made it a national institution. It fosters good will between the peoples of the world and greater tolerance of other nations' problems has been taught through its penetrating eyes. All peoples irrespective of thought, find instantaneous expression and common understanding in the newsfilm.'

Challenged Art of Angelo

"Vice-President Dawes has thus splendidly epitomized its service and value. The evolution of the still camera into the motion picture machine has challenged the art of Michael Angelo, for it paints the drama of moving life with the broad brush of a realism within the understanding of everyone. When, in the early nineties, the new art of the motion picture was developed, mainly due to the inspiring genius of one of our distinguished friends who, unfortunately, could not be with us this evening, Thomas Edison, its purpose and scope were conceived largely for the entertainment of the masses. Here and there, at that time, the pioneers of the industry went beyond this scope and directed their lenses on some news events —but only in a sporadic fashion—an occasional glimpse of new possibilities.

"It was in 1910 that there came the fuller realization of this newly discovered but unexplored field of motion picture usefulness, when Charles Pathe presented for the first time a regular and systematic medium of news dissemination by films. Public recognition of this usefulness has steadily increased, and I, personally, in my eleven years of editorship of the Pathe News, have had the opportunity of seeing the newsfilm grow from a mere exhibition in a few hundred scattered theatres, where it was used mainly as a filler on the program, down to the present day, where the combined circulation of all newsfilms reaches almost 90 per cent of the 18,000 motion picture theatres in the United States alone. It is conservatively estimated that the newsfilm is now seen by forty millions of people a week. Also, we find it now not merely a filler, but a vital part of the program, an institution recognized by theatre and public alike, as playing an important role in news communication and in the life of the nation.

"Like the great news syndicates, the Associated Press, the United Press, International News, of whose tremendous service the public is so fully aware, the Pathe News is now world-wide, its tentacles reaching into every nook and corner of the earth—civilized and uncivilized—its thousands of lenses focussed on every political development, witnessing the pageantry and the tragedy of every people; peering into the customs and habits of every land; holding the mirror to every phase of human activity everywhere.

Role Is Different From Newspaper

"Although its purpose is similar to that of the newspaper, the newsfilm plays a different role. Its objective is to bring its readers to the very scene of an event, making them eye-witnesses, so that they not only see what transpires but can feel its pulse. The deadly accuracy and the vivid realism of the newsfilm has brought it to the heights of purpose and utility which it now occupies. It has reeled its way into the confidence of millions of persons. One might say that it has won a place of affection as well as of trust. Supplementing the service of the country's great newspapers, this graphic portrayal is enabling the public to form clearer judgments of world events and guiding it to more intelligent understanding.

"The excursion 'round the world on which it takes its readers in the fifteen minutes of each issue, as if on the wings of time, has made it possible for them to see and to become acquainted with other lands. The lions of Trafalgar Square are just as familiar to American audiences as the Woolworth Building to the Englishman. The sufferings of Japan in the tragic hours following the earthquake were felt from the screens of the globe. The remarkable achievement of America's Round the World Fliers was witnessed by Pathe News readers in every hamlet.

"Am I presuming when I refer to what the newsfilm has accomplished and has the power still to accomplish in the way of fostering that understanding and amity between the peoples which statesmen are so eagerly striving for, as the basis for international good will and tolerance? The News pictures are within the grasp of every individual. All peoples, irrespective of thought, race, or creed find instantaneous expression and common understanding in the newsfilm.

"Pathe News in fifteen years has filmed practically every important news event in the world. We shall produce the living proof before you this evening. The great poet who sighed, in hopelessness, 'O God, turn back the universe and give me yesterday' had never seen a newsfilm. Tonight we shall turn back the universe and show you yesterday.

Records of Notable Events

"The value of the newsfilm is going to be written on your minds forever after you travel back over the years with us. We shall see the world before the Great War. We shall view the personalities of the world's greatest men who have passed into the Great Beyond! We shall witness epoch-making events, some of which have changed the map of the world. When these pictures were taken they were just simple matters. Now, after surviving the whirlwind of the world's changes, they have a new significance which makes them the stage centers of the most gripping drama ever known.

"Just suppose we had cameramen at Valley Forge! And we could sit here and watch Washington and his freezing army of ragged patriots starving and bleeding for the wealth and freedom which we are enjoying tonight. One hundred years from now our descendants will feel the horror of the Great War and the undying heroism of all who fought in it. Suppose we had the newsfilm at Bunker Hill! At Lexington! At Yorktown! What an imperishable history for us! Can you imagine being able to witness John Hancock signing the Declaration of Independence or Abraham Lincoln signing the Emancipation Act? It would impress you, would it not? Even if we could witness our beloved Theodore Roosevelt thundering up San Juan Hill, we might feel as though we were being gifted by Providence with unearthly sight.

Greatest Historian of All

"Since 1910, however, such events, have been recorded for posterity. The newsfilm has come to be the greatest historian of all. Our presidents, our soldiers and our public men from now on will live forever. When our grandchildren read in their histories of some great political movement, some bitter struggles, some great victory won, they will look up from the printed word, and see as real as in the living flesh the men who did these things. How much better they will be able to understand! It is because of these things that we feel the greatness of the newsfilm and why we wish to fittingly celebrate its achievements tonight. And as we view the film tonight, which we have entitled FLASHES OF THE PAST, it makes us wonder what the "Flashes of the Future" will be—what Destiny will inscribe on the celluloid pages of history. As the progress of human events marches on, perhaps this very method of news recording will itself be further perfected so as to be of still greater service to the public. Time and space in the transportation of films will be reduced and minimized. Who can foretell but that in our own lifetime we will see the day when motion pictures will be transmitted by the etheral waves of the radio, so that the public will be able to sit in its favorite theatre and watch the pictures of events throughout the world even as they are transpiring, when the whole world will be linked together in instantaneous understanding."

The Chairman then stated that a telegram had been received from Will H. Hays saying that owing to the death of his father-in-law he was unable to be present. Mr. Coudert then read Mr. Hays' telegram:

Will Hays' Telegram

"It is with very sincere regret that I find I cannot be with you tonight. Had hoped until last moment that developments in Judge Thomas' condition might be encouraging enough to enable me to make the trip and get back in time, but this is now impossible. Physicians just concluding consultation advise that the end is iminent and I cannot leave.

"I congratulate you on the great occasion itself and on your splendid commemoration of it. It is indeed an occasion of unusual significance. No story ever written for the screen is as dramatic as the story of the screen itself; and no phase of its development has been greater nor any element of its tremendous value more potent than the news weeklies. In this magnificent progress of usefulness Pathe News has played a most distinguished part. To that splendid service I pay tribute. For the last seven years of your fifteen my knowledge of your efforts has been intimate and my appreciation of your accomplishments has been very great. The record of Pathe News is itself a scenario of success with a continuity of uninterrupted and increasing usefulness.

"The News weeklies are the most effective portion of motion picture entertainment everywhere and such appreciation measures exactly their consequent usefulness. And make no mistake about the importance of the motion picture in the fabric of our society. Motion pictures are doing three things as no other instrument today can do them. First, they provide the chief amusement of a great majority of all our people and the sole amusement of millions and millions and just as you serve the leisure hours of the people, so do you rivet the girders of society. Second, they instruct and that is indeed a precious power. And, third, they are making an immeasurable contribution to the cause of international amity. The motion picture knows no barrier of distance, it knows no barrier of language. Thousands of feet of celluloid film in metallic containers are sent to the ends of the earth to speak the language which everyone understands, civilized or savage, the language of pictures.

"Under the benign influence of familiarity with each other, no matter where we may dwell or how we may speak, the world is bound to grow better and that is one of my greatest hopes for the motion picture. If men understand each other they do not hate; if they do not hate, they do not make war. In all of this service the News weeklies are invaluable. Again I pay tribute to Pathe News and assure you of my gratitude for what it is doing and your own splendid part in it. WILL H. HAYS."

Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland related interesting facts about motion picture exhibitors in his state, saying in part, as follows:

Maryland Governor Talks

"In the honest examination to give the public the cleanest and best, Maryland exhibitors are not surpassed by exhibitors or producers anywhere. I believe that as a class they regard their business as impressive with a public press, and as a class they are entirely faithful to that trust. Maryland, it is true, is one of the states where censorship exists. When it comes to Pathe News service, no censorship is necessary and there ought not to be any. (Applause.) But in any event, it is Maryland's policy to insist on a sane censorship, enough to protect the public where that may be necessary, but never enough to impair the responsibility of the producers and exhibitors for the pictures which they show.

"That is the balance which ought to be struck in all public regulation. That is the balance, that is the line which ought never to be lost sight of, whether regulation is in the field where it is concededly necessary, such as railroads and public utilities, or whether it is in the field where the necessity for it is by no means soc lear, and in that field I would put the moving picture industry.

"But if regulation is necessary to protect the public, then let it be confined to what is needed to protect the public and nothing else, and let it be administered in a way that recognizes that the men in charge of this great industry want to run it and are capable of running it cleanly and decently, and do not let us have interference anywhere which will take from the owners of the industry the responsibility for the operation of their own business and for the character of the pictures which they show (Applause).

"The moving picture industry cannot succeed, cannot merit or hold public approval any more than any other industry can unless its product has character. That is the great thing in life, for an individual in public service or in business,—character. The owners are the ones who ought to be most interested in giving it character. Certainly, the vast majority of them are. So state interference should never be permitted to go to an extent which might lessen the obligation and lessen the authority of this great right-thinking majority of your industry who will be satisfied with nothing less than the best, themselves to compel the small minority in their industry to live up to their high standards or else to get out of the business and to go into some other one where the standards are not so high.

"I am, of course, speaking only of state regulation. A good deal of the state regulation, goodness knows, is bad enough. And if the Maryland legislature ever passed a bill such as the Connecticut legislature passed, I don't believe I could be too quick in getting them back again to repeal it (Applause).

Against National Censorship

"And so I take it for granted that you will agree with me that to the extent that any public regulation may be necessary it ought to be confined to the states, and that in no event ought Congress to be permitted to pass the Federal Censorship Bill. (Applause.)

"Gentlemen, I appreciate more than I can say the opportunity of being here. I appreciate the opportunity of congratulating Mr. Cohen upon the splendidly constructive work which has marked the recent years of his life. I can, of course, add nothing to what he has told you, and to what others who are to speak will tell you as to the value of the Pathe News Service. I am simply one of the millions who recognize in Pathe Service a development as marvelous as any other thing in this marvelous age. I am simply one of the millions who recognize in it a development which, above all others, helps to give the whole world a common language and to make the whole world akin. (Applause.)

Vice-President Dawes, in his opening remarks referred to what he had written to Editor Cohen in accepting the invitation to be present at the dinner, and said that he wanted to most cheerfully and enthusiastically subscribe to what he had said in praise of newsfilm dissemination and about Pathe News, in particular.

Charge Conspiracy

A CHARGE of conspiracy to deprive the Palisade Theatre Corporation, owners of the Grant-Lee Theatre, Palisade, N. J., of first-run pictures is contained in a bill filed for the corporation by E. Thornton Kelly, its president, with Vice-Chancellor Bentley in Jersey City. The defendants are the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Morris Katinsky, Samuel Perry, Jacob Fabian, Peter Adams, Irving Rose and Benjamin F. Keith, theatre owners in the vicinity of Palisade.

A temporary injunction has been issued and on November 30 the defendants must show cause why it should not be continued. A permanent injunction is sought. The plaintiff charges that a conspiracy exists to deprive him of films until they are three months old. "The Ten Commandments" is one film cited.

Sauve assistant manager and B. M. Eggers treasurer. The Central Park, the oldest house in the circuit, retains Max Turner as manager and I. M. Haperin becomes assistant manager and treasurer.

Only one new theatre was announced last week in Chicago by the builders. The Northwestern Amusement Company will build a 2,200-seat movie theatre, according to Sidney Minchin, architect and engineer, at the northeast corner of Irving Park Boulevard and Menard avenue. The project will cost about $475,000 and a Spanish renaissance style of architecture will be adopted. The exterior will be of terra cotta trim with a Spanish tile roof effect. The Northwestern now controls the Elston, the Maplewood and the Casimer Theatres.

Aaron Jones, Jr., manager of the Woods Theatre for Jones, Linick & Schaefer, will handle the publicity now that Ralph Kettering is associated with the Ascher circuit.

Charley Ryan, manager of the Milford Theatre, is making a drive for the patronage of the children in his district by featuring comedies and novelties.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have added Sid Hall and his jazz orchestra to the program of the Rialto Theatre and last week played to capacity business with a Charlestown contest, a personal appearance of Gunnar Kasson and Balto and the first showing of "Under the Rouge."

The Ascher circuit opened the new Midwest Theatre at 35th and Archer avenue, Chicago, Thursday evening, November 19, with a fine program. The policy will be de luxe pictures with stage presentations. Paul Sternberg will be musical director and Ralph Emerson organ soloist. The Midwest seats 3,000. "The Ancient Highway" will be the opening picture. R. C. MacMullan, formerly manager of the Roosevelt and the Merrill at Milwaukee, has been named manager of production of the Ascher circuit and will have charge of the stage productions. Ralph Kettering, who joined the organization last week, has returned from New York where he made arrangements for putting a stock company into the Chateau, which for several years has been the leading house of the Ascher circuit on the North Side. The opening bill will be "Best People," which will go into the house on December 7. The Ascher circuit will soon have the Colony at 59th and Kedzie ready for opening and negotiations are in progress to take over the 2,500-seat theatre going up at Ashland avenue and 79th street. Prospects are for a banner year with the organization and plans are being made to expand the circuit for 1926.

Fifteen years ago James Biba opened a 300-seat house at Springfield and 12th streets. Five years later his brother, Irving Biba, joined him and they opened another house in Cicero, the Clifford. Other theatres have been added and on Thursday, November 19, they opened the new Ritz at 6334 Roosevelt road with an elaborate program of music, presentations and pictures. The new theatre cost $500,000 and is the last word in theatre construction. Maurice Feller has been appointed musical director and John La Mothe solo organist. James Biba will give the new Ritz his personal supervision.

Joe Hopp, managing director of the American Theatres Corporation, has returned from Omaha where he addressed a meeting of Theatre Owners at the Loyal Hotel who were called together to join forces in booking pictures and acts for their programs.

William Pearl, who sold his theatres to the Highland Park Theatre Company, headed by Louis Laemmle, will leave for an extended tour of Florida with his wife. He expects to be gone most of the winter.

Fred M. Weber has been made manager of the Warrington Theatre at Oak Park, Ill. Carl Randolph is treasurer.

Aaron J. Jones has returned from a vacation at French Lick Springs.

A. H. Blackmore has been named manager of the Chatham of National Theatres at 75th and Cottage Grove avenue.

Harry E. McNevin and O. C. Pyle of Champaign, Ill., have added the Sipes Theatre at Kokomo to their circuit. They already control the Victory in that city. J. R. Woods has been sent from Urbana, Ill. to manage both houses.

J. Louis Guyon, who operates the Paradise Amusement Hall at Washington, will build a ten-story building on the northwest corner of Washington and Crawford, next to the projected Balaban & Katz West Side theatre. Mr. Guyon will sell a part of his holdings, he says, to that circuit for a Crawford avenue entrance to their new house.

New York to Celebrate Schine Month

COMMENCING November 15, Schine Month will be be celebrated in every house of the circuit with special programs. Patrons of the Rialto in Lockport, N. Y., are promised some big attractions. For nine years Meyer and Louis Schine have been instilling into their employes the absolute necessity of co-operation with the patrons of their theatres, in making them comfortable and in assisting them to enjoy the entertainment on the screen and stage. They have made their theatres institutions in every town.

George T. Cruzen, manager of the Palace Theatre in Lockport, is at it again. He put over a double page truck on "The Pony Express" in the form of a co-operative ad and then in his own space announced that he would give back to any one his money if he or she "thought their time and the price of the ticket wasted." And that went to one or a thousand and every man, woman or child of any age, said George. The Palace did S. R. O. business on this one. The ushers at the Palace are appearing in new winter uniforms. Says George in the last issue of the Palace Close-Up, the house organ:

"The thing about these uniforms that I am particularly proud of, are the fellows that wear them. It is that fine spirit of service that our boys are manifesting towards our patrons in which I am interested. I have never had occasion to think that any of our theatre attendants were other than perfect gentlemen in their attitude toward our people. However, if any of our boys should ever get 'out out of step' in their demeanor in the matter of service to you, reporting the incident directly to myself, will be a service for which they themselves would be grateful."

Manager J. R. Osborne is planning a big program for the week of November 30 to celebrate the second anniversary of the New Family Theatre, Batavia, N. Y. Mr. Osborne has renewed a contract with "Dusty" Rhodes, the organist, for another year at the Family. Mr. Osborne is sure giving Batavians some splendid film programs these days, and they are responding in fine shape.

The Fox company is not building but leasing the theatre to be constructed by David and Joseph Coplon at 606-616 Main street, Buffalo. Plans for the house are being made by Lempert & Sons of Rochester. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 4,000. The building housing the theatre will be nine stories high on the Main street side. Work will begin about February 1. E. M. Fay of Providence and Mike Comerford of Scranton are interseted with the Fox company in the long term lease. The house will show Fox films with high-class music and other attractions.

Subject to the consent of neighboring churches, the Hager-Askey Building Company, 1325 Hertle avenue, received permission at the last meeting of the city council to build an 1-800-seat picture theatre at Main street and West Northup place, Buffalo. The Ellsworth Amusement Company has been incorporated to build a $100,000 theatre at 822 Tonawanda street, Buffalo.

George E. Williams, Paramount exploiteer in Buffalo, is in charge of the entertainment program to be given in the Allen Theatre, Medina, N. Y., December 14, when some 1,800 farmers are expected to attend the Carnival at Limestone to be staged in that town by the Michigan Limestone Company. Paramount is getting behind the project because of its national advertising campaign in the farm journals of the country.

Plans are being drawn by George Rapp of Chicago for the new theatre which Paramount in association with Mike Shea will build at 622 Main street, between the new Shea Buffalo and the new Fox theatres. It is understood that the Shea Buffalo will open the week of December 27.

Julian Eltinge, appearing in person at Shea's Hippodrome the week of November 15 attracted S. R. O. business to that big Buffalo house. Manager Vincent R. McFaul is making elaborate presentation plans for the showing of "The Merry Widow" next week.

Shawmut in Boston Is Open After Changes

THE New Shawmut Theatre on Blue Hill avenue, Boston, was reopened on November 8 after having been enlarged and redecorated. Harry H. Goldstein continues as manager. New furnishings have been installed and virtually the only reminder of the former house is its name. There now are more than 2,500 seats. The new Shawmut is controlled by the New England Theatres Operating Company, which operates more than a score of Boston suburban theatres. From Monday to Saturday there are three changes of photoplay programs, while on Sunday five acts of vaudeville are added to the bill. "Drusilla With a Million" was the opening picture.

H. A. Chenowith, former manager of the Music Hall, Pawtucket, R. I., and Strand Theatre, New Bedford, Mass., now is managing the Colonial Theatre in the latter city.

Earle Wilson has resigned as manager of the Olympia Theatre in New Bedford, which post he held for nearly five years.

A picture theatre to cost approximately $350,000 will be erected in Worcester by Benjamin I. Coonen. Work already has been started. Entrance to the theatre will be on two streets. The structure will be of modern design and large enough to accommodate vaudeville in addition to photoplays.

Earl Long has resigned as manager of the Rialto Theatre in Brockton. Mr. Long was in charge of that house for two years.

The St. James Theatre, Boston, which was acquired by the Keith-Albee interests, will be reopened late in November. The policy will be feature pictures and vaudeville.

Negotiations now are in progress by persons, whose identities have not been made known, for possession of land in the center of Westfield for the purpose of erecting a theatre.

Cincinnati Exhibitor Tries Bargain Shows

GRAVES E. ROACH, manager of the Strand Theatre, Cincinnati, announces a "bargain show" daily, including Sunday, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. with one scale of prices prevailing all over the house, when the admission will be 20 cents. After 1 o'clock the regular Strand scale of admissions will be charged. The Strand is one of the Libson chain, and if the experiment proves successful it will probably be extended to other Libson houses.

F. Paltelka, Cleveland, Ohio, has sold his Union Theatre to Otto Uhler.

The Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, is to have a huge new electric sign atop the building. A new marquis of very elaborate proportions has also been contracted for. Total cost of improvements is given as $10,000.

John A. Schwalm, manager of the Rialto, Hamilton, has donated the use of his house each Sunday morning as a meeting place for a newly-organized Bible class.

Word has been received of the death of the father of Paul Mueller, manager of the Casto and Palace theatres in Ashtabula.

Canadian Chain Runs Beauty Contest

UNITED Amusement, Ltd., Montreal, operating a chain in Montreal, has launched a "Beauty Contest" as a feature for five of its theatres, the contestants to make personal appearances at the respective theatres on stated nights. The competition covers a period of eight weeks and the schedule runs as follows: Monday, Papineau Theatre, of which the manager is J. E. Ledden; Wednesday, Rialto Theatre, Manager B. M. Garfiled; Thursday, Plaza Theatre, Manager E. Lefebve; Friday, Corona Theatre, Manager T. M. Keegan, and Saturday, Belmont Theatre, Manager J. A. Demetre. The winning girls will get a trip to New York to visit the Paramount, First National and Fox studios. General arrangements are under the direction of George Nicholas Ganetakos, general manager of the United Amusement.

P. J. Nolan, owner of the Rex Theatre, Ottawa, has announced that he is a candidate for the Board of Control of the City of Ottawa for 1926. Mr. Nolan has already been an alderman of Ottawa for several terms. The elections take place December 7.

Manager T. W. Logan of the Capitol Theatre, London, Ontario, obtained a full page tie-up with London merchants in the London Free Press the other day when he presented "The Trouble with Wives"

Manager Dave Coplan of the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, presented a "Syncopation Week" during the week of November 9. Two film features split the week, "Baree, son of Kazan," playing the first half and "Love's Highroad" the second half.

The Francais Theatre, Ottawa, of which A. Donaghy is the manager, has resumed its series of Sunday evening shows which is held under the direct auspices of St. Brigid's Roman Catholic Church. Ordinary Sunday performances are taboo in the Province of Ontario but these shows have been a regular Sunday attraction at the Francais for a number of seasons under the direction of the church.

Clifford Martin, formerly in the music business in Toronto, is now associated with the handsome Regent Theatre at Sudbury, Ontario.

"Legit" Man Becomes N. Y. Exhibitor

PICTURE shows run fifty-two weeks a year and it's a whole lot better to have something coming in for the fifty-two-straight than ten or twelve weeks with the legitimate, argues J. W. Standish, who has just entered the ranks of the exhibitor and is locating in Unadilla, N. Y., where he has reopened the Idle Hour Theatre. When it comes to the "legit" Mr. Standish is far from being a cub, having at one time managed Eva Tanquay, Eddie Foy and a lot of other Broadway stars. But things are not as they once were, remarked Mr. Standish on his first visit to Film Row in Albany last week, booking pictures for the months to come. He plans to start with one house, and if successful he will branch out later on. First of all, Mr. Standish plans to let the good people not only of Unadilla but for twenty miles around know of the pictures he is playing. No less than 500 one-sheets are being used each week, and with many a novelty feature Mr. Standish believes that the future holds much in store for him, even though just at present his house is running but three nights a week.

"Have a cigar? Thank you, Mr. Harrison, I don't mind if I do." And then Jerome B. Harrison, of the Savoy and the Empire Theatres in Syracuse, with a broad grin admits that he's a daddy and proceeds to tell all about it. "Best baby in the world," remarks Mr. Harrison, as he continues down the street with his vest pockets bulging with Havana's best.

Herman Vineberg, manager of the Albany and Regent in Albany, was right in the midst of things last week, having been named as one of the captains in the big Community Chest drive.

Walter Hays of the Strand group of houses evidently believes in making every minute count. Arriving in Albany last Thursday on his way from New York to Buffalo, he reached the Mark Strand five minutes after the train arrived, and after spending a few minutes in going over business matters with Uly S. Hill, managing director of the several Strand houses in Albany and Troy, Mr. Hays hied back-stage with Mr. Hill and screened a picture or two before making his train for Buffalo.

November 23 has been fixed definitely for the opening of the new 1,500-seat theatre in Ilion, owned by Whitney, Young and Pierce. "The Ten Commandments" will be the opening feature. Robert Pierce, manager, was in town the other day and said that a ten-piece orchestra would furnish the music and that the policy of the house would be to devote the first half of each week to pictures and the last half to vaudeville.

According to reports, and they appear reliable, the village of Clinton is to have a new picture theatre in the near future. The village now has one house run by Leonard Garvey.

George Cohen, with houses in Poughkeepsie and Newburgh, is thanking his lucky stars these days—and probably joined in this respect with quite a number of others—that no one happened to be under the smoke stack of the Poughkeepsie house when it blew over. It is said that there were several narrow escape from what might have been a very bad accident.

Using the slogan, "Any seat, any time, for 25 cents," the Eckel Theatre in Syracuse, which was included in the recent transaction by which the Strand interests acquired the Robbins chain, is now running to capacity.

Bill Dillon of Ithaca, president of the New York State M. P. T. O., has been whooping it up in more ways than one during the last few weeks. Yes, business has been good with Mr. Dillon, but the greater share of the whooping-it-up process—and it might be said that Mr. Dillon has been some whooper—must be attributed directly to an attack of whooping cough that stuck like a long lost brother. Mr. Dillon drove from Ithaca to Hanover, N. H., last week for the Cornell-Dartmouth game, but after Cornell had been snowed under, Mr. Dillon, Arab-like, slipped quietly into the night.

Friday the 13 means nothing in the life of James Roach, manager of the Farley houses in Schenectady. After playing to good business with "The Phantom of the Opera" at the State, Mr. Roach, figuring that there must be more ready money in town, opened with "The Merry Widow" at the State on the thirteenth. Incidentally "The Phantom" is said to have played to the best Sunday's business in many months.

Missed you last week, Mr. Claude V. Fish, owner of the American in Schenectady, but we are not averse to a Corona a week hence and with it we don't mind hearing all about the baby girl that arrived at the Fish domicile a week or so ago.

"Nothing like getting them going as well as coming," remarked Edward Walsh, manager of the Albany Theatre in Schenectady the other day as he explained why the electric sign announced the picture being played, as one approached the theatre from downtown, while from the other direction those attending the theatre read in the electric lights the attraction for the next few days to come.

The many friends of C. H. Buckley, running the Leland and the Clinton Square Theatres in Albany, will be greatly pleased in knowing that Mrs. Buckley, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis, is now on the road to recovery.

The more theatres Bill Smalley takes over, the less Albany sees him. Mr. Smalley used to come to town and remain for a couple of days. Last week he was in, and after working like a beaver, booking pictures, departed without so much as a how-do-you-do.

There is one thing certain and that is that M. P. Moran, an exhibitor in Coxsackie, will never be accused of monopolizing the conversation. Mr. Moran was in town the other day, and after much diligent questioning as to how he was getting on, replied with two "Yes's" and one "No," and then remarked that he was forced to catch a bus for home. Anyhow, he runs four nights a week and gets 25 cents admission.

Harry Hellman, who believes in the Rooseveltian theories excepting that pertaining to a dozen or so children, is keeping fit these days as he saws and chops the wood from behind his camp at Crooked Lake. Mr. Hellman devotes so many hours a day to his Royal Theatre, but always manages to motor out to the lake for a few hours' recreation.

John W. Ludlow, manager of the Victoria in Watertown, is back from a week's vacation over the line to friends in Ottawa and Brockville.

Even though the theatres run by Jimmy Rose in Troy and Rensselaer are but neighborhood houses, Mr. Rose is staging many a benefit these days in which he is receiving the whole-hearted co-operation of the neighborhood, and incidentally many a dollar that might otherwise have strayed. The Columbia in Rensselaer was packed to its doors last Friday and Saturday night at a 20-cent admission in a benefit to provide the wherewithal for next Easter's trip of the high school to Washington. On Tuesday and Wednesday, the Bijou in Troy staged a benefit with the Parent-Teachers' organization. The Bijou now has Harry Rose as its manager and runs double features two nights a week, with the remaining nights a straight program. Elmer Griffin is manager of Gardner Hall for Mr. Rose and double features also hold forth there for two nights a week. John Doocy, formerly with the Griswold in Troy, is handling the King in that city for Mr. Rose. William Orcutt, manages the Columbia, while Henry Windekenecht is looking after the theatres which Mr. Rose has in Kinderhook and Nassau.

Exhibitors in Northern New York will miss a visit from William Earl Leonard of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, working out in Albany. In further explanation, it might be said that Mr. Leonard was married last Monday night to Miss Winifred O'Neil of Glens Falls.

Benjamin W. Harriman, who ran the Century in Lawrence, Mass., at one time and sold out, is now handling the door at the Strand in Schenectady.

James Roach got in touch with President Walker of the Schenectady trolley lines last week and used a decorated special car between Albany and Schenectady, picking up those who desired to see "The Phantom of the Opera" at the State. It was the first time the scheme had ever been tried of soliciting business from along the inter-urban line.

Homestead, Pa., House Opens Auspiciously

STAHL'S new Million Dollar Theatre in Homestead, Pa., was auspiciously opened on Armistice Day and a more enthusiastic aggregation of film fans, exchangemen and business men generally never before assembled on a similar occasion. The second floor contains a physicians' exchange in which six doctors and dentists have already established offices. The third floor is arranged for high-class living apartments. Manager Tom Shrader of the Olympic is one of the few theatre managers in the local territory who realizes the worth of added attractions and short subjects as extra business-getters. Tom always devotes half of the space in his newspaper ads to the enumeration of his short subjects, and there is always a large sign hanging in front of the Olympic lobby which informs the passers-by just what are the titles and the stars of the short subjects.

J. Knox Strachan, for a few weeks assistant manager of the Cameo in downtown Pittsburgh, has been named manager, succeeding Ray Brown, resigned. Mr. Strachan came here only recently, having formerly been assistant manager at the Olympic in Buffalo. Mr. Brown, who is considering two propositions, will take a few days' rest before deciding.

First of Charles Hoyt Plays Included Among Productions in Work by Fox

FEATURING the latest telegraphic bulletin from Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, is the news that "A Trip to Chinatown" is included in the eight productions just put into work on the Fox lot in Hollywood for this season's program. It will be released on February 7.

"A Trip to Chinatown" is one of the ten great Charles Hoyt plays which Fox Films has bought. Years ago it established the first record for a long run on Broadway; then it took the country by storm with numerous companies on tour.

The role of the comedy widow in "A Trip to Chinatown," which is considered by the theatre world as the greatest part ever written for a woman, has been given to Margaret Livingston. Earle Foxe, star of the Fox Van Bibber comedies, will play the leading male rode. J. Farrell MacDonald and Harry Woods have important character parts. Robert Kerr, director of the Van Bibbers, is behind the megaphone and the production is under the personal supervision of George Marshall, Fox comedy chief. It will be produced as a feature length comedy.

Other productions just launched are "The Palace of Pleasure," "Daybreak," Tom Mix in "My Own Pal," "The Johnstown Flood," "The Gilded Butterfly," Buck Jones in "The Gentle Cyclone," and the modern sequences of "The Ancient Mariner." "The First Year" and "The Golden Strain" have been started within the past two weeks and are now well along in production.

Emmett Flynn is directing "The Palace of Pleasure" from the play "Lola Montez," by Adolf Paul. It's the story of the pretty Irish girl who, posing as a Spanish dancer, left a trail of broken hearts and political intrigue in the capitals of Europe. Betty Compson portrays the character of Lola, and Edmund Lowe is playing the highly romantic leading male role. Henry Kolker is the villain of the piece. Harvey Clark, Jacques Rollens and Nina Ramano have supporting parts. "The Palace of Pleasure" will be released on January 10.

Because of his intimate knowledge of Hungarian life, Rowland V. Lee was assigned to direct "Daybreak," based on Dorothy Brandon's highly successful play, "The Outsider." The collection of Hungarian art and architectural sketches he gathered while traveling in Hungary are being used in the present production.

Lou Tellegen has been given the finest role of his entire career as the Hungarian gypsy sorcerer in "Daybreak." Jacqueline Logan and Walter Pidgeon have the roles of the English dancers who are reigning favorities of the London and continental stages. Mr. Pidgeon was loaned to Fox for this role by Joseph Schenck. Charles Lane, Gustav von Selferitz and Roy Atwill are included in the cast. "Daybreak" will be released on January 17.

Tom Mix appears in the role of protector to an orphan girl in "My Own Pal," scheduled for release on February 28, which the modern Buffalo Bill has just started filming under the direction of J. G. Blystone. It is based on Gerald Beaumont's story, "The Gallant Guardsman." Olive Borden, who also played the lead in "The Yankee Senor."

Irving Cummings was engaged by Fox Films with "The Johnstown Flood" in mind. He has started this, his first picture under the Fox banner, with a brilliant cast including George O'Brien and Florence Gilbert in the heroic leading roles. Anders Randolf, Paul Nicholson, Paul Panzer, and Georgie Harris are also in the cast. Scenes in which George O'Brien does not appear are now being filmed, and he will join the company as soon as his work in "3 Bad Men" is completed. This dynamic epic based on American annals will be released on January 31.

A company under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke was assembled at Bishop, California, in readiness to start shooting scenes in "The Gentle Cyclone" as soon as Buck Jones arrived. This is his sixth starring vehicle of the season, scheduled for May 9. Buck will be surrounded by an abundance of beauty and talent, with a cast including Rose Blossom, Marion Harlan, Kathleen Myers, Jay Hunt, Will Walling, Reed House, Stanton Heck, Grant Withers, and Oliver Hardy.

Chester Bennett has started filming the modern sequences of "The Ancient Mariner," which is the big Fox Christmas special, with a cast including Clara Bow, Nigel de Brullier, Leslie Fenton, Earle Williams and Hallan Cooley. Henry Otto has already completed the fantasy sequences based directly on Samuel Taylor Coleridge's poem, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner."

John Griffith Wray, former Ince director in chief, has started production of "The Gilded Butterfly," with Alma Rubens and Bert Lytell in the leading roles. Frank Keenan, Herbert Rawlinson and Vera Lewis are the other principals. It's the story of a crafty father who taught his daughter the world owed them a living, and is to be released January 3.

Frank Borzage had previously launched "The First Year," based on Frank Craven's stage hit, and is now well along in production. Matt Moore and Kathryn Perry are the newlyweds, and the supporting cast in this great comedy of married life includes Virginia Madison, Frank Currier, Margaret Livingston, John Patrick, Frank Cooley and Carolynne Snowden. This is scheduled for January 24.

Victor Schertzinger is at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, historic old post of the 10th U. S. Cavalry, filming the outdoor sequences of "The Golden Strain," to be released on December 27. This is based on Peter B. Kyne's Cosmopolitan Magazine story, "Thoroughbreds." Kenneth Harlan portrays a dashing young cavalry officer, and Madge Bellamy is the belle of the post. The cast includes Hobart Bosworth, Frank Beal, Ann Pennington, Grace Morse, Frank McGlynn, Jr., and Lawford Davidson.

H. B. Warner Signed for Leading Role in "Silence"

Cecil De Mille "cinched" the forthcoming Producers Distributing Corporation release, "Silence," when he signed H. B. Warner for the leading role.

Mr. Warner played the leading role in the stage production of "Silence" and carried the play to a decided hit at the National Theatre in New York and since the closing of the New York engagement he has been repeating the success on tour with the production.

The last stage presentation of the play was given last Saturday in Philadelphia. And on Monday Mr. Warner left for Los Angeles to immediately start work in the screen version which will be directed by Rupert Julian at the De Mille Studio.

"Silence" is an exceptional tense drama of the underworld written by Max Marcin. The screen adaptation was made by Beulah Marie Dix and it is De Mille's intention to give H. B. Warner a supporting cast of even greater dramatic power than the stage support.

Eight Pictures Being Edited At the Warner Bros. Studios

EIGHT pictures are now in the process of editing at the Warner Bros. studio and will soon be ready for an early release.

Ernst Lubitsch is cutting his latest feature production "Lady Windermere's Fan," in which Irene Rich, Bert Lytell, Ronald Colman, and May McAvoy are featured. Mr. Lubitsch brought the final scenes which he shot at Toronto, Canada, with him when he returned from New York recently. This feature will be released in about thirty days.

"Hogan's Alley," a great comedy, has been previewed and tried out in several neighborhood houses and was well received. It is Monte Blue's third starring feature and personally supervised in production by Bennie Zeidman. It was directed by Roy del Ruth and will be one of the big features of the Warner 1925 program. The cast includes Patsy Ruth Miller, Willard Louis, Louise Fazenda, Max Davidson and Ben Turpin.

"His Jazz Bride," with Marie Prevost and Matt Moore, is almost ready for release. This is the first picture with this team that Herman Raymaker has directed.

"The Fighting Edge," a border comedy drama with Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller, is nearing its completion. Henry Lehrman directed.

"The Love Toy," Lowell Sherman's second starring feature is about completed. This story will present Sherman in an entirely new role.

"The Man Upstairs," adapted from Earl Derr Biggers' story "The Agony Column" and featuring Monte Blue, finished production the latter part of last week and has entered the cutting room. Dorothy Devore played the leading feminine role.

"The Cave Man" with Matt Moore and Marie Prevost was finished Saturday. Lewis Milestone directed. The last two features are not scheduled for release before the first of the year.

Hutchinson Analyzes Comedies; Lists Laugh-Getting Methods

AN ANALYSIS of comedy in the abstract is not an easy task, and it is perhaps not often attempted. Producers, like other people, are apt to go by a sort of "sense of feel" in their estimates of the value of comedy and comedy scenes. What appeals to one sense of humor, of course, does not necessarily appeal to all. But Samuel S. Hutchinson, veteran showman, who has just returned to production activity as head of the Hutchinson Film Corporation, believes that all humor can be grouped broadly under five heads, with various subdivisions. Mr. Hutchinson is producing "The Nutcracker," starring Edward Everett Horton, and as this is the first of a big series of feature comedies for Associated Exhibitors release, his views are very interesting, particularly in view of his fifteen years of experience in the film and theatre world.

"It seems to me, that all comedy elements can be classified as falling under one of the following units—Repetition, Exaggeration, Incongruity, Anachronism and Misery," says Mr. Hutchinson. "If a producer, director or writer will keep those four divisions in mind, he can help to create true amusement in the literal meaning of the word. And it is not only a question of analysis. In his ability to tell why a thing is funny, or to see clearly where it will be funny lies much of the success of comedy production.

"Repetition is one of the greatest of comedy values. That is particularly noticeable on the speaking stage, or in subtitle comedy. It is not quite so important in situation comedy, although it has its merit there too, of course. The more repetition of a line or a title, even though it is not intrinsically amusing, will get a laugh the third or fourth time it occurs. I recall particularly a line from Don Marquis' play 'The Old Soak'—the catchline, so to speak of the production. It was simply 'Al's here!' Yet that line, in repetition, became hilariously funny. The same thing applies with great force to title humor in pictures.

"Transposing people or customs away from their natural orbit and putting them several centuries in advance of, or behind, their times, always makes for laughter," Mr. Hutchinson avers. "Such Anachronism is what gives most of the comedy to a picture like 'A Yankee in King Arthur's Court.' A gent who is dressed in a Crusader's suit of tin B. V. D.'s, who exclaims 'Odds Bodkins!' and who then goes out and leaps on a motorcycle, for instance, is typical of what might be called anachronistic humor.

"The pretenses of common, everyday people in their ludicrous attempts to ape their superiors or be something that they are not is all a part of the Humor of Exaggeration. Falstaff, with his bluff and boastfulness, is a fine example. Scores and hundreds of characterizations and situations in our modern pictures can be classiffed in this category."

MARIE PREVOST CAN COAX ANYTHING OUT OF ALMOST ANYBODY but in Warner Bros. "Bobbed Hair" she seems to be having her hands full coaxing her aunt (played by Emily Fitzroy). The story of the picture is a whimsical one, but exhibitors will find it ripping entertainment for their patrons.

THERE'S ACTION IN Cecil B. DeMille's personally directed feature, "The Road to Yesterday," which Producers Distributing Corp. will release. This scene proves it.

Big Throng of Stage and Screen Stars at "Stella Dallas" Show

WITH an invitation professional matinee, which crowded the Apollo Theatre with folk of the screen and stage, critics and motion picture experts, and an evening performance at which scores of celebrities in the spoken drama and of the silver sheet were present. Samuel Goldwyn presented his latest film production, "Stella Dallas," to the public last Monday, November 10, in its New York and world premiere.

Both afternoon and evening showings, the latter the first public screening anywhere, were honored by packed audiences. The professional matinee was given in honor of Miss Ethel Barrymore, and it proved to be a happy combination of the performance so dear to the hearts of Manhattan stage folk and the "preview" so popular with cinema notables in Hollywood. The Apollo was full-seated when the afternoon performance began, and all the stage stars now playing in New York were present. Among them were Miss Barrymore, whose comments on "Stella Dallas" inspired the performance in her honor; Irene Bordoni, Bruce McRae, Hilda Spong, Mary Boland, Marjorie Rambeau, Philip Merivale, Violet Kemble Cooper, A. E. Matthews, Roland Young, Ina Claire, Laura Hope Crews, Dennis King, Mary Hay, Marilyn Miller, Clifton Webb, Sidney Blackmer, Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt.

In the evening prior to the formal premiere performance the streets were jammed outside the Apollo for almost an hour before the opening hour by crowds who braved the gales of wind sweeping through every opening in order to watch the screen and stage celebrities as they arrived. Police handled the crowd without disorder and a line was kept clear in the lobby through which the notables passed before a packed mass of those who held tickets but waited to see their favorite actresses and actors pass in review.

Outbursts of applause were frequent during the screening of "Stella Dallas", and Belle Bennett who portrays the leading role of Stella Dallas, and Little Lois Moran, who has the character of the daughter Laurel, were cheered again as they entered and took their seats.

The roster of the audience contained the names of leaders of society, stage, screen, the art, finance and big business. Among those seen were Adam Gimbel, Jules Brulatour and Hope Hampton, Will Hays, Dr. Giannini, Lewis Stone, Phil Payne, Arthur Brisbane, Herbert Bayard Swope, Paul Block, S. Start New Walsh Feature

Version Based On Story by Robert E. Pinkerton—Has Strong Cast

George Walsh, who is making a series of six modern, action romances for Chadwick Pictures Corporation, will not come to New York, as previously announced, but will start work shortly on his fourth starring vehicle of the current season. The new picture will be a screen version of "The Test of Donald Norton," the popular novel from the pen of Robert E. Pinkerton. The story, a North Woods mystery thriller, provides a new background for the fast-moving action stories for which this star is noted. The cast is now being selected and will be announced shortly. It is expected that Joan Meredith, who has appeared in several Walsh features, will be in the cast.

Walsh has recently completed "The Count of Luxembourg," an adaptation of Franz Lehar's popular operetta, in which he will be featured with an all-star cast, including Helen Lee Worthing, James Woods, Morrison, Michael Dark, Lola Todd, Lucille LaVerne, Charles Requa and Joan Meredith. "The Count of Luxembourg" will be released January 15th.

Leonard Begins Production of "Dance Madness"

Conrad Nagel and Claire Windsor have the leading roles and head a cast that includes Douglas Gilmore, Hedda Hopper, Bert Roach and others.

Fanchon, popular Los Angeles dance creator, has charge of the dance scenes in this production, which deals with modern foibles in dramatic and hilarious fashion. Much comedy has gone into the creation of this ultra modern story.

Federico Sagor has made the screen adaptation.

Mrs. Adams Leaves for Coast

Mrs. E. K. Adams, chief of the west coast story department for Cecil B. De Mille, will return to Los Angeles shortly after spending six weeks in New York City on a quest for story material for De Mille's 1926-27 program.

In association with Mr. Beahan, head of the eastern story department of Producers Distributing Corporaiton, Mr. Adams has mapped out a tentative 1926-27 program based upon the very best story material available; and immediately upon her arrival in Los Angeles this material will be placed before Mr. De Mille and John C. New Director Making Good Strayer's Productions Proving to Be Big Box-Office Success for C. P. C.

Frank R. Strayer, whose latest achievement is "Lure of the Wild," a Columbia Pictures Corporation production featuring the new marvel dog, Lightning, was "discovered" by Harry Cohn, in charge of production for this organization.

Mr. Strayer, who was formerly one of the best known assistant directors in the motion picture industry, was given his first opportunity to reveal his directorial genius when he was signed by Harry Cohn to direct "Enemy of Men."

Harry and Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt, the executives of Columbia Pictures Corporation, felt the need of new directors and decided that Mr. Strayer with his background of many years of experience associated with the production of pictures, assistant to many of the best known directors, would make good with the right opportunity.

That their confidence was not misplaced is proven by the long list of successes Frank Strayer has already achieved, "Enemy of Men," "Steppin' Out," and "Lure of the Wild," being but a few.

Clara Bow to Play Role of Kittens in Big Picture

Production of "Dancing Mothers," which Herbert Brenon was to have begun at the Paramount Long Island studio, has been postponed because of changes in the cast.

Both Miss Bow and Mr. Keith were under contract to B. P. Schulberg, who recently joined Famous.

Alice Joyce, Conway Tearle, Elsie Lawson and Dorothy Cummings are also in the cast.

Lloyd and Griffith Pictures Listed for December by F. N.

FOUR pictures that promise much in the way of box-office value as well as artistic merit, are scheduled for release by First National in December. They are "The Splendid Road," December 6th; "Infatuation," December 13th; "The Girl From Montmartre," December 20th; "Joanna," December 27th.

A print of 'The Splendid Road" was received and reviewed at the home office of First National last week and according to reports this is the finest production that Frank Lloyd has made since "The Sea Hawk." It is based on a story by Vingie E. Roe with the far West of the gold rush days as a background. There is drama, comedy and a wealth of human interest in Mr. Lloyd's handling of this subject.

The second release of the month is Corinne Griffith in an adaptation of W. Somerset Maugham's "Caesar's Wife" which, now, goes under the title of "Infatuation." Following close upon the success scored by "Classified," this Somerset Maugham story provides Miss Griffith with an opportunity for an unusual characterization in the role of a fascinating woman. Malcolm MacGregor, Percy Marmont and Warner Oland are numbered in the cast under the direction of Irving Cummings.

Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone are the featured players in "The Girl from Montmartre," based on a novel by Anthony Pryde entitled "Spanish Sunlight." Eve Unsell prepared the continuity for this colorful romance. Assisting the featured players are Robert Ellis, William Eugene, E. L. Calvert and a number of other players of note. "The Girl from Montmartre" is a Sawyer-Lubin production directed by Alfred E. Green.

Edwin Carewe is the producer of "Joanna," a production of the newspaper serial by H. L. Gates, the circulation of which has run into millions. The popular qualities of the story which made this an ideal newspaper serial lend themselves equally well to motion interpretation, with Dorothy Mackail as the fortunate heroine who inherits $1,000,000 and Jack Mulhall as the hero. "Joanna" is an ideal blending of romance, realism and adventure.

Joe Rock In New York

"Steppin' Out" Plays to Capacity

The Columbia production, "Steppin' Out," smashed all box office records at the Capitol Theatre, Chicago, playing to capacity houses for the entire period of its engagement. This picture has been accorded enthusiastic receptions wherever shown and has played to packed houses consistently. Every exhibitor has spread himself to advertise "Steppin' Out," realizing that in this picture he had one of the best independent productions of the year.

AS THEY ARE IN "THE SPLENDID CRIME"—William de Mille is the author and produced this Paramount feature in which Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton play the leading roles.

New York's Prettiest Girl Receives 6 Months' Contract

DOROTHY M. KITCHEN was the unanimous choice of the judges and of the audience at four different performances at the Hippodrome for "Peg of New York," the wind-up of the greatest newspaper-theatre-picture tie-up ever arranged. More than 65,000 New York girls entered the Universal exploitation contest, of whom 22 semi-finalists packed the huge New York playhouse four consecutive night performances. The judges were: Howard Chandler Christy, famous illustrator; Mrs. Oliver Harriman, society matron; Dr. Robert Bachman, Philadelphia artist; George M. Cohan, Broadway star and musical comedy producer, and Miss Dorothy Herzog, Daily Mirror movie critic.

Credit for the comprehensive arrangements tying-up Universal's "See America First" New York picture with the Keith-Albee circuit, comprising Keith, Moss and Proctor houses, goes to William C. Herrmann, manager of Universal's Big "U" Exchange; Charles MacDonald, General Exploitation Manager of B. S. Moss, and C. E. Holah, in charge of Universal's trans-continental "studio on wheels." Several conferences with Messrs. Arthur White, Mark Luescher, J. J. Murdock and J.. H. Maloney resulted in enthusiasm for the project.

In addition to several weeks' pictorial and editorial publicity in the New York Daily Mirror, unlimited advertising and exploitation was accorded the project by more than a score of theatres in their elimination trials. One of the features of the Hippodrome performance was the appearance on its huge stage of Universal's "See America First" trailer.

Garver Joins De Mille

Oliver B. Garver, a former Los Angeles newspaper man, and more recently in the advertising business in Hollywood, has been secured for the publicity department of the De Mille Studio by Barrett C. Kiesling, publicity director. Garver will start immediately publicizing Rod La Rocque, Leatrice Joy, Lillian Rich, Vera Reynolds and other Cecil B. De Mille players.

Books "Syd" Chaplin Film for Its Eighth Anniversary

As the feature attraction in the celebration of its eighth anniversary week, the California Theatre, San Francisco, booked "Syd" Chaplin in "The Man On the Box," the production in which the comedian is scoring a big hit on the Warner Bros. schedule.

The theatre also secured the presence, in personal appearance, of "Syd" Chaplin and "Chuck" Reisner, who directed the picture and seconded the star in comedy stunts. Both men appeared on the stage on the opening Saturday and Sunday of the run and were accorded an enthusiastic welcome.

Starts "So This Is Mexico"

With the engagement of the complete cast, work was launched recently by Richard Talmadge on his new production for F. B. O. "So This Is Mexico." The story is by James Bell Smith, who has authored many of the recent Talmadge comedy melodramas. The cast includes besides Mr. Talmadge, Louise Lorraine, Charles Clary, Henry Herbert and Charles Mailes. Noel Smith will direct, Albert Mazetti will assist and Jack Stevens will handle the cameras.

Working on New Mix Film

Fox Starts Casting for "My Own Pal," a Gerald Beaumont Story

Casting has just started at the Fox West Coast Studios for the latest Tom Mix picture, to be called "My Own Pal." The scenario is by Lillie Hayward, from a story, "The Gallant Guardsman," written by Gerald Beaumont.

Beaumont has for more than three years been getting at least one story a month published in the better magazines and has come to be regarded as another author with a box-office name. His cleverness of plot and swiftness of action are particularly well brought out in this Tom Mix starring vehicle, which will be directed by J. G. Blystone.

Olive Borden, who will have the feminine lead, will also be seen with Tom Mix in "The Yankee Senor." The cast, in "My Own Pal," is truly notable, having in it Tom Santschi, Paul Panzer, Virginia Marshall, William Calvin, Grace Goodall, Tom McGuire, Helen Lynch, Ben Bard and Jacques Rollens, not forgetting Tony the wonder horse. Additions to the cast, about to be chosen, will soon be announced.

F. B. O. Western Stars Speeding Up Production

F. B. O.'s three whirlwind western stars are speeding up the production trail.

Fred Thomson and Silver King have just finished "All Around Frying Pan" and are preparing to launch their next, as yet untitled.

Tom Tyler has just completed "The Wyoming Wildcat" and is working on "The Cowboy Musketeer."

Bob Custer has finished "The Ridin' Streak" and is filming "The News Buster."

Dave Kirkland is directing Thomson; Bob De Lacy, Tyler; and Del Andrews is handling the megaphone for Custer.

Bob Custer, F. B. O. western star, is working at full speed these late autumn days in Hollywood. He has just finished "The Ridin' Streak," under Del Andrew's direction and will shortly launch "The News Buster." The latter story is an original by William Branch and relates the adventures of a cowboy reporter. The comedy elements of the narrative will be strongly developed, it is stated.

Schlesinger Off to London

To Arrange Memorable Premiere of Barrymore in "The Sea Beast"

Gus Schlesinger, in charge of Warner Bros.' foreign department, has left New York for London. Within a week he expects the first print of John Barrymore's big special production, "The Sea Beast," to follow him and Schlesinger will enter at once upon arrangements for a London premiere which he intends shall be in keeping with the magnitude of this attraction and prove memorable in British cinema history.

Only a short time before his departure for England, the foreign department head returned to New York from the Warner West Coast Studios, where he acquainted himself thoroughly with every detail of the 1925-26 production schedule. "The Sea Beast" was still in process of production when he reached the coast and much time was spent in discussing with Mr. Barrymore various features incorporated in this attraction. In all arrangements, even to the casting of the production and the exercise of a general supervision over the preparation of the scenario, the star was active.

Schlesinger was captivated by "The Sea Beast" and returned to New York predicting a notable world-wide triumph.

Schlesinger expects to remain abroad at least until the middle of next spring. Following the London premiere he contemplates a wide tour of the continent. In Paris and other capitals and key centers he will acquaint exhibitors with the attractions included in the Warner Forty.

"Perfect Clown" Released

Larry Semon's Latest Feature Comedy Is Second Chadwick Film for November

"The Perfect Clown," Larry Semon's latest feature comedy, which is said to promise an even greater success than "The Wizard of Oz," was released on November 15, being the second Chadwick Pictures Corporation's release of the month. "Blue Blood," George Walsh's second modern action romance, was released on November 1.

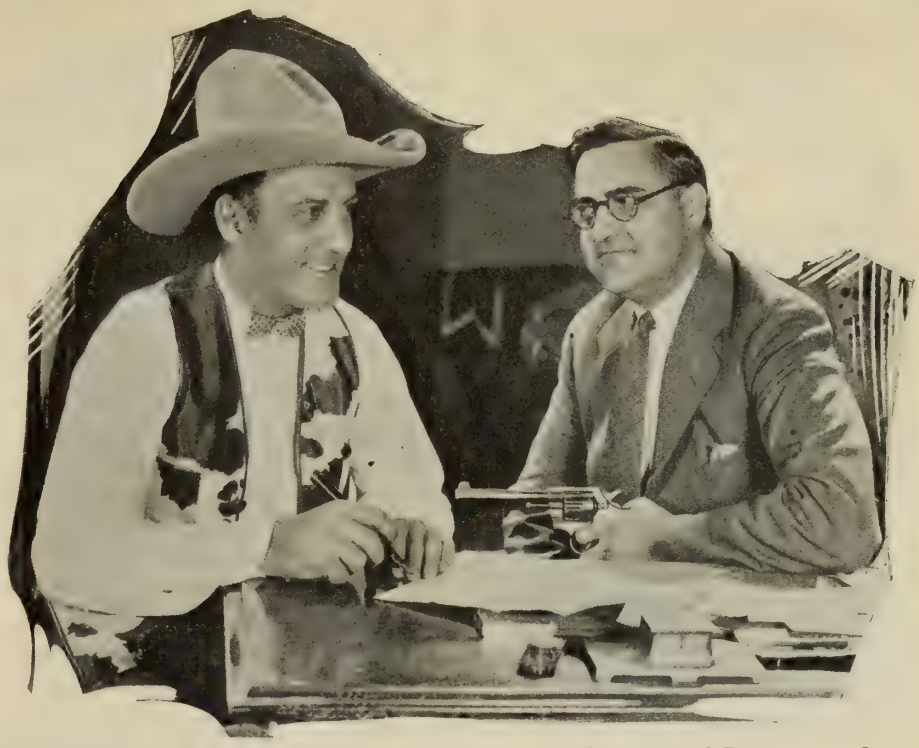
"The Perfect Clown," which was written especially for Semon, is typical of the recent pictures of this star, in that it is lavish in settings, spectacular in production and offers a cast of many stellar favorites. Dorothy Dwan, leading woman in the "Wizard of Oz," again plays opposite the star. Oliver Hardy, the Tin-Woodsman in the former production, plays one of his typical roles. Others include Kate Price, a favorite since the first days of motion pictures, Joan Meredith, who has appeared in several recent Chadwick Pictures, Otis Harlan and G. Howe Black.

Larry Semon nad Dorothy Dwan, who is Mrs. Semon, are now in New York, having come here for the preview, which will be announced shortly.

Greta Garbo's First Film

Greta Garbo, noted Scandinavian screen actress, will make her first American screen appearance in "The Torrent," a Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to be directed by Monta Bell from the famous Blasco Ibanez novel, adapted to the screen by Dorothy Farnum.

Ricardo Cortez has been signed by M-G-M for the leading male role. The supporting cast includes Gertrude Olmsted, Edward Connelly, Maurice Kains and Lucien Littlefield.



ON THE DOTTED LINE . . . President W. Ray Johnston, of Rayart, gets Jack Perrin's name in the right place on a contract so that the popular star can put eight stories from published fiction into Rayart's widening distribution areas.

Four First National Pictures Go Into Work at Hollywood

FOUR pictures for First National release go into production December 7th at the Hollywood studios, according to latest reports from the coast. The pictures are "The Second Chance," "Kiki," "East of the Setting Sun" and "Mlle. Modiste."

"Kiki" is the famous Belasco play in which Lenore Ulric scored on the stage and which has been selected as the starring vehicle for Norma Talmadge. Hans Kraly has nearly completed the continuity and by the second week in December everything should be in readiness for the shooting of the first scenes under the direction of Clarence Brown.

The filming of "East of the Setting Sun" starring Constance Talmadge, was delayed until the first part of December in order to perfect the script, being prepared by Erich von Stroheim. Mr. von Stroheim has devoted many weeks to the writing of this continuity. The famous director, in addition to handling the megaphone, will play an important part in support of Miss Talmadge.

Corinne Griffith is now in New York assembling a lavish wardrobe for "Mlle. Modiste." She will return to the First National studios on the Coast within a few days, prepared to start work on the adaptation of the famous musical comedy success, under the direction of Robert Leonard. Adelaide Heilbron is writing the continuity.

The fourth picture scheduled is "The Second Chance," based on a story by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. Eve Unsell is working on the continuity.

Boston Premiere of "The Man of the Box"

"Syd" Chaplin in the Warner Bros.' attraction, "The Man On the Box," is to have its Boston premiere at the New Metropolitan Theatre December 14. The length of the run is yet to be determined. The Metropolitan is a Famous Players-Lasky house.

F. B. O. Buys New Stories

O. are: "Bright Lights," by Fred Kennedy Myton for Evelyn Brent: "So This is Mexico!" by James Bell Smith, featuring Richard Talmadge; "The Wild Bull of the Campus," starring Lefty Flynn; "The Fate of the Wolf" for Tom Tyler, and "The News Buster" for Bob Custer.

Other published and original stories are being purchased and prepared by F. B. O.'s editorial staff under the supervision of J. G. Hawks, scenario editor, and John C. Brownell, home office scenario head.

Barthelmess, at Sing Sing, Awards $50 to "Jimmy" Dunn

RICHARD BARTHELMESS stood on the rostrum in the large assembly hall in Sing Sing Prison, last Tuesday evening, and faced a barrage of applauding admirers for several minutes. The clamor rose to deafening proportions as more than fourteen hundred men thundered their applause of one of their favorite screen stars. When the ordeal ended for "Dick," he addressed the boys, and awarded prizes of various sums of money to more than a dozen of the gang who had submitted reviews of the forthcoming Barthelmess-Inspiration-First National picture, "The Beautiful City." Warden Lewis E. Lawes was unavoidably absent.

This new Barthelmess picture was shown to the gang at Sing Sing several weeks ago, and prizes aggregating $100 were donated by the star to be distributed among the "wise guys"—men whose opinions on some subjects are well worth knowing. It is interesting to know that more than 250 guests in the Hotel Lawes submitted unerring judgments on "The Beautiful City."

James ("Jimmy") Dunn, who has crowded a wealth of experience in a few years, deposited first prize, $50, with the financial bureau at Sing Sing. Albert A. Hatten was winner of second money, $25. Hatten submitted with his review a pen and ink impression of the star of "The Beautiful City." This drawing deserves commendation. Mr. Barthelmess will retain the original. Third prize, $15, was awarded to William Mallinson Schulman. Ten prizes of $1 each were awarded to Peter McDermott, Thomas Coby, E. A. H. Till, David Cohen, Moe Turman, Nelson H. Boone, Lester Garstenberg, Sidney Brown, James Traina and "Jim" (Just plain Jim. There ain't no more to it!).

Mr. Barthelmess delivered a very appropriate address to the boys. Dick was at his best, and he was the embodiment of sincerity as he shot his points one after another at the gang. He spoke of other screen stars, Tommy Meighan (no one but Tom has ever been allowed to "shoot" a picture in Sing Sing—in this instance, "The Man Who Found Himself") and others.

There was a lump in Dick's throat (a frog, or something) when he concluded, and turned and walked firmly off the stage. The Barthelmess voice seemed to go out—it died away and was lost, finally, in another burst of applause.

When "Jimmy" Dunn's review of "The Beautiful City" was read, a few moments later, the gang was in an uproar. In part, "Jimmy" wrote:

"Last night in Sing Sing Prison one of my pet aversions of the films, which had become a shibboleth, was utterly and irrevocably destroyed. The picture shown for the entertainment of the inmates of the Big House was a pre-release of the First National, 'The Beautiful City,' starring Richard Barthelmess and featuring Dorothy Gish.

"The story with its fairy tale ending where everybody lives happily ever after, filled with pathos and piquant human interest, was of unusual interest to me, but the sob-sisters of the press and the critics may have that field to themselves. They may eulogize or perversely pan it to their heart's content. Upon a few of the scenes, however, I am girded to do battle with any or all them.

"What a wind-up! The fight between Richard Barthelmess and William Powell, with the Chinese background, had the gang on their feet from start to finish. Once, in the stokehole of a British tramp, I saw a fight between a Lascar and a Finn, in which the Lascar lost an eye and the Finn three fingers—the Lascar had a knife you could row a boat with. This movie fight did not quite equal that, but it is, by far, the best rough-and-tumble two-man scrap I have ever seen in pictures. Jack London might have described it, I can't find the words, but—well, see the picture yourself."

Some of the other "professional" reviews were very interesting, but space does not permit further extracts from the winning reviews.

Changes in Field Staff

Warner Bros. Make J. S. Hebrew Branch Manager of Philadelphia District

Several important field changes in the Warner Bros.' organization were announced by Sam E. Morris, general manager in charge of distribution.

J. S. Hebrew, who had been manager at Philadelphia, becomes a division manager. He will have charge of the Philadelphia branch, with supervision over Washington also.

Harry E. Weiner, who has been a member of the Philadelphia staff, and formerly sold Warner product for a franchise-holder, was named Washington branch manager.

W. H. Rankin has been transferred from Seattle, where he was a member of the sales staff, to Salt Lake City, where he becomes branch manager, and O. P. Hall has become branch manager at Atlanta. Hall was with the Fox organization three years.

The Warners also formally reopened their New Haven branch this week, with Paul J. Swift again in charge.

"Last Edition" and "Keeper of the Bees" Get First Run Bookings in Big Houses

Two F. B. O. Pictures Eagerly Sought by Exhibitors

J. I. SCHNITZER
Vice-President of F. B. O. in Charge of Production

AN enviable record for first run bookings on F. B. O. product is being established by the sales department of the company, as a result of the painstaking effort of J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production and his production staff in making pictures possessing definite box-office and exploitation values, and of the equitable distribution policies inaugurated by Colvin W. Brown, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Concrete evidence that F. B. O. pictures are being booked extensively and largely by the best and biggest first runs throughout the country is contained in an announcement from Colvin W. Brown that to date hundreds of first run theatres have already contracted for "The Last Edition" and "The Keeper of the Bees," the former a November and the latter an October release. The list of theatre bookings which follows is but a portion of the contracts with which the sales department has been flooded for the last two weeks.

"The Last Edition," an Emory Johnson production which glorifies the men employed on a newspaper, was given a Broadway showing in New York where it played at B. S. Moss' Cameo Theatre. The film has been booked for early showing at the following houses:

Many Big Specials Offered by F. N. Under One Contract

UNDER a selling plan just announced by First National Pictures, five million dollars worth of special productions become available to every theatre in the United States and Canada that has not yet played them.

The five million dollars represents the actual cost of production, prints and advertising of the eight First National specials which may be sold under one contract. They are pictures which have proved big money-makers wherever shown, including three Norma Talmadge pictures, the tremendously popular "The Sea Hawk" and "Abraham Lincoln," just awarded the Photoplay Magazine medal as the best picture of the year.

The eight pictures on the list are, Frank Lloyd's "The Sea Hawk," starring Milton Sills and conceded to be one of the finest productions ever made; Al and Ray Rockett's wonderful portrayal of "Abraham Lincoln"; "Secrets," "The Lady" and "The Only Woman," three of the most popular pictures in which Norma Talmadge has been starred; "Quo Vadis," the great Italian spectacle presenting Emil Jannings in the role of Nero; "The Scarlet West," an epic of the West filled with the most thrilling sort of dramatic action, and "Sundown," another Western story of epic proportions dealing with the passing of the cattle barons.

Every picture on this list has profited by nation-wide advertising in magazines and newspapers. The box-office value of all of the productions has been proven at the leading theatres of the country.

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists

Samuel Goldwyn Picture One of Finest Ever Made, Is Truly a Dramatic and Emotional Masterpiece

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Laurel Dallas.....Lois Moran

Based on novel by Olive Higgins Prouty

Length—10,157 feet.

WHAT A PICTURE! "Stella Dallas," Samuel Goldwyn's first release through United Artists, is truly a masterpiece. We unqualifiedly believe it to be one of the finest pictures ever produced. Frankly we doubt if it has ever been equaled and are sure that it has never been surpassed in the tremendous sweep of its emotional appeal or the poignancy of its soul-stirring drama of mother-love and sacrifice.

"Stella Dallas" lays bare a woman's soul. We present the outline of the plot but mere words fail to convey more than a suggestion of the power of the story to twine itself around the heart. Upon the suicide of his father who has embezzled funds, Stephen Dallas, reared in luxury, forsakes his sweetheart Helen and hides in a mill town. Lonely, he succumbs to the blandishments of Stella. For a while their married life is happy and a baby girl is born. Stella, however, never rises to Stephen's social level. She dresses gaudily, her ideas and tastes are crude, her boon companion is a horseman of the coarse type. Stephen finally leaves her but allows her to keep the child, Laurel.

Years pass. Laurel grows up. Stella is brought to a realization of the fact that she is a drag on Laurel who takes after her father. Stifling her pride she agrees to a divorce so Stephen can marry Helen, now a widow, to provide Laurel with a proper home and "mother," but Laurel refuses to leave her own mother. Stella, deciding that no sacrifice to too great for her daughter's happiness, hunts up her friend Ed, now a drunkard, and tells Laurel she is going to marry him and sends her to visit her father on the plea that she and Ed are going away for a year. Laurel resumes her romance with a fine young fellow and they are married, while Stella in the rain outside watches the ceremony and leaves weeping, but happy that her sacrifice has not been in vain.

From every standpoint the handling of this production is superb. It is true that Mr. Goldwyn selected a story with wonderful possibilities, but unlimited credit is due to Frances Marion who, in her scenario, caught the woman's viewpoint of a woman author's story of the depths of a woman's soul and conveyed this to Henry King who transferred it to the screen, retaining the tremendously vital and human note that distinguishes this picture. Their work, however, would have gone for naught without the truly remarkable assistance of the players.

Miss Bennett's portrayal of the mother is magnificent. Called upon to depict Stella at three ages, the manner in which she has registered the physical as well as the mental changes is remarkable. Without obvious makeup she actually seems to grow not only older but heavier. Some may feel that she overdressed the role, but Stella was that type of woman and the dramatic contrast of her renunciation is greater therefor. No matter, so terrific is the emotional sweep of the latter reels that the Stella that is unfolded there obliterates the earlier impressions. In place of the unsympathetic character as originally developed she makes her a woman who so "gets" you that, contradictory as it may seem, you are made to feel that the ending really is a happy one, for Stella is happy and you join in her happiness.

Every bit as fine as Miss Bennett's portrayal is that of another Goldwyn "find" Lois Moran, as the daughter, Laurel. Both as a little girl of ten and as a grown-up young woman, her work is superb. Ronald Coleman as the father, and Alice Joyce as Helen, are excellent but have little to do. Jean Herscholt as the horse trainer gives a remarkably effective performance.

There are a number of lighter touches, particularly in the first half, that are effective. This section is largely devoted to planting the groundwork of what is to come and building up the characterizations which are remarkably true to life. In the latter half everything is staked on the emotional appeal. There are flashes of the seamy side of existence, but they are quickly passed. After all "Stella Dallas" is a page from life itself, and life is not all roses.

This picture is a fine example of dramatic concentration, the story is carried along by a few characters, there is not the slightest deviation from the main thread, the continuity and cutting are excellent, and the result in a remarkably straightforward unfolding of the theme, holding the interest with unusual intensity.

There are many superb moments. The pathos of Laurel's party to which no one comes, the numerous emotional heights, the delightful bit of comedy relief furnished by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., just at the right moment to relieve tremendous dramatic tension.

We feel as if we could go on indefinitely extolling the merits of this picture, which is practically faultless. Many factors contribute to make it so, but after all, it is the tremendous appeal to the heart and the sublimity of the emotional force that distinguish it. Time and again there is a scene which makes you feel that here is the highwater mark of drama and emotion, only to be followed by another reaching even loftier heights up to the tremendously powerful finish.

There are few so blase that they won't feel a tug at the heart, a lump in the throat and moist eyelids while viewing "Stella Dallas" and enjoy it. Its appeal is elemental and universal, for the mother's sacrifice can be understood and appreciated by all classes. Women will rave over it, and men, too, will feel its tremendous force.

"Stella Dallas" is truly a masterpiece.

Joseph Conrad's Story Vividly Presented With Percy Marmont as the Man Who Won

Reviewed by Epes W. Sargent

RANKING as one of Joseph Conrad's best stories, "Lord Jim," is a powerful study in human nature, and Paramount has labored faithfully to bring to the screen as much as possible of the atmosphere of the story in a production by Victor Fleming. Although it was made in California, the atmosphere of the Malay locale is wonderfully well reproduced, and this is not merely a matter of scenery and dressed up exteriors. It has atmosphere, and the leading players have been selected with a view to realizing as fully as possible the characters of the book.

It was almost inevitable that Percy Marmont should have been selected for the title role; indeed it might be that Marmont's availability was responsible for the selection of the story, for he has become identified with the screen depiction of this precise type of character, and he gives a fine performance.

It is not an appealing character, this man of weak decisions, who pays for one hesitant moment with a couple of years of effort and wins back only to fall into another error for which he pays with his life, but it is a fine character study and Mr. Marmont makes the most of it.

The play deals with a seaman who joins a cowardly captain and his stenchful crew in deserting a boatload of Muslin pilgrims on their way to Mecca. He is hypnotized into turning his back on his duty, but hypnotism is no alibi in an Admiralty Court and he loses his mate's certificate.

The stigma follows him until an understanding merchant sends him to a remote Malay settlement, where he grows in power until he shares authority with the son of the Rajah.

The captain and his crew, likewise blacklisted, have turned pirates and are led to the settlement by the former factor at the settlement, whom Jim has kept on through a fellow feeling of pity until he has become impossible. The same pity for the under dog leads him to turn the pirates loose, and they repay his generous act by killing the son of the Rajah. Jim pays with his own life for the loss of the Rajah's son.

It is a sombre story, but gripping, and Noah Beery, as the Captain, and Raymond Hatton as the deposed factor contribute materially to the effect. Nick de Ruiz is excellent as the Rajah and Shirley Mason is winning as the factor's stepdaughter.

The story has been done with such care for detail that it seems surprising that a leader should be permitted to tell that the boat was conveying a load of pilgrims to Mecca to the tomb of Mohammad. The pilgrimage is to the sacred enclosure at Mecca. The tomb of the Prophet is at Medinah. It is an unimportant lapse but an odd one to pass unnoticed.

Gloria Swanson in Broad Comedy Role Is Wholesale Creator of Wholesome Laughter

WHEN you start in to take stock of the things to be thankful for next Thursday, add "Stage Struck" to the list. It is not Gloria at her best, perhaps, but it is Gloria at her most profitable. When you see Gloria, as the "Masked Mystery," spar a round with the vampish leading woman of the floating theatre you will forget her high-hatting in "Sans Gene" and "The Coast of Folly" and welcome the return of the screen's cleverest woman comic.

This is not in disparagement of Miss Swanson's more ambitious work. She has her moments of real dramatic fire in her dramatic roles and you can't blame her for wanting to exhibit that talent, but when she stoops to the cap and bells she is genuinely funny in her own right and by the grace of the gag men. There are many clever dramatic players who cannot do comedy. Miss Swanson is at her entertaining best in plays such as this and "Manhandled."

"Stage Struck" is thin as to plot and bald as to dramatic suspense. Highbrow newspaper critics will slam the plot, but if you want to have a real laugh and a lot more, you'll enjoy this story of the girl who took a correspondence course in acting because the man she loved admired actresses.

She is not stage struck in her own right. She has no yearn for the foot and marquise lights. Her dream is a lunch wagon jointly owned and operated by herself and Orme Wilson, but Orme plasters his room with pictures of the women stars, he gets into a flirtation with the leading woman of the boat theatre, and so she's even willing to go on the stage to win the man she loves.

But gorgeous dressing is a Swanson trade mark, and a cheap restaurant in a river town is no place for gorgeous raiment, so the picture starts off with a sequence in Technicolor in which the world-devastating actress sweeps along her triumphal career. It's one of the most gorgeous things the star ever has done, but it fades. Salome, standing with the head of John on a charge becomes a lunchroom waitress literally spilling the beans which but a moment before was the head of the Evangelist.

From that point on the comedy moves rapidly to a glorious climax in which Jennie, believing that she has lost her Orme, jumps into the river with her sweetheart after her, but she doesn't quite reach the water, for a hook in the hull has engaged the seat of her bloomers and she hangs suspended while she and Orme straighten things out. It's useless to try and catalogue the comedy. There are too many good bits.

Lawrence Grey is a lively and sympathetic partner as the pancake chef and Ford Sterling, as the manager of the boat show, gives a good picture of his type. Gertrude Astor, as the leading woman, gets a good chance, but the others merely supply the colorful background.

Most of the action takes place in the restaurant in which Jennie and Orme are employed, but there are some good shots of the exterior and interior of a river boat show; the floating theatres of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, these scenes being made on one of the oldest boats on the rivers.

When Miss Swanson can entertain so hugely in comedy, it seems a pity that she should essay the higher flights, no matter how successful she may be in her dramatic bits. It's a wonderful thing to be able to create clean, unashamed laughter.

Pleasing Picture Presents Charles Ray in Type That Made His Fame—Pauline Starke Co-starred

CHARLES RAY is back in the kind of role that made him famous. Once again we see him as the bashful, gawky country lad in "Bright Lights," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production in which he is co-starred with Pauline Starke.

Pauline is a chorus girl who is cynical toward all men. Visiting her home town she meets Ray and kids him along, but soon finds he is different and falls in love with him. He sees her with a city chap and misunderstanding, tries to make himself the kind of man he thinks she likes. The result is that he overdoes it and so disappoints her that she turns him down. Her friend puts him wise, he becomes his real wholesouled honest self once more and wins her.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

The story is entertaining and amusing with a lot of good human touches, and moves at a good, snappy tempo. Especially in the earlier scenes there's some bright clever bits that are thoroughly enjoyable. Charles Ray is his same old self, with the inimitable mannerisms and characteristic touches that endeared him to millions, and we believe he will find them waiting for him. His makeup as his idea of the city swell is a scream, a regular caricature of the real article, and we don't believe there is another actor that could put this over like he does. Pauline Starke is affective and appealing as the girl, the others in the cast give capable performances and Robert Z. Leonard has given the story fine direction.

"Bright Lights" is a thoroughly pleasing picture, the kind that you can sit back and enjoy, and one that will not disappoint the Charles Ray fans who want to see the Charles Ray they used to know.

"Clash of the Wolves"—Warner Brothers

Rin-Tin-Tin's Newest Is a Box-Office Film; Has Fine Drama, Human Interest and Suspense

RIN-TIN-TIN in "The Clash of the Wolves" is one of the finest box office pictures of the year. This Warner Brothers feature is a pippin for drama, human interest and suspense. It runs the gamut of emotions. Audiences will sit enthralled from first to last reel. By all means book it.

The story is another of the fidelity of dog to man, but in this instance the dog is half wolf and has to be won away from savagery. Rin-Tin-Tin is ideal in this role, posing masterfully against the skyline and leading a pack of wolves to battle with men, horses and cattle. There is a distinct thrill in seeing the charge of the brutes.

David Weston, a young prospector, tames Lobo, the half-wolf. Horses start in alarm as Lobo passes by, so Weston disguises him with a beard and boots. There's a good laugh—Rin-Tin-Tin dolled up like a hick detective.

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Rin-Tin-Tin does the detective stuff when Weston, staking out a borax claim, is shot by Horton, a renegade. The animal rushes back for help and then, encountering Horton, stages a vicious attack on the bad man. Eventually May Barstowe, Weston's sweetheart, rescues him and Horton is killed by Lobo's pack of wolves.

Seldom, if ever, has a human being put so much real pathos into a scene as Rin-Tin-Tin does into those scenes where he is trying to pull a thorn from his foot. There's the pathos for your audiences.

So "The Clash of the Wolves" has thrills, laughs, pathos and plenty of the picturesque. And it also has a romance—that of the young prospector for the girl.

June Marlowe, Charles Farrell, Heinie Conklin, Will Walling and Pat Hartigan perform efficiently in this picture, especially the first two, with Conklin specializing in comedy.

Director Noel Smith has built up the suspense wonderfully. The story grips and holds you to the final flash. It will grip and hold your audiences.

"When the Door Opened"—William Fox

Unusual Dramatic Tenseness Marks Stirring and Virile Curwood Story of Canadian Woods

ANOTHER vigorous and entertaining story of the Canadian woods from the pen of the popular author, James Oliver Curwood is offered by William Fox in the Reginald Barker production "When the Door Opened."

A Curwood story can always be depended on for virility and stirring drama. This one concerns Clive Grenfel who returning home unexpectedly saw "when the door opened" his wife in another man's arms. He kills this man Fredericks and seeks solace in the northwoods where he meets stern old De-Fontenac, a courtly gentleman of the old school, and his beautiful granddaughter Terese who falls in love with him. Believing himself a murderer, Clive fights against this love. A stranger appears and turns out to be a villain and Clive finally learns he is really Fredericks and that he has married Clive's wive who secured a divorce.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

There is continued conflict of wills and emotions all through the story which builds up drama that holds the interest with more than the usual tenseness. The romance is distinctly pleasing due to the charm of Jaqueline Logan as Teresa. Walter McGrail does good work as Clive and Robert Cain makes a particularly despicable villain. Frank Keenan gives a forceful portrayal of the grandfather. As the climax approaches there is considerable stressing of the sex angle in the scene where Fredericks attempts to force his attentions upon the girl, but there is nothing offensive and it is effective melodrama. The picture has been given a thrill climax with a big scene in which the old castle is swept away by a flood. This is unusually well handled.

"When the Door Opened" is a good Curwood production, a stirring romantic and melodramatic picture that should register with the majority of patrons.

"Simon the Jester"—Producers Distributing Corp.

Eugene O'Brien and Lillian Rich in Locke's Whimsical Story Adapted by Frances Marion

A DECIDEDLY whimsical note characterizes most of the novels of William J. Locke and the characters are decidedly out of the ordinary. "Simon the Jester," which has been transferred to the screen by Producers Distributing Corporation, is no exception.

"Simon the Jester" is not a comedy. In the title role is a man who was wounded in the world war and told that he has but a few years to live, jests about death, calling it the great adventure. The story concerns his efforts to prevent his secretary from marrying the fascinating owner of a circus, during which he himself falls in love with her. She has a husband from whom she is separated, a cruel and jealous man, but eventually the way is cleared by the killing of the husband by the midget friend of the heroine in revenge for his causing the death of her favorite horse. The hero in the meantime has been saved by an operation.

This midget, a decidedly out of the ordinary character, a wrinkled mite of a man who feels his own importance, is admirably played by William Platt, with a number of effective comedy touches. The cast is uniformly fine, with Eugene O'Brien in the title role and Lillian Rich as the heroine, Henry Walthall as the husband.

"Simon the Jester" as a novel appealed to a discriminating class of imaginative readers rather than to the general public. For its charm is elusive and its story well out of the beaten path. Frances Marion deserves credit for being able to retain much of this in her scenario. George Melford has given the picture able direction and there are several interesting and forceful situations. Notable among these being the death of the horse at the hands of the midget when someone substituted loaded cartridges for blanks. There is a decided heart-throb when with tears in his eyes he tells the circus audience that Sultan is dead and they continue to laugh, thinking it is part of the act.

Fred Thomson and Silver King in Typical Story That Should Please—Elmo Lincoln in the Cast

IN "ALL AROUND FRYING PAN" the newest in his series of features for F. B. O. Fred Thomson has a vehicle that should provide satisfactory entertainment for his wide circle of admirers.

Fred first appears as a down-and-outer who is arrested by the boon sheriff and taken to a rodeo where he subdues Silver, a beautiful and spirited horse that no one else can ride. He gets a job with Silver's owner, Dawson and is soon in love with Dawson's daughter, Jean. Through the aid of Silver, Fred gets on the trail of rustlers who have been stealing the cattle, overcomes a watchman guarding the cars into which they have been loaded and sends them to market. He learns that Slade, the foreman is implicated and believing Slade will rob the store in which the money for the cattle is held, he waits. Slade kills the storekeeper and accuses Fred who is found with the body. Fred is strung up but Silver saves him. After fierce fighting, Fred overcomes Slade and his henchman, proves their guilt and, it is then discovered that he is the real owner of the ranch.

The story follows more along the lines of the conventional western and shows less originality than is usual with Fred Thomson vehicles. As usual, his beautiful and well trained horse Silver King has a lot to do and his clever tricks add considerably to the picture's appeal. While the story contains a number of improbabilities there is plenty of action and it has been interspersed with comedy touches that will amuse the majority. Thomson has a heroic and sympathetic role, and although the story interest lags somewhat at times, the climax offers opportunities for some good stunts, and a fight in which novel comedy touches are introduced.

Elmo Lincoln gives a good account of himself as the villainous foreman and James Marcus supplies comedy as a boob sheriff. Clara Horton is seen as the girl.

Director David Kirkland has taken Frank Pierce's story and built it up along the lines of action that fans have learned to expect from Fred Thomson and it ought to fill the bill.

Ralph Lewis Cast As Heroic Fire-Fighter In a Thrilling Heart-Interest Melodrama

WITH Ralph Lewis and Edward Hearn in the leading roles, Gotham Productions is offering on the independent market "One of the Bravest," a story which centers around the activities of the men who protect our homes from the fire demon.

The fearlessness and heroism of the firemen is extolled and for dramatic contrast there is introduced into the story the situation where the son of the chief earns the disgust of his father because he has an inborn terror of the flames. He joins the department under pressure and proves "yellow," but retrieves himself gloriously when his own father's life is in danger and makes a thrilling rescue. This lad is Irish and there is a delightful little romance between him and the daughter of a Hebrew tailor.

"One of the Bravest" was built for the box-office and should prove a good attraction for the average theatre. It is thrill and human interest melodrama. There are good touches of Jewish-Irish humor, a quantity of heart appeal in the plight of the father who not only grieves for his cowardly son but believes him to be a thief when in reality his wife has used the money by a bad investment that she thought was sure-fire. There is a villain in the person of a crooked oil salesman and plenty of pep and thrills in the fire-fighting scenes.

Melodrama fans will thrill at the climax in which the regenerated lad holds on to the edge of the burning wall, while his father climbs down to safety over his body and get an even bigger thrill when, with the disabled villain in his arms he jumps several stories into a life net.

Little Pictures with the Big Punch

News, Reviews and Exploitation on Short Features and Serials

Edited by Charles Edward Hastings

"Control Yourself"

(Fox-Comedy—Two Reels)

INTRODUCED as Simon Legree, son of a wealthy whip manufacturer who traces his ancestry back to Uncle Tom's Cabin, one is not surprised to find that Sid Smith in this Fox-Imperial Comedy is cast as a chap with an ungovernable temper. A feature of this subject is the scene in which Sid is shown taking his morning ride on an electric horse, a device which has recently received considerable newspaper publicity. Here is an opportunity for Mr. and Mrs. Public to see what one looks like and how it operates. This comedy has a climax like a big thrill melodrama though handled from a comedy angle. A crooked contractor has built a defective dam and is in a hurry to get his check. Sid's temper causes him to jump up and down with rage and a crack develops and the whole dam crumbles. There is both a laugh and a punch here and considerable effective slapstick in the scenes where Sid, trying desperately to have his prospective father-in-law stop the check, is carried up in a hoist filled with mortar and dumped down a chute. There is a familiar chase for the check which blows away ending with Sid substituting a black paper. An amusing number for the slapstick fans.—C. S. Sewell.

"Slow Down"

(Educational-Comedy—One Reel)

A NOVEL angle has been given to this comedy by basing the action on an exploitation stunt used by a motion picture theatre. This point will appeal especially to an exhibitor, but we believe the public will get an amusing "kick" out of it, too, for it comes as a distinct surprise. The main portion of the action follows familiar slapstick lines. A girl's father leaves for a trip and has trouble with his car and gets mixed up with the hero who accidentally gets hold of a cop's uniform and badge and is dragooned to taking care of a house when the girl receives a warning note and fears burglars. Father returns and hero and father mistake each other for burglars and finally a flock of cops are called to the house. It develops that the note saying: "Don't go home tonight," was a teaser ad for a picture. An amusing picture for the average house. One of the best of this series.—C. S. Sewell.

"The Range Law"

(Universal-Western—Two Reels)

CONTINUAL fear of detection aided by an uneasy conscience on hte part of a ranchman who years before has murdered his boss, is the motive behind this Mustang brand picture. The story hinges on the fact that there is one man who knows of this and finally forces consent for his marriage to the murderer's ward. This man learns of the presence of the dead man's son on the next ranch and they waylay this chap and leave him for dead. He saves himself, stops the wedding, captures the two criminals after an exciting chase and marries the girl. This has all of the true and tried situations of the usual western and the theme strikes a deeper dramatic note. It is up to the average of the series and should please "western fans." Edmund Cobb is featured as the young hero. —C. S. Sewell.

"Framed"

(Educational-Comedy—Two Reels)

LLOYD HAMILTON'S latest takes him through a series of rather unrelated adventures starting with his efforts in a photograph studio to have his picture "taken." The action shifts to the home of Lloyd's wealthy sweetheart who has a kid brother that is continually up to mischief, and a crooked magician is introduced. Lloyd discovers this fact and has a variety of funny experiences in trying to outwit the crooks and warn the girl's father. The small boy, a colored butler and the magician's trick outfit including a "leaping" starfish all figure in the slapstick antics. Hamilton is up to his usual standard and his scenes are good for a number of laughs. There are several slapstick situations that are amusing. The comedy as a whole seems more disconnected than this star's usual vehicles and the laughs less spontaneously developed. There is enough here, however, to probably please the Hamilton and general slapstick fans.—C. S. Sewell.

"How the Camel Got Its Hump"

(F. B. O.-Cartoon—One Reel)

ONE of the series of Bray cartoons distributed by F. B. O. in which animated drawings are combined with actual photography. Some novel effects are achieved that are quite amusing. Children especially will like this subject which facetiously shows the camel got its hump because a porous plaster landed on its back and a big bird thinking this was food grabbed it and flew away. As they sailed through the air the skin of the camel was pulled up and up and when it landed on the ground again there was a permanent hump.—C. S. Sewell.

"Magical Movies"

(Educational-Cartoon—One Reel)

THERE is the usual mixture of "sense and nonsense" photography and cartoons in this Howe "Hodge Podge." Much of the reel is used to show novel camera effects and odd combinations of photographic trickery. One of these shows the grotesque result of using a convex mirror, another has heads growing out of cartoon flowers, a third shows still pictures that change into moving ones in which the film is projected both forward and "in reverse." In addition the reel contains scenic beauties and oddities including an inclined waterfall in Alaska. Amusing and clever number.—C. S. Sewell.

"The Scandal Hunters"

(Universal-Comedy—Two Reels)

AL ALT who has been in many Century comedies is featured in this one as a "go-getter" reporter who is sent out to interview a tough politician. He is knocked down by a swell car driven by the politician's daughter who gives him a card. He gets in to see the politician and goes riding with him, but is thrown out several times by the butler. This is an average number of the series with a number of familiar situations of the type that appeals to slapstick fans.—C. S. Sewell.

"The River Nile"

(Fox-Varieties—One Reel)

NO river in the world is as well known as the Nile. Not only were its banks the scene of one of this earth's earliest civilizations, but for centuries the very existence of a great portion of Egypt's population has absolutely depended on its life-giving waters which make the surrounding valleys habitable. This reel shows many interesting sights along its shores and brings out the fact that the natives today are using the same crude methods of tilling their fields, threshing grain, and employing the same types of water wheels to irrigate their crops as in the days of King Tut, that 5,000 years has brought but little change in their mode of living. A subject of wide appeal, both interesting and instructive.—C. S. Sewell.

"Faint Heart"

(Universal-Comedy—One Reel)

THE role of a bashful lover has been given to Charles Puffy in this Universal Comedy. The girl tries various means to make him propose, even employing jealousy, but to no avail. In desperation she gives him a book on caveman love and this wakes him up. Puffy grabs her and rushes to a justice of the peace and then learns it was all a frame-up. One sequence shows the cast with Puffy as the hero, back in the stone age. This has been treated in burlesque comedy style. The various means used to cause Puffy to get busy are good for a number of smiles and it is an amusing comedy. —C. S. Sewell.

"Laughing Ladies"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

HAL ROACH'S "Laughing Ladies" is one of the funniest and finest two-reel comedies that we have seen in many moons. It's a roar of laughter from beginning to end, with such comedians as Lucien Littlefield, Katherine Grant, Tyler Brooke and Gertrude Astor getting more real comic action into their roles than, it seems, they have ever done before. Littlefield plays the dentist who gives Miss Grant too liberal a dose of laughing gas. She runs out of the office, steals a bicycle and merrily pedals away on it while the dentist pursues her. We have seldom seen anything just as funny as Katherine pedalling that bicycle in and out of traffic. The remainder of the story deals with the triangle and there isn't a let-up to it anywhere. Director James W. Horne has his players moving at full speed all the time, giving the subject unusual spirit even for a comedy, and the gags are excellent. Book this one by all means and give your audiences a real, dyed-in-the-wool treat.—Sumner Smith.

"A Day's Outing"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

IN THIS Paul Terry-Aesop's Film Fables the entire menagerie of animals and the farmer take a trip to the circus All goes well until a trained lion escapes, but then it proves more of an annoyance than a danger by insisting on licking the farmer's face—Sumner Smith.

"The Garden of Gethsemane"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

THIS is another in the "Pilgrimage to Palestine" Biblical series and one of the most fascinating, since it shows the scene of one of the greatest moments in the life of Jesus. There is a thrill of awe in beholding the spot where, years ago, Jesus prayed while the disciples slept.—Sumner Smith.

"The Walloping Wonders"

(Pathe—Sportlight—One Reel)

THIS Grantland Rice Sportlight is a study of the punch that enters into various kinds of sport. George Von Elm and other well known swatters of the golf ball are shown, and Tilden on the Forest Hills tennis courts and Gene Tunney wearing the boxing gloves. The entire subject holds the interest and will particularly appeal to followers of America's sports and sporting pages.—Sumner Smith.

"Pathe Review No. 48"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

THIS has more Pathecolor views of American wild flowers and features the "Languid Lady," one of the less known flowers. Perhaps most interesting of the three subjects is "The Sea of Soda," showing Lake Magadi, a tremendous source of soda, in the African Rift. Also, there is a camera interview with Hobart Nichols, famous American landscape artist.—Sumner Smith.

Second Irish-Jewish Comedy

The second of the "East Side, West Side" comedy series produced by Fox Films, "The Fighting Tailor," has just been finished under Benjamin Stoloff's direction. Georgie Harris, a graduate of English music halls, who made motion picture audiences laugh at his comic role in "The Wheel," has the leading role, with Barbara Luddy playing opposite. The comedies concern the mirth provoking romance between an ambitious Jewish lad and a winsomely wistful Irish lassie.

Film Arts Guild Books "Nightingale"

Another noteworthy honor has been bestowed on Educational's prize winning short-subject "The Voice of the Nightingale" by its having been selected for showing along with the original colored version of Pola Negri's "Passion" at the first Sunday program to be given by the International Film Arts Guild at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York City, November 22.

The Guild has been established for the purpose of "applying the theory and practice of repertory to the major screen productions of the past" in order that film masterpieces may be kept alive in the same way that classics of art and literature are preserved and handed down through generations.

Additional Educational short subjects may be seen in subsequent Film Arts Guild programs along with "Deception," "Broken Blossoms," "Greed" and similar outstanding feature productions.

"Officer of the Day" New Fox Imperial Comedy

Another Imperial comedy, "Officer of the Day," has just been placed in production on the Fox lot with Max Gold and Andrew Bennison collaborating in the direction from a scenario which they wrote. This is their first joint effort for Fox. Bennison recently made the Imperial laugh hit, "Control Yourself," which is declared to be full of those greatly desired hearty laughs that make audiences unable to control themselves.

"Officer of the Day" concerns the comic catastrophes of a court martial held in the navy. Harold Goodwin, who has been seen in many feature productions and numerous comedies, plays the male lead. Others in the cast are Eugenia Gilbert, Brooke Benedict, Harry Woods, Jack Ackroyd, Larry Stears, Broderick O'Farrell and Edna Tichner, who plays the vampire role.

Fifth O. Henry Comedy

The fifth O. Henry comedy has been started by Fox Films under Albert Ray's direction. It will be called "Elsie in New York." The cast includes Gladys McConnell, Hallam Cooley, Arthur Houseman, Anthony Merle, Gretchen Hartman, William Bakewell and Belva McKay. Hallam Cooley gained attention in the "Helen and Warren" series and Arthur Houseman has played heavy roles in "Thunder Mountain" and "The Desert's Price." The first four O. Henry comedies were "Shoes," "Failure," "Transients in Arcadia" and "Cupid a la Carte."

Neal's First Fox Comedy

An Imperial comedy, "A Flaming Affair," has just been started at the Fox Studios under the direction of Lex Neal, who hails from the Buster Keaton lot. Sidney Lanfield wrote the scenario, which is all burning up over the happenings at a fire, as the title hints. In the cast are Sid Smith, Consuela Dawn, Rodney Hildebrand and Joseph Belmont.

Makes Serial Debut

Dorothy Phillips, One of the Screen's Most Popular Stars, Has Big Role in New Pathe Serial

Dorothy Phillips, one of the most popular emotional actresses of the screen and a star of many features, makes her first appearance in a serial as the heroine of "The Bar-G Mystery," a new Pathe serial now in production on the West Coast under the sponsorship of G. W. Patton.

Her role as a daughter of the Great West is also a new one for Miss Phillips, who has, in her years of cinema stardom portrayed a wide variety of screen characterizations. In fact, this popular actress selects her roles with the utmost care and will not allow producers to define her as a special screen type.

Versatility as a dramatic and emotional player has characterized Dorothy Phillips' screen career. In "The Bar-G Mystery," she is cast as a widely different type from her roles in other productions. In the new Pathe chapter-play she is seen as a successful business woman of New York who goes West to assume charge of an extensive cattle ranch which was willed to her.

Wallace MacDonald, a decidedly popular star is leading artist in support of Miss Phillips in "The Bar-G Mystery" and others in the cast are such well known players as Philo McCullough, Ethel Clayton, Victor Potel, Johnny Fox, Billie Bletcher, Tom London and Violet Schram. Robert F. Hill directed the new C. W. Patton production.

Contracts for Red Seal

Entire Loew Circuit, New York, Booked Solid For Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes

Loew's, Inc., through David Loew, signed a contract this week with Edwin Miles Fadman, whereby the entire series of Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes will play in all the Loew houses in New York City.

This comes as a direct result of the success the Loew Circuit had with Red Seal releases during the past year, when practically all of the product of the latter concern played at the Loew theatres.

So pleased was David Loew with the high level reached by the Red Seal releases that he sent Mr. Fadman a note in which he said definitely: "I consider Red Seal product the best in the short subject market." The new contract for next year's product translates Mr. Loew's sentiments into action.

St. Paul Showman Advertises Short Subjects in Program

Short subjects are being advertised by Manager L. E. Sinclair in the printed program of the Garden Theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota, as consistently as feature productions. The program of the week of November 8th is a fine example of typographical art, which is livened up considerably by the use of three one-column "ad" cuts such as are supplied by Educational with all two-reel comedy subjects, announcing to patrons the comedy portion of the bill for each change of show, in a striking and effective manner.

Then you feed 'em that "step-child" short subject—their applause is a heart-cheering noise and they pass you all smiling and chuckling—have you passed on THAT tip to the boys? VAN.

ALICE GETS IN DUTCH. (Comedy). This is a good one-reel comedy. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre, Cloverdale, California.

BELOVED BOZO. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Ralph Graves. This is a comedy that is a little different than the rest of the comedies and will please any type of patronage. Print new. Good tone. Yes for Sunday. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

THE BURGLAR. (Fox-Comedy). Star, Earl Foxe. Another Van Bibber comedy, and it sure was good. A laugh a second. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

DINKY DOODLE. (F. B. O.-Bray Cartoon). One-reel cartoon. Very good. Plenty of laughs throughout. Draw small town and country class, town 350. Admission 10-30. Nelson & Ottim, Rex Theatre (140 seats), Osnabrook, North Dakota.

GO-GETTERS. (F. B. O.-Series; No. 3). Star, Albert Vaughn. This chapter was very good. The train race was very exciting. My picture fans like these better than the two reel comedies. There are also a good many funny things in this one. The best short subjects there are. Tone O. K. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

GOING EAST. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. A good two-reel comedy. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre, Cloverdale, California.

GRANDPA'S GIRL. (Educational-Comedy). A Christie, a good comedy, so that's all. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

GUEST OF HONOR. Star, Earl Foxe. A Van Bibber comic. One of the good ones. Lots of laughs. Print good. (2 reels). Draw factory class. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

HOLLYWOOD KID. (Pathe-Comedy). The best comtdy I have had from Pathe in a long time. My! how they enjoyed it. Give us more like it, please! Two reels. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

HONEYMOON SPECIAL. (Fox-Comedy). A good comic—gets lots of laughs. Draw factory class. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF FLICKERS. Nothing much to this two-reel comedy. Draw country and town of about 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphia Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

HUNTERS BOLD. (Pathe). (2 reels). Star, Spat Family. The usual quarrel of the Spots. Very amusing. Some old gags, yet they are still good for laughs, which makes this a good comedy. Draw factory class. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

LION Love. (Fox). Here is a dandy two-reel comedy that will keep them roaring nearly all the time, especially the kids. Draw country and town of about 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphia Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

LOOKING FOR SALLY. (Pathe-Comedy). This comedy went over all right. It classifies as average in my mind. Draw town of about 3,200. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

NIP O' SCOTCH. (Fox-Comedy). A slapstick comic, no better and no worse than the rest. Two reels. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

OUR GANG. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, the kids. I think these are the best comedise made. They are not as good this year as they were last, but they still top the list. Draw town of about 3,200. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

PATHE NEWS NO. 80. Aesop's Fables. Both good. The news is interesting and has the landing of the Spanish troops and shots of the riff campaign. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pa.

PATHE NEWS. I believe that this goes over in the form of a magazine reel. If it is a day old it is history, with our present immediate news service through radio and newspapers, so believe it is worth just as much a month late as a week late. Draw town of about 3,200. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

PEACEMAKERS. (F. B. O.-Series). Star, George O'Hara. Eleventh episode, and glad to say that this series is one of the best on the market. Everybody hates to see the end draw near and all patrons have shown disappointment when informed that George O'Hara wouldn't be in "The Adventures of Mazie" or "Fighting Hearts." The fans want O'Hara back in something else. He is a big favorite with young and old. Tone has been fine. Very strong appeal. Sunday, yes. Draw town about a thousand, general class. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

PIGSKIN. (Educational-Comedy). Do you want something real funny? Then get this. Your audience will howl through the two reels. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

SUNDAY CLAM. (Pathe-Comedy). Stars, Our Gang. The Gang's usual stunts. Got many a laugh. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

WILD WEST. (Pathe-serial). Star, Jack Mulhall. This is his best serial I have ever run. It's going over good. Tone, good. Appeal 100 per cent. Draw all classes, city 806. Admissions 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre, (250 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

Cash In On Little Features, During National Laugh Month, January, 1926

JANUARY, 1926, has been set apart as NATIONAL LAUGH MONTH. During January, every known agency at the disposal of producer and distributor will be called into play, for an intensive campaign to sell short features to theatre owners and to the public.

"National Laugh Month" will also be called "Comedy Month."

This is the "gold movement" suggested by Moving Picture World a month ago and at that time given the working title of Short Subject Month.

The advance campaign, begun last week, to inform theatre owners of the country-wide plan to boost Short Features, will be continued until the end of December, when newspapers throughout the United States will be called into the drive to follow the educational work of the trade papers and "fan" magazines, and sell the idea to the public.

The committee designated by the newly created Short Feature Advertisers Association to handle the National Comedy Month drive has okehd a special budget to provide for the advance material to be sent to exhibitors. The committee consists of Gordon White (Educational), chairman; P. A. Parsons (Pathe), Nat G. Rothstein (F. B. O.), Fred McConnell (Universal), Julian M. Solomon (Davis), W. C. Hill (Fox) and Dr. W. E. Shallenberger (Arrow).

Through the courtesy of the Davis Distributing Division the services of Mr. Solomon have been loaned to the Short Feature Advertisers Association, and Mr. Solomon will concentrate on the work of getting up sketches, lithographs, banners, slides, cuts, press material, and attend to such other details as may be required to equip exchanges and exhibitors with National Laugh Month material.

As a separate method of publicizing Laugh Month, arrangements have been concluded between the S. F. A. A. and a group of newspaper syndicates handling cartoon strips as a result of which the various artists drawing these cartoon strips will prepare special material for Comedy Month, this publicity to go through the various newspapers subscribing for the syndicate services.

There will be a special tie-up between the S. F. A. A. and its publicity material and the national magazines, both serious and otherwise, through which medium the millions of readers of these magazines will be kept informed of the plan and scope of National Laugh Month.

The trade papers in the motion picture industry have agreed to get squarely back of the proposal for a National Laugh Month, and to boost the plan from every valuable angle before, during and after January. It is confidently expected that with the great impetus given the short subject during the next few months, the public will be better informed than ever before, and will demand a great supply of little features in their film fare. With this in mind the producers and distributors of shorts will build better programs for the 1926-27 programs than ever before.

Announcements from the West Coast short subject producers of to date, include the signing of famous stars to participate in contemplated comedies. A definite promise has been given by producers to bring big screen personalities into the comedy field in greater profusion next year, than ever before. Special stories from the great humorists will be filmed, and a net spread out for "gag" men to build up these laugh-makers.

The S. F. A. A. announces that the producers and distributors now have available for immediate booking lists of comedies, and various subdivisions in the wide field of Short Subjects, that have not heretofore been equalled.

"We are ready to go," Mr. Solomon, speaking for the S. F. A. A., said, "with pictures on hand and instantly available for booking which outclass in every way anything that has gone before. The announcements from the various producers and distributors interested in the January-National Laugh Month will prove most interesting to every theatre owner who wishes to further open up his programs to these little gems."

Pointing out that theatre owners can jump right in now with their preliminary campaign for Comedy Month, Mr. Solomon outlined a splendid "tie in" that can be used immediately. This consists of announcing in house programs, or by slides, the awarding of prizes of passes or of money for the best list, or lists, of slogans, so worded as to include the word "laugh," The prizes may be given out the week before Christmas. This will help to boost a week which is generally looked upon as the worst in the entire year, and it will also help to sell the public on the fact that Laugh Month is coming.

New "Helen and Warren" Comedy on Fox Schedule

Hallam Cooley has completed his work in "His Own Lawyer," the fifth of the "Helen and Warren" series of Fox comedies based on Mable Herbert Urner's syndicated stories, and is employing his vacation to speed up the work on his new home in Beverly Hills.

Sign Barrymore for Comedy

Lionel Barrymore, a member of one of the theatre's most famous families and a screen star of many features as well as Broadway stage plays, has been signed by Hal Roach, noted comedy producer, to appear in one short comedy feature for Pathe release.

It is announced that the comedy in which Barrymore will appear will be of the same quality as the vehicle in which Theda Bara will make her debut in short comedy features under the sponsorship of Hal Roach.

"When Husbands Flirt" New Columbia Comedy

"When Husbands Flirt," the latest comedy to be released by Columbia Pictures Corp., is repeating the tremendous success of their previous feature length comedy, "Steppin' Out." Telegrams from all parts of the country from exhibitors and distributors are being received daily telling of the wonderful reception accorded this production.

A splendid cast in addition to Dorothy Revier and Forrest Stanley, who are featured was assembled for this picture including Tom Ricketts who created many of the laughs in "Steppin' Out."

Unique Tribute Paid to Red Seal's "Silvery Art"

So impressed were the officials of the Paramount Picture School with the Red Seal skiing sensation, "The Silvery Art," which is playing at the Rialto this week, that they immediately ordered a print to be used in the lecture room.

Among the requirements of this Famous Players training school for future stars is athletic ability of the sort needed for the screen. Instruction is given in swimming, riding, etc., and the officials saw a chance to teach skiing with "The Silvery Art," which they labeled one of the best expositions of the sport ever screened. In addition, the film was praised as a perfect example of outdoor photography.

Vera Steadman in Paris

Vera Steadman, the well known Christie Comedy leading lady, arrived in Paris this week where she has gone for a two months' vacation from her work in the comedy studio. Vera has cabled to the Christies that she is having the thrill of a lifetime in the Paris shops and seeing all the monuments and famous paintings in the galleries.

Dooley Starts New Comedy

Billy Dooley, new Christie comedian, has started work on his third Educational comedy. This is to be "A Salty Sap," and once more Billy will play the part of a sailor.

Two New Production Units Are Added To Fox Comedy Staff Under Marshall

WITH the approval of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, George E. Marshall has added two new production units to his comedy staff on the Fox lot, according to a telegraphic announcement from the Fox West Coast Studios.

Lex Neill, formerly on the Buster Keaton lot, has already started directing "A Flaming Affair" for the Imperial Comedy series with Sid Smith and Consuela Down in the leading roles. The other new unit will have Andrew Bennison and Max Gold at the helm. They are preparing the script on an Imperial and will be ready to start shooting within a short time.

Those additions to Marshall's staff have been necessary because of the help his directors have been giving to feature productions. Robert Kerr, director of the Van Bibber comedies, has started filming "A Trip to Chinatown," the first of the Charles Hoyt plays to go into production. This will be a feature length comedy, with Margaret Livingston, Earle Foxe, J. Farrell MacDonald and Harry Woods in the cast. Mr. Marshall is giving the production his personal supervision. Earle Foxe is the star and Robert Kerr is the director of the Van Bibber Comedies.

Tom Buckingham, who just finished directing Hallam Cooley and Kathryn Perry in "His Own Lawyer" of the Helen and Warren series, is preparing to direct "Tony Runs Wild," the next Tom Mix starring vehicle. With five two reelers in the Helen and Warren comedies completed, Kathryn Perry has taken the role of the bride in "The First Year," based on the Golden stage success, under the director of Frank Borzage. Hallam Cooley is playing a role in the modern version of "The Ancient Mariner," which Chester Bennett is directing.

"East Side, West Side," the first Irish-Jewish comedy, proved such a success that Benjamin Stoloff has started filming a second two reeler in the series, "The Fighting Tailor." Georgie Harris is the embattled tailor and the charming Barbara Luddy is his Irish colleen.

Lew Seiler has taken "The Flying Fool," an Imperial, into the cutting room. Sid Smith played the title role just before starting "A Flaming Affair," and Marion Harlan was the flying heroine.

The fourth two reeler in the O. Henry series, "Cupid a la Carte," was finished recently, under the direction of Robert Kerr. This was the first appearance of Carroll Nye under the Fox banner. Florence Gilbert, the "Van Bibber girl," played the leading feminine role. Maine Geary and William Colvin had the other principal parts.

Predictions that this would be a banner comedy year for Fox films are being amply fulfilled by the high quality two reelers being turned out by the Van Bibber, O. Henry, Helen and Warren and Imperial Comedy units. Under the supervision of Mr. Marshall, an excellent department of laugh creators has been built up. With the best stories and actors available, the directors are producing an assortment of two reel comedies that will please every possible type of motion picture fan.

"One dominating feature of Fox comedies this year will be cleanliness," said Mr. Marshall, discussing the plans of the organization. "We have found by the popularity of the Van Bibber series, that the public does not want suggestive comedy. It is the public who will guide us at all times in making comedies. Bathing girls and custard pies have been eliminated by the public itself. What they want to see on the screen are the humorous things in life, which might happen to their next-door neighbors—things true to life and funny.

"We have abandoned the old comedy policy of making pictures out of a series of 'gags,' strung together without rhyme or reason. Our plan is to take real stories, funny situations and develop their humorous angles. From the results to date, I think we have met with satisfactory success. Our comedies, in reality, are two-reel humorous features.

"Fox this year has the best stories and the finest comedy directors in the business.

"We have added to our staff Felix Adler, one of the best known title writers and comedy men in the field. Adler will take care of the titles on all productions and I believe we can look for some fine comedy creations. Other writers in our comedy organization devoting their attention to Imperials are Andrew Bennison, Bryan Foy and Murray Roth."

Three Century Units at Work; Stern Supervising Activities

THE Hollywood studios of Century are booming with early season activity, under the supervising eye of Julius Stern, president of that comedy producing organization. Coincident with his arrival at the Coast recently, three comedy units started work on the Spring releases of the Century Comedy schedule.

The first unit to go into production was the Buster Brown company, making the series of two-reelers adapted from R. F. Outcault's famous cartoons. After seeing the extraordinary success of these comedies, Stern took the lid off the Buster Brown unit. Putting the best comedy heads in the business behind this series, and enlisting the services of Gus Meins, a noted gag man and director, he perfected plans to assure the best possible results with this series.

The next Century star to begin work was Edna Marian, who, during the summer, had been loaned to Universal for an important role in "The Still Alarm," a forthcoming Universal Jewel picture. Miss Marian, who won surprising success in the early months of 1925 as a comedy star, is scheduled to complete twelve releases for the 1925-1928 market. Some of these already are completed. She was put to work under the direction of Francis Corby, a newcomer to the Century lot. The first Edna Marian picture made this fall is "The Big City," the funny adventures of a country girl on her first visit to a big city. This picture already has been completed and the comedienne is now at work on her second, "Say It With Love," also directed by Corby. "The Big City" is for release early in February, 1926. "Say It With Love" will probably be a March release.

Wanda Wiley's comedy unit also has started work for the new season. Miss Wiley, who jumped into first-run prominence last year by reason of a series of unusually bright and humorous Century Comedies, also will contribute twelve two-reelers to the current year's output. Her unit, for her first picture was headed by Corby during the period between his Edna Marian pictures. Earl McCarthy is the juvenile playing opposite Miss Wiley in her first picture, entitled "Paying the Swell." Virginia Bushman, daughter of Francis X. Bushman, played a part in this picture.

Miss Wiley's next picture, now going into production, will be directed by Jess Robbins, who made many of her early 1925 successes. Charles King will play opposite her. Robbins will be assisted by Leslie Goodwin and Victor Sherrick has been selected as the cameraman.

The Buster Brown unit is now working on the seventh picture of the Buster Brown series. Number three, entitled "Oh Buster," and the following two, "Buster's Nightmare," and "Buster's Bust-up" are completed and are said to be even better than the first three. The sixth Buster Brown comedy is nearing completion in the cutting rooms.

The Buster Brown Comedies are made with real players. Buster is played by little Arthur Trimble, Mary Jane by Doreen Turner and Tige by Pete, the dog comedian. Gus Meins, the director, has done wonders in getting the maximum comedy out of the Buster Brown stories, especially in his handling of the dog.

Educational Working on Big Comedies for Release During January, Comedy Month

IN line with plans for a great national Laugh Month in January when Comedy shall be predominant on the motion picture program, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., is pushing work on several of its biggest comedies of the year so that they can be released in time for the big Comedy Month. These comedy subjects yet to be released, together with the laugh pictures already released this Fall, will constitute what Educational officials claim to be the best line-up of Educational comedies ever made available for booking in one month.

"Never before in the history of Educational Pictures," said E. W. Hammons, Educational's president, just before he sailed for London a few days ago, "has a stronger line-up of one and two reel comedy subjects been available for showing in the big theatres of the country than the program scheduled for release up to and including January.

"Laugh Month is destined to be the biggest month for the short comedy in the history of the motion picture business. Educational is proud of the big part it is going to play in the Laugh Month, not only through its special exploitation and advertising efforts, but because of the fine program of box-office attractions in the comedy class which we can offer to exhibitors as program builders and money makers during this special Laugh Month."

In Educational's new two-reel comedies which will be in line for special Laugh Month exploitation, are a large number of popular stars, who constitute as strong a line-up of comedy box-office magnets as has ever been found in any program of short laugh pictures. Lupino Lane and Lloyd Hamilton will be lending their box-office pulling powers to theatres participating in Laugh Month, each with two subjects in the 1925-26 series. These four pictures constitute a group of laugh features in two reels, each of which would serve well as the feature of an all comedy program, of which there will, of course, be a large number during Laugh Month.

The other big stars on the Educational program include Bobby Vernon, Walter Hiers, Jimmie Adams, Johnny Arthur, Lige Conley, Al St. John, Neal Burns, Billy Dooley, "Big Boy," the new juvenile comedy "find," and the other popular kids of the Juvenile Comedy series, as well as such favorites among the leading ladies as Vera Steadman, Molly Malone, Virginia Vance, Duane Thompson, Helen Foster and Estelle Bradley.

The Lupino Lane Comedies available for January Laugh Month bookings are "Maid in Morocco," the lavish laugh production which has already made a tremendous hit in a few early first run showings and "The Fighting Dude," which will be released in December and which shows the famous pantomimist in what has been pronounced by those who have seen it at pre-views to be one of the funniest fight subjects ever shown.

"The Movies," Lloyd Hamilton's first picture of the year, has already made a pronounced hit at the Rialto Theatre in New York and a few other first run houses. In addition to this picture, the second subject, "Framed," will be available before the first of the year.

Bobby Vernon's contributions to Laugh Month will be "Watch Out," "Slippery Feet" and "Oo-La-La."

In the Walter Hiers Comedy series there will also be three pictures. These are "Off His Beat," "Hot Doggie" and a third subject as yet untitled, which is nearing completion at the Christie Studio for early January release.

Jimmie Adams, now appearing in his first series of two-reel comedies under his own name, will be seen in "Be Careful," "Fair But Foolish" and "A Busy Bum," the last named having just been completed at the Christie Studio and being scheduled for release in January.

In the Tuxedo Comedy series featuring Johnny Arthur will be three situation comedies, all directed by William Goodrich, one of the finest comedy directors ever developed by the screen. The first of these is "The Tourist," which marked Arthur's debut in two-reel comedies and which created such a furore on its first showing, establishing Arthur immediately as belonging to the front rank of screen comedians. Then there will be "Cleaning Up," a domestic comedy, and "My Stars," which is just about finished at the Educational Studio in Los Angeles.

The Christie Comedy series will have five subjects available—"A Misfit Sailor" and "A Goofy Gob" with Billy Dooley, "Soup to Nuts" and "My Swedie" with Neal Burns, and another as yet untitled featuring Dooley.

The Mermaid Comedies scheduled from the beginning of this season through January include eight of these fast action Jack White productions, featuring Al St. John and Lige Conley. The Conley subjects are "Pleasure Bound," "Spot Light," "On Edge," "Cheap Skates" and "Lickety Split," while St. John will be seen in "Fair Warning," "Fire Away" and Live Cowards."

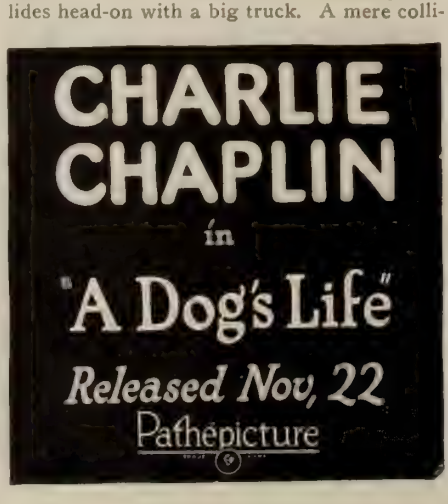
"Big Boy," a remarkable baby prodigy discovered by Jack White, will be seen in each of the three Juvenile Comedies, as will also Bonnie Barrett and the familiar host of Juvenile kids. "Baby Be Good" is the first of this group, "A Bachelor's Baby," a picture with the holiday spirit, and "Sea Scamps" following.

Cliff Bowes is featured in a number of the single reel Cameo Comedies released this Fall, and Felix the Cat, Pat Sullivan's famous cartoon cat, is giving the best effort of his nine lives to contribute his share to the fun which Laugh Month will bring to movie fans everywhere.

Langdon Heads Pathe Schedule for Week of November 29

HARRY LANGDON in the three-reel comedy special "There He Goes," produced by Mack Sennett, heads the Pathe short-feature release program for the week of November 29th, which also includes "Laughing Ladies," a Hal Roach two-reeler; the final chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West"; "The Walloping Wonder," a "Sportlight;" Pathe Review No. 48; "The Garden of Gethsemane"; "Aesop's Film Fables"; "Topics of the Day"; and two issues of Pathe News.

The latest Langdon comedy, "There He Goes," presents the inimitable Harry in a vehicle that affords him full range for his comic pantomime. Harry is the sad-faced owner of a lizzie-mobile, which suddenly collides head-on with a big truck. A mere collision is nothing in Harry's young life and he continues to the domicile of his latest sweetie, Hazel Chase, played by charming Peggy Montgomery. Harry Edwards directed.



"Laughing Ladies" is the Hal Roach two-reel comedy on the schedule with a stellar cast including Lucien Littlefield, Katherine Grant, Tyler Brooke and Gertrude Astor. Littlefield is a dentist who administers gas to his patients in generous quantities.

"The Law Decides" is the tenth and concluding chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West." All the principals appear prominently in the closing events which clear up the plot and result in a happy ending. Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson lead the cast which includes Eddie Phillips, Virginia Warwick, Gus Seville, Ynez Gomez and Ed Burns. Robert F. Hill directed.

"The Walloping Wonders" is an entertaining Grantland Rice "Sportlight." It is a motion picture study of the punch that goes into various forms of sport.

Pathe Review No. 48 continues the American Wildflowers in Pathecolor series, featuring the "Languid Lady," an uncommon flower. Other subjects in the reel are "The Sea of Soda," showing Lake Magadi in the African Rift; and a camera interview with the famous American landscape artist, Hobart Nichols.

The program also includes "A Day's Outing" of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series, "Topics of the Day" No. 48, Pathe News Nos. 98 and 99, and "The Garden of Gethsemane," one of "A Pilgrimage to Palestine" Biblical series.

Shoe Style Show Is a Big Winner In Hook-up on Trouble with Wives

BECAUSE the hero of The Trouble with Wives is a shoe manufacturer and much of the story is in and about a shoe shop, Leon J. Bamberger tied the title to several makes of shoes and stockings, and the stunt has been getting from two to ten or more windows wherever the picture has been shown.

That's pretty nice work, but along come M. M. Wear and Bill Robson to blow the scheme up into a stunt that will get ten times the attention with very little trouble. The stunt is so simple that the picture on this page practically explains it all.

Mr. Wear is manager of Harris' Majestic Theatre, Butler, Pa., and Bill, you should recall, is Pittsburgh Paramounteer.

Like a Fashion Show

The stunt has the drag of a fashion show, but calls for far less outlay, and it can be worked on either hose or shoes, but preferably shoes. It can be worked as shown in the cut, or used for a window stunt through the day—which would be better.

In Butler the stunt was worked after the store was closed for the evening. Across the door opening a table was placed, with a sign coming to the table top and another placed rather less than knee high above the table. On this improvised stage two models alternated in displaying shoes, a small card, (seen on the left of the stage), giving the name of the style being shown.

Two girls are employed to reduce the waits, though only one is used at a time. One is changing while the other is modeling.

Simple and Inexpensive

The sign shown in the cut is practically the only building cost, for the table and the curtain backing can be obtained anywhere and even the sign material can be worked up for other displays.

In this first attempt the billing for The Trouble with Wives appears below the stage. If you copy, try and get the theatre sign above, for the crowd will press in and hide the lower portion of the proscenium. The title should be worked into a single sign, as "There Will be no Trouble with Wives if you Buy When Dorothy Dodd Shoes at Ruffs. Watch the styles, select the one you like the best and tell her to get a pair. Then take her to see The Trouble with Wives at the Hippodrome, dates."

That will give you your share and at the same time give the store a better run.

Generally Applicable

Of course this is an ideal stunt for The Trouble with Wives, because the story matches the display, but you don't even have to wait for a shoe title if you desire to cash in on the idea. You don't always wait for a fashion title for a style show, and this is a style show in miniature.

Work it on any picture, and if you want to get a mob in front of the shop add the Cinderella stunt.

Offer a small sized pair of shoes to the first woman they will fit. Stipulate that they shall be tried on upon the stage. Few women will mind the trial since only their feet will show, and this will add a kick to the stunt that will get the whole town looking. But if you work it as a Cinderella have models to fill in the gaps, and work it in a window in the forenoons or just before showing times.

Picked a Winner

Ware and Robson have picked a real winner and the stunt will run for years after the snappy shoe store comedy has gone back of the shelf. Something like this was done in Newark, some time ago, when stockings were modeled in a window the shade of which was pulled partly down, but that lacked the finish which makes this stunt more than just a window show and elevates it to the dignity of a production.

A Good Front

James F. Powers, of Poli's Bijou Theatre, New Haven, sends in a snappy folder on The Merry Widow. The front shows the Yale Bowl with players in Yale blue and the Army yellow and black with the copy "official program" and "Yale" and "Army" in large bold letters. The initials of Yale are used to form the line "You Are Losing Enjoyment" with "If you fail to join the ARMY of fans who go to the Bijou every week."

The herald attracted favorable comment through the really good picture, but it probably would have worked even better had it really carried the program. There is some danger that people may think that a house that stings in its advertising may sting in its show. It does not create the most favorable reaction.

Reward Cards Are A Help to Beggar

Here is a reward card from F. J. MacWilliams, of the New Madison Theatre, Madison, Wis., that should be used as part of your campaign on The Beggar on Horseback. The reward line always catches the eye, and the text gets over the idea of the play.

Hyman Had Co-eds to Help Put Over Freshman

Strong Campaign to Sell Freshman

Edward L. Hyman made a big drive on The Freshman at the Mark-Strand, Brooklyn, and cleaned up on unusual business.

He started two weeks in advance with the distribution of 20,000 four page heralds, which went to the entire mailing list, was handed out in the theatre, and distributed through stores. He followed these up with the roto heralds, distributed at school football games and elsewhere.

Ten thousand balloons and as many megaphones were given the same distribution, for the high schools play a regular schedule of games and there are many non-scholastic organizations.

A number of music stores were tied up to the plugger and other college songs, several of them giving special windows. As most of the shopping district is concentrated in a half mile between the Strand and the Borough Hall, this advertising was intensive.

The week before the sowing many of the schools were persuaded to announce the coming of the picture in various ways, and two schools, one a public high school and the other a private college, were sold blocks, the former taking 2,000. About three hundred of the students assembled at Borough Hall and marched to the theatre, headed by the college band, boys and girls marching together.

By and large it put the idea over to one of the best weeks of the season.

Getting Bolder

Last Spring one of the big stunts was to have a woman accost men with "May I give you a kiss?" and force a herald and a candy kiss on them.

Charles Morrison revived the stunt in Jacksonville when he put over Marry Me at the Imperial. A good looking girl uttered a fervent "Marry me" as she passed over the herald, and she had so much fun that she asked no other pay than a few passes.

Of course if you get the wrong sort of girl the stunt has a flareback.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

Harold Lloyd's newest picture, "The Freshman," was the inspiration for a prologue of the college type, programmed as "Campus Frolics." This was put on just preceding the film itself, and in addition there were other musical presentations and the Mark Strand Topical Review. The entire show was shorter than is the custom here, running only 1 hour and 48 minutes against the usual 2 hours. The musical numbers required 28 minutes and the film part of the program took up 1 hour and 12 minutes.

This week marks the debut of a new conductor of the famed Mark Strand Orchestra in the person of Harold Stern. The overture was "Il Guarany," by Gomez, and was lighted as follows: fabric transparent curtains closed across the small production stage and lighted from behind by green box lamps; 2 medium amber spots were thrown on the pleats of the curtain from the side; 2 medium amber Mestrum floods on the musicians from the dome and foots and borders of the large stage in purple. Just before the overture an introductory film title was run on the screen announcing the new conductor. Eight minutes for this overture.

Following was an interesting presentation of Irving Berlin's popular hit, "Remember," A film title was run on the screen announcing the artists who would do the number, in the order of their appearance. This was run while the orchestra played the first verse and chorus softly under the same lights as used for the overture. Then Lilly Kovacs, girl pianist, under a pink baby spot played her own arrangement of the number with the orchestra silent. For this the dome changed its amber flood to a dark violet. Next came a soprano who sang the chorus on the apron of the orchestra, under a combination lemon and pink spot from the dome. The concert master standing up at his chair in the orchestra then played the number, while the ballet in white dress and bearing garlands of flowers danced on the production stage in front of a black cyclorama. The xylophonist under a white baby spot then played the number, after which a male eccentric dancer appeared on the apron of the large stage to wind up the presentation. Eight minutes for this entire offering.

Following the Topical Review came "The Campus Frolics" in a setting which represented a terrace against a blue sky. There were 12 wide steps leading from the terrace down to the stage. On the terrace was seated Harry Spindler and his band costumed "collegiate." At opening 6 dancers as Co-eds. were seated on the steps of the terrace as the collegiate band took up "I Miss My Swiss." The sequence of the act from that time was as follows: "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby," danced by the Co-eds.; "Entrance of the Freshman," an ecentric dance number; "Circus Days" by the orchestra; and "Collegiate" and "Freshie," by the Ensemble. "Campus Frolics" ran 12 minutes.

HYMAN'S PROLOGUE ON THE FRESHMAN AT THE STRAND

It was called Campus Frolics and is described above. It was well conceived with the idea that the schools would largely be represented in the audiences and the appeal was chiefly to them. Several schools attended in a body.

"Chene" Locates in New Bedford

H. A. Chenoweth, who has been out of the department for some time, is back in harness and is now at the Colonial Theatre, New Bedford, Mass. He opened the house in 1912 for Cherette, Inc., and this is a sort of homecoming.

He has been having a run on "live baby" stunts. For the first he gave a calf, figuring that they all would guess it to be a pig. Then he gave away "twins," which were a pair of rabbits, and will follow with triplets in the form of a trio of chickens, with a baby lamb and a pig in reserve.

Chene is working a new stunt for Saturday matinees. Following the regular program he lets the kiddies do stunts on the stage. If the older people want to stay they may, but they can see the show before the stunts commence if they are not interested. Chene knows that if he gets the kiddies he has the parents solid.

He is also planning a Salvation Army Benefit, all of the donations going to the Army for charitable use.

He is one of the most fertile stuntsters in the business and we are glad to see that he is back in line again, for he always finds time out of a busy day to report.

Two Good Campaigns on The Ten Commandments

A Paramount Release

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS WERE REAL MONEY TO GREER

This display on the front of the Palace Theatre, Cisco, Texas, was put up a week in advance and backed by a circus posting campaign made a wonderful three-day record for K. N. Greer. The front panels are sloped to give a buttress effect.

Circused Posters for Commandments

No circus ever plastered Cisco, Texas, the way K. N. Greer papered Cisco and its environs for the Ten Commandments at the Palace Theatre, an R. & R. theatre.

Cisco is in a flivver section and Mr. Greer pasted a radius of fifty miles, spreading the paper on thickly. It was like a well known cigar chain; there was one always in sight. The result was that he played to three days that made him wish he could get more pictures of the same calibre.

But he knew that posters alone would not do it. He had to back it up with a house display, and he originated one of the prettiest fronts we have seen on this title: an Egyptian temple effect, with the lower panels slanted out to give the suggestion of real masonry. The additional cost of material is slight, and the effect is so vastly better that you would do well to hold the idea in mind.

Bus Tickets Added to Commandments

Seeking to impress his public with the importance of The Ten Commandments, Eugene Crall reserved the seats for all performances and put them on sale in advance of the opening. This not only guarded against bad weather, but it insured the attendance of the patrons at the commencement of the picture.

Another dignity stunt was to arrange with interburban buses to sell a combination bus and theatre ticket at a slightly reduced price. This not only sold the smaller towns on the idea of coming in, but it gave Mr. Crall free banners. The stunt was worked on four nearby towns on three lines. It is not a new idea, but it never lacks effect on a big picture.

Building up on this drive, a truck with a screen and portable machine was sent into the smaller places to run the trailer. En-route a six sheet was placed either side of the screen, and with the bannered base formed an effective advertising pram.

One Protestant and one Catholic minister preached on the picture, and the newspapers gave up two full page spreads, using the material from the voluminous plan book.

One sheets and window cards were used in all towns within 25 miles, and these brought in the automobile trade.

Ignorant Susan

Eddie Collins used the "What I Know" booklet for Wild, Wild, Susan at the Queen Theatre, Galveston, Texas. The front page was titled "What I know about Wild Parties" —by Susan," while the second page read "Absolutely nothing." The third and fourth pages carried advertising for the picture.

They were distributed by a pretty girl with the word "Susan" in gilt on her hat band.

Giving emphasis to the fact that Mary Pickford in Little Annie Rooney is back in her old-style parts, the Strand Theatre, Atlantic City, gave a treat matinee to the institutional children.

As the house is on the Boardwalk, the visitors soon got the idea that the kindly act more than paid for itself. It's a good stunt to work anywhere there is a sufficient number of cripples and orphans.

THE TREASURE HUNT MIGHT HAVE BEEN INVENTED FOR THE GOLD RUSH

The girl on the left is one of the "pointers" for a treasure hunt on Santa Monica Beach staged by Sid Grauman and the Los Angeles Examiner while the picture was at the Hollywood Theatre. Sells Lightnin' in Durham in Letters of Light

Lightnin' Banner Pleased Customers

Don Nichols, of the Durham Amusement Co., writes that his flashing banner on Lightnin' devised and made by his assistant manager, Wallace Bunn for the Paris Theatre, was one of the best effects he ever used and helped to run up the ticket numbers. From the photograph you can get only a sketchy idea of the effect. It looks like a well-painted banner, but it is more than that. It really is a shadow box banner. You can get some idea when it is told that it took ten men to lift it into place on the projecting moulding.

It is 28 feet wide and six feet high, with a box six inches deep containing 22 bulbs, working on a flasher circuit. The lights are placed so they are directly behind the letters of the title, which were translucent. The foundation was compo board. The letters were caused to flash into prominence to carry out the suggestion of the title. To help the effect along, the lights under the marquise shown in the photograph, were not turned on during this run, to give the sign every chance.

The decorations are from the lithographic paper, the head of Jay Hunt on the left and the trade-mark loafing pose on the right.

Although designed primarily for night work, the sign was an effective one by day, as well. It brought an excellent business.

A Fox Release

LETTERS OF LIGHT MADE THIS BANNER VERY EFFECTIVE

Designed by Oliver Bunn, assistant manager of the Paris Theatre, Durham, N. C., Don Nichols says it was one of the most effective displays he has ever had. Ten men were required to set it into place on the moulding because of its weight.

Ready Made

Working classified ad stunts on Classified, with Corinne Griffith, is a ready-made stunt. The title might have been selected with that end in view. Instead of the names idea, Ace Berry, of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, gave the News ten tickets daily for five days.

Four were given the writer of the best classified ad inserted each day, with three pairs for the next best. In return the paper ran half a dozen three or four liners for Classified in the want ads each day, in addition to a regular front page announcement.

Another Angle

Many cities have cleaned up on I'll Show You the Town with a contest in which citizens were required to point out the interesting features.

Holland, Mich., did it a little differently. Using that head the Sentinel ran a series of informative stories about the city and then backed this with a composition contest for school children with 500 ticket prizes. The tickets were good only at a special matinee at the Holland theatre.

Old Friends

It has been months since we heard of anyone borrowing money bags from the bank to put over a picture, but here they are again.

The Ideal theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., used a lot of them to put over Greed. They were stuffed with sawdust and hung around the marquise with green lights playing on them at night. The stunt has lost none of its pull.

Gets Iron Horse Via an Airplane

Knowing H. M. Addison, of the Binghamton Theatres to be a hustler we may have doubts as to whether a film of The Iron Horse destined for the Strand Theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., was burned in a baggage room fire in East Aurora, but anyhow he got a duplicate copy from Buffalo by airplane delivery, and he crashed into the front page of the local papers.

Because the aviator had trouble with the plane in which he started out, the film was not delivered in time for the Monday matinee, but patrons were given rain checks good for the night show, and Mr. Addison got a column story and a cut.

It worked out nicely, for one plane passed over the field and the reporters pursued it in an automobile in the belief that the aviator had not the proper bearings, but apparently this was a plane en route to New York, for the delivery plane turned up two hours late, but headed straight for the field. That helped to make the interest.

And the lost Monday business was more than made up by the additional interest gained in the picture through the real news stories.

Mr. Addison also sends in a program announcing a harmonica contest. A team of mouth organists was booked in for the last half of the week and the local talent competed on Friday night for cash prizes, the experts being the judges of the contest. It packed them in and showed a profit on the prizes.

Mr. Addison has been taking it easy through the summer, but evidently he is up and doing for the fall campaign.

of street interest before the showing. But the Strand carried the matter a little further, and the announcement in the panel at the bottom of the space tells that the impersonator of the Widow will sell tickets from a branch box office during the run of the play. Raffles girls and mystery women have been used in the stage presentation following their street and store experiences, but to put her into the box office would appear to be a new angle. This display is rather crowded even in its rather large space, and the cut is not more than passably good, but the general effect puts the play over, and makes a good impression. The sales talk is a little too general. Somehow the stress laid upon the immensity of the production does not carry conviction. It is not in the number of persons employed that this production of The Merry Widow finds its chief appeal. The real seller is the fact that the production is genuinely good entertainment. There is a certain intimacy that is lacking in most large-cast spectacles. The story gets over as well as the scenic splendor. More stress should be given this fact. Most big productions are spectacle without story appeal. In The Merry Widow the story stands always to the fore.

BEAT SAYRE'S RECORD IF YOU CAN

Sayre Takes Record With a One Word Ad

Talk about records! We think that J. W. Sayre, of the Liberty theatre, Seattle, takes the record with a signature and one three letter word. And that word is not an adjective, at that. This is a midweek display dropping about fourteen inches down two columns and giving most of the space to a line cut of Chaplin in The Gold Rush. You know it is The Gold Rush and not a reissue because of the gunnysacked foot, but you also know from the various other advertisements. This merely gets a laugh that sells the tickets. It's trick stuff, but as trick stuff it is worth a page of the usual copy. Everyone knows Chaplin, front or back. They know all about The Gold Rush. The only thing is to keep them thinking about the comedy, and this does it better than a more formal ad because it is out of the ordinary. It would not make a good opening day display—though it would work as a teaser in advance of opening—but it does make a capital follow up and we cannot imagine any 500 words doing the picture as much good as this clever little one-word idea. It can be worked on any established personality, but Chaplin is particularly good for the back view. You can't mistake the cut for anyone else, and it will pay you to hold it for a Chaplin. But if you already have played The Gold Rush you can use it on Lloyd and it will be new again by the time Chaplin comes along with another comedy.

Calendar Faces Good Attractor

Paramount was the first to realize the display value of the ringed calendar, but we do not recall that anyone built up on the idea, which was used for a Paramount Week some years ago. Now comes the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, with a capital adaptation designed to put over the idea that Harold Lloyd is in his last week at that house. The cut shows the upper portions of two displays, the lower announcing the opening of the final week and the other following this up. Each was about a two nines, but the lower portion is given the coming of another picture. You will note how well the display stands out and how firmly it fixes the date. We doubt if any other device could be found to put this over more positively. You see the date instead of merley reading about it, and you get it in one flash that there are but five days left. At a pinch you can have this set up in your local office, if you use only the top week. Most offices have some sort of logotype for calendar work, and if the office is too small you can at least use rule work even if you do not box off the days. If you have a cut made, use a white sheet and ask the engraver to benday the shaded dates. This can be done mechanically at a small cost. The device is well worth while. Keep it in mind. The Imperial ran The Freshman for five weeks to a business that knocked out all previous records, and Charles M. Pincus took full advantage of the fact that the football scenes were lifted from a California-Stanford classic of last year. Not only were the teams of Stanford University and the University of California invited to attend, but three other teams were invited. Each had a large student following, and the extra applause helped to boom the show in the esteem of the lay patron. Several nights also were arranged for the Boy Scouts to help the cheering section. The house used the "Ho-Ho" and "Ha-Ha" scheme of decoration and a three line electric sign across the front of the theatre. The Imperial opens its week on Friday, evidently to give the Saturday business the benefit of the press criticisms. This is even better than opening Saturday instead of Sunday. Every ad carried some sort of a football cut, mostly the star in large size. The football angle never was lost sight of.

Straight Lines For Graustark

Although Cliff Lewis likes panel effects and slanted lines in his small displays for the Strand theatre, Syracuse, he also likes a change in pace and for Graustark he holds to the straight line idea, but keeps the lines

A First National Release

short to get the white space effect. He gives more prominence to the play than to the star here, though we think that Miss Talmadge fades any title for drawing power. But she is well played up, and the narrow panel just over her name is not heavy enough to kill down the display. The line in the panel reads "Norma's Glorious Gift to You" in case you cannot make it out. He carries four sets of prices for this attraction, a special price prevailing at the Saturday matinee and night, and with the extra half inch required, he drops about five inches down the space, which is unusually strong for Cliff but he knows what the name is worth to the box office.

Constructive Work

Harry F. Storin has made his debut as a lecturer. Recently he appeared before the Men's Club of St. Paul's Church, Pawtucket, to tell them about the pictures, and to nurse a little publicity for the Leroy Theatre, in particular, concluding with a little talk on The Fool, which was one of the early bookings.

In addition to reaching the church club, he got a column in the Pawtucket Times that was readable enough to interest anyone. It was the sort of stunt that helps all pictures, and not just one, and though it was his first appearance on the platform, he made more than good, and probably will repeat.

Ad Within Ad is Good Formation

Searching for new and attractive forms, Harold H. Bailey, of the Orpheum and Arcade theatres, Paducah, Ky., has hit upon a nice placement of a stock advertisement on The Street of Forgotten Men within his own display. Apparently he has mortised the sales talk from a stock cut, setting in the playing dates, and then has designed his own sales copy to run above this display, with the signature and the other features placed below the feature. This takes a five twelves, but where space is reasonably spaced it makes a very attractive display and takes the layout from the conventional class and gives it a punch. He slips up on his grammar a trifle when he runs "Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky presents" instead of the plural "present," but that probably was a compositor's error. The type is nicely selected, and the use of italic for the top bank prevents this from becoming too formidable in appearance. In a bold face or even straight roman that might have looked like too much to read, but the italic keeps it light and inviting.

A NOVEL DESIGN

John W. Creamer, of the Strand theatre, Chillicothe, Mo., sends in his work on The Ten Commandments and asks for comment. Mr. Creamer is a star lobby man, but his newspaper efforts are comparatively new and he wants to check them up. At that he does not seem to need much checking, for they are good average work, mostly built around the press book cuts. The only one we reproduce is the advance "come early," which always is a sure fire when worked on a big picture. Generally it does help the matinee business materially, and if it does not, it at least gives emphasis to the fact that the picture is above the average. But the main point is to get them in for the afternoon performances, for the night shows probably will take care of themselves. It is particularly good for the out of town patronage, because it often gets the suburban patrons in for the early shows. Where they can make an early start they figure that they will play safe and avoid the night crowds. This is so true that in the smaller towns it is even a good idea to get the merchants to join in the stunt and appeal the feeder towns to come in early, do their shopping and see a matinee performance. In the other examples Mr. Creamer takes care to get the title over as the main appeal and is successful in avoiding too much supporting copy. He stresses the augmented orchestra and has made a careful selection of press book copy. We do not believe that Mr. Creamer needs a lot of advice on how to prepare copy. He is doing as well as can be expected with the support a small town paper can give him.

Hook-ups Help The Trouble With Wives

Using the shoe and hosiery hook-ups arranged by Claud Saunders' office on The Trouble with Wives gave eight unusually good windows to the People's Theatre, Portland, Ore. Manager Fred J. Lucas did a little hooking on his own account when he arranged for 5,000 fifty cent packages of beauty aids to be given all women patrons the first three days. In return he ran a short picture showing how the beauty clay was applied. It was advertising, but it was interesting—and the women had the samples. The men liked it, too.

DESERT FLOWER. (6,837 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Not to be compared with some of her others, but this picture, in my opinion, is merely a question of rental. You'll be pleased with it, but if you have to pay too much, you'll be in red ink on the well known ledger. At a reasonable price, you'll get a profit on this if you properly go after the picture, for it has merit. Fair weather, fairly good attendance. Draw health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

GOLDFISH. Star, Constance Talmadge. Another picture oversold. Forced to raise admission to get in rental, and then lost money. Only a program picture; silly story. Sets elaborate, but that did not save the picture. Good tone, poor appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmers and merchants, widely scattered, town 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

HER NIGHT OF ROMANCE. (8 reels). Star, Constance Talmadge. A good comedy-drama from First National and should please most any audience. Print in first class shape, it being the first real good print we have ever had from First National. Think they tried to run it "over" us little fellows out in the "sticks" with bad prints; however, their pictures were all well directed and get the people in the theatre all right. Good appeal, 90 per cent. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

INEZ FROM HOLLYWOOD. Star, Anna Nilsson. A fair program picture but nothing big. Will satisfy biggest per cent. of audience. No tone. No Sunday or special. Fair appeal. Draw rural class, town about 1,450. Admission 10-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

KNOCKOUT. Star, Milton Sills. A good one for fight lovers, but I'm afraid it was too rough for highbrows. Anyhow, it didn't draw, even with Sills heading the cast. Was greatly disappointed and lost real money on it. Draw farming and small town class. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). The greatest mouth to mouth advertiser ever made. Get this one and go after it big. They will talk, wonder and argue this one if you present it in a big way until every one will come and see it. It will please out of sheer novelty and wonderment. A master picture. Any showman will do good with this one. Special, yes. One hundred per cent. appeal. Draw town of about 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

MAKING OF O'MALLY. Star, Milton Sills. Very fine action picture with much heart interest. Suitable for any house that wants action pictures. Good business on Saturday show. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. Draw mixed class, town about 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre (800 seats), Redding, California.

ONE WAY STREET. (5,600 feet). Star, Ben Lyon. A pleasing program picture that will please the average movie goer. Nothing big, however. No special. Eighty per cent. appeal. Draw town of about 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

SCARLET WEST. All star cast. We consider this superior to the "Covered Wagon," and it would be so in the opinion of the public if it had been given the push that the "Wagon" had. The most vivid western action of Custer's days we have ever seen and you can step on the advertising heavy; we are sorry we didn't boost it as a super-special. Excellent paper on it and well cast production. Tone, O.K. Sunday and special, yes. One hundred per cent. appeal. Draw mixed class, town about 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace and Bonman, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

SHORE LEAVE. (6,856 feet). Star Richard Barthelmess. Fascinating sailor story that will send 'em away in good humor. Not the best Dick has done, but above the ordinary pictures exhibitors are compelled to sandwich in. We used "sweetheart in every port" for exploitation. Tone, O.K. Sunday, yes, special, no. Ninety-five per cent appeal. Draw mixed class, town about 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre, (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

THIEF IN PARADISE. (7,251 feet). Star, Griffith. A good production and seemed to please very well. Special, no. Good appeal. Draw general class, town about 5,000. Admission 15-30. C. A. Anderson, Liberty Theatre (600 seats), Kalispell, Montana.

Fox

ARIZONA ROMEO. (4,694 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Very good. Plenty of comedy and action. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw business and farming class, town 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

DAUGHTER OF THE NIGHT. (5,470 feet). A good melodrama that should hold the interest of the audience throughout the entire six reels. Can be run for three days in any good sized town. Print good. Tone, good. No Sunday or as special. Eighty-five per cent. appeal. Draw factory class. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DEADWOOD COACH. Star, Tom Mix. This is a very good Mix subject, but for some reason he is not standing up at the box office for me as of old. It will, of course, get business, but my people did not get excited over this one. Special, no. Ninety per cent. appeal. Draw town of about 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

HUNTED WOMAN. (4,954 seats). A mighty fine western. One of Curwood's stories. Good for any night in the week, especially Saturday night. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Ninety per cent. appeal. Draw country and town of about 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphia Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

LAST MAN ON EARTH. (6,899 feet). A great drawing card and fairly good comedy. With more serious forethought and skillful direction this might have been the comedy hit of the season. A great idea but poorly developed. A real business getter, however. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Draw mixed class, town about 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre (800 seats), Redding, California.

MARRIAGE IN TRANSIT. Star, Edmund Lowe. A good mystery picture, but the title holds it back. It would draw better with a different title. Tone, good. No for Sunday or as special. Seventy per cent. appeal. Draw country and town of about 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE. (5,578 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Much better than the original and a big business getter. Proved one of our best drawing cards this season. Tone, good. Sunday and any day. Very good appeal. Draw mixed class, town about 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre (800 seats), Redding, California.

SCARLET HONEYMOON. (5,080 feet). Shirley Mason. Just a fair offering, nothing big, but where Miss Mason is liked it will go over very big. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes, and special, no. Ninety per cent. appeal. Draw country and town of about 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphia Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

TEETH. (6,190 feet). Star, Tom Mix, with Duke and Tony (dog and horse). This was very good, with plenty of action, which is what our Saturday crowd wants. Tom don't lose any of his popularity; the kids are crazy about him. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw business and farming class, town 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

Metro-Goldwyn

CHEAPER TO MARRY. Two days to fair business. Picture liked by few who saw it. A good cast—Nogel, Stone and Samatte. Draw general class, town about 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

CIRCE, THE ENCHANTRESS. (6,882 feet). Star, Mae Murray. This plicture will take good where they like Mae Murray; they certainly don't like her here. With another, more popular star, the audience would have liked it. Tone, good. Appeal, none as it is. Sunday, yes, special, no. Draw factory people. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

DADDY GOES A'GRUNTING. (2 reels). Star, Glen Tryon. Here's a comedy that they commented on. It's a scream of the newlyweds. Sunday, yes. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

MIDSHIPMAN. (7,498 feet). Star, Ramon Novarro. A very good picture with lots of clean comedy. This is a good picture to tie up with schools. Taken at Annapolis Naval Academy. Print new. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 85 per cent. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET. (8 reels). Star, Anita Stewart. Very popular story and as such got the business. The picture is only fair, however, but a good bet at the box office. Tone, all right. Draw mixed class, town about 3,000. Admission 10-25-30. J. J. Wood, Redding Theatre (800 seats), Redding, California.

PRAIRIE WIFE. (6,487 feet). Star cast. A very hard picture to judge. Something different. You have to follow picture very close, but it is good; but I am afraid not many audiences will like it. Try it. No appeal here. No for Sunday or special. D. W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

PRETTY LADIES. (6 reels). Star, Zazu Pitts. This is a flash picture with a lot of fine costumes. Intimate glimpses behind the scenes, Ann Pennington dancing and where they like a peak at the doings in one of these Broadway troupes. I should say good business can be done, and the picture satisfy. It is not a special, but a picture well done from every angle, even though the story is not such-a-much. Weather fair. Good attendance. Draw health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

SEVEN CHANCES. (5,113 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. This feature comedy proved the best laugh-getter shown here in a long time. We had no idea it was so good, or we would have raised our prices. It surely is worth more than regular admission price. Tone, good. Sunday, yes and as special. Ninety per cent. appeal. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre, Cloverdale, California.

UNHOLY THREE. (7,000 feet). Star, Lou Chaney. A good picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Draw general class. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. H. Ve Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Between Ourselves

A get together place where we can talk things over

With the old guard swinging back into line to give these dependable tips—the help that's been missed when they dropped out—we're rolling along on high these days—and proud I am to be able to say it.

There's a welcome for the newcomers, too. Proud to have you new folks showing your generous spirit.

In all my dozen years in the picture game I never had an association with any crowd that has made me so proud and so glad to be where I am as since I got this group of good scouts to calling me VAN.

Paramount

ANCIENT HIGHWAY. Star, Holt-Dove. This is a very good picture. If your crowd likes the outdoor western type of picture, this will classify as a special and stand advanced admission. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, and yes as special. Draw town of about 3,200. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

ANY WOMAN. (5,963 feet). Star, Alice Terry. Played two days to poorest business of the month. Not even a good program show. They talked about Conway Tearle in this one, but they never put him in it. Tone, good. Special, never. Poor appeal. Draw better class, town about 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

ARE PARENTS PEOPLE. (6,586 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. Looked this over carefully to see if Miss Bronson was a one picture star, viz "Peter Pan," must give her credit she is the goods and shows great promise. This particular picture much admired. Excellent cast and fine direction. Tell your patrons all about this, not much of a title, but get them to your theatre, the picture will do the rest. Weather rainy. Attendance great considering the weather. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

ARGENTINE LOVE. (5,970 feet). Went over nicely and seemed to please everybody. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

A SON OF HIS FATHER. (7 reels). Star, Bessie Love. If all Paramount issues would have the grounding this one has, we wouldn't be cautious about heavy exploitation on any of them. A truly wonderful picturization of Harold Bell Wright's book with a southwestern locale; it's Irish throughout, with an excellent cast. Boost it, talk it, advertise heavy, and you'll get results. Warner Baxter contributes his best. Tone O. K. Appeal 99 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK. Star cast. Just an ordinary program picture; a light comedy which will get by if you don't promise too much. Good tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw rural and townspeople classes, town 800. Firkins & Laws, Crystal Theatre (200 seats), Moravia, Iowa.

CHARMER. (6,076 feet). Star, Pola Negri. This is a very good picture but drew small crowds for me on two nights. Besides, paid entirely too much money for it: lost money. Tone O. K. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town less than a thousand. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

COAST OF FOLLY. (7,000 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is a little heavier than most of her pictures and the crowd seemed to like it. She takes a double part and handles it very well. Tone, fair. Sunday, perhaps, and special, perhaps. Draw town of about 3,200. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre (500 seats), Pierre, South Dakota.

CODE OF THE WEST. (6,777 feet). Star, Owen Moore. Played two days; poor business. A very poor cast in this show compared to the usual good Paramount casts. Grey's name has a good appeal. Good tone, fair audience appeal. Not a special. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. Carl A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

CONTRABAND. (8,775 feet). Was fairly well liked here and did fair business. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

CONTRABAND. (8,775 feet). Star, Lois Wilson. Fine, interesting program picture. It shows up two-thirds of our law officers and how they mix with bootleggers. Tone, good. Yes for Sunday and no for special. Ninety-five per cent. appeal. R. L. Nowell, Idle Hour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

DEVIL'S CARGO. (7,080 feet). Star, Pauline

Starke. A picture that cost me a lot of money. Does not have much drawing power. Appeals to the lower class of people. Receipts were low. Draw college town of about 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Jr., Lyric Theatre, (345 seats) Oxford, Mississippi.

DEVIL'S CARGO. (7,080 feet). People here thought this a good picture but business was only average. Al. C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

EAST OF SUEZ. (6,821 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Fair picture the element of the Orient. Probably liked by some, as I had a better second night than the first. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, no. Fair appeal. Draw farmers, town about 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. D. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

EAST OF SUEZ. (6,821 feet). Had several favorable comments on this picture but played it against strong counter attractions, and for this reason business was off. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

ENEMY SEX. (7,851 feet). Star, Betty Compson. We considered this a very good production. Miss Compson surely does fine work. Tone, good. No Sunday and as special. Strong appeal. Draw town of about 175 and also rural. Admissions 10-25, specials 15-30 and 25-50. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre, (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

EVE'S SECRET. (6,225 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Rather enjoyed here, nothing to go into ecstasies over, but a well acted film. that will disappoint no one, but don't promise too much. Attendance fairly good. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

FEMALE. (6,776 feet). Star Betty Compson. Another good bit of acting by Miss Compson. Our bunch thought it fine. Personally we did not think it quite as good as "Enemy Sex." Tone, good. No as Sunday and as special. Good appeal. Draw rural and town of about 1,000. Admisison 10-25 and 15-30 and 25-50 on specials. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

FORTY WINKS. (6,203 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. A dandy show up to the end and then, oh, why did they stick on a faked-up set fit for a cheap one-reel comedy. We had rain and plenty of it, knocking our Sunday crowd to bits. A family picture. Tone, good. Special, no. Good appeal. Draw better class, town about 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

FORTY WINKS. (6,203 feet). Considered a very good picture and had great expectations of wonderful business which did not altogether materialize. Business was just fair. Al C. Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE. (5,602 feet). Star cast. Good program picture. Worth seeing. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmers and merchants, widely scattered, town 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

KISS IN THE DARK. (5,767 feet). Fine title, but rotten. Awful stuff that will hurt you for weeks after showing. No excuse for a mess like this. Ned Pedigo, Pollard Theatre (800 seats), Guthrie, Oklahoma.

KISS IN THE DARK. (5,767 feet). A good picture for the better class patrons and mighty appreciated by them. Business was barely average. Al C Werner, Royal Theatre, Reading, Pennsylvania.

PONY EXPRESS. (9,929 feet). Star cast includes Ricardo Cortez. When Paramount puts out a western, you can gamble it's a REAL one. This is a successor to "Covered Wagon." My patrons said "much better." If your town likes "The Covered Wagon" type, play this by all means. Ricardo will be a favorite in your town after this picture plays. Wallace Beery as Rhode Island Red is great. Patrons will not hiss him—but love him. Paper great. Print excellent. Rental a bit high but it's worth it, as it is a big one. On ten full reels.

Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

HELL'S HIGHROAD. (6,084 feet). Nothing new in a theme done a thousand times before. Suggestive situations, even between man and wife. Should be barred by law. Went as over big as some of our expensive features. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, no. Good appeal. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre, Cloverdale, California.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME. (11 reels. Star, Lon Chaney. All that it is supposed to be. Good tone. Appeal, 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre, Matoma, Kansas.

I'LL SHOW YOU THE TOWN. (7,400 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. While the production is rather long, still the story never drags. It is full of pep from beginning to end. This picture will be a treat for any audience. Good appeal. Draw working class, city 200,000. Admission 10-15-20. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, L. I., New York.

PRICE OF PLEASURE. Star, Valli. Just another weak program picture, and about all I can say for any Universal Jewel as far as the box office is concerned. Why don't they stick to the small-town pictures. Special, no. Seventy per cent. appeal. Draw town of about 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

SAWDUST TRAIL. (5,500 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A first class program picture, comedy western type. Draw farming and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-25.

H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

SECRETS OF THE NIGHT. 6,138 feet). Star, James Kirkwood. This was real entertainment. Everybody looked guilty. Lots of comedy. Good comments. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw business and farming class, town 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

SPOOK RANCH. Star, Hoot Gibson. Not so good as some of its predecessors, but it will pass muster. The Hoot Gibson fans will like it. There is plenty of riding, plenty of black face comedy, and you can promise very good entertainment on this. It mostly depends on how he has caught on in your town. Here Hoot is well liked, especially by the kids. That being the case, if one of his pictures lets down a little, it's overlooked. Weather fair. Attendance good. Draw health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

Vitagraph

SCHOOL FOR WIVES. Star, Conway Tearle. I wouldn't play that unless I had to. This film don't get anywhere and neither will you if you book it. Weather fair. Attendance better than the picture, for which I was sorry. It made the squawks more numerous. Draw health seekers and tourists. Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

Warner Brothers

BABBITT. Star cast. A fine picture that the older people enjoyed. They stopped me on the street to tell me how well they liked it. Businss light. Tone good. Sunday yes and special no. Draw rural and town of about 1,000. Admission 10-25 and 15-30, and 25-50 on specials. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

DADDIES. Star cast. (6,800). As fine a comedy drama as one could ask for. Did not draw well on account of hot weather. Tone fine. Sunday yes and special no. Appeal 95 per cent. Draw rural and town of about 1,000. Admission 10-25 and 15-30, and 25-50 on specials. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

DADDIES. (6,800 feet). Star cast. A feature length comedy drama that is very good. You can run it for three days. Good tone. Appeal a hundred per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

GOLD DIGGERS. (6,500 feet). Star cast. A very clever feature comedy that the few patrons who came to see sure praised. A one hundred per cent light entertainment. Tone, good, Sunday, yes. Almost special. Appeal 100 per cent. Draw town of 175 and rural. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30 and 25-50. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (seats 175), Vermont, Illinois.

Hooray!

You know how you feel when you've bought a picture right and they're standing up in the back and the old B. O. cracks the glass around the window trying to grin —well, that's how I feel when the bunch kicks in after a month of silence, with four or five blanks full of reports.

Henry Nauman, Moose Theatre, Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania, and Dave Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania, are two of the old guard who handed me that get-happy tonic this week.

The More the Merrier!

LITTLE JOHNNY JONES. Star, Johnny Hines. A clever comedy drama with comedy and thrills intermingled. Our people liked it, but it was a complete flop at the box office. Draw rural and town of about 1,000. Admission 10-25 and 15-30, and 25-50 on specials. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Ill.

TIE THAT BINDS. Star cast, The most of Warner productions are good, but yet they do not draw for us as others do. This one drew very poorly. Tone good. Yes for Sunday and no for special. Good appeal. Draw rural and town of about 1,000. Admission 10-25 and 15-30, and 25-50 on specials. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

TIGER ROSE. Star, Lenore Urlic. A very good semi-western production that drew good business and gave satisfaction. Tone O. K. Sunday, yes, special, no. Good appeal. Draw town and rural, town about 1,000. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30 and 25-50. W. C. Geer, Princess Theatre (175 seats), Vermont, Illinois.

TRACKED IN THE SNOW COUNTRY. (7,500 feet). Star, Rin-Tin-Tin. This is a wonderful dog story with a good story and plenty of action. Fair tone. Good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw business and farmer class, town 2,200. Admission 10-25. A. F. Jenkins, Community Theatre, David City, Nebraska.

Independents

BORDER WOMEN. (4,500 feet). Star, William Fairbanks. Do you want an action picture of the old style western? Good for Saturday. Good for any small house, nothing else. Sunday no and special no. Print good. Draw from factory class. Admission 15-25. D. W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

COYOTE FANG. (State Right). Star, Jack Perrin. This is a good western with lots of action. Star is very good and should have better stories. This rather weak, but it will go over with a bang. Good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

DESERT MADNESS. (Enterprise). Star, Perrin. A good western, full of pep. Perrin is new here, but should make good as a western star. R. L. Nowell, Idle Hour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

ENEMIES OF YOUTH. (Banner). Star, Gladys Leslie. (6 reels). A fine little program picture and went over in good shape. Print in good condition. Don't be afraid to buy this picture and advertise it. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Sunday yes, special no. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-15, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

MAN WITHOUT A HEART. (Banner). Star, Jane Novak. (6 reels). Another good Banner and pleased what few were out to see it. Had bad weather and some opposition so lost money on it, but no fault of the picture. If all Banner productions are as good as the two that we have had they're worth showing, ando an be bought right. Tone fine. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-15, 15-25. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

POISON. Steiner). Star, Chas. Hutchison. "Poison" is right—to my box office—and there will be no more of this would-be star's pictures run in this house. Here this was rotten from every standpoint. Poor appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

SHOOTIN' SQUARE. (State Right). Star, Jack Perrin. Bought this picture from Progress for five reel feature. It was less than four reels. No ending. Can't tell anything about story. No appeal. No Sunday, no as special. Mrs. Bessie Rutledgt, Orpheum Theatre (300 seats), Fort Worth, Texas.

THUNDERING ROMANCE (Independent-Weiss Bros.) Star, Buffalo Bill, Jr. All action in first reel—thereafter none. It may please the kinds in a cheap house, but nowhere else. Tone or appeal none. No for Sunday or special. David W. Strayer, Mount Joy Theatre, Mount Joy, Pennsylvania.

WRONGDOERS. (Enterprise). Star, Lionel Barrymore. (7 reels). A dandy program picture and went over good with the few who saw it. A brand new print. Fine tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-15, 15-25. W. C. Synder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

Have You Grabbed Off That Dollar Yet?

HERE'S the stunt!

Moving Picture World hits on high when it comes to accuracy in this Quick Reference Picture Chart. But we're human, and maybe something has got past us.

We want accuracy to be jacked up to the apex.

So we've been offering One Dollar to any one who will take the trouble to write a letter calling attention to any MAJOR ERROR—such as incorrect feature footage—in this Chart.

The offer is still good. Hope yon can't find anything wrong in this issue that would work a hardship on an exhibitor in using the complete information. But if you DO find such a bad error, write us—and for your trouble we'll shoot you a dollar.

The Theatre of To-Day

Presentations ~ Prologues ~ Music

Edited by Colby Harriman

"The Mountain Comes to Mahomet"

PARAPHRASING a well-known line written by Oliver Goldsmith: And those who came to scoff, now beg for work. The motion picture theatre has convinced artists of opera, of the concert field, name acts of vaudeville stars of the legitimate, that it is a most lucrative field. It is really amusing to observe the change which has transpired, especially with certain acts who a short time ago ridiculed the idea of appearing in a motion picture theatre, and today are offering salary cuts for the opportunity.

The motion picture theatre is now coming into its own as far as prestige is concerned, in the same manner that the motion picture industry triumphed over the scorns and sneers of the legitimate. If the artists find that the conditions are better in a motion picture theatre, that the audiences are just a trifle more discriminating, then the men who have guided the destinies of the motion picture theatres are to be commended. This development has been one of guidance, has been one of propaganda, one of concentrated thought on giving the people a form of entertainment that is diversified. Now we find that theatres are deluged with offers of artists of every description. There is hardly an act of any consequence; there is scarcely an artist of any name but will consider a motion picture theatre engagement.

We are speaking particularly of the de luxe houses. It is a wonderful thing when a business reaches the point when it offers an urge to the people who constitute the programs. Everything today is in the hands of the managers and producers. They have battled through weeks of disappointments which, however, have had their redeeming features, and now standing before a gold mine of talent the test comes. Will the traditions of the first run houses be side-tracked, and will the vaudeville theatre and the musical comedy stage dominate? It is so easy to make your house a vaudeville house, it is comparatively simple to turn your program into one which savors of musical comedy. Right here is the danger sign. If a strict presentation program which can be made up of well established acts and leading artists properly surrounded is not maintained in all of its original detail then monotony is going to creep in, and the first thing the manager and producer realizes is they have lost a certain element which attracted, and which they strive to build. Those producers who have built a reputation through their ability to maintain a strict unadulterated motion picture program are the ones who have brought the first run theatre business to the plane it now occupies.

Let us be contented with the present set-up, but strive for the consistent and artistic development of what we have in hand. Our business is a veritable "acres of diamonds." Let us not kill the goose that lays the golden egg. We have evidences in dollars and cents that the type of programs which has been responsible for the development of these houses is the one to basically follow and master. Let us not indulge in the illusion that we have reached the limit of this development. We are at the foot of the ladder. With this influx of new talent; with this opportunity of selecting the artists to form the basis of our subjects let us not make the mistake of allowing the names to dominate rather than the idea to be featured. It is a presentation or it is a prologue and not an act or a name.

Scenic Artists' Activities

THE three leading Broadway scenic artists affecting the motion picture theatres are busily engaged in special assignments with their weekly regular programs added. JOHN WENGER, of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion, is again commissioned to design sets for the legitimate stage. He will execute the settings for the new forthcoming production "Tip-Toes" by the authors of "Lady Be Good." GATES and MORANGE who furnish the beautiful settings at the Mark Strand Theatre, will do the settings for the Erlanger production "The Kick-Off." The EASTMAN BROTHERS of the Colony, have several leading vaudeville act sets in course of preparation, besides doing the series of Laughtons musical prologues which are to be offered in a chain of houses. They will do the settings for the New Municipal Auditorium in San Antonio, Texas.

Fabric Settings Ideal for Productions

ACCORDING to the letters we are receiving from producers thruout the country, there is a general movement towards the exclusive use of fabrics for stage settings in presentation production work. One reason is that a combination of standard fabrics can be used in so many different ways and result in as many sets when artistic and consistent lighting treatments are applied. The old idea of painted scenery is rather an expensive proposition for a motion picture theatre, especially when the production department are compelled to produce a new group of ideas each week. Fabrics can be camouflaged, they will lend themselves to "scenic trickery" in an easier way than the painted drops and flats. We trust that we will be able to publish in the Department within the near future some of the excellent photographs which have been received illustrating this scenic treatment.

"Romance and the Ages"

EPISODE FOUR

A Four-Part Offering, Which Should Appeal Because of Its Novelty—Blending of Music, Colors and Lighting Will Aid in Presenting a Popular Prologue

Moving Picture World Presentations—Devised By Colby Harriman

THIS episode completes the routine for the Four-Part Presentation serial, Romance of the Ages. In the last three issues of the Moving Picture World we have published the other episodes showing how the sets could be adapted to the various routines without a complete change. The fourth episode introduces the Modern Age, and it is necessary to introduce color, dazzling effects, unusual lighting and scenic combinations.

The subject matter in this episode emphasizes the love theme as reflected in the three others. To link the foregone episodes with this number it is suggested that bits of the previous presentations be incorporated in the general routine of this subject. For instance, the male singer dressed in modern garb sees the "shadow chorus" of dancing maidens used in the first episode; he meets the slave girl of the second who dances for him; he becomes enveloped in the swirling dance of the "ladyes faere" who suddenly emerge from their billowy costumes clad in glittering dance costumes of today. The entire action must be one of speed, and as the male singer meets the modern girl they sing a modern love theme as the entire ensemble is brought on for a whirling finish.

The set is similar to that of Episode One, the basic portion or foreground remains the same. If the previous issue of the Moving Picture World is consulted, it will be easy to note how this set as illustrated becomes a part of the last set. Foreground is draped with two metalline gauze curtains hung in heavy folds. The platform remains at center in front of which the circular step unit is placed. The two column clusters which form the end of the facade are placed at either end of the platform and the coping or top of facade is placed above. The three center columns are removed, revealing an opening. A painted wall extends across stage back of the platform, practical vines and foliage may be used or painted on the wall. Silhouette drop remains in place and is used as a back drop. An olivet or a special shadowgraph lamp should be placed at the back wall to secure the color arch as sketched. This is very effective and proves to be a dazzling background. Festoons, flowers and leaves which are bronzed and silvered should be wound around the columns down stage and hung in the vicinity of the column clusters on the platform.

In Plate 3 the general details for constructing the vari-colored medium is noted. It is suggested that a glass medium would be preferable, the various colors painted on the glass with lamp coloring. However, a gelatin medium is as practicable. Take a standard sized medium frame, insert a plain sheet of gelatin which has a screen or wire backing on the frame. Cut out hemispherical sections from various colored mediums, place them on the plain gelatin, cut them so that the edges lap and fasten them together with film cement; place another screen over the completed medium and the effect is ready for operation.

The lighting treatment should be colorful in the foreground with a subdued background to permit a proper operation of the lighting on the back drop. Orange, amber and canary should predominate in the lighting of the foreground.

CAMEOS

Two units are introduced under this heading, the first being Mlle. Daganova who presents a Rose Dance and the second, Dorma Lee, Contralto who sings, "Love Like the Dawn Comes Stealing," by Cadman. A metalline curtain is used for both numbers, the first being a flaming gold highlighted with purple and the second, a blue gold highlighted with green.

BURKHART'S PLASTIC CHROMATIC FILMS

This is perhaps one of the first American showings in a motion picture theatre of this excellent stereoscopic novelty. The film subject is entitled "Girls or Illusions" and includes scenes from certain French musical revues. A scrim with a special fabrication is hung at the curtain ine. About 15 ft. back of the scrim a painted drop is hung. A landscape of trees, toned an orange, amber and green are highlighted with green and red border lights. The film scenes all have black backgrounds, the various characters appear in color. The projection machine is set so that the bottom of the frame comes to the floor of the stage. Heavy drapes mask in the sides, thereby eliminating the frame line. The effect is very realistic, the characters appearing to be walking in the area between the scrim and the back drop.

VAMPIRES OF THE AGES

A semi-prologue novelty introducing nine specialty dancers and one singer. The set is a combination of fabrics, two units of gold curtains hung in heavy folds form the foreground. A cut arch drop is placed in three; a unit of ten steps at center with a fantastic balustrade carrying off right and left, the balustrade and steps are draped with red plush. A silver drop is hung in the background; box wood trees are used to dress. The lighting treatment is principally purples, greens and rose. Billy Rhodes appears in one, sets the story with a song, "Oh Boy, What a Girl." The lights are gradually brought up back of the gold gauze revealing the various characters posed in tableau—Eve, Salome, Helen of Troy, Cleopatra, DuBarry, Carmen, are introduced and do miniature specialty dances with three vamps of today brought in for the finale, with the entire ensemble finishing with a spirited Charleston.

Listening In on Some Equipment

STREETS full of people—people full of turkey. Thanksgiving night. Everybody going somewhere—past a theatre standing in darkness.

Inside the theatre the silence was broken by a gurgle that grew to a rumble and ended in an asthmatic wheeze.

"Oh, my poor pipes," came through the organ grille, "Projjy, strike an arc, will you. I want to run a scale and see if there's any of me true to pitch."

"Arc?" rattled out the projector, "where'm I goin' to get any juice?"

"More short circuits?" inquired an exit sign, plaintively.

"No!" snapped the projector, "The local electric company has laid down on us again."

"But the theatre down the street," squeaked an exit door, "that's all lit up."

"Sure," growled the projector, "They got a motor generator set. They should worry if the local power source goes bust."

"Why don't we get us one, too?" demanded the screen.

"Same reason that you ain't been kicked out long ago for a new place for me to put my pictures," snarled the projector, "The house ain't making anything to buy with."

"That's why I'm here, too," groaned the organ, "I'm so old I can hardly whistle a tune any more—"

"Yeah!" interrupted one of the front row seats, "You said it! Y' oughta heard the lady sittin' on me yesterday. She says, says she, 'This music is terrible. Simply horrible. I can't set an' hark to that all evenin',' she says."

"You and your sense of duty!" cackled another seat, "I'm the one that ought to talk about a sense of duty. That's all that holds me up—and me with a busted leg."

"Nix on this sob stuff, fellows," spoke up the aisle carpet, "I'm walked on every day but you don't hear me wailing about being downtrodden. Now we know the boss is losing money. Instead of airing our personal grunts, let's see what's wrong and if there's any way to make things better."

"You're cut off the right pattern, kid," sung out a lobby display frame, "Let's help the boss, 'stead of beefing."

"That's the ticket!" shouted the chopper by the door.

"Well, then," the projector called down from his nook, "He pays a lot for the film he feeds me—that's not a worry."

"Yes," agreed the ticket chopper. "But getting them in ain't the whole works. He's got to get 'em to stay in and come in again."

"That woman won't sit on me again," the front row seat squealed. "Not without she gets better music."

"I do my best," groaned the organ.

"Sh-h-h! He's coming," whispered the door snubber. "What'll we do? How'll we tell him?"

"I'll show you," squeaked a tiny voice.

It was the box of slide pencils up in the projection room. The pencils jumped onto the slides by the projector and began busily running to and fro.

In came the theatre owner, harassed, disconsolate. With him the projectionist.

"Best night—all loss," said the boss.

"Shame," said the projectionist—and that instant the lights that had been left on began to glow—too late to get a crowd in!

But the projectionist hiked up to his place.

"Hey, what's this?" he yelled down. "Say—boss—"

The boss had slumped wearily into a seat.

"The projectionist, staring at the slides strewn about on his rewind table, shouted, got no response. He struck his arc and began screening slides—

"Boss, make the patron more comfortable—fix us up!—and get him coming BACK—The Seats."

"Boss, some patrons pass up your house because they can't stand my music—I resign in favor of a new instrument—The Organ."

"Boss, they'll come in if you clean me up so they can SEE the picture—Your Screen."

"Boss, when you buy parts, get 'em from the man who made me—it won't cost much more and I can make more patrons by giving you a better picture—and I won't wear out so quick—Projector."

"Boss, I heard you say they're all auto riders and radio fans—that you can't get 'em in no matter what you pay for service—get me some brothers and sisters, dress up the lobby around me—they'll stop and I'll drag 'em in for you—Lobby Display Frame."

"Boss, they ride ten miles to see a picture—Why?—because they get more comfort, indirect light that lets 'em find their seats without punching the picture in the jaw—Your Lights."

"Boss, get yourself a motor generator set so we can keep working for you even when the city power lays down on you—Your Whole Gang of Equipment."

The theatre owner rubbed his eyes.

"I must be dreaming," he muttered.

"Boss, it's worying you how to get the money to do what we say—well, you rake some together to start—put in some new equipment and tell the world about it—ballyhoo it!—tell 'em they can see a good show in comfort without going any ten miles—it'll pay for itself—The Ticket Chopper."

"By glory—I AM dreaming," murmured the boss, "But it's a good dream. I'll do it!"

"Good night!" said the last slide.

Boston Metropolitan Marvel Theatre; You'd Be Proud to Run Such a House

BOSTON showed us something when its justly elated citizens thronged in Tremont, Hollis, Dillaway and Dore streets, headed one way—for the majestic entrance to the new Metropolitan Theatre which takes up a lot of the space in the fourteen story office building that those streets bound. Nearly five thousand seats to be filled! And goodness knows there were plenty of folks at the October 16th opening to fill them many times over.

And with Earl W. Crabb, former manager of the Mark-Strand Theatre in Buffalo, as the directing genius, assisted ably by George Crabill; with John Murray Anderson's revues and presentations knocking them cold; with Nathaniel Finston batoning real music from his fifty-five musicians, and Arthur J. Martell coming from the former Gordon circuit to preside at the console of its mammoth organ—there's no danger of these thousands of seats showing blanks later on.

You'll be interested in the things that make this a marvel house—so let's get down to facts.

The structure, which is built of re-enforced concrete, is 155 feet high, the city limit of height for structures. On the ground floor are four stores and the theatre lobby. The exterior of the building is faced with sandstone. The Metropolitan building is reported to be the third tallest structure of this type in the country, being exceeded only by one building in Cleveland and another in Chicago. The cost of erecting the building is estimated at $8,000,000.

And now for the theatre itself. The entrance is spacious and a short distance back of the sidewalk line is the box office with windows on each side for the ticket sellers. This lobby is of marble with panels and friezes elaborately decorated in relief and gilded, and with a curved ceiling on which is a beautiful mural painting by the eminent Roman mural painter, Louis Amarosi, replica of a famous Venetian mural by Titian. The marble is the color of jasper with rose and cabanel and verde antique at the base.

This lobby is separated from what is called the inner lobby by a number of full-length glass doors, curtained with exquisite lace material of a dark cream shade. In this inner lobby are two beautiful stairways that lead to mezzanine corridors that eventually lead to the mezzanine balcony of the auditorium with its circle of fourteen boxes that seat approximately 1,000 persons. This lobby is another artistic creation with its Botticino marble piers and pilasters, its sculptural decorations and its ceiling mural also by Amarosi. There is a central light under which the head usher stands as a sort of guard and director of patrons entering the theatre. The general color scheme of all the lobbies is ivory and gold.

Passing through another set of doors one enters the grand lobby, arched and pillared and gilded. It rises to a height of nearly five stories. Sixteen rose jasper marble pillars, set off by a background of Botticini marble wall panels, tower up to the high ceilings. In the grand lobby are three mezzanine galleries and beautiful corridors with lounge chairs and sofas all around. To the left of the grand lobby floor, as one enters it, are the doors leading to the orchestra floor.

At the further end of the grand lobby is a grand stairway, pillared and arched and with great light-colored marble posts on which are two Chinese vases, which Edward F. Albee, head of the Keith-Albee interests, contributed to the decorative effect and which are said to have cost a fortune.

This lobby is as large as some theatres. It is said to have a capacity of 9,000 persons. From the ceiling hang two immense, elaborate chandeliers, holding hundreds of bulbs. Beautiful tapestries hang between the arches.

Passing down a few steps from one section of the grand lobby one enters a reception and lounge room that is sufficiently large to accommodate nearly 2,000 persons, with walls wainscotted and paneled in oak and with a paneled ceiling. Off this area are spacious smoking rooms and lounging and toilet rooms for men and even more elaborately fitted lounge and toilet rooms for women.

Off another part of the grand lobby is a Red Cross room with nurse and equipment for the emergency treatment of patrons. There also is a press room for writers. Two elevators carry patrons to mezzanine floor or balcony above it.

The general architectural plan in the Metropolitan is the Louis Quatorze period, an era in the courts of France, which was a marvel of sparkling brilliancy.

The interior of the theatre expresses gayety with gold, comfort with crimson and the more spirituelle elements of art in varying blue tones. Paintings bedeck the ceiling of the auditorium. They depict scenes from myth and legend.

In the center of the vast dome is a golden sunburst in which are hundreds of concealed lights. Around the inside edge of this are several openings in which also there are varicolored lights.

The seats in the auditorium, provided by the American Seating Company, are large and more widely set than the legally prescribed limit.

The projection room is in the center of the mezzanine floor, between the balcony and main floor, and its location gives it a throw to the screen that is virtually level. The equipment of the room was furnished by the Cine-Howell Company and includes three Simplex projection machines and two spotlights.

The electric display signs were made by the Norden Company of New York.

Although designed primarily as a photoplay theatre the Metropolitan has a stage large enough to accommodate the biggest of road shows. All its remarkable facilities will be utilized in the presentations and prologues to be given.

One of the most dominant features of the Metropolitan is its orchestra pit. It is situated directly in front of the stage apron. It has been constructed in elevator fashion. When the musicians take their places at their music stands the platform on which they sit its sunk down so far that the movements of the musicians are not visible anywhere in the theatre. When the time comes for the orchestra to play the movable pit rises by means of hydraulic pressure. For orchestral overtures the musicians are elevated to a level with the floor of the stage. When playing for presentations and pictures the orchestra sinks to a level corresponding to that of a stationary pit. A small platform for the conductor moves independently.

The organ, reported to be the largest of its kind in the United States, was made by the Skinner Organ Company. Its two consoles also are on an elevator.

On the Hollis street side of the theatre, on the second floor, are the offices of the Metropolitan's managing director, Earl W. Crabb; publicity director, Jeffrey Lazarus; private projection rooms; film laboratories; book-keeping department, and quarters used by John Murray Anderson, in charge of presentations.

The structure housing the Metropolitan is known as the Capitol building; it is a real estate project originated in and negotiated through the office of W. J. McDonald. Associated with Mr. McDonald in this enterprise is Max Schoolman, who was treasurer of the Gordon Olympia circuit of theatres.

The Metropolitan Theatre has been leased for a long term of years to Famous-Players Lasky Corporation and the Keith-Albee interests. Control of the policy of the theatre is vested jointly in these two concerns.

As They Came Out You'd Hear Them—

"THOSE aisle lights are certainly nice. You don't have to bang up against the seats when you want one for yourself." —Overheard at New York's Colony Theatre.

"I like to get here in the middle of a show."

"You do? Why——"

"The lounge—I guess they call it—is so comfortable I enjoy sitting and watching the folks."—Picked up in New York's Capitol Theatre.

"An organ certainly can sound nice when it's well handled. I didn't hardly notice the orchestra was gone."—A patron at Fox's Flatbush Albemarle Theatre.

"Yes, there's a bigger theatre just a little further up the street, but they have such clear pictures there."—Lifted out of a patron's chatter on the way out of F. R. A. Operating Company's Brooklyn Linden Theatre.

Omaha's Omaha to be In "American Style"

THEY'VE been putting 'em up in Grecian style, Roman style, and so on. So Omaha has decided to be original—have a theatre built in "American style."

Omaha is to have a theatre called the "Omaha" and a magnificent house 'twill be. The World Realty Co. for its proposed new house at Sixteenth and Douglas streets, where the Bushman Block now stands, chose the city's name. The Bushman Block is to be torn down and work on the new Omaha Theatre is to start early in 1926. Officials of the company explain that in selecting this name the theatre will be in the nature of a monument to the pioneers of this section of the West, particularly those pioneers who settled Nebraska and western Iowa back in 1840 and 1850. The whole Omaha and Nebraska idea is to be incorporated in the architecture. It is to be distinctly American in design and atmosphere. The World Realty Company plans to strike out boldly and build an American theatre, with a distinctive American atmosphere and mood in the architecture. In the facade will be busts or bas reliefs calling to mind the noted pioneers and classical characters of the American frontier, both Indian and white.

Zardig's Egyptian Starts Out Grabbing Indianapolis Patrons

"SIT here in comfort and get your entertainment under perfect conditions, without eye-strain, without distortion—no matter in what part of the house you choose your seat."

That's what the new Egyptian Theatre that Mr. A. C. Zardig started on its successful career last week, says to every person in the audience.

No question about it—equipment talks to the patron—and there are few people who do not get the message.

A. C. Zardig's handsome new Egyptian theatre, at Fall Creek boulevard and Central avenue, Indianapolis, began its career as a motion picture house with its auditorium filled several times. Unusual in design, decorated with extreme good taste throughout, arranged to give the fans the greatest possible comfort while viewing a cinema, this neighborhood house ranks as one of the most beautiful and restful places of entertainment in the country.

Crowds lined the sidewalk all evening, obviously eager to get within and willing to wait from one show to the next for admission.

Adapted from the square, solid, majestic architecture of the ancient Egyptian temple, the house gives an impression of great size without any accompanying sense of ponderousness. The auditorium, with the balcony, seats about 1,500 persons, but so deft have the designers been in their planning that the "angle of vision" never suffers distortion.

The seats are deep-cushioned and comfortable. The carpets are thick and easy under foot. The numerous resting spots are provided with easy chairs.

Lights are softly shaded, yet there is sufficient illumination in the auditorium to enable one to see clearly even on first entrance. The ceiling has been painted blue to represent the sky, in which twinkle little electric lights after the manner of stars. The central canopy so diffuses the indirect lighting, that the reflection on the lower floor seems to be moonlight.

Walls, furnishings, even the ushers' uniforms, are done in mellow shades of brown, relieved by adroit mixtures of dull greens and reds. A conventional frieze of Egyptian figures with a huge, conventional scarab on either wall, encircles the auditorium. The stage, a good-sized one, capable of housing feature acts, is curtained off with some brown material on which are, again, conventional Egyptian figures.

It's a place of beauty and well worth seeing. The policy will be to show second run releases.

Better Projection Pays

An Argument on Screen Lighting

JOHN GRIFFITH discusses with the editor the interesting point of proper screen illumination. Read and learn what both of us have to say on this subject.

Mr. Griffith writes:

This letter has reference to the answer to Bluebook School question No. 308, in which you take exception to my answer in which I recommend the partial closing of the dowser to reduce screen illumination.

Neither figures 38 nor 39, page 169 of the Bluebook, represents a complete system, from condenser to screen, all set for projection. They are merely designed to illustrate light action in the condenser beam from the face of the converging lens through the aperture and to the projection lens.

As you well know, if the projection lens were in its actual working position, instead of two round spots of light at the screen there would be a single image of the aperture, under which condition if we cut off one of the beams shown in figure 39 we would still have a complete image of the aperture, but would have decreased its illumination by one-half.

And now I am going to take issue with your conclusion that the iris in front of the projection lens is the best thing with which to reduce screen illumination, if it is to be reduced by cutting the light beam partly off.

Turn to figure 46, page 181 of the Bluebook, and you will see that the iris in front of the lens would cut off light from the marginal points first—before it cut light at the more central zones of the beam, hence the illumination at the corners of the screen would suffer first.

Correct in Part

As to your last conclusion, why, certainly you are correct. I merely said I believed the effect would be better there than elsewhere. I don't believe (though in this I may be in error) you can cut the beam at any point and retain evenness of screen illumination, though it is possible the effect of unevenness would not be sufficient to be visible.

I don't like to enter into a dispute with you on these matters, John, because you specialize on projection light action, and unquestionably are therefore much better informed than am I on that particular thing. However, I am going to question—not dispute, but question—your conclusions concerning figures 38 and 39—especially the latter, though both are the same as regards what I have in mind.

I do not remember whether or not any point on the front surface of the converging lens projects a sufficiently magnified image of the light source to cover the aperture, but I think NOT, except the crater be very large. Also I don't think the spot from either beam in figure 39 does cover the entire aperture. Lay a straightedge on the top of the top beam and I think you will conclude that it falls below the top of the aperture, in which case you would NOT have a complete image of the aperture on the screen from either beam used singly. I am sorry I no longer have the original photographs.

I also—may be in error, but don't think so—believe you will get pretty nearly the same effect by cutting the beam with an iris in front of the converging lens that you would get with the iris in front of the projection lens. It is true that every pin point of the face of the converging lens of the condenser projects a complete image of the light source, BUT, at least at the smaller amperages, the images projected by the central zones do not, as you know, cover the aperture, and until the light source is large enough so that its image as projected from the central zones does cover the entire aperture, which occurs ordinarily at about 60 to 65 amperes D. C., the outer margins of the aperture are illuminated ENTIRELY by the outer zones of the condenser, hence under this condition if you cut the outer Zones by means of an iris located in front of the converging lens, is it not an indisputable fact that you would get precisely the same effect you would get if you cut the outer rim of light in front of the projection lens, as per figure 46, page 181 of the Bluebook?

Of course if the amperage be raised until the image from the center of the condenser covers the entire aperture this effect would be reduced, but it seems to me it would not, and could not but be present until the light source image projected by the marginal zones of the condenser be large enough to cover the entire aperture, which does not occur until amperage is raised to about 120 D. C.

Not an Argument

Now, John, this is not to be viewed in the light of an argument between you and I. I respect your knowledge on these things very highly—too highly as compared with my own to enter into an argument with you. If I am wrong I want to know it, hence have set the matter forth just as I understand it. If I am wrong show me wherein my reasoning is at fault.

We might keep this between ourselves, but I am printing it, because I think it is through such discussions that my readers may be helped, which far outweighs the mere fact that they may discover that I am in the wrong, or that you may have committed an error.

As the matter stands I still stand by my guns on my criticism of your reply, and my statement that an iris in front of the projection lens would reduce screen illumination with as little ill effect as it would were it located elsewhere, with the single exception that I am not sure whether or no that holds true when the amperage is high, and the light source therefore of such size that its images projected by all or nearly all zones of the converging lens entirely cover the aperture.

Now, John, go to it and rip that argument up the back—if you can! I'll be much interested in seeing where I am wrong—IF I am.

Griffith's Answer

LATER: I submitted this to Griffith before printing, in order to permit him to upset my apple cart if he could. He says:

Do you remember the prize contest pulled off in the department a few years ago, in which I said that the modern projector should have an iris shutter incorporated in the condenser mount? Well, I still maintain that that particular thing is very desirable.

An i now we will have our little argument, or discussion rather. I hold you to be perfectly correct in assuming that the light beam from each pin point of the converging condenser lens surface sends forward an image of the light source, which only imperfectly covers the projector aperture unless the spot be unduly enlarged, which would set up an undesirable condition.

I, however, hold you in error in assuming that the margin of the aperture only receives light from the margin of the condenser. When using plano convex condenser lenses, or other condenser uncorrected for spherical aberration, it is the light beams from the intermediate zones which form the sharp focus of the spot at the cooling plate—see figure 1.

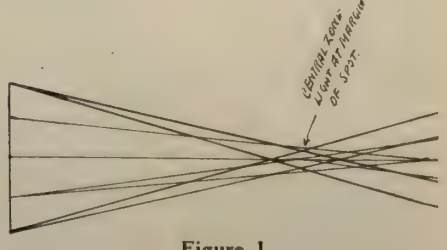

Figure 1

In figure 1 the beams from the intermediate zones are not as concentrated at the aperture plane as are the beams from the marginal zones, because of the fact that they focus further from the converging lens, hence the point of sharp focus is where the marginal and intermediate beams meet.

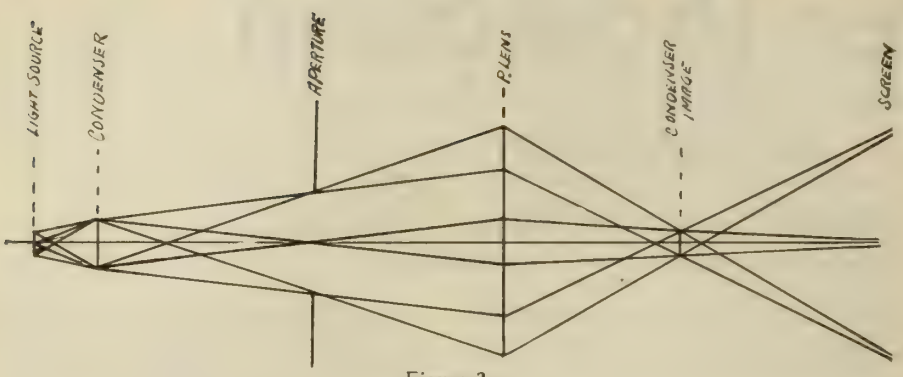

Figure 2

Analyzing the light beam from points on the plane of the converging condenser, we have a beam which carries an image of the crater. Any image carried by a single beam is not quite large enough to cover the diagonal of the aperture, consequently each point of the condenser illuminates the screen but imperfectly, the total of screen illumination being made up of an infinite number of imperfect layers, the total supplying a screen illumination which may be said to be fairly even.

Governing Factor

The factor which governs the evenness of screen illumination is not the light which passes through the innumerable pin points of the face of the converging lens, but the light which passes through the points of the plane of the collector condenser lens, because each of these points is projecting to the aperture an image of the light source which does cover the aperture completely, and if the light source be evenly illuminated, each beam will pass through the aperture to the lens, and we will have an evenly illuminated screen.

If we obstruct the light at any single point on the plane of the collector condenser, we would subtract light from all points of the screen simultaneously, therefore the plane of the collector condenser would be the ideal place to install an iris shutter.

Moreover, we would get precisely the same effect were we to place an iris shutter at the plane where the image of the collector condenser is located, but the dissolving effect is not so perfect at the image as it would be at the actual lens plane, because of the fact that some of the marginal beams do not hit the aperture squarely.

Dissolving Effect

The dissolving effect with an iris would be perfect, but if the beam be cut with some opaque object passed through it, the margin of the condenser is cut last, and the beam coming from the marginal points of the condenser are only projecting an image of half the aperture to the lens, so that the final cut-off shows a sort of scissors effect.

A summary of the situation is as follows: The perfection with which the light beam of a projector may be dissolved upon the screen depends upon how near the iris may be placed to the plane of the collector lens of the condenser, or to the image of the plane of the collector lens, with the notation that the more perfect dissolving effect will be had at the plane of the lens itself, because of the before named reasons.

The performance of an iris shutter at the front of the projection lens will vary with the focal length of the lens. With a very short focal length projection lens the image of the plane of the collector lens may be very close to the front of the lens, in which case it would work out fairly well, though the condenser image would be very small, and a very slight movement of the iris would reduce the light heavily, or cut it off altogether.

On the other hand, if the focal length of the projection lens be such that the image is removed some distance from it, the dissolving action will not occur, and what will happen will be that the light will be cut off from the corners of the screen.

A Question

The question may be asked: Why will or does the outside dowser, which is located a considerable distance from the plane of the collector lens, produce a dissolving effect? If we partially close the dowser, we can find its image quite near to the image of the condenser (I don't quite know what Griffith means here. The "condenser image" may mean any one of two or three things. If he means the image of the plane of the collector lens, then I really am unable to understand how such an image can be formed, under the conditions; and before printing this I shall ask for an explanation of that point. Of course Fig. 2 may be assumed to explain it, but what gets me is how pin points on both collector and converging lenses can form separate images.—Ed) and the same dissolving effect takes place with the dowser as though we cut the light beam where the image appears.

But

But it must be remembered that the set-up will affect the dissolving at the images if the light beams from the points on the condenser (Presumably the plane of the converging lens.—Ed.) do not hit the aperture squarely, and this will affect the appearance of the condenser images as well.

To illustrate why it is not practical to use an iris dissolver in or near the projection lens, unless the condenser image (Confound you, John, I could bite you! Why don't y' say what y' mean? "Condenser image" may mean either of two rather widely separated surfaces—provided it is possible to get an image of the plane of the collector lens. I never tried that myself, and doubt if it can be done.—Ed.) is near the end of the projection lens, let us examine an exaggerated example of the optical action found in and the optical principles involved in the motion picture projector optical train, as per figure 2.

Note that the only plans at which the stoppage of the light at a single point will affect the illumination of the entire surface of the screen is at the condenser and its image (Which image?—Ed.). An argument of this sort helps to refresh the memory of us all.

Oh, yes, by the way, I forgot to mention the fact that if the optical train be set up according to the lens charts, it makes no difference what amperage is used, the beam of light from each point of the converging lens will always be less than the size of the spot (BUT not less than the size of the aperture if the amperage be large enough.—Ed.), so it is unlikely that they will entirely cover the aperture. (A 125 ampere crater will do it under ordinary conditions and a 60 to 65 ampere crater will cause the images projected by the central zones of the condenser to do it under ordinary conditions.—Ed.) Of course if you boost the amperage you enlarge the individual beams, and the light beam as a whole would dissolve better.

No Apology

I have no apology to offer for the rather extreme length of this article, because it is, to my way of thinking, very enlightening, in that it is a thing the projectionist can, at least to some extent, test out for himself, and if he finds Griffith is correct in his contention, then he knows WHY he is correct, and has a vastly better understanding of the action of the projector light beam, and in a way which is very valuable to him in his everyday work.

I am not going to comment except to say that, as I understand Griffith, his reasoning is that each point of the light source fully illuminates the face of the collector lens (see "condenser," figure 2), and that this condition is duplicated at the condenser image, but that this condition is not present at the face of the converging lens, or elsewhere in the optical train.

That seems reasonable, if you study the matter, and it is pretty obvious that, as Griffith says, any stoppage of the light at any point or points on the face of the collector lens would operate to reduce the light on the screen equally all over its surface.

Would Like Reports

I would like to have Gray, Bennewitz, Dobson, Fell, Burnett, Hanover, Doe, and others who will, test this matter and report. I would also suggest that inasmuch as this is a really important matter from the viewpoint of the projector manufacturer, the Nicholas Power Company, the Precision Machine Company and the Enterprise Optical and Manufacturing Company make tests and let us know the results. If the thing works out in practice, then certainly a practical heat-resisting iris should be installed right up against the plane of the collector condenser lens.

Still Later

Still later: Let us finish our argument. Griffith says that the images of the face of the collector and the face of the converging lens should be quite close together in front of the projection lens. He cites the fact that if we use two cracked condenser lenses, both cracks will show on the shutter. He says "we can focus any plane that is located near the condenser in front of the projection lens. There is a somewhat complicated light action takes place in focusing the different planes, but for PRACTICAL PURPOSES the condenser image may be considered as a single unit." That last means, as I understand it, that either the plane of the collector or the converging lens is meant when he says "image of the condenser."

What I am unable to understand is this: If each point of the surface of the converging lens sends forth an image of the light source, as it most certainly does, as may be

Question No. 387.—What would you do if you blew a fuse and had none with which to replace it? You could get another in a short time, but until it came what would you do? The other fuse is all right.

C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; Messrs Thoreau and Clark, Vancouver, British Columbia; S. F. Cooley, Manchester, New Hampshire; G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois; F. H. Moore, Taunton, Massachusetts; W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; R. H. Schneider, Loomis Theatre, Frankfort, New York; Harry T. Dobson, Toronto, Ontario, and T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama, all came across all right with this one.

I think, however, that Doe's reply is best for publication, it is:

First of all, Brother Richardson, I could hardly imagine myself getting caught without spare fuses. Under any ordinary condition it would be inexcusable, from any and every viewpoint. However, were I to take a relief shift for some "operator" and find a blown fuse, with none available for replacement, I would use common sense. Laws are, I believe, made to be administered in the light of common sense. A circuit is still protected if it has one fuse, though perhaps not adequately. I would bridge the blown fuse with copper of a size to fuse at least somewhere near the capacity of the blown fuse, or if I could not get that, then I would bridge the blown fuse with copper of any available size, before I would "kill" the show while waiting for the fuse sent for.

That last is theoretically and legally wrong—certainly, but in this world one sometimes must, in practical affairs, do theoretical wrong in order to do that which is, under the conditions, right, and we are remembering that the single fuse will itself prevent any serious harm to either circuit wires or apparatus. But "believe you me," as the editor says, I would demand that fuses be procured at the very earliest possible moment.

The editor likes this answer because it applies common sense, which is one of the most valuable of all human possessions. It is what I would myself do, except that brother Dobson adds a thought, the value of which I am not certain. I have not noticed that the fuse on the same side always, or even usually blows, but perhaps it is so. He says:

In the first place I would try not to get caught without fuses, as the projectionist should always have an adequate supply on hand. If I did get caught, though, and it was on a circuit which had to be used immediately, I would bridge the blown fuse with a piece of drop cord, No. 16, using more or less strands, as the case seemed to call for, depending upon the amperage used in the circuit.

When fuses let go on any circuit, I think it is the fuse on the same side which always blows so I would switch the good fuse to the other side, and bridge the side which did not blow.

That stranded wire is a good thought. It woudl be entirely practicable to figure out just how many strands would be necessary to pretty closely fuse any amperage, and such a list would not be so bad a thing to have stuck in the back of your Bluebook. Probably never need it, but—you never can tell.

Say, you chaps, this is a Bluebook school, dagnab y', and not one of you, except brother Cooley, even mentioned the table on page 117! How come? I see that brother Schneider also has the idea that the same fuse always blows, as per Dobson.

Question No. 388.—Tell us what care you would give the fuses of your projection circuits.

Cooley says:

Keep all contacts clean and tight. Examine fuses occasionally, directly after a "run," to determine whether or not they heated appreciably after an extended period of use.

Moore says:

It is a mistaken idea many people have that fuses need no attention until they "blow." They should be removed from their contacts once a week, and, if necessary, the contacts cleaned. Dirty fuse contacts cause unnecessary resistance and heating of the fuse.

Thoreau and Clark say:

Keep contacts clean and tight. Loose or dirty fuse contacts mean heat, and this sort of heat reduces the capacity of the fuse, and may cause its blowing.

Which is essentially the reply made by all, so that's that!

Question No. 389.—Suppose one of the fuses of your projection circuit blows after a short run. You test the circuit for shorts and grounds, and find none, but the same one of the fuses—the same one—blows after half an hour of use. Where would you expect to find the trouble?

Moore, Dobson, Doe, Hanover, Cooley and Budge all agree that the probable trouble would be loose or dirty (probably the former) fuse contacts, which I hold to be right, though two men also named overload as a possible cause, while Thoreau and Clark named (A) Dirty contacts, (B) Loose contacts, (C) Overload, (D) Rise in voltage, which really means overload. I think, however, that loose contacts covers the ground pretty well, without further remarks.

Question No 390.—Draw a sketch, or describe a practical tester for both plug and cartridge fuses.

Hanover's description leaves little to be desired. He says:

In some convenient, out-of-the-way location on the projection room wall, I would install an incandescent lamp receptacle, and in it place a lamp of proper voltage for the current used. One side of this receptacle I would connect to one side of any convenient "live" incandescent circuit, using conduit for the wires, of course. The other side I would connect to the other side of the circuit, through as many separate fuse receptacles as there are kinds of fuses used in the projection room, or as it is probable that I may wish to test. This would be so done that if a good fuse be placed in any one of the various rceeptacles, the lamp would light. No switch is necessary on this circuit, though one may of course be installed if desired.

Doe says:

Assuming that I have plug fuses and cartridge fuses with both knife and ferrule contacts to test. I would wire up a lay-out as per the accompanying sketch, in which X 1, 2 and 3 are respectively plug, knife blade and ferrule contact receptacles, while 4 is an incandescent lamp socket, or wall recepticle.

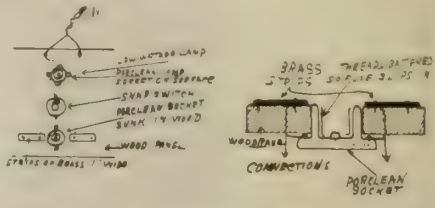
With the wires attached to a live circuit you will see that when a good fuse is inserted in any one of these receptacles the lamp will light. Simple, what?

Uh huh, quite simple, but a darned good layout to have on the wall of your projection room just the same; also there should be one at the main house switch board as well. Good work, brother Doe! Good work, but don't wiggle your ears or make faces at the teacher!

Friend Schneider also sent a drawing which has points of merit, in that the test is made almost instantly. This device tests both sorts of cartridge fuses, as well as plug fuses, It is, of course, connected into a circuit in series with an incandescent lamp. It is controlled by a snap switch, since, for obvious reasons, it would not be wise to leave the device "alive" when not in use.



Tester for Plug and Cartridge Fuses

The wiring is obvious, and the layout, as I have said, has points to commend it. To test cartridge fuses it is only necessary to close switch and lay fuse contacts on brass plates.

Friend Dobson suggests a dry cell wired in series with an ordinary bell, so that when the fuse contacts are touched by the wires, the circuit is completed and the bell rings.

That's all right, and will work, too, but, Old Timer, why monkey with a bell when you have current to right of you, current to left of you, etc., etc.? The scheme has one virtue, however, in that no sockets are required, so maybe we'll let you get away with the scheme after all.

Cooley has the ingrowing crust to mount a tester in a suit case, make an excellent

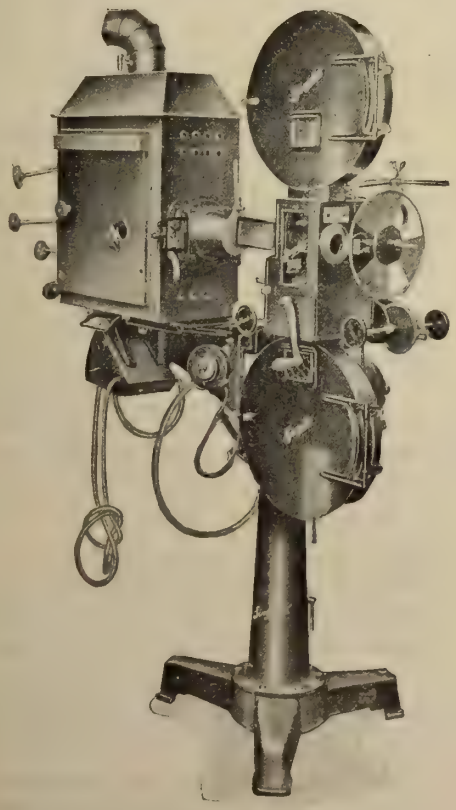
Let's Go to the Movies

With many people movies occupy a large and definite place in each week's program of entertainment. Fortunate is the theatre whose audience consists largely of these regular patrons.

Many theatres depend on a good selection of pictures alone to secure this class of business. But, invariably it's the theatre that gives the best presentation of pictures that attracts steady patronage. People know that most good pictures can be seen at any particular theatre, sooner or later, and they choose the one that shows them best.

Good projection equipment is therefore, of first importance. That is why so many of the most prosperous theatres have installed Simplex Projectors.



Simplex Type S Projector

Simplex

The Simplex Projector is built according to the designs and specifications of engineers whose many years of experience have given them a thorough knowledge of projection requirements.

The selection of material, the making of each part, and the construction of the whole machine is attended by the most diligent care and precise workmanship.

Simplex Projectors are made in several types to fit the requirements of every theatre. For arc-light or incandescent lamp projection it pays to buy a Simplex.

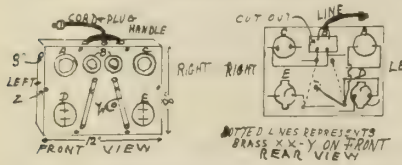
pencil drawing of same—so that I'd have to do the whole draned thing over in ink. Well, anyhow I got even with him by not doing it very good.

In the drawing, I is a low wattage carbon filament lamp. In B place two plug fuses (so the first tester will be used?—Ed.). C is for testing lamps. D for testing shorts or grounds. If there is a short or ground A will light. E is always alive, and may be used to plug in trouble lamp, etc. XX, the two slating bars, are to test cartridge fuses —long ones at bottom, short ones at top.



Y is for testing plug fuses. If good lamp A will light.

Cooley remarks: "Well, I guess that covers all needs of the projectionist, and if well made it will last for a lifetime."

Yes, but why so saving of explanations? "Y," I think, is a strip of copper attached to bar X, with a flat, brass-head screw or bolt for center contact. Just how D is used I'm darned if I know, unless it is that a fuse is placed therein and then lamp A lights if there is a ground, though perhaps a lamp is placed directly in socket D. It would be the same I guess. I agree with Cooley that the thing is very complete, and maybe some of the boys would like to make one, therefore come across with further explanations.

Question No. 391.—Set forth the important points in fusing theatre emergency light circuits.

Guimond says:

Frequently local officials undertake to force the acceptance of their own individual notions by passing laws which are at variance with tried and proven practice in the handling of this highly important matter.

Disregarding such things, however, current for emergency light circuits should be taken from the mains ahead of everything else, including the main house fuses. The main emergency circuit should be fused, and these fuses should be located in a separate wall cabinet, together with the main emergency circuit switch, in either the box office or the theatre manager's office.

Each separate emergency circuit should be fused, and in the same location. Each separate lamp should have a fuse in one or both of its circuit wires, to the end that a ground or short in the wires of receptacle of one lamp will merely blow the fuse of that one lamp circuit, and not interfere with the other emergency lights.

Dobson says:

Emergency light circuits are subject to various regulations in various localities, here in Ontario the emergency circuit must be taken from the line before any other circuit, must be fused separately and have a separate meter, each circuit such as exit lights (inside and outside), aisle lights, certain lights in passage ways and on stairs, also in the foyer and lobby must each have their individual switches and fuses, and be located in a place that is readily accessible to some one who has charge of their maintenance.

Which is excellent law, or so it seems to the editor.

proven by placing a thin metal plate in which is a pin hole snugly against the surface of the converging lens, then how in hallelujah CAN the collector lens at the same time project forward a complete image of the light source? This is illustrated in figure 3, in which pin hole B sends forward a cone of light B, while Griffith contends that the collector lens simultaneously sends forward a complete image of the light source, which is of different size from that projected by point B. Whether John means that the collector lens sends forth images of each pin point upon the surface of the light source, which combine to form the shot, or whether the image of the light source as a whole is presumed to be projected by the collector lens I don't know, but presume—oh hell-elujah. You've got me all mixed up! I guess this will be this for this time, and that's that!

Unfair Nonsense In Union Rules

THIS department stands for fairness to the men engaged in projection. It has for fifteen years consistently and persistently opposed low wages and unfit working conditions, and proposes to continue so to do so long as F. H. Richardson is at its head.

It is but right, decent and fair that men have healthful, fairly commodious, well ventilated, well equipped working quarters. Those things we ask and demand from the exhibitor in the spirit of FAIRNESS and "square shooting." Good wages bring better men into the field of projection because low wages do not, never have and never will attract high class ability, therefore high wages, up to a certain point, of course, are demanded, because it is only fair to the motion picture industry, the producer, the film exchange, the actors and the audiences that modern high class photoplays be placed in charge of men of real ability for their reproduction upon the screen, and men of real ability can seldom be had for low pay.

However, fairness is NOT one sided, though some exhibitors and some UNIONS seem to imagine it is. Recently I visited a small, but very beautiful theatre here in New York City. The projectionists, men of ability, both of them, receive about seventy-five dollars a week for projecting one show two times each day. That, plus those various things which go with it, is all they do for what we may call a very fairly good pay. The work is pleasant, the room good in every respect, the equipment of the best. They work from 2.40 to about 5 P. M. and from 8.40 to about 10-11 P. M., or a total of about five hours a day.

At one side of the projection room, within easy reach of the projectionists, of which two are constantly on duty, is a bank of levers by means of which the auditorium lights are turned out at the beginning of each show, and turned on at its ending. This is a duty which ought, from any and every angle, including that of common sense, to be taken care of by the projectionists.

Not so, however. They are not, by some "union rule," presumably of the electricians' union, permitted to touch those levers. At the beginning of the show the house electrician must climb up into the projection room (where, unless I am in error, he is forbidden by law or rules to be when a show is in progress) and turn out the lights, and when the end of the show comes he must again appear and turn them on.

Should a fire occur in the projection room I don't know whether or not the projectionists would be brought up on charges or not, if they DARED touch those "sacred" levers and illuminate the auditorium. Probably to be good union men, they should let them alone, and permit the audience to die in darkness if it came to that.

The general idea is, I suppose, to force the management to employ a "house electrician" whether such a critter is needed or not, and in most motion picture theatres he is NOT needed a darned sight more than he is needed. I was informed that if there were no "house electrician," then the management would have to hire an extra man, at probably fifty to sixty dollars a week, to do that not-to-exceel-four minutes' work a day—fifty to sixty dollars for less than half an hour of work.

This department is "for" the union, because it is the men's organization and their protector. It is NOT, however, for any such rank nonsense as this. Where the house light controls are in the projection room, and that is where they usually should be in a motion picture theatre, and two propectionists are on duty, THE PROJECTIONISTS OUGHT TO HANDLE THEM. That is just plain common sense.

Providing an extra man with employment is all very well, when there is a legitimate reason why he should be employed. Forcing the employment of an extra man when there is no legitimate reason for it is equivalent to outrage, and that's that, whether the union likes it or not.

Erroneous Impression

I sometimes get letters like the following: "Dear Mr. Richardson: With your permission I would like to join the Bluebook School—"

There is no "permission" necessary. To "join the school" it is only necessary to send answers to the questions, starting at any time and in any place where the questions, but not the replies thereto have been published.

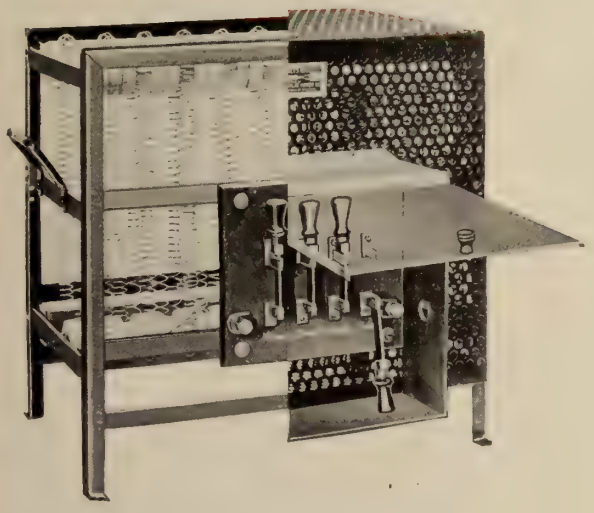
POWER'S MULTIPLE COIL RHEOSTAT



Weighs less than one-third of grid type rheostat. Easily moved by one man.

Multiple Coil Units—One coil carrying five amps.—balance ten amps. each.

Small amperage carried by each coil allows use of small wires which permit perfect connections.

Loss of one coil does not affect others. If entire capacity of rheostat is not being used a new coil may be immediately switched in.

Coils can be replaced in a few minutes without difficulty and adjustments are easily made by means of knife switches.

Coils are special non-corrosive wire, strong and operate at very low temperature.

G. E. FUSED QUARTZ CONDENSERS

THE NICHOLAS POWER CO., INC., IS THE EXCLUSIVE NATIONAL DISTRIBUTOR OF G. E. FUSED QUARTZ CONDENSERS, a product of the Thompson Laboratory of the General Electric Company, representing nearly a century of scientific research and practical development. Fused Quartz is used in a variety of important scientific and manufacturing operations and is particularly valuable in the manufacture of condenser lenses for motion picture projection. It will not expand or contract except at extreme temperatures, as its melting point is approximately 1750 degrees centigrade, and it transmits light with a greater efficiency than glass.

G. E. Fused Quartz Condensers have been used for over two years and in practical operation in a large number of theatres,—such as the Capitol of New York and the Palace of Washington,—the following facts have been established:

They can be subjected to intense heat or sudden change in temperature without danger of cracking.

The distance from the arc to the face of the lens is not limited, nor is it necessary to gradually raise or lower the temperature.

Pitting with hot particles of carbon and copper is not so apparent as with glass condensers and the clear fused quartz condenser therefore remains more efficient under similar conditions.

For experimental purposes a projector operating at 150 amperes was short circuited and the arc played across the face of the lens. Under such conditions the lens, of course, was badly pitted and the ordinary lens would be rendered unfit for further service. The G. E. Fused Quartz Condensers, however, were resurfaced at a cost of only $2 and were again in use within two days.

G. E. Fused Quartz Condensers are Guaranteed against breakage by heat

THIS IS FOR YOU, MR. MESSITER!

We're tickled to hear about the big business at the Whitehurst Theatres, Baltimore.
Your congratulations to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are certainly appreciated.
Business great with "Never The Twain" at the New Theatre!
And records broken with Ramon Novarro in "The Midshipman" at the Century.
Those things are good to hear.
You wish us "continuous success in producing pictures with the merit of these."
Mr. Messiter, we want you to know this.
We want all exhibitors everywhere to know this.
We'll continue to make successful pictures.
As long as we continue to put ourselves in your place.
Our studio contains the most skilled picture creators in the world.
But they never for a minute forget your slant.
They ask themselves
"Will it sell tickets to Maggie, to Tom, to the millions?"
"Will it stop them on the Main Streets of the world and draw them into the theatre?"
Look over our releases and there's the answer.
The Industry marvels at the continuous flow of hits from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.
This week it's "Bright Lights" with Charlie Ray and Pauline Starke, and next week it's Elinor Glyn's "The Only Thing."
Every week it's a money-maker
Why?
Because we never start making a picture until we know darn sure.
That Mr. Messiter of Whitehurst's Theatres, and thousands of showmen like him will say:
"That's box-office."

"Jackie Coogan scores in 'Old Clothes.' One of the really fine actors of the screen. His technique comparable to Pickford, Chaplin, Gish. A MILLION DOLLARS FOR A THRILL!

That's the spirit of the theatre-going public. And that's why real Melodrama gets the money. Because it's the red corpuscles in the arteries of the dramatic complex, and its appeal is universal. Here is a Melodrama packed with hair-raising action, big climaxes and startling situations. It is a powerful treatment of one of the most widely discussed problems of the present day—crime and the reformation of criminals. It portrays the conflict of primal human passions with the inexorable methods of law enforcement and the system that decrees: "Once a criminal always a criminal."

Good morning!

Armistice day—God bless it!

The world is full of pictures this week whose stories hinge on the World war. And there's never a finer one than "Havoc" being shown

I think that I have never seen any greater acting than is done by the men in this production. Walter McGrail gives an impersonation that fairly carries you away. He completely loses himself in his characterization and engulfs you in the storm of his emotions. George O'Brien goes to the mat with his part in gripping fashion. Leslie Fenton—whom we don't know well, but from now on will know better—

Yet or find out the reason why—has several scenes that tear at your heart. David Butler and Bertram Grassby are splendid and minor rôles acted by chaps not mentioned in the cast are of sincerely and beautifully presented.

First mention for the men, with a close second for the women. The brilliant and lovely Margaret Livingston is at her best. So are little Madge Bellamy, Eulalie Jensen and Edythe Chapman.

Then sets and scenery are so perfect. The action that takes place on the battlefields "over there" is so real— so terribly real.

The story, from the play by Henry Wall, is of two men, closer than brothers, who love the same women, as the faithless as she is beautiful—and she is very beautiful.

She jilts the officer to whom she is engaged for his friend, Dick. The latter, home on leave, after a struggle to be loyal to the man he loves, succumbs to his infatuation. He goes back to the front and makes the truth known to Roddy.

Roddy is insane with jealousy—and Roddy is his superior officer. The stern business of war becomes a factor in a soul battle.

I shan't tell you another single thing about the story because this picture is one that for nine reels will hold you breathless if you haven't heard beforehand what the plot is about. All left for me to say is—SEE "HAVOC."

WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

"The Big Parade"!

THE greatest picture of all time has been made again. "The Big Parade," a WAR PICTURE, with full pack, tin hats, TOBACCO JUICE and fixed bayonets has swung in behind the little column of "the greatest pictures ever produced," and is marching on to glory. In our opinion it is the GREATEST of them all.

Ten years ago the word GREATEST was kept by circumstance in critical moth balls and rarely dusted off to be applied to a picture. Of late the word has been DESERVEDLY in frequent circulation. The industry has been putting out GREAT pictures in its stride. Day by day it becomes increasingly more difficult to make a picture rear up among the GREAT as the GREATEST. "The Big Parade" marches, SINGING, past anything we have ever seen.

Years from now, when you want to see AGAIN how the SOUL of America went to war in 1917, turn back to "The Big Parade." And see Slim the tobacco-chewing steel worker put down his RIVETING gun high up on the rib of a skyscraper skeleton, and take up ANOTHER GUN; see Bull put down the glass he is wiping in a Bowery gin mill; see Jimmie leave his expensive roadster in the street when a Ford-full of his pals rattles by toward the recruiting station.

The Three Musketeers, these, whose tired dogs TRAMP the same roads Dumas' Three GALLOPED over; who sing songs of their OWN making; who wise-crack better than PAID humorists; who manicure manure piles with trench shovels; who leave off making love to M'selle when MESS CALL goes; who fight the M. P.'s and the gendarmes for each other; who THUMB THEIR NOSES across No Man's Land; who shed their blood for each other when the Big Parade moves against the MACHINE GUNS.

A war picture without a single "atrocity!" None of this business about the hero arriving JUST in time to save the heroine from violation by the Hun officer! A war picture as full of LAUGHTER as of HIGH EXPLOSIVE!

This picture GETS you so much that as Slim, Bull and Jimmie dive into a shell hole and you KNOW the end of one or two of them is near, you find yourself WISHING that Laurence Stallings, the author, would FORGET the laws of war, averages, and drama, and pull ALL THREE of them out alive.

Yet you know, from the mold in which the picture is cast, that the THREE of them will not march much farther in the Big Parade. Under orders issued by HIMSELF as a corporal and the RANKING soldier of the three Slim crawls out from the shell hole and silences a German one-pounder. The ORDERS were delivered verbally by a runner from the Captain: "The skipper says for ONE OF YOU GUYS to shut up that TOY CANNON." Slim's "orders" were issued to his two buddies in the form of a tobacco-spitting contest, at which sport he was FREELY acknowledged the champion of the A. E. F. On the way back the STAR SHELLS discover Slim to a machine gun crew. He dies, the blood trickling down from under his helmet to match itself with the TOBACCO JUICE that won him the RIGHT TO DIE for his pals.

It is at this point that Jimmie, ordered to stay in the shell hole, and knowing Slim is dying out in front, raises his WONDERFUL cry: "Orders! Orders! Orders! Who the hell is fighting this war—MEN OR ORDERS?" —and starts a Big Parade of his own. Bull follows. A machine gun burst settles on Bull and he plunges face down—to the music of "Killarney." Jimmie's Parade is stopped by a bullet in the knee, but not until he has wiped out the machine gun nest—and given a cigarette to the dying officer in command.

We speak of them as SLIM, BULL, and JIMMIE because that's the way they get you—not as actors—but as the characters they stand for. On the COAST Slim is Karl Dane, Bull is Tom O'Brien, and Jimmie is John Gilbert. But on the SCREEN they are just Slim, Bull and Jimmie. All GREAT. And from Karl Dane you can expect, in the future, any number of GREAT parts.

The LOVE STORY in "The Big Parade" between Melisandre and Jimmie deserves a niche all its own. You do not see RENEE ADOREE in this part. You see MELISANDRE. You do not see RENEE ADOREE clinging to the truck that is taking Jimmie up to the front—trying to HOLD IT BACK for one more moment of farewell. You see MELISANDRE.

"The Big Parade" tramps with HOB-NAILED shoes over the page of MYTHICAL picture history on which is written, "The public does not want any more war pictures."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer can look from its windows across the street to the Astor Theatre where "The Big Parade" is a sell-out and KNOW that this theory has been

Only 2,000 Theatres Entertain Orient's Population of Billion

EDMUND HOWELLS, far eastern representative of Producers International Corporation, the foreign distributing agency of Producers Distributing Corporation, who has returned from a business tour of the Orient including Japan, China, Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements, Indo China, Siam, India, Burma and Ceylon, discloses some highly interesting facts of the far eastern motion picture situation and the Oriental preference in subjects.

Mr. Howells' knowledge of the Orient makes him an authority on the subject of distribution in this field, and his observations may be taken as a fairly accurate gauge of the type of pictures which will find the greatest favor in Oriental countries.

In surveying this vast field Mr. Howells says: "It would be supposed that enormous possibilities existed in the tremendous territory of the Orient, but although the population approximates 1,000,000,000 people, there are but 2,000 motion picture theatres in all the Orient.

"Japan, the most prosperous of the Oriental countries, with a population of over 75,000,000 people living within a prescribed area of 275,000 square miles, has less than 4,000 theatres. This means that on an average there is but one theatre in every 275 miles of territory, with an average of over 75,000 people to each theatre. From these figures it will be seen that Japan is far from being over-seated in picture theatre accommodations.

"About 750 pictures are exhibited each year, almost 400 of which are American films. The general price of admission is 50 sen, equivalent to about 25 cents.

"China, whose area approximates 3,850,000 square miles, embracing a population of about 400,000,000, has only sixty motion picture theatres, and of these about twenty-five might be considered first-run houses.

"China, with its mighty population and vast territory, boasts of but one theatre to every 64,000 square miles of territory, with an average of over 66,000,000 people to each theatre. It is interesting to note, however, that the class of attendance at these theatres is, for the most part, of the higher type of Chinese.

"There are approximately 250 houses in the Philippine Islands. Of these, there are not over twelve first-run houses. The general price of admission is about 40 centavos or 20 cents in U. S. currency.

"The Dutch East Indies, Straits Settlements, Indo China and Siam are generally considered one territory. The chief theatres in this territory are located in the cities of Batavia, Bandoeng, Sourabaya, Singapore and Bangkok, in which there are twelve first-run houses.

"India, Burma and Ceylon constitute the remaining territory of the Orient. In this territory there are about 250 houses. The important ones are located in the cities of Calcutta, Bombay and Rangoon.

The limited number of theatres, plus the fact that in most countries they are part of chains, makes selling competition very keen, but Mr. Howells was successful in closing contracts for the 1924-25 releases of Producers Distributing Corporation to China Theatres, Ltd., controlling the theatres in China; U. Uno in Japan; the Lyric Film Exchange for the Philippine Islands and Madan Theatres, Ltd., in India, which sets the Pro-Dis-Co product for the entire Orient.

CAPITAL STOCK INCREASED

The capital stock of the National Theatres Corporation, under the direction of Cooney Brothers, has been increased to $2,000,000 to take care of the expansion program of the company. At the present time two new houses are under construction, the huge Paradise Theatre on the West Side and the Avalon Theatre on the far South Side. The Cooney circuit now embraces the fine new Capital Theatre, Stratford, Chatham, Cosmopolitan and Hamilton. Negotiations are still under way for the projected new Loop Theatre, and it is expected they will be ready for an early announcement as to the location and other details.

New Quota Plan?

THAT Canada would do well to follow the example of the British Government in considering legislation for a Quota Plan to provide for a certain percentage of British-made pictures at every performance in all picture theatres, was put forward by R. S. Peck, an official of the Canadian Government at Ottawa, Ontario, in an address before the Rotary Club of Hull, Quebec, on November 19, when he spoke on conditions throughout the picture industry. Although there have been references in Canada by picture men and in Canadian newspapers regarding the proposed quota arrangement for theatres in the United Kingdom, this was the first public expression in Canada regarding the movement. It was considered important because Mr. Peck has been the director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio at Ottawa, Ontario, for five years.

Mr. Peck declared that American pictures were supreme on the screen, even in the British Empire where 95 per cent. of the pictures shown had their origin in the United States. He said: "It is a matter of concern to the British Government that so many of the motion pictures shown in different parts of the Empire are of foreign manufacure. All governments realize the tremendous possibilities of the film for publicity and propaganda purposes. Legislation will soon provide that there must be a certain percentage of British film shown in any of the Old Country theatres."

MONTREAL SEIZES POSTERS

No less than thirty posters were seized at the Laurier Palace Theatre, 1683 St. Catherine street east, Montreal, by Martin Singher, Montreal moving picture poster censor, on November 10. Mr. Singher announced that some of the posters were not fit for public view and also that the sheets did not bear the imprint of the censor's approval stamp.

"The Big Parade"!

knocked for a row of G. I. cans. Just as Marcus Loew saw "The Four Horsemen," ANOTHER supposedly ill-timed "war picture," pack them in.

What "The Birth of a Nation" did for Griffith, and what "The Four Horsemen" did for Ingram, so "The Big Parade" has done for King Vidor. It has made him the GREATEST director of the day.

That's saying a lot. Because the motion picture, which draws upon ITSELF for its own INSPIRATION, has schooled many FINE directors in the past few years. And day after day the job of making a production stand out becomes a HARDER one.

In "The Big Parade," JIMMIE comes back from France with a leg missing. That's what LAURENCE STALLINGS, who wrote the story ESPECIALLY for the screen, did. A newspaper man who went over with the Marines. He wears an artificial leg now, and because he bears that resemblance to the old pirate, he calls himself LONG JOHN SILVER. It takes humor to do a thing like that. And guts.

These are the things he has put into "The Big Parade."

Mr. Stallings, we are not writing or producing pictures, but if it is any satisfaction to you, we will tell you that we would give a right eye to have contributed anything HALF so fine to the motion picture as "The Big Parade."

Clean Circulation Records!

LAST year when the annual audit of the motion picture trade papers was made MOVING PICTURE WORLD was the ONLY paper whose audit tallied EXACTLY with its own previously published circulation figures.

Not only FIRST in NET PAID EXHIBITOR CIRCULATION but also the FIRST paper in this field to run its circulation records SO CLEANLY that its claim of EXHIBITOR CIRCULATION was verified to be RIGHT TO THE COPY under the exacting investigation of the AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS.

This is the finest example of CLEAN CIRCULATION RECORDS—of selling HONEST VALUES—that has ever come to light in this field.

A second paper was found to be a very few (only 20) copies at variance with the AUDIT. THAT'S A GOOD PAPER TOO.

A third was proven to have been grossly exaggerating its EXHIBITOR circulation.

The fourth paper, SUSPENDED and REFUSED an Audit for the year 1923 owing to "INCOMPLETENESS OF PUBLISHER'S CIRCULATION RECORDS," was found to be still unprepared in 1924 for an AUDIT and was necessarily continued "SUSPENDED."

THESE ARE THE UNCONTROVERTABLE FACTS.

They present a SIGNIFICANT story through CONTRAST to the man who is interested in buying CLEAN, HONEST, PROVEN CIRCULATION VALUES—NOT IMPRESSIONS.

Prize Contest Winner Sails; Her Essay on Motion Pictures

WHEN the Belgenland sailed on November 25 on its trip around the world, which will bring its passengers back to New York City in April, it carried Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Burnett, of Rural Route C, Indianapolis. Mrs. Burnett paid for the trip for herself and her husband by writing 267 words.

Mrs. Burnett was the winner in a national Greater Movie contest sponsored by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will H. Hays is president. The first prize was awarded for the best essay on the subject, "What the Motion Picture Means to Me." More than 250,000 essays were entered. Mrs. Burnett's was submitted through the Indianapolis News.

The motion picture has meant more to Mrs. Burnett than entertain her. It has won her a trip around the world. Last Tuesday it won her a luncheon given by Will H. Hays in her honor to newspaper and publicity men at the Waldorf.

Her 267-word prize essay is well worth reading. It is reprinted herewith.

"'Sing us a song!' was the demand of yore and the wandering minstrel complied. As he sang the song of valor there unrolled before the eyes of his listeners a picture to teach, to inspire and to entertain them.

"'Tell us a story!' was the demand of our fathers from the oasis of the firelight. And as the story-teller, beloved and admired, told the story there unfolded before the eyes of his hearers a picture to teach, to inspire and to entertain them.

"'Show us a picture!' is our demand, and lo, we are given the magic of a real picture with the enchantment of the minstrel and the charm of the story-teller.

"In the broadness of its scope and its capacity for the portrayal of things great and small, the motion picture shows me history, science, art and literature. From India, with its swarming highways, to barren Alaska, the world is mine, the generous gift of the camera.

"Because it depicts humanity the motion picture inspires. Its subtle sermons are abiding. It takes from my tongue the timid 'I can't,' and in its place puts a brave 'I'll try!' It lightens the corners of pride and indifference and makes me a little more sympathetic, more tolerant and more fit to take my place beside my fellow men.

"It entertains me. It draws me without my accustomed self and lets me laugh until the tears come, or sit upon the edge of my seat in suspense. It makes me glad to be alive.

"Education, inspiration and entertainment. These three the motion picture mean to me."

WILL H. HAYS says "Bon Voyage" to Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Burnett, of Indianapolis. Mrs. Burnett won the Greater Movie essay contest and a trip abroad for herself and husband.

October Fire Preventionists Named by Hays Organization

IN the interests of further conservation, safety and fire prevention activities in exchanges, the Film Boards of Trade throughout the United States have adopted a system of selecting honor men. Their first list, named by the Fire Prevention Committees of the Film Boards of Trade, gives the outstanding fire preventionists in the Film Boards of Trade of the United States.

A new appraisal will be taken each month. At the end of twelve months the man who has been on the monthly lists the greatest number of times will be named as the branch manager who leads all others in the United States in fire prevention work. He will be awarded an appropriate prize by the Department of Conservation of the Hays organization, which supervises the safety-fire prevention work of the industry.

In the last three years, since the Hays' organization has been active in its conservation work among the several hundred film exchanges, remarkable advance has been made in the methods of handling film in exchanges. More than 200 exchanges have moved into new quarters in that time and in every case the recommendations of the Hays' organization as to fire prevention construction have been carried out. Great improvements have been made in construction and in methods of handling film.

Hays' organization experts have been remarkably successful in carrying forward this work because they have had the wholehearted co-operation everywhere of distributing company executives, branch managers and employes.

The following are the branch managers who enjoy the distinction of having been selected the best fire preventionists for October in their respective cities:

In and Out of Town

P. A. Powers and Emil Offerman have left New York for the West Coast. They will make an exhaustive analysis of the production situation chiefly as concerns the line-up of product for Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Powers will also concern himself with the Eric Von Stroheim and Marshall Neilan units, which are functioning under his direction.

Charles Eyton, Paramount West Coast studio until recently, has left New York for California. He will return and sail for London in about five weeks, to manage production for Paramount in England.

Colvin W. Brown, vice-president of F. B. O., in charge of distribution, is back at his desk after a four-day trip to Atlanta and Charlotte in the interests of distribution.

Larry Weingarten of Jackie Coogan Productions, has left on a trip in the interests of "Old Clothes." He will visit Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Omaha, Denver and Los Angeles.

Albert Warner of Warner Brothers, left last week for a "talk it over" tour of a large number of the company's branch exchanges. His itinerary called for stops in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, after which he expected to strike out for Chicago, Milwaukee and several other points in the Middle West.

The three newly appointed Universal sales directors are busy getting acquainted with the exchanges and exchange forces in their territories. One has just returned from a ten-day swing around his division and the other two are now on the road, having left New York over the week-end. Lou B. Metzger, sales director for the Western Division, has just returned from a swing around the Middle West, during which he visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Des Moines and Omaha. Earl Kramer, sales director for the Eastern Division, left New York for a visit to Philadelphia and Washington. He had just returned from a hurried trip to Detroit, Cleveland, Toronto, Buffalo and Pittsburgh. Ralph B. Williams, sales manager for the Southern Division, has left on a three-weeks' trip which will take him to Charlotte, Atlanta, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Memphis, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Charleston, W. Va., and Indianapolis.

Ben H. Grimm, formerly advertising manager of Moving Picture World and recently with Warner Brothers, has joined the advertising force of Associated Exhibitors under Robert E. Welsh.

Universal Confirms $4,000,000 Deal With Ufa; Laemmle Off For Berlin

No Merger News

AS Moving Picture World goes to press no further word is available concerning the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-United Artists merger. Hollywood is entertaining most of the "big bugs" involved in the action and they are reported as smoothing out a few "minor wrinkles" in the wording of the contract.

Nathan Burkan, New York attorney, will be in Hollywood about the time this appears in print and an announcement of the consummation of the merger may be made shortly after his arrival.

The atitude of Charles Chaplin is rumored to be one hurdle which the principals must clear. One story has it that the affair is all set except for Chaplin. He is quoted as expressing a preference for independence without being nailed down to a definite statement that he is opposing the merger.

Blue Sunday Campaign Is Under Way in St. Louis

SUNDAY pleasure trips of St. Louisians are threatened by a proposed ordinance introduced in the St. Louis Board of Aldermen on November 20 by Alderman John Neu of the Thirteenth Ward.

The measure would prevent the sale of auto accessories on Sundays. Neu denies that he has "blue law" proclivities and contends that the object of the measure is to give the mechanics employed by the auto service agencies a day off.

St. Louis exhibitors are not asleep to the dangers of this measure. Clearly it is the opening wedge of the long-threatened drive for a Blue Sunday in St. Louis. If it goes through, the next move will be to close gasoline filling stations on Sundays, and then motion picture houses, etc., under the cloak that the bills are intended to give the employes a day off.

NO REDUCTIONS RECOMMENDED

The House Ways and Means Committee in Washington, D. C., has failed to include picture theatre admission taxes in its recommendations for tax reductions. Automobile, tobacco, alcohol and other commodities were allowed tax cuts. There were reductions affecting the legitimate theatre, instructive musical entertainments and the opera. Musical shows, circuses, vaudeville, prize fights and baseball taxes were retained. This does not mean that no further reductions are possible. The great victory won by the motion picture interests last year was won by obtaining relief directly through the Senate Finance Committee.

German Company Gets Loan of 15,000,000 Gold Marks—"U" Gains Tremendous Releasing Advantage in Germany

IN an official statement issued from the Universal Pictures Corporation's offices at 730 Fifth avenue, New York City, complete confirmation was given to the cabled story from Berlin of the alliance between Ufa, the largest German producing, distributing and exhibition company, and the Universal Pictures Corporation. Carl Laemmle, president of the American company, will start for Berlin on Tuesday, December 1, from Universal City, where he has been arranging for Universal's next year's producing program. He will sail from New York a week from Saturday.

Last summer Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, in a series of conferences with the heads of the Universal Film Aktien-gesellschaft, or Ufa, as it is more commonly called, laid the ground-work for a plan of bringing the two companies into international accord. This accord provided for loaning the Ufa an amount of money and receiving therefor the very valuable privilege of releasing the entire Universal program in Germany and taking whatever of the Ufa productions were considered internationally suitable to release in all world markets outside of Germany.

The money agreed upon was 15,000,000 gold marks, which in dollars is a figure somewhere around $3,600,000. It was furthermore agreed upon that the production which Ufa is to make should have the same advantages for international distribution as Universal Pictures have. That is, that they should have American stars and be made with American advisors in the production department. These stars will be sent to Germany from Universal City, though several American stars may be placed under contract specifically for these Ufa-made pictures.

The great advantage that Universal derives from the association with Ufa is the splendid releasing opportunity it will acquire in Germany. Through the German import laws it is impossible to release in Germany a foreign-made picture unless the releasing company releases a German-made picture. If a company releases thirty German-made pictures it can release thirty foreign-made pictures as well.

In view of the fact that there are less than 100 pictures made in Germany during a year's time it can readily be seen that the 600 or more features made in America, the hundred or so made in England and the Italian, French and Scandinavian pictures all together stand a very small chance of adequate release in Germany.

The Value of the Deal

By the new arrangement Universal will be able to release as many of its own American-made pictures in Germany as Ufa makes, though they may not all be Universals. It will at the same time acquire for distribution in the United States and throughout the world the pick of the productions of the greatest studio on the continent.

The arrangement which Mr. Laemmle proposed to the Ufa was undecided when it became necessary for Mr. Laemmle to return to this country, and the negotiations were left in the hands of Max Schach, Mr. Laemmle's German representative and one of the most important film men in Germany, and his legal advisor. Almost every film company in the United States began active bidding for the contract which Mr. Laemmle sought with Ufa and it was only last Saturday the Ufa officials agreed to Mr. Laemmle's terms and cabled him accordingly. Mr. Laemmle cabled back his tentative acceptance and his decision to start immediately for Berlin.

Twenty years ago this coming February Carl Laemmle opened his first moving picture theatre in Chicago. His progress from theatre owner to exchange man and independent producer reads like a romance. He has ever stood for independence of the producing and distributing business as against monopoly, and he was one of the first to appreciate the importance of the foreign field and to develop it. Today Universal's foreign activities are greater and more far-reaching than those of any other American producer, the company asserts—so great, in fact, that the foreign field absorbs far more productions than Universal can profitably release in its domestic market.

Ufa the Greatest

Ufa is the foundation stone on which the whole German film industry rests. Its studios are the greatest on the calendar today. Its stars are well known in Europe and Emil Jannings particularly is internationally known. Ufa also holds a contract with Mae Murray which has been suspended for a year by mutual consent. Werner Krauss, Lya de Putti, Zenia Desni, Lil Dagovar, and Conrad Zeidt are also well known in America. Many English, French and Italian stars have been utilized in the Ufa Studios, but no well known American star heretofore until Mae Murray signed. Negotiations are also pending with Lillian Rich.

Ufa has just released in Berlin Emil Jannings in "Varieties," about which everyone in Europe is talking at the present time, with Lya de Putti playing opposite. It was directed by E. A. Dupont who was placed under contract by Carl Laemmle several months

Paramount-Trade Commission Case Ends In Washington, D. C.

By Sumner Smith

THE case of the Federal Trade Commission against hte Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, alleging an attempted monopoly in restraint of interstate commerce, has ended after months upon months of testimony. The final oral arguments are being heard in Washington. D. C. The case is receiving much more publicity in the newspapers at the present time than it has heretofore.

W. H. Fuller, chief counsel of the commission, has reiterated his original charges of "an illegal conspiracy," terming certain business practices "unfair." He recommends that the company be obliged to dispose of its theatrical property, said to be worth $100,000,000.

In addition he asserted that the commission can compel Paramount to give up exhibition by the simple issuance of an order. If this is true it stands to reason that other companies in the business interested in theatres will be operating under the threat of such an order against themselves.

In reply to the contentions of the commission's counsel, Robert D. Swaine, representing Famous Players, repeated his earlier statement that the defendant company had been forced into the distributing and exhibiting branches of the industry because of a combination of former customers, known as First National. He said that there was about 17,156 picture theatres in the country on September 1, 1924, of which Famous Players controlled only 179. Fifty-seven of these, he added, were used only for motion picture purposes.

Of the 1,557 picture theatres in New York City, Paramount, he claimed, controlled three where competitors controlled seventy. Of the 1,284 first-run houses throughout the country, Paramount controlled only ninety-five, he declared. Paramount had none in New Jersey, Kentucky, Connecticut, Maryland and Iowa, and only six out of the 540 in Massachusetts and twenty out of the 879 in Texas. He defended block booking.

Illinois Exhibitor Fined for Employment of Minors

Chester Gruber, owner-manager of the Miners Theatre, Collinsville, Ill., was fined $5 and costs by Justice of the Peace James B. Dale at Edwardsville, Ill., on a charge of violating the Illinois child labor law by employing children under the age of 16 years. It was the first fine of its kind in Madison County for many years.

Gruber had permitted children furnished by the Oxman Theatrical Agency of St. Louis to participate in an "amateur" contest at the theatre. Instead of being paid cash the children were given prizes.

CASHIER ROBBED OF $188

A lone bandit stuck up Miss Clara Zink, cashier of the New Maplewood Theatre, 7170 Manchester avenue, St. Louis, at 10 p. m., on November 18, while she was conversing with Patrolman Walters, who was in plain clothes. The robber escaped with $188 after exchanging shots with the officer. The officer was a few feet away from the cashier's cage when the robber entered. So quietly did the chap work that the patrolman did not awaken to the situation until the bandit started to leave. It was then too late.

Universal-UFA

ago. It is heralded as the greatest continental picture ever made.

F. A. Murnay, who is responsible for "The Last Laugh" which Universal released, is scheduled to start the production of "Faust" in which Jannings is to play Mephisto, Gosta Ekman is to play Dr. Faustus and, it is hoped, Mary Philbin, who made such a hit in "The Phantom of the Opera," will play Marguerite. Upon the completion of this picture Murnay is to come to America to make one production and upon his return will undertake "Tartuffe," with Jannings and Lil Dagover.

Other productions in work are "Metropolis," which Fritz Lang will produce; "The Waltz Dream," directed by Ludwig Berger with Zenia Desni and Willy Fritsche, and "Manon," in which Lya de Putti will star under the direction of Arthur Robison, an American director.

Real Studio Efficiency

Ufa has five studios in Germany, the largest of which, located at Nieu Babelsburg, just outside of Berlin, is two miles square and is patterned after Mr. Laemmle's own studio at Universal City. Every effort has been made to put production in these studios on the most efficient basis. Huge stages where out-of-doors sets can be built entirely in the studio, showing blocks upon blocks of city streets, or an entire forest, can be constructed and efficiently lighted in the Nieu Babelsburg studio.

During the negotiations last summer, President Pommer conducted Mr. Laemmle through every one of the Ufa studios. In spite of the larger size and more advtantageous location of Universal City studios, Mr. Laemmle was astonished at the efficiency with which every move in the Ufa studios was attended. Everything used there is built in Ufa's own shops and it is very rare that the property man there has to send outside the studios for anything required for production.

Owns 150 Theatres

But the most attractive feature of the Ufa arrangement as far as Universal is concerned is the 150 theatres which it owns. These Ufa theatres are the cream of the German amusement world and have been built with the same view to superiority that characterized Ufa's productions and studios. Nothing has been omitted to make these theatres up-to-date, comfortable and profitable. The Ufa Palace, in Berlin, for instance, is the first-run house in Germany, and its first nights are heralded with the same eclat as accompanies the opera or the drama. The Schumann Theatre, just completed at Frankfort-on-Main, seats 5,000 people and will compare with any theatre in the United States in point of architectural splendor, convenience and popularity.

Fully seventy-five of these theatres have a seating capacity of over 2,000 and are the de luxe first-run theatres in their towns. Most of the theatres have been built by the Ufa company, only a few of them having been acquired by purchase. The investment of the company in these theatres alone is an enormous one.

Ufa's American connection is through F. Wynne Jones of 1540 Broadway, New York City. Mr. Jones has been very successful in handling the American debut of such pictures as "The Last Laugh" and "Siegfried."

Announcing

Of the Screen, By the Screen, And for the Screen

A SERIES of articles by William J. Reilly on the ideas which Hrolf Wisby has developed for the motion picture.

Mr. Wisby has given up the title of Baron Dewitz. He has still retained, however, the title of "The Hrolf Wisby Cinema-Regie" for the production plan on which he has spent a lot of his own time and a lot of his own money. It is a fancy title, and it may be the right one. But in the articles written by Mr. Reilly, the editor of Moving Picture World will try to bring an eight-syllable idea down to a two-syllable basis.

Read the articles, beginning next week. The plan which Mr. Wisby has now perfected in developing production of, by, and for the screen deserves the serious attention and consideration of the industry.

Entering Into a Significant Period—

H. M. WARNER, President of Warner Bros., and some of the outstanding personalities marching squarely behind him in close formation in three big Warner Bros. pictures. Ernst Lubitsch (upper left), the great German director, who produced "Lady Windermere's Fan" with a distinguished cast headed by lovely Irene Rich as "Mrs. Erlynne" (lower right). John Barrymore (upper right) is "TheSea Beast" in the Harry Millard production of this name from the novel "Moby Dick." Syd Chaplin (lower left) is seen here as the widow in his forthcoming Warner Bros. picture, temporarily called "Nightie Night, Nurse," directed by Charles ("Chuck") Reisner, who produced Syd's recent success, "The Man on the Box," for Warner Bros.

One for the Warner Book—Not the "Ploughboy to President" Series

By William J. Reilly

NAPOLEON crossed the Alps and got himself a permanent place on the front page of history's newspaper. A couple of hundred years B. C., the same trick was turned by Hannibal who came over from Carthage and made a military call on Rome via its back door. Hannibal did the trick, too, toting elephants. Little "Nap" gets the newspaper verdict in the Olympic obstacle race championship. But the belt belongs to Hannibal.

They've been doing a Hannibal up at Warner Bros.—crossing the Alps, without any brass band stuff. It may sound funny that any executive in this business should do a single thing without the tom-toms beating an accompaniment. But it's being done every day.

And at Warner Bros. they have been doing it for the past nine months, particularly in the last six months.

We are going to lay the facts on the table, just as H. M. Warner, at our request, laid them on the table for us on last Monday.

What we write won't go into the "Ploughboy to President" fiction as done by the go-getter magazines. No sob stuff. Just facts.

We were having luncheon with Mr. Warner and Myer Lesser, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Warner Bros. Not at one of these places where, as Mr. Lesser put it, "The favorite sport is holding conversation with someone four tables away," but at one of those plain folks places. Where the roasting ends with the chicken before the fire in the window.

Writing a Chapter for the Warner Record

Plain folks. Plain food. Plain talk.

Here is the fact bill of fare without any fancy relishes:—

Warner Bros., since they switched from a franchise basis to their present system, and since they absorbed Vitagraph, have written one of the most spectacular chapters of picture history, but a chapter few students of picture history know.

The Warner Company since early in this year has been in an organization obstacle race. It has cleared its last hurdle and is in the open. Warner Bros. are heading into a most significant period of their career. Significant for Warner Bros. And significant for the industry.

Figure out what Warner Bros. have done since April of this year: They made a radical change in selling and distribution policies, necessitating the buying in of franchises; they transplanted the Vitagraph tree—not a young sapling—but a sturdy old oak, with its branches spreading in all directions and its roots reaching in all directions; they had to make a combined production plan, a combined selling plan.

They had to do all of these things when time pressed and when it was important also to do a real assay job on the man power assembled by joining the two organizations.

Out of it all has come since the convention last May:—eighty percent of the original franchises bought back; the Warner Bros. Forty for 1925-26 set, and right up to schedule; the new sales force synchronized with the established advertising and publicity forces. Any one of these a bone crusher.

Back in Napoleon's time the tactical sharps would have called it a tour de force. Since we are talking plain talk we just call it "A helluva big job."

Looking at this achievement from the point of view of the exhibitor, we saw that it had a lot to do with the price of butter and eggs and film.

A few weeks ago we said that it was a serious producer problem when exhibitors were forced to close theatres. One more theatre in the no-profit graveyard is one less theatre for the producer to sell film to.

Similarly, when a producing organization does not recover from an inter-organization headache, the illness spreads in another form into the exhibiting field. It becomes an exhibitor problem when a producer shuffles out, making buying less selective for the showman.

Warner Bros. plus Vitagraph, might have been a Noah's Ark, with two of everything on board—stranded on a movie Mount Ararat.

Which is what they are anything else but.

They are out on the main road—a road they have made for themselves. No sob stuff. They have cut that road out themselves.

Three big Warner Bros. pictures are following on each other's heels within the next two months. "Lady Windermere's Fan," directed by Lubitsch. "The Sea Beast," starring John Barrymore. And the second Syd Chaplin which carries the working title of "Nightie Night Nurse."

That part in the career of the Warner Brothers which dates back to the re-organization this Spring and ends with the placing of these three favorites at the picture barrier will never get into the "Ploughboy to President" edition of "Lives of the Warner Brothers." As said before, it's too business-like for the "Rags to Riches" fiction. Which makes it just right for this business publication.

A good many of the conversational courses at our luncheon with Mr. Warner and Mr. Lesser were preceded by this from Mr. Lesser: "'H. M.' won't tell you this, but——." And by and by we had the facts which make up this chronicle of accomplishment.

Back in February of this year H. M. Warner was ready, as far as he personally was concerned, to step out of Warner Bros. rather than continue trying to make pictures, as he said "to satisfy twenty-four different opinions of twenty-four different franchise holders."

"I wanted to give this industry pictures, not opinions," Mr. Warner went on. "And, furthermore, my opinion on my own pictures doesn't mean anything.

"We have no ambition to be exhibitors. We're not buying theatres wholesale. We have taken over what few houses we have to protect ourselves in particular, local situations only. Our buying is a defensive move in our own field, not an offensive move into the exhibitor field.

"Another thing. When I say we have made 'Lady Windermere's Fan', that doesn't mean anything. The important part is how well we have made a great book or a great play. How well we have used the material that originally made it a great book or a great play.

"I'll give you an 'opinion' that means something. I'm willing to stake the entire future reputation and success of Warner Bros. on 'Lady Windermere's Fan', 'The Sea Beast' and the Syd Chaplin picture. There's money on that ball. And if exhibitors want to know how much money we've spent to make these pictures big, I'll not talk telephone numbers to them. I'll show them auditor's sheets."

We have written the above chapter of Warner Bros. history because we believe that what went into that chapter, shaping what is coming next, demands a place in the record.

Bruce Gallup Now With Fox Advertising Staff

Vivian M. Moses, director of publicity and advertising of Fox Film Corporation, announces that Bruce Gallup has taken charge of trade paper advertising and will assist in carrying out plans for merchandising the big Fox production program for the new season.

Mr. Gallup has had many years of advertising experience, entering the motion picture business about six years ago through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He left there in 1923 to take charge of trade paper advertising for First National, where he remained until the present time. The addition of Mr. Gallup further strengthens the Fox Films exploitation staff.

STILL ARRESTING COTTER

The chief Sunday sport in Moberly, Mo., apparently has dwindled down to the arresting of J. W. Cotter, manager of the Fourth Street Theatre. Six times recently has Mr. Cotter been arrested on a charge of violating the Sunday closing law. Recently he was fined $50 in the city police court, the fine later being sustained in the state supreme court, but Mr. Cotter has taken an appeal on that case. In recent weeks he has given the proceeds of his Sunday shows to Moberly charities.

Europe Seeks to Combat American Pictures with "Patriotic Weeks"

Fiercely Hostile Legislation Becoming the Rule in Many Countries, Especially France, Italy and Great Britain

By W. Stephen Bush

LEGISLATION fiercely hostile to the importation of American films is finding its way into the statutes of more European countries with great regularity. In former letters I have sketched an outline of the extent and character of these laws designed to shut out the films from across the water. Mostly the legislators sought to force a system of reciprocity on the American producer and importer. The import of American films as far as features were concerned was to be confined to an amount of footage equal to the export of the native film to the States. Films of short length have never been affected by this regulation.

The way to meet the situation was very simple. American firms, or such concerns as represented American film interests, bought the necessary footage to insure the legality of their own imports, and then upon its arrival in the States the foreign product was for the most part put in storage. The red tape, of course, was annoying and the expense often an item of liability, but the law worked no very great hardship on the Americans, who continued to control more than 90 per cent. of the foreign markets.

Now a new tack has been taken by the governments that have heeded the everlasting cries of alarm emitted by their respective film interests. It is proposed to have "patriotic weeks" at stated intervals, during which no film may be shown unless it has been directed by natives, acted by natives and distributed by natives. So far none of the important countries have ventured to enact a law to that effect. The government for the present is satisfied to give the scheme its lively moral support and promises to frown on the theatre owner who will try to ignore the "patriotic week." If this moral pressure is found insufficient, a law will be enacted and penalties will be provided for the theatre owner who shows other than native films during the ordained period of patriotism.

In France, Italy and Great Britain the week for showing native films only is to go into effect immediately. For a start only one week in every eight will be devoted to the exclusive showing of home-made films. If the experiment proves a success, the closed season for foreign films will be extended until eventually the native film gains the upper hand and the American film sinks into a condition closely resembling that of "innocuous desuetude."

It is an open secret—at least in the countries I have just mentioned—that the government is by no means sanguine of the success of the experiment and views the whole movement with secret disfavor. The government is interested in the tax producing ability of the picture theatre and in little else. The revenues derived by the large and small countries from taxes imposed on the showing of films constitute a decidedly important item in the financial budget of the state. These taxes can only be collected on admissions. The moment the number of tickets sold goes down, the amount of revenue sinks exactly to the same level. If the public goes to the picture theatres merely as a matter of patriotic pride, willing to put up with any sort of film as long as it is of native origin, all will go well and there will be no diminution in the revenue coming to the government. One cannot help feeling that if the various native producers would concentrate their efforts on making better films instead of pestering their governments with fantastic schemes of "killing off the American competition," they would reach their goal much more quickly and with a more lasting satisfaction. American producers, though they have to meet heavier expenses all around, have never run to their government petitioning it for help and protection against the foreign-made films.

In the mean time, as one looks around among the recent first-runs of the principal producing countries of Europe, one cannot help noticing a tendency to relapse to inferior standards. A concern calling itself the French-Anglo Film Company recently released a production called "Monte Carlo." It was so bad that the Parisian press fell upon it almost angrily. Even if the film was only intended as an "ad" for the notorious gambling resort it was done very badly.

Another French film upon which great expectations had been placed is the recent release called "Le Voyage Imaginaire." It turned out to be most mediocre stuff, and being booked in close sequence upon excellent American films the impression it made was doubly painful. A German company recently returned from India has released a film called "The Light of Asia" and supposed to represent the life and the religious tenets of Buddha. The leading part was taken by a genuine Hindoo, who impersonated Buddha. There is no question that everybody connected with the produc-

No Restriction

THE Board of Trade for German-American Commerce, Inc., of which Herman A. Metz, former comptroller of the City of New York and former United States Congressman, is president, has lined up against the German Kontingent system which restricts the distribution of American films in Germany.

The Board of Trade "emphatically protests" against the limitation of American films and urges that American motion pictures be admitted to Germany without restriction.

The resolution adopted unanimously by this important international trade body has been forwarded to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., accompanied by "assurance of our co-operation and every good wish for your success in combatting these efforts."

Seider Tells N. J. Showmen Arbitration Seems Possible

HOPE that negotiations now progressing between the national exhibitor organization and the Hays office may materialize into protection for the independent exhibitor from oppressive encroachments, which the speaker termed one of the direct causes for over-seating and impoverishment of box offices, was expressed by Joseph M. Seider in an inspiring report to the directorate of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, of which he is president.

Mr. Seider's clear definition of "the menace to theatre interests which is hidden in clauses of the proposed amendments to the copyright law" caused the New Jersey directors, meeting on November 19 in the Alexander Hamilton Hotel, Paterson, to realize the immediate need of individual communication with their respective legislators before these federal law makers leave their homes for the Congressional hall.

The directors were especially jubilant over Mr. Seider's report on power rates, which indicates the bringing to a successful close of one of the stiffest fights ever conducted by any state organization in the country.

William Hunt of Wildwood, owner of twelve theatres, reported that as the result of the intensive and special campaign to force the electric companies' hand on the power rate, certain concessions had been made to him which have resulted in his saving $350 a week on his houses.
